18. πρὸς δὲ ἐλαλήθη] Render: 'to whom, or, concerning whom it had been said,' &c.; meaning, 'that Abraham, to whom it had been said by God, "In Isaac shall there be named a posterity to thee."—ἐν Ἰσαὰκ κληθ. σ. σπ., 'it is in Isaac that,' &c. As much as to say, 'the seed which is promised thee must descend only from Isaac.'

19. λογισάμενος ὅτι—ὁ Θεός] The full sense intended is, 'as reflecting that, though Isaac should die, yet the promise of posterity by him would be sure, inasmuch as the same Omnipotence, which at first brought him into being, could even raise him from the dead.'—ὅθεν αὐτὸν καὶ ἐν παραβολῇ ἐκομίσατο. These words, not a little obscure, have been variously interpreted. Many eminent Expositors, ancient and modern, have taken ἐν παραβολῇ for ἐν τύπῳ, or ἐν συμβόλῳ, scil. τῆς ἀναστάσεως: an ellipse, however, too harsh to be admitted; and, as Ernesti observes, Isaac is no where called a type of Christ in that respect; nor could he be. The expression may rather be supposed to mean, 'simili modo,' 'with similitude;' though on the point of similitude here intended there is a difference of opinion. Some, as Newcome, Hamm., Whitby, referring the words to the miraculous birth of Isaac, explain, 'Abraham believed that God could raise Isaac from the dead, because he had, as it were, obtained him from the dead;' i. e. because he was born of those 'as good as dead': an interpretation not a little harsh, and, moreover, inconsistent with the usus loquendi as respects κομίσ.; κομίσασθαι never signifying simply to obtain, but to receive back, either in the way of recovery of what is lost, or in return for what has been given. Hence I prefer, with Calv., Limborch, Kuin., and Stuart, to interpret, 'Abraham believed that God could recal his son to life; wherefore (because of this faith) he also in like manner, by a correspondence of a circumstance admitting of comparison (i. e. as it were raised from the dead), received him back, as from the dead, [safe];' for Isaac was in a manner dead,—i. e. in his father's opinion and his own,—and was restored to his father, as it were from the gates of the grave. Comp. 2 Cor. i. 9, 10. This interpretation is placed beyond doubt by Jos. Ant. i. 13, 4, where, treating on this very circumstance, he says of Abraham and Isaac, ὅτι παρ' ἑλπίδας ἑαυτοὺς ἐκομισμένοι, i. e. 'as having got back, recovered, each other, by being restored to each other.'

20. πίστει] 'by faith,' viz. in the revelations made to him respecting his sons' future condition, firmly trusting that the blessings he was invoking would have their effect. And though those blessings turned out different from Isaac's intention, yet they were not the less delivered in faith that they would be fulfilled.

21. On more mature consideration, I am now of opinion that we should not be justified in rendering ἐπὶ τὸ ἄκρον τῆς ῥάβδ. αὐτοῦ, 'towards the bed's head;' and very doubtful is it whether the Hebrew text was originally intended to convey that sense; though, could it even be proved that Moses meant to express that sense, it would be no sufficient reason why we should depart from the obvious sense of the Greek words taken verbatim from the Sept., of which it is one of the quotations without the formula citandi; if, indeed, such can properly be termed citations at all. Est. ably remarks, that 'whether what was read in the Sept. agreed with the Hebrew or not, the writer of this Epistle cited it opportunely, and accommodated it to his purpose.' The same view is taken by Grot., Calv., Perkins, Schoettg., and others of the best Commentators. And I would observe, that the accommodation might be the more readily made, considering that, as Est. points out, 'each sense might be true suo modo; nor do the two disagree.' Yet those who admit the above view are not at all agreed on the sense intended to be expressed by προσκύνησεν ἐπὶ τὸ ἄκρον τῆς ῥάβδ. Several ancient, and not a few modern Interpreters, as Hyper. and Est., recognise here a deep and mystical sense, understanding by τὸ ἄκρον τῆς ῥάβδου αὐτοῦ, either Joseph's staff, as the symbol of his power—Jacob receiving this honouring power in his son (so Calv. explains); or, as they suppose, Jacob foreseeing that in his son Joseph CHRIST was signified; and accordingly in this staff, or sceptre, of Joseph, he recognised the royal power of Christ, 'denique (adds Calv.) ejus virgæ fastigium sese, caput, adorasse, quæ caput Christi est Deus.' (1 Cor. xi.) This view is strenuously maintained by Hyper., and is adopted by Est.; but it is too harsh and far-fetched to be safely adopted. More of simplicity is there in the view adopted by Grot., Hamm., γησε καὶ προσεκύνησεν ἐπὶ τὸ ἄκρον τῆς ῥάβδου αὐ-

 τοῦ. <sup>22</sup> Πίστει Ἰωσήφ τελευτῶν περὶ τῆς ἐξόδου τῶν υἱῶν <sup>Gen. 50.</sup> Ἰσραὴλ ἐμνημόνευσε, καὶ περὶ τῶν ὁστέων αὐτοῦ ἐνετείλατο.
<sup>23</sup> Πίστει Μωϋσῆς γεννηθεὶς ἐκρύβη τρίμηνον ὑπὸ τῶν πατέρων <sup>Exod. 1. 18.</sup> αὐτοῦ, διότι εἶδον ἀστείον τὸ παιδίον καὶ οὐκ ἐφοβήθησαν τὸ <sup>2. 2, 11.</sup> διάταγμα τοῦ βασιλέως. <sup>Acts 7. 20.</sup> Πίστει Μωϋσῆς, μέγας γενόμενος, <sup>Exod. 2.</sup>
 ἡρνήσατο λέγεσθαι υἱὸς θυγατρὸς Φαραῶ. <sup>10, 11.</sup> <sup>Ps. 84. 11.</sup> μᾶλλον ἐλόμενος συγκακουχεῖσθαι τῷ λαῷ τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἢ πρόσκαιρον ἔχειν ἁμαρτίας ἀπόλαυσιν <sup>26</sup> μείζονα πλοῦτον ἡγησάμενος τῶν † ἐν Αἰγύ-πτῳ θησαυρῶν τὸν ὀνειδισμόν τοῦ Χριστοῦ ἀπέβλεπε γὰρ εἰς Schoettg., Doddr., Abp. Newc., and others, who trace in the words simply the posture of worshipping, and the feebleness of the worshipper. It is well observed by Heinr. that the words ἐπὶ τὸ ἄκρον τῆς ῥάβδου do not pertain to the blessings, but only render more vivid the image, of a sick man, who, being about to address those standing around, is compelled to lean on his staff, or crutch.

<sup>22</sup> Πίστει—ἐνετείλατο] These words seem meant to be explanatory of what was said at vv. 20, 21, and to more fully develop their sense.
 It was faith, the Apostle shows, that was the moving principle both in the ἀλογία and the προσκύνησις, and the words ἐμνημόνευσε περὶ τῆς ἐξόδου τῶν υἱῶν (where ἐμνημ. must be understood of prophetic mention, probably from inspiration at the time) are intended to illustrate the expressions παρὶ μαλλόντων, as περὶ τῶν ὁστίων α. ἐνετείλα, to point to the circumstance which led to the προσκύνησις. That the same injunction should have been again given at the last solemn blessing was natural. On the former occasion, it seems, the Patriarch did not give the chief reason for the injunction; but did so in the latter, when he spoke παρὶ μαλλόντων.

<sup>23</sup>—<sup>28</sup>. Here the Apostle illustrates the principle of faith, as operating on another great Founder, as it were, of the Jewish nation; and introduces the chief instances of his faith, by adverting to that of his parents, as evinced in so confidently committing to the care of Providence the child whom, from a persuasion of his being destined to something great, they had, at their imminent peril, preserved for three months.

<sup>23</sup> τῶν πατέρων α.] Of this use (exceedingly rare) of πατέρις to signify both parents (occurring also at Eph. vi. 4), an ex. is adduced by Wetst. from Parthenius.—Διότι εἶδον ὁστίον τὸ παιδίον. This is not meant as the chief reason why they preserved the child. It was their faith, and implicit reliance on the blessing of Providence upon their endeavours to save the child, that principally induced them thus to conceal him. The other was only an inferior reason; though it has been thought that, from his remarkable comeliness, they augured he would turn out something extraordinary; beauty being by the ancients regarded as a mark of the Divine favour.

<sup>24</sup> μέγας γενόμενος] meaning, 'when he had attained to man's estate;' a sense of μέγας found in the best writers, from Homer downwards, and here required by the original Hebrew.—ἡρνήσατο λέγεσθαι. It is not necessary to understand by this a formal refusal. The expression may merely be supposed to denote that he was not disposed to be so called, which is attested by the whole of the narration in Exodus. It seems he had been regarded as son of Pharaoh's daughter. In his disavowal of this he was actuated by his resolution to renounce his splendid prospects, and devote himself to the deliverance of his countrymen; and not being the real, he did not choose to be the adopted son of Pharaoh's daughter.

The next two verses (<sup>25</sup>, <sup>26</sup>) show the extent and consequences of the sacrifice; Moses being there represented as abandoning the wealth, luxury, and sinful pleasures of a court,—then the wealthiest and most magnificent, though the most corrupt, in the world,—for the oppression and insult which, when he professed himself an Israelite, he must have to encounter. The words πρόσκ. ἔχ. ἁμαρτ. ἀπόλ. advert to the chief reason for this abandonment—his preference of the everlasting blessings which God can bestow, as contrasted with the fleeting pleasures of sin.—τῶν ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ θησαυρῶν. Griesb., Matth., Scholz, and Tisch. read τῶν Αἰγύπτου θησαυρῶν, from four uncial and several cursive MSS. (to which I can add 1 Lamb. and 5 ancient Mus. copies), the Syr., and some other Versions; while Lachm. editis ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ, from A, and 2 cursives (1 add 3 Lamb. copies); which reading, however, involves a gross violation of grammatical propriety. The reading may possibly be the true one; yet one cannot well see why it should have been altered to ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ.
 Quite as likely is it that the early Critics altered ἐν Αἰγ. to Αἰγύπτου, for the sake of making it tally with τοῦ Χριστοῦ. The Critical Editors have omitted to state that Chrys. undoubtedly (as I find from inspection of his Commentary) read ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ: though Wetst. and Scholz mistakingly put down Chrys. on the side of Αἰγύπτου. As to Theodor., whom they place on the same side, his Commentary affords no proof which reading he adopted. There can be no doubt that the archetypes of the Alex. and two or three other MSS. must have had ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ, for ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ evidently arose from an error of the scribes; which error, indeed, might easily arise, considering that the terminations ω and ου are perpetually confounded by the scribes.

<sup>26</sup> τὸν ὀνειδισμόν τοῦ Χριστοῦ] This expression has been variously explained. The ancient and most modern Expositors take it to mean, 'contumely similar to that which Christ suffered;' remarking that the Genit. oft. denotes

1 Exod. 10.
25, 30.
2 12. 31, 32.
3 12. 17, 32.

u Exod. 12.
2, 3.
2 21. 22.

x Exod. 14.
21, 22.

y Jos. 6. 20.

τὴν μισθοποδοσίαν. 27 ὁ Πίστει κατέλιπεν Αἴγυπτον, μὴ φοβηθεὶς τὸν θυμὸν τοῦ βασιλέως· τὸν γὰρ ἀόρατον ὡς ὄρων ἔκαρτέρησε. 28 ὁ Πίστει πεποίηκε τὸ πάσχα καὶ τὴν πρόσχυσιν τοῦ αἵματος, ἵνα μὴ ὁ ὀλοθρεύων τὰ πρωτότοκα θίγῃ αὐτῶν. 29 ὁ Πίστει διέβησαν τὴν Ἐρυθρὰν θάλασσαν, ὡς διὰ ξηρᾶς ἥς πεῖραν λαβόντες οἱ Αἰγύπτιοι, κατεπόθησαν. 30 ὁ Πίστει comparison, or similitude, as Luke xi. 29, τὸ σημεῖον Ἰωῆ : 2 Cor. iv. 10, ἡ νίκησιν τοῦ Ἰησοῦ : 2 Cor. i. 5, τὰ παθήματα τοῦ Χριστοῦ. To this, however (which seems too confined a view of the sense), I prefer that adopted by others, as Bp. Hall, Dodd., and Kuinoel, who interpret, 'the reproach which he, together with the people of Israel, suffered for the expectation of Christ;' i. e. a Redeemer who should arise from among them; see 1 Cor. x. 4, 9. Both senses, indeed, may be conjoined; and we may suppose, with Bp. Bull, that 'the reproach of the Israelites is called the reproach of Christ, not only for the similarity between it and that which Christ also suffered (or from its being a type thereof), but also, and chiefly, because that people was the people of Christ, and so their reproach was his.' See Exod. iii. 6, 7.—τὴν μισθοποδοσίαν. Namely, the future reward of faith and constancy to be expected in heaven, of which the possession of Canaan was but a type.

27. Πίστει κατέλιπεν Α., μὴ φοβ.] The best Expositors are agreed that the Apostle is speaking, not of Moses' flight to Midian, but of his departure from Egypt the second time, when he led forth the Israelites from Egypt. And though, in the former case, he had been in great fear, in the latter he was fearless, not heeding the minatory words of the King on his leaving, 'See my face no more,' nor the vengeance with which the tyrant was sure to visit the Israelites for their departing in spite of him.—ἐκαρτέρησε, 'bore up.' In this elegantly elliptical use the word occurs in the best Class. writers, Thucyd. ii. 44, καρτερῶν δὲ χεὶρ καὶ ἄλλων παιδῶν ἔλπει. Eur. Alcest. 1074, ῥῶον παραινῶν, ἢ παθόντα καρτερεῖν, and Rhes. 148, δύναι με καρτεροῦνθ', θανὸν δέ. Thus, then, it is meant that he courageously encountered the hazards of disobedience to the earthly and visible King, as keeping in view his paramount duty to that Monarch who is invisible, the Lord of heaven and earth. See 1 Tim. i. 17.

28. πεποίηκε] Almost all Expositors take πεπ. to mean 'he celebrated;' but Calv., Boehme, and Kuin., 'he instituted;' observing that a term of latitude is adapted, to suit both τὸ πάσχα and τὴν πρόσχυσιν τοῦ αἵματος. Dr. Poile bids us observe πεποίηκε, 'hath instituted,' not ἐποίησε, because he is speaking of what at the time he wrote was an existing institution. I prefer, with Conyb., 'hath established.' It is plain that this was done 'in faith;' i. e. in full confidence of the preservation promised, and also in faith of a higher kind; the rite being not only a memorial of Israel's deliverance, but also a typical prefiguration of our salvation by the death of Christ, and through faith in his blood: see Owen, Mackn., and Scott, and comp. 1 Cor. v. 7.—τὴν πρόσχυσιν, i. e. the sprinkling of blood mentioned in Exod. xii. 7, 22; lit., 'a pouring out upon,' as Exod. xxiv. 6.—For ὀλοθρεύων Lachm.

and Tisch. edit. ὀλοθρ., from MSS. A, D, E, and Damasc.: but I can find no sufficient authority for the orthography, which, beside the testimony of one MS., the Alex., has little to support it in the Greek Translators, and none whatever in Joseph., Plato, or the Class. writers.

29. τὴν Ἐρυθρὰν θάλασσαν] Said by the best Commentators to be so called from the red tinge, imparted by the weeds with which it abounds, inasmuch that it is called in Genesis ἡρῶν, 'the weedy sea.' And so the Psch. Syr. Translator calls it. Rosenm., however, is of opinion that it ought to be called the sea of Madrepores; those occupying the bottom: a view also adopted by Laborde, Travels into Palestine, p. 264, who quotes Giovanni Finati as saying, 'that the water of this sea is so transparent that he amused himself with observing the peculiarity of the depths below him, where weeds and corals grow to such a size as almost to have the appearance of groves and gardens.' These particulars, however, serve to confirm the former view quite as much as the latter.—Τὸ διὰ ξηρᾶς Lachm. and Tisch. subjoin γῆς, from three uncials and several cursive MSS.; but wrongly; since external authority is quite against the insertion; and still more internal evidence, considering that it was far more likely to be put in than put out by the early Bible-revisers. It doubtless arose from the grammarians, who supplied the ellipsis. Indeed, the words could not well have been otherwise than as they stand, διὰ ξηρᾶς, since the Apostle, we cannot doubt, had in view, besides other passages, Exod. xiv. 22, xv. 19. Josh. iv. 22, Sept. The expression διὰ ξηρᾶς occurs not unfrequently in the Sept., and never, I believe, followed by γῆ.—ἥς πεῖρα.—κατεπ. Render: 'of which (passage of the sea, become dry land) the Egyptians, on making trial, were swallowed up.'

30. Πίστει τὰ τεῖχη, &c.] Render, 'By faith it was, that the walls of Jericho fell, after having been compassed about, gone round, seven days; the period foretold by God at which the city walls should fall. See Josh. vi. 12—30. Now this was permitted to happen ἐν πίστει; i. e. on account of, or to try, the faith of Joshua and his army in the assurances of God; and therefore to that faith the fall of the city may in a certain sense be ascribed. Indeed, the whole affair was supernatural; for the Israelites were merely to march round the place for seven days, blowing the trumpets, but abstaining from attack. That the walls did fall down flat at the last about of the people on the seventh day, without any physical cause, is a fact which cannot be explained away by any philosophical device of those who seek to remove the supernatural. True and weighty is the observation of Calv. on this remarkable transaction: 'Puerilis erat circuitus ille, plenusque ludibrio; parent nihilominus mandato Dei, neque ludant operam: feliciter τὰ τεῖχη Ἱεριχὼ ἔπεσε, κυκλωθέντα ἐπὶ ἑπτὰ ἡμέρας. <sup>31</sup> Πίσ- a Jos. 2. 1.

b Jos. 2. 2.
c Jos. 2. 25.
d Jud. 4. 6.
e 6. 11.
f 11. 1.
g 12. 7.
h 12. 9.
i Sam. 1. 30.
k 12. 17, 3c.
l 13. 14.
m 17. 45.
n Jud. 14. 6.
o Sam. 17. 24.
p Sam. 6. 1.
q 10. 19.
τει Ῥαὰβ ἡ πόρνη οὐ συναπώλετο τοῖς ἀπειθήσασιν, δεξαμένη a Jos. 2. 1.
b Jos. 2. 2.
c Jos. 2. 25.
d Jud. 4. 6.
e 6. 11.
f 11. 1.
g 12. 7.
h 12. 9.
i Sam. 1. 30.
k 12. 17, 3c.
l 13. 14.
m 17. 45.
n Jud. 14. 6.
o Sam. 17. 24.
p Sam. 6. 1.
q 10. 19.
τοὺς κατὰσκόπους μετ' εἰρήνης. <sup>32</sup> Καὶ τί ἐτι λέγω; ἐπιλείψει a Jos. 2. 1.
b Jos. 2. 2.
c Jos. 2. 25.
d Jud. 4. 6.
e 6. 11.
f 11. 1.
g 12. 7.
h 12. 9.
i Sam. 1. 30.
k 12. 17, 3c.
l 13. 14.
m 17. 45.
n Jud. 14. 6.
o Sam. 17. 24.
p Sam. 6. 1.
q 10. 19.
γάρ με διηγούμενον ὁ χρόνος περὶ Γεδεὼν Βαράκ τε, καὶ Σαμψὼν a Jos. 2. 1.
b Jos. 2. 2.
c Jos. 2. 25.
d Jud. 4. 6.
e 6. 11.
f 11. 1.
g 12. 7.
h 12. 9.
i Sam. 1. 30.
k 12. 17, 3c.
l 13. 14.
m 17. 45.
n Jud. 14. 6.
o Sam. 17. 24.
p Sam. 6. 1.
q 10. 19.
καὶ Ἰεφθάε, Δαυὶδ τε καὶ Σαμουὴλ καὶ τῶν προφητῶν. <sup>33</sup> οἱ a Jos. 2. 1. b Jos. 2. 2.
c Jos. 2. 25.
d Jud. 4. 6.
e 6. 11.
f 11. 1.
g 12. 7.
h 12. 9.
i Sam. 1. 30.
k 12. 17, 3c.
l 13. 14.
m 17. 45.
n Jud. 14. 6.
o Sam. 17. 24.
p Sam. 6. 1.
q 10. 19.
διὰ πίστεως κατηγωνίσαντο βασιλείας, εἰργάσαντο δικαιοσύνην, a Jos. 2. 1.
b Jos. 2. 2.
c Jos. 2. 25.
d Jud. 4. 6.
e 6. 11.
f 11. 1.
g 12. 7.
h 12. 9.
i Sam. 1. 30.
k 12. 17, 3c.
l 13. 14.
m 17. 45.
n Jud. 14. 6.
o Sam. 17. 24.
p Sam. 6. 1.
q 10. 19.
ἐπέτυχον ἐπαγγελιῶν, ἔφραξαν στόματα λεόντων, <sup>34</sup> οἱ ἔσβησαν a Jos. 2. 1.
b Jos. 2. 2.
c Jos. 2. 25.
d Jud. 4. 6.
e 6. 11.
f 11. 1.
g 12. 7.
h 12. 9.
i Sam. 1. 30.
k 12. 17, 3c.
l 13. 14.
m 17. 45.
n Jud. 14. 6.
o Sam. 17. 24.
p Sam. 6. 1.
q 10. 19.

enim succedit, ut promissum illis fuerat. Certum est, non hominum clamore, vel strepitu, nec clangore tubarum monia corruiſſe; sed quia speravit populus, quod se facturum Dominus promiserat.

31. ἡ πόρνη] Many Commentators have so stumbled at this term,—employed here and in James ii. 25,—that they have attempted to affix to it some signification varying from the common one; either idolatress or hostess. Now the former is quite inadmissible in a plain narration like that in Josh. ii. 1. vi. 17; and the latter, though somewhat countenanced by Josephus and the Chaldee paraphrast, is untenable; for, as the best Hebraists are agreed, ἡ πόρνη will bear no such sense, since it cannot come from the root ἡ, to feed, but from ἡ, to 'commit whoredom'; see Stuart. Kuinoel, indeed, suggests, that were we even to adopt that sense, 'it would come to the same thing; since, in ancient times, those hostesses were generally harlots.' But that, I apprehend, only applies to much later times. At this early period inns were scarcely in use at all. It was the frequency of travelling that, in later times, rendered inns necessary; and the multitude of travellers at such places tended to produce vice. It is best, however, to retain the usual sense of the word, and, with Macknight, to suppose that Rahab is here so called, because she had once been so; viz. before she had been brought to the knowledge of the true God, and had been received into the body of the holy people, Josh. vi. 25. So in Matt. xxvi. 6, Simon is called 'the Leper,' because he had formerly been such; and Matthew was called 'the Publican' for the same reason.—Εἰρήνη is by the best Expositors interpreted 'kindness, hospitality.' But the term may also have allusion to some form of address used on receiving any one to one's house; such, we may suppose, as 'Come in peace!' to correspond to the usual one for salutation at parting, 'Go in peace!' a salutation which (as peace included security, tranquillity, and good of every kind) would be an implied assurance of kind treatment. Comp. Luke x. 6, and see note.

32—35. Here the Apostle briefly sums up some remaining examples of faith, by the mention (though not in the order of time) of the persons most remarkable for it. The principle of faith, he intimates, was conspicuous in them all, though its fruits were various; and accordingly he proceeds to enumerate the distinct effects of each person's particular faith. All that is meant seems to be this,—that the subsequent particular circumstances are true in regard to one or other of the persons in question; of whom some (as Joshua and David) subdued kingdoms; others, as Abraham and David, received promises. In some it was evinced by courageously attempting the subjection of kingdoms far above their strength to master; in others, 'by living soberly, righteously, and godly,' and faithfully discharging their public duties as rulers, through faith in Him 'who will render to every man according to his works.' With the actions which espec. evinced their faith, the Apostle intermixes a reference to the reward of that faith, in the attainment of the temporal blessings promised by Jehovah; and amongst the rest, success in their public measures, whether of war, or legislation and government in general.

32. ἐπιλείψει γὰρ με διηγ. ὁ χρόνος, &c.] A form of expression oft. occurring in the best writers; though in none of the many exx. adduced have we, as here, χρόνος simply. Yet I find it in Athenæus ap. Steph. Theas., ἐπιλείπει δ' ἂν με χρόνος: Demosth. 324, ἐπιλείπει με ὁ χρόνος; and Dionys. Hal. Antiq. p. 2086.

33. εἰργάσαντο δικαιοσύνην] 'wrought for their acceptance (in the sight of God) in their several official stations, whether as judges or kings.' In the term εργ. we have involved a notion of what is habitual; as in Matt. vii. 23, οἱ ἐργαζόμενοι τὴν ἀνομίαν.

33, 34. ἔφραξαν στόματα λεόντων, &c.] These several expressions, ἔφραξαν, ἔσβησαν, ἔφυγον, &c., are partly general, and partly intended to show how it was that the promises were obtained: of which character is ἰνδυναμέθησαν ἀπὸ ἀσθενείας, where ἰνδυναμ. means, 'were made strong,' lit. 'had strength put into them'; a very forcible expression (elsewhere used five times by St. Paul), for which Lachm. catches up the weaker one ἰδυν. from two MSS., and in them only from the carelessness of the scribes, who, it seems, mistook the abbreviation of ἰν for a simple s. The words following, ἐγενήθησαν ἰσχυροὶ ἐν πολέμῳ, carry the idea still further, being meant to intimate, that 'faith animates to the most heroic enterprises, both civil and military.' Now both expressions apply to Joshua, Barak, Gideon, Samson, Jephthah, and others. Of the former the literal sense is (by an idiom frequent in the Class. writers), 'from being weak, became strong;' espec. true of Samson. See Judg. xv. 19. xvi. 28. The words following, παριμβολὰς ἐκλιναν ἄλλοτρίων, seem meant as a climax on those preceding; ἐκλιναν here standing for ἐνέκλ. (as in Hom. Il. v. 37). The sense may be lit. expressed, 'yea, made their ranks give way;' i. e. routed their embattled hosts. Here, as often in the Class. writers, παριμβολὰς denotes, not camp, but the armies which fill the camps. The other expressions in verse 34 are especial; the first adverting to the cases of Daniel, Samδύναμιν πυρός, ἔφυγον στόματα μαχαίρας, ἐνεδυναμώθησαν ἀπὸ ἀσθενείας, ἐγενήθησαν ἰσχυροὶ ἐν πολέμῳ, παρεμβολὰς ἔκλιναν ἀλλοτρίων. 35 Ἐλαβον γυναικας ἐξ ἀναστάσεως τοὺς νεκροὺς αὐτῶν ἄλλοι δὲ ἐτυμπανίσθησαν, οὐ προσδεξάμενοι τὴν ἀπολύτρωσιν, ἵνα κρείττονος ἀναστάσεως τύχωσιν 36 ἕτεροι δὲ ἐμπαυγμῶν καὶ μαστίγων πείραν ἔλαβον, ἐτι δὲ δεσμῶν καὶ φυλακῆς. 37 Ἐλιθάσθησαν, ἐπρίσθησαν, † ἐπειράσθησαν, ἐν

41 Kings
17. 32.
3 Kings 4.
36.
2 Mac. 6. 19,
28. & 7. 7.
80.
Acts 22. 35.
9 Jer. 30. 2.
1 Kings 21.
18.
2 Kings 1. 8.
Matt. 2. 4.

son, and David; the second to that of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, who may be said to have 'quenched the power of the fire,' because their firm faith in the protection of the God of Israel caused that it should have no power over them, but, as far as regarded them, be quenched. The third, ἔφυγον στόμα μαχ., may refer to the frequent and wonderful escapes of David from the sword of Saul. The expression στόμα μαχ. is regarded as a Hebraism, and occurs at Josh. viii. 24. Yet it is sometimes found in the Class. writers, as Soph. Aj. 651.

35, 36. The Apostle now passes (by a natural association of ideas) from the case of those who were delivered from danger, through faith, to that of those who endured evils of every kind under its support; in which there is an allusion to 2 Kings iv. 18—37. 1 Kings xvii. 17—24. In all these cases πίστει, or διὰ πίστεως, may be supplied from the preceding; and indeed it is plainly implied. In this and the next two verses the Apostle passes from the earlier periods to the later times of the Hebrew nation, and from persons in public to those in private stations, in order to show that the duty of faith quite as much pertained to one as the other.

35. ἔξ ἀναστ. Render: 'by,' lit. 'out of a resurrection.'—ἔτυμπανίσθησαν. On the exact nature of the punishment here denoted, no little difference of opinion exists. Many understand ἐτυμπ. to mean, generally, 'were tortured to death;' while others suppose a special sense; though what that is, they are not agreed. The import of the expression will best appear by considering its derivation,—namely, from τύμπαλον, which signified, 1. a beating-stick; 2. a beating-post, which was of the form of a T, and thus suggests the posture of the sufferer. Moreover, from this beating being inflicted sometimes with sticks or rods, sometimes with leathern thongs inclosing pieces of lead, hence τυμπανίζω came to be equiv. to σφαιρίζω or ἐκδίδω; nay, even ἀποκεφαλίζω or ἀναιρῶ; because in general (when the poor sufferer was not already dead by this kind of know) the punishment ended with beheading him. Accordingly, in Plut. de Discr. § 25, τυμπανίζοντος καὶ τελοῦντος. I conjecture should be read τέμνοντος. What is here said refers to the case of Eleazar, 2 Macc. v., and also to that of the seven brothers, 2 Macc. vii.—The next words, οὐ προσδεξάμενοι τὴν ἀπολ., 'not accepting the proffered deliverance,' i. e. at the price of base dissimulation, refers to the mother of the seven sons, and her youngest son (2 Macc. vii.).—κρείττονος, namely, 'better (as Conyb. observes) than that of those who (like the Shunamite's son) were only raised to return to this life. This reference is plain in the Greek, but cannot be rendered equally obvious in English, because we cannot translate the first ἀναστά- σως in this verse by resurrection.' Comp. Joseph. Bell. ii. 8, 10, who, recounting the various tortures inflicted on the Essenes, in order to induce them to abandon their religion (στραβλοῦμενοι, &c.), adds, that 'they heeded them not, but αὐθυμοὶ τὰς ψυχὰς ἤφισαν, ὥς πάλιν κομίσουμνοι.'

36—38. 'At v. 36, the Apostle returns to the mention of less violent sufferings, in order, from there, to rise again in a new climax, v. 37, to the greatest tortures. Then, at the end of v. 37 and in v. 38, he sets over against the cruel death of some martyrs, the destitute life of others.' (Ebdard.)

36. πείραν ἔλαβον] for ἐπειράσθησαν, 'experienced,' 'felt the force of.' Comp. Joa. Ant. v. 2, 8, and x. 8, 3. The phrase is rare; yet it occurs also in Xen. Mem. i. 4, 18. Hdtan. ii. 2, 1, and, in the Sept., Deut. xxviii. 56. Here there seems an intimation how hard, espec. to some, are such indignities to bear; though there is an espec. reference to the third of the seven brothers, in 2 Macc. vii. 10, who was made a mocking-stock (ἐνέπαλστο).

37. The punishment of the τύμπαλον was, as we have seen, generally unto death; but the various punishments next mentioned (ἐλιθάσθησαν, ἐπρίσθησαν—ἀπίθανον) are decidedly of that character. Of these the first, σίνωσις, had been in use from the early age, and was at first appropriated to crimes involving profanity. The prophet Zechariah, and, as some say, Jeremiah, died this death. The second, that of σείρισις ἢ ἴνω, was an atrocious punishment also of a very early date, as being mentioned in 2 Sam. xii. 31, and elsewhere, and which Isaiah suffered. Vestiges, too, of this are found in the heathen writers; as Herodotus, ii. 139, συμβουλεύειν—τοὺς ἱρίαις—μίσσιν διαταμείναι. It is, indeed, even yet in use in the East, being recently employed by Tharawaddae, the usurper of the Birman throne. With respect to the expression following, ἐπειράσθησαν, some regard it as an interpolation, or a var. lect. of ἐπρίσθη, or a gloss on that word. Others suppose it an error of the scribes for some other word; and about a dozen different conjectures have been proposed (the most plausible of which is ἐκυράσθησαν, that by which the seven brothers had the comp. de grâces), not one of them in the least countenanced by the MSS. How it should be a gloss, or why an emendation of ἐπρίσθη, it is not easy to see; for so plain a term as that required not the one, and that the other should find its way into all the MSS., were unaccountable. Kuinoel coincides in the opinion of those who would cancel the word, for which there is alleged the authority of three MSS. and some Versions and Fathers: a testimony, however, very inadequate; for in so few as three MSS. the omission may φόνῳ μαχαίρας ἀπέθανον περιήλθον ἐν μηλῳταῖς, ἐν αἰγείοις δέρμασιν ὑστερούμενοι, θλιβόμενοι, κακουχούμενοι· <sup>38</sup> (ὧν οὐκ ἦν ἄξιος ὁ κόσμος!) ἐν ἐρημίαις πλανώμενοι καὶ ὄρεσι, καὶ σπηλαίοις καὶ ταῖς ὁπαῖς τῆς γῆς. <sup>39</sup> Καὶ οὗτοι πάντες, μαρ- <sup>επ. 2.</sup> τυρηθέντες διὰ τῆς πίστεως, οὐκ ἐκομίσαντο τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν surely be imputed to accident; besides that, a term so difficult would be likely to be cancelled by those who, like the above Critics, were ready enough to remove what appeared to them inexplicable. In order to ascertain the exact import of the term, it must first be determined whether it here bears a general or a special sense. Against the former (viz. tried or tempted to apostasy) it is urged, that that sense had been before expressed, and that it is not likely so accurate a writer would pass from very special terms to one so general; and, therefore, Sykes, Semler, and Ernesti take it, by a change of genus for species, to denote 'being put to the torture.' As, however, no authority exists for the above sense, it is best to adopt the figurative and general one first mentioned, to which the objection that has been urged is far from being formidable, considering that anomalies as great may be found in the acknowledged writings of St. Paul. Thus we may (with Crell., Limborch, Mackn., Carpov, and Stuart) take it to mean, that 'they were assailed by temptations to apostasy,'—or at least simulation,—by the motives both of hope and fear, espec. the former, sometimes insinuated under the prospect of exquisite tortures; a sort of trial like the fiery darts of the Evil One, in bearing which even great and good men have yielded; and which might, therefore, be reckoned among the heavy trials of the people of God. And here, undoubtedly, the trial intended is, as supra ii. 18. iv. 15, and 1 Cor. x. 13, supposed to come from God, who is thus said to try or prove men, in order to test their faith and confidence in Him (comp. 1 Pet. i. 7 and note); and thus the trial is really sent in mercy, to purify. Comp. Wisd. Sol. xi. 9. In the words following, ἐν φόνῳ μαχ. ἀπέθανον, (lit. 'they died by slaughter of the sword,') there is a blending of two phrases, such as I know no ex. of elsewhere. From the trials of faith in those who had to encounter death or torture, the Apostle now passes to the less violent, but scarcely less severe fate of the unhappy persons who, after having escaped out of the hands of their tyrants and persecutors, were, as wretched outcasts, exposed to every variety of woe.—Περιήλθον ἐν μηλῳταῖς, &c. By the terms μηλῳταῖς and αἰγείοις δέρμασι we may understand rude garments formed of sheep or goat skins with the wool on, which, Carpov shows, were worn by the very poorest class, and are still used in Russia and elsewhere. Ὑστερούμενοι, θλιβόμενοι, κακουχούμενοι are terms designating every variety of pinching want and dire distress, while the words following, ἐν ἐρημίαις πλανώμενοι καὶ ὄρεσι, &c., advert to the other miseries of their sad condition, as homeless wanderers.

38. ὧν οὐκ ἦν ἄξιος ὁ κόσμος! &c.] Of this parenthetic remark the true intent is doubtless that suggested by Calv., to anticipate a possible objection, that the persons in question were thus outcasts, because not worthy of human society!

Contrariwise, it is asserted, 'the world itself was not worthy of them!' alluding, as Hyper. observes, to the obstinate rejection, on the part of the ungodly.—σπηλαίοις καὶ ταῖς ὁπαῖς τῆς γῆς. By the former are meant caverns; by the latter, caves. These were, it would seem, not only used for sleeping in at night, but sometimes for abode by day. Now Palestine abounds in caverns very well adapted for the habitation, however dreary, of numerous persons; as is clear from the account of what befel Josephus and the Jews after the capture of Jotapata, in the persecution under Antiochus. See Antiq. xii. 8. The iv, which I suspect has been lost after the second kai, taken in conjunction with σπηλ. and ὁπαῖς suggests the sense of ἐμφωλύοντες (latitant), which is used in Jos. Bell. i. 16, 3, where it is said of the brigands in Judea, that they were all cut off by the Romans except those οἱ τοῖς σπηλαίοις ἐμφωλύοντες, ὑπελπίοντο. But they are designated rather as lurking-holes than as places of abode, and that in order to intimate the hardships of the inmates. At any rate, by ὁπαῖς here should be understood holes, probably those fissures which abound every where in Judea, such as might serve either as dens for wild beasts, or lurking-holes for human beings; the words τῆς γῆς being meant to represent them as subterranean. This is confirmed by Aristot. Hist. An. vi. 1, who there speaks of a wild beast, which ἐν τὰς ὁπάς ἐν τῇ γῇ καταδύμενος νιοττίζει, and ix. 6, where it is said that the hedgehogs change τὰς ὁπάς ἐν τῇ γῇ.

39. καὶ οὗτοι—οὐκ ἔκομ. τ. ἐπ.] Argumentum est a minori ad maius. 'Nam si illi, quibus nondum tanta lux gratiæ affluerat, tantā constantiā in malis tolerandis excelluerunt, quid efficeri in nobis debet plenus Evangelii fulgor! Illos exigua lucis scintilla in cœlum duxit, quum Sol justitiæ nobis luceat, quo nos pretextu excusabimus, si hæreamus adhuc in terra?' Hæc est genuina mens Apostoli." (Calv.) See also Hyper.—διὰ τῆς πίστεως. The full sense is, 'on account of their faith [in God].—οὐκ ἔκομίσαντο τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν, &c. Of these words, and those which follow to the end of ver. 40, the sense mainly depends upon the import of the expressions τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν and κριττόν τι, of which the former must, from the context, be understood of the promised blessing of a Redeemer; and the latter, of the fulfilment of that promise—the Gospel dispensation. For τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν Lachm. reads τὰς ἐπαγγελίας, from two MSS. But that reading arose from a mere alteration, suggested by what is said supr. v. 17, but without reason; for the plural, as well as the singular, is used, because of the promise including several particulars (see Dr. Owen, supr. vi. 13—18). Yet here the singular is used because the crowning blessing of all, even the promised Messiah, is what is espec. considered, that being more particularly necessary to the τελειωθῆναι mentioned at ver. 40. Thus the general a Rom. 6. 4.

R. 12. 12.
1 Cor. 9. 24.
9 Cor. 7. 1.
Eph. 4. 22.
Phil. 2. 13.
14.
Col. 2. 8.
1 Pet. 2. 1.
& 4. 2. ch. 10. 26.

40 τοῦ Θεοῦ περὶ ἡμῶν κρείττον τι προβλεψαμένον, ἵνα ἡ χωρὶς ἡμῶν τελεωθῶσι.

XII. 1. Τοιγαροῦν καὶ ἡμεῖς, τοσούτου ἔχοντες περιεκείμενον ἡμῖν νέφος μαρτύρων, ὄγκον ἀποθέμενοι πάντα, καὶ τὴν εὐπερίsense is, 'No: God was pleased, in the exercise of his providence for us, to destine that they should not attain the perfect fruition of the Divine promise, till the time when they should enjoy it in common with us.'

40. περὶ ἡμῶν — προβλεψαμένον] 'having looked out, provided for us, on our behalf.'—Προβλ. is so very rare a word, that no other ex. is adduced even in the Paris edition of Steph. Thea. Yet it is found in the Sept. Version of Ps. xxvii. 13 (where it means 'to so look forward, as to foresee a future event'), also in Eccles. vi. 9, where, however, the true reading seems to be προσβλέπειν. On the κρείττον τι, 'the better provision,' the true comment is sup. vii. 19, 22. viii. 6. ix. 23. x. 34. Eph. ii. 10. Of the next words, ἵνα μὴ χωρὶς ἡμ. τελ., the true and full sense is, 'So that, not without us (= 'in complete communion with us') should they be consummated by the full accomplishment of their faith—the long promised inheritance with Christ.' So Theodor. (after Chrys.) finely points out why God so ordained, ἀναμύσει ὁ τῶν ὅλων Θεὸς τοὺς τῶν ἄλλων ἀγῶνας, ἵνα τοῦ σταδίου λυθίστοι, κοινῇ πάντα τῶν ἀναρρήσιων ἀξίωση τοὺς νικηφόρους. And Theophyl. (also after Chrys.), δίδωκε τοῖς προκαταμυσί προγυμνά τι, εἰπὼν περιμύσειν εἰς τὴν τελείαν εὐχρίαν τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς· οἱ δὲ φιλόανθρωποι οὕτως χαίροντες ἀναμύνουσιν, ἵνα καὶ κοινῇ εὐφρανθῶσι.

XII. 1, 2. Having pointed out the nature, and shown by examples the efficacy, of faith, the Apostle now proceeds to exhort his Hebrew readers to bring the same principle into action in the Christian faith; inculcating steadfast perseverance even under the greatest trials,—and comforting them with the assurance, that the evils they were then suffering were not marks of God's wrath, but rather paternal chastisements, intended for their good in the end. He founds his exhortation on a view which seems to have been suggested by the foregoing agonistic allusion, and of which the imagery in vv. 1 & 2 is a continuation. Thus he represents the persons whom he is addressing as placed in a race-course, of which the spectators are the innumerable company of the Worthies of the old Dispensation just adverted to; who, by their words and actions, testified how far the objects of their faith were raised above worldly considerations.

In developing this figure, the Apostle adverts to three circumstances respecting the runner, in order to deduce from thence the exhortation he had in view: 1. That he carefully cast aside every encumbrance to his progress, not only ridding himself of unnecessary clothing, but (by means of previous training) of all superfluous flesh. 2. That he patiently endured the toil necessary to fit him for the race. 3. That he kept his eye steadfastly fixed on the goal, where the βραβεύτης sat ready to determine the contest, and distribute the prizes. On each of these particulars a few remarks will be necessary, in order to point out the application. First, the term ὄγκος signifies weight, load, encumbrance; and as ὄγκος τοῦ σώματος, or τῶν σαρκῶν, or such like, often occur in the later writers, there is reason to think the allusion is quite as much to the weight of flesh, as to that of clothes. In the application, the expression may be understood, in a general way, of whatever disposition (as sensuality or worldly-mindedness) bows the soul down to earth, and consequently impedes it in running its spiritual race. Thus, then, it is meant, that 'as one running in a race would be cumbered by a heavy load of useless flesh or superfluous clothing, so is the Christian, by sensuality and worldly-mindedness, equally hindered in running the race set before him:' comp. Philo, p. 288, δεῖα δὲ τὸν σαρκῶν φορτὴν ἐχθεφοροῦσι, βαρύνουσαι καὶ πιεζούσαι, ἀνα βλέπειν εἰς τὰς οὐρανοὺς περιόδοις ἀδυνατοῦσι. In the words following, καὶ τὴν εὐπερίστατον ἀμαρτίαν, the above metaphor is dropped; not, indeed, as some suppose, from inadvertence, but to suggest the application. And as ὄγκος was meant in a general sense, so here τὴν εὐπερίστατον ἀμαρτίαν points to one particular evil disposition which they should strive to throw off. The sin in question (or rather the disposition to it) may, with the best Expositors, be supposed to be that of unbelief (the want of the πίστις before inculcated), conjoined with timidity in professing the Gospel; which would constantly tempt them to apostasy, either actual or virtual, and to which their peculiar circumstances must have exposed them. Thus it will not be difficult to fix the sense of the disputed expression εὐπερίστατον, which, being an ἀπ᾿ ἐξ ὀνόματος, is best understood from the context. Now, although from its etymology, it might bear almost any one of the various senses assigned by Commentators, yet from the context it will admit only one of the two following: either, 1. that of Chrys. and most Expositors, 'which doth so easily bend us;' or, 2. that of Grot., Crell., Capel., Kypke, and Kuin., 'the sin which especially winds around us, and hinders our course;' namely, unbelief, and a disposition to apostasy, thus said 'to wind round,' with allusion, it is supposed, to the long Oriental garments, which in such exercises were cast aside. Of these two interpretations, the former is somewhat objectionable, from the confusion of metaphor it introduces, and the want of authority for such sense. Whereas, according to the latter interpretation, the word will have the very sense in which the noun περιστάσις is used by Max. Tyr. (as cited by Kypke), τὰς περιστάσεις πάσας ('all impediments') ἀπεδόσαντο, καὶ τῶν δαμῶν ἐξέλασαν αὐτόν. And how applicable is this sense, it is scarcely necessary to observe; sins being most fitly compared to bonds, by which man is 'sore let and hindered in running the race which is set before him.' See note on Gal. vi. 2, 5. And this I find confirmed by Est., who thinks that the sin is called εὐπερίστατος, because 'hominem facile circumstat, id est, comprehendat, implicit ac tenet, ne in cursu στατον ἀμαρτίαν, δι' ὑπομονῆς τρέχωμεν τὸν προκείμενον ἡμῖν ἀγῶνα· <sup>2</sup> ἀφορῶντες εἰς τὸν τῆς πίστεως ἀρχηγὸν καὶ τελειω- τὴν Ἰησοῦν δς, ἀντὶ τῆς προκειμένης αὐτῷ χαρᾶς, ὑπέμεινε b 1 Cor. i. 8.

Ps. 116. 1.
Luke 24. 26.
Phil. 2. 8.
&c.
1 Pet. i. 11.
ch. 1. 3. 13.
2. 10. & 5. 1.

causpto progrediatur, ut si quis currentem injecto laqueo retineat. . . . Monet ergo Hebræos Apostolus, at peccati laqueos et impedimenta, quæ cursum remorentur, excutiant abjiciantque. However, on mature reconsideration of this perplexing point of interpretation, it seems to me that the objections I have advanced are not of such weight as to exclude the former interpretation. Especially as the confusion of metaphor thus introduced is not open to any serious objection in a book like the N. Test., in which such confusion is frequently found, as indeed it is not rarely in the Class. writers, espec. Thucyd. and Plato. In fact, I am half inclined to think that the Apostle had in mind both metaphors, espec. the former; and so, nearly, Dr. Peile, who would understand 'the Apostle here to have specified what he more espec. intended by ὀγκον πάντων, and yet to have adhered so far to his metaphor as to describe Sin as τὴν ἐντροπύστατον, that easily found, that ever-present obstruction to our path.' The only objection to this view is, that the Apostle here, as oft. elsewhere, personifies Sin. As to the want of authority, it is partly supplied by a passage of a like cast (and in which the confusion of metaphor falls on words very similar in sense), in Plutarch, on Self-praise, c. 18, where he says, that 'talking of oneself has its stronghold in Selfishness; and he subjoins, that in those who have but middling merit to glory in it, ἐμφύεται πολλάκις ἐπιθιμένη, scil. αὐτοῖς, it clings to them continually, assailing them by continual assaults.' Thus the purpose of the Apostle is to represent Sin as an enemy ever ready to hinder the progress of the Christian racer in his course, either hindering him by standing, as a secret enemy might, in the way, perhaps throwing a rope round him, or actually getting hold of him,—to stop his course, as an open enemy would do. Δι' ὑπομονῆς τρέχωμεν τὸν προκ., &c. The term ὑπομονή is here meant to denote steadfast endurance and persevering fortitude. The expression ἀγών is used to intimate the struggle necessary to be maintained with various evil passions and propensities,—a struggle only to end with life,—so multi-form are the temptations of the world, the flesh, and the devil, which beset us both in body and mind, in our earthly course.

2. ἀφορῶντες εἰς τὸν—[Ἰησοῦν] Thus far the Apostle has, for the confirmation of his Hebrew readers, set before them the examples of those Worthies of former times who had, by the strength of their faith, done and suffered so much; 'scarcely any thing,' as Bp. Sanderson observes in a Sermon on ver. 3, 'being so calculated to stir up men to the performance of duty as the examples of such as have performed the same before them with glory and success; for, besides that this leads them to emulate their glory, it cheers them with hopes of like success, and effectually removes that which is the common excuse of sloth and neglect of duty,—the pretence of impossibility.' Thus far, then (adds the learned prelate) he brings to their view this cloud of witnesses,—as also witnesses of their success or failure. But now through this cloud, as a medium, he bids them look at a higher example,—the Sun of Righteousness. An example recommended to them, 1. from the completeness of Him who is at both ends of the race, at once the ἀγωνοθέτης and the βραβευτής,—He that gives the law at the start, and He that gives the prize at the goal,—the Author and Finisher of our faith. 2. From the manner of his sufferings; not patiently alone enduring, but also courageously despising them. 3. From the issue and consequences of his sufferings, which were in lieu of the pain, joy; of the shame, glory. So that if they desired to reign with him, they must first suffer with him.—τὸν τῆς πίστεως ἀρχηγόν. Αρχ. here signifies author and exemplar; Christ being so termed, as calling forth our faith by his promises in the Gospel, and exemplifying it in his person. In like manner the βραβευτής (to whom Christ is here compared) was almost always one who had himself been victor, and who therefore presented in himself an example to the candidates for the prize. This view I find confirmed by Est., in an able note. On reconsideration, however, of the matter, I doubt whether this sense can fairly be deduced from ἀρχηγ., it is better to adhere to a single sense; and none, I think, is so proper to be adopted as that of 'author,' meaning 'prime author,' 'originator,' 'original effector,' and not, as many explain it, 'princeps, 'captain,' equiv. to ἀγωνοθέτης or βραβευτής: for to that there can be but an allusion. By τῆς πίστεως I would understand, not, with Stuart, the Christian religion, but the faith of those who profess it; not, however what Kuin. explains it to mean, a mere 'fiducia,' or 'confident expectation of future felicity,' but 'faith' as it is described by St. Paul Eph. ii. 8, namely, as 'the gift of God,' 'a principle given to us (Phil. i. 29), and imparted to, and instilled into, us by the Holy Spirit; in short, 'a justifying faith, 'a saving grace, wrought in us by the Holy Spirit sent by Christ, whereby we receive Christ as he is revealed to us in the Gospel, and trust in him alone for justification and salvation.' Accordingly, Christ our Saviour is well designated, supra, ii. 10, as δ ἀρχηγός τῆς σωτηρίας: such a faith terminating in salvation. See 1 Pet. ii. 9. Here, then, I would render 'of your faith,' the Art. being put for the Poss. Pronoun. This sense it is necessary to assign to τῆς πίστεως here, since the term is meant to set forth faith as the great agent through which Jesus becomes the ἀρχηγός τῆς ζωῆς, Acts iii. 15, and the ἀρχηγός τῆς σωτηρίας, Heb. ii. 10, namely, because, as we learn from John xiv. 6, 'through him alone any one cometh to the Father in acceptance, and through his life-giving Spirit (the Holy Spirit sent by him) the dead in trespasses and sins are so quickened, as to believe in him as the truth, come to him as the way, and thus experience him as the life, even by a saving faith unto salvation.' By τελειωτὴν τῆς πίστεως (a term used with allusion to the βραβευτής, or 'person who distributed the prize') is meant 'consummator of the work of faith and grace, whereof Jesus was the σταυρὸν, αἰσχύνῃς καταφρονήσας, ἐν δεξιᾷ τε τοῦ θρόνου τοῦ Θεοῦ * κεκάθικεν. <sup>3</sup> Ἀναλογίσασθε γὰρ τὸν τοιαύτην ὑπομεμενηκότα ὑπὸ τῶν ἁμαρτωλῶν εἰς αὐτὸν ἀντιλογίαν, ἵνα μὴ κάμῃτε ταῖς ψυχαῖς ὑμῶν ἐκλούμενοι.

1 Cor. 10.
13.
Ab. 10. 23-24.

<sup>4</sup> Οὐπω μέχρ' αἵματος ἀντικατεστήτη, πρὸς τὴν ἁμαρτίαν initiator and originator; thus bringing grace unto its perfect work in glory. Comp. Phil. i. 6. —ἀντὶ τῆς προκειμένης, &c. The term ἀντὶ here has been variously interpreted; but no sense, as Kuin. proves, is so suitable to the context as the one commonly assigned, because of, which he, in conjunction with Wetst., shows to be one naturally arising out of that use of ἀντὶ, by which it denotes the price of any labour or service. Of this use exx. occur at Eph. v. 31. Luke i. 20, and Jos. Bell. i. 8, 6. Indeed the idea of reward is inherent in the very term following, χαράς, which implies 'exaltation at the right hand of God, and a glorious reigning with him,'—an idea suggested by the words further on, ἐν δεξιᾷ τοῦ θρόνου τοῦ Θεοῦ κεκάθικεν.—αἰσχύνῃς καταφρονήσας. Render: 'having dispossessed disgrace, setting light by it, equiv. to παρ' οὐδὲν ἡγούμενος in Diod. Sic. t. v. 313. Comp. also Jos. Ant. ii. 11, 1, καταφρονῶν τῆς ἀπορίας. I cannot, with Dr. Peile, render this καταφρονήσας, by 'loftiness of purpose;'—notwithstanding that Thucyd. ii. 62 (as he observes) expresses by καταφρόνημα, 'the calm composure of a mind that knows its own strength,'—which dispiritualizes an august idea.

3. The Apostle now, as Hyper. observes, accommodates the above example to the particular case of the Hebrews themselves; here (as Calv. says) further enforcing the above exhortation by a comparison of Christ with those that are Christ's. 'The term ἀναλογίσασθαι imports (as Bp. Sanderson well observes) not the bare consideration of a thing by itself alone, but also by weighing and comparing it with some other things of like nature, and observing the analogies or proportions between it and them;' so here it denotes a comparison of the case of our Saviour with that of his suffering people; and the γὰρ, which here is argumentative (signifying now then) is meant to point an argument against all discontent and repining, by pointing out to their contemplation and consideration, by contrast, One infinitely higher and holier, who suffered far worse treatment than they could ever experience. As respects the term ἀντιλογίαν, even Kuinoel's version oppositio (= ἀντίλεξις in Jos. Ant. xviii. 1, 31) does not represent the full force of the word, any more than that of contradiction. It denotes 'such a determined and infuriate opposition to any one's claims, as to find vent in gross calumny and insulting language and behaviour.' Comp. Acts xviii. 45, καὶ ἀντίλογον τοῖς ὑπὸ Παύλου λεγομένοις, ἀντιλέγοντες καὶ βλασφημοῦντες. I have chosen to read αὐτὸν, for αὐτόν, with Tisch., because it is called for by the context; αὐτόν being capable of no satisfactory sense,—and αὐτ. is found in Theophyl., and in some of the Lamb. and Mus. copies, and prob. in not a few others; and in matters of this minute kind M.S. authority has not its usual weight. Besides, considering that there is an emphasis on τοιαύτην, and another on ἀμαρτίαν.

in opposition to the 'Just One,' 1 Pet. iii. 18, a third would be inconsistent with that good taste which prevails throughout this Epistle.—ἵνα μὴ κάμῃτε, &c. We have here a continuation of the agonistic metaphor; these two terms κάμῃτε and ἐκλούμενοι being both ἐ παλαστῶν. It is, however, not quite agreed whether ταῖς ψυχαῖς should be construed with κάμῃτε, or with ἐκλ. Kuin. decides in favour of the latter mode, citing from Plutarch ταῖς διανοαῖς ἐκλελυμένοις; but that the words would be as suitable to κάμ., is certain from a passage of Diod. Sic., vol. ix. p. 220, ἥδη κάμνοντες ταῖς ψυχαῖς. Jos. Bell. iii. 6, ταῖς ψυχαῖς ἱναποκάμειν. We may, indeed, suppose that they were meant for both κάμ. and ἐκλ.

4. The Apostle now 'ultra progreditur,' and, employing a fresh argument for courageous endurance of the afflictions laid upon them, here means to alarm them for the want of resolution, which, contrary to the express injunction of God, they began to evince under present evils, and those not of the most serious kind. At the same time this seems meant as a transition to more general arguments, to strengthen the foregoing exhortation to patience and perseverance in well-doing, even under suffering. And hence under Sis (again personified), considered as the great adversary opposing Christians in their course, whether by maliciously running in their way, or by violently blocking up their course (see supra, ver. 8, and note), seems meant to be included the agents of sin.—sin, energizing, through those agents, in hatred of the truth, and carried out in all the modes of persecution thereof, both active and passive, direct and indirect. The former is espec. alluded to in the peculiar phrase μέχρ' αἵματος for μέχρ' αἵματος ἐκχυσίας, as in Heliod. vii. 8, and Niceph. Hist. p. 741 (cited by Wets.). Accordingly, in the resistance to sin, considered as an accident or quality, the sin of apostasy seems more particularly meant; and by resistance to this sin, even unto blood, is meant so overcoming the weakness of the flesh, as to be ready at any time to shed one's blood in the cause of the Gospel. That there is an agonistic allusion, and, as at Rom. vi. 16, a personification of Sis, the best Expositors, from Crell. and Est. downwards, are agreed.—ἀμαρτία is represented as an adversary assailing them for the purpose of making them fail in their bounden duty and service; and as in the pancratium, here alluded to, until blood was drawn, the contest was not thought serious; so here the writer means to say, that, in the struggles which they had hitherto had to sustain against the temptations to apostasy, or to backsliding, presented by the malice or the arts of their adversaries, they had not yet been called to the severest trial,—that of sealing their faith with their blood. They had only been tempted, or tried, by the lighter evils, of confiscation, or ignominious punishment, or persecution generally.

ἀνταγωνιζόμενοι <sup>5 d</sup> καὶ ἐκλέλησθε τῆς παρακλήσεως, ἥτις ὑμῖν <sup>d Job 8. 17.</sup>
ὡς υἱοῖς διαλέγεται. <sup>Prov. 2. 11,</sup> Τίέ μου, μὴ ὀλιγώρει παιδείας Κυ- <sup>Rev. 2. 19.</sup> ρίου, μηδὲ ἐκλύου ὑπ' αὐτοῦ ἐλεγχόμενος <sup>6</sup> ὃν γὰρ ἀγαπᾷ Κύριος παιδεύει· μαστιγοῖ δὲ πάντα υἱὸν ὃν παραδέχεται. <sup>7</sup> Εἰ παιδείαν ὑπομένετε, ὡς υἱοῖς ὑμῖν προσ-φέρεται ὁ Θεός· τίς γάρ ἐστιν υἱὸς ὃν οὐ παιδεύει πατήρ; <sup>8</sup> Εἰ δὲ χωρὶς ἐστε παιδείας, ἥς μέτοχοι γεγόνασι πάντες, ἄρα νόθοι ἐστέ, καὶ οὐχ υἱοί. <sup>9</sup> Εἴτα τοὺς μὲν τῆς σαρκὸς ἡμῶν πατέρας εἴχομεν παιδευτάς, καὶ ἐνετρεπόμεθα· οὐ πολλῶ μᾶλλον ὑποτα-

<sup>e</sup> Deut. 8. 5.
<sup>f</sup> Sam. 7. 14.
<sup>g</sup> Prov. 13. 24.
<sup>h</sup> 19. 18.
<sup>i</sup> Ps. 73. 18.
<sup>j</sup> 1 Pet. 5. 9.
<sup>k</sup> Num. 16.
<sup>l</sup> 21.
<sup>m</sup> 27. 16.
<sup>n</sup> Eccles. 12.
<sup>o</sup> L. 7.
<sup>p</sup> Isa. 57. 18.
<sup>q</sup> Zech. 12. 1.

Surely, then, it were most base to turn their backs, as it were, in the prelude to the contest, and not resolve to bear the heat and burden of the day,—to faint where they ought to persevere, and to stop short where it is their duty to 'endure unto the end.'

5. καὶ ἐκλῶ.] Here there is a mixture of reprehension with exhortation. Render: 'Yea, ye have [it seems] forgotten the exhortation, which addresses (reasoneth with) you as sons (thus). My son, set not light by the chastening of the Lord (by not heeding it, as if not from the Lord's hand), nor be disheartened (dispirited) when thou art corrected.' Of ἐκλῶ, in this sense, and absolute construction, other exx. occur in Isocr., p. 323, and Dem. 421, and with ψυχαῖς expressed in Polyb. xx. 4, 7.—ἰλιγγεσθαι, 'to be corrected,' is of very rare occurrence. We may compare the use of 'to rebuke,' = 'to correct,' in our old writers; comp. Ps. xxxix. 11, for the rebukes there are not verbera lingua, but the strokes, or plagues, from the Lord's hand.

7. εἰ παιδείαν ὑπομένετε, &c.] Here we have a conclusion drawn from the above Scripture, though with the omission (per asyndeton) of a conclusive particle. Since, however, εἰ seldom begins a sentence, the ancient scribes stumbled at it, and supposing it to be connected with the preceding words, wrote εἰ, the ε arising from the α following. Such is, I apprehend, the true origin of the εἰ, which has been half approved by Griesbach, and received into the text by Matthæi, Lachm., and Tisch., ed. 1, but rejected, and εἰ restored, by Tisch., ed. 2; rightly; since εἰ is required by the course of reasoning, and by the antithetic εἰ at v. 8.—τίς γάρ ἐστιν, &c., 'For what son is there whom (his) father chasteneth not?' meaning to say, 'how can ye expect children not to receive chastisement?' The sense of the whole passage is, 'hence, if ye sustain trials and tribulations, you may thence infer that you are the objects of God's fatherly love and care; but if you are exercised with no afflictions, you have reason to fear that God neglects you,—that ye are no true sons.' The terms throughout the whole passage, vv. 4—11, are very strong, and may have meant more than they express. At all events, they attest that the Church addressed, whether of Jerusalem or Alexandria, was suffering under a severe persecution. As to the origins thereof, I agree with Mr. Conybeare, 'that the intense feeling of Jewish nationality called forth by the commencing struggle with Rome, which produced the triumph of the zealot party, would amply account for a persecution of the Christians at Jerusalem at this period; as is argued by those who suppose the Epistle adressed to them. But the same cause would produce the same effect on the great Jewish population of Alexandria.'

9, 10. I still continue, with R. Steph. Ed. Θεοφιλικῶς! to take these two verses in close connexion, in which, I agree with Dr. Peile, the Apostle intended them to stand, because, as he observes, 'it is from the last clause of v. 10, εἰς τὸ μεταλαβῆναι τῆς ἀγιότητος αὐτοῦ, that we gather that the Father, whom, in v. 9, he opposes to those from whom (as mediately interposed between us and our Maker) we severally derived our natural being, can be no other than the "one Mediator between God and men,"—God in Christ at once, and Christ in us.'

Ver. 9 contains an 'argumentum a minori ad majus,' adding another reason for ὑπομονή by an illustration derived from earthly parents; and thus is introduced at ver. 10 the proof of the far fuller and more beneficial discipline of God as compared to that of any earthly parent. The εἴτα is not merely continuative, but also *rati-*onative = Latin utane? 'is it then so?' introducing indignant questions, as in Dem. 16, 11, εἴτ' οὐκ αἰσχύνεσθε; Render: 'Is it so, then, that we had fathers of the flesh as correctors, and so we gave them reverence; and shall we not much rather subject ourselves to the Father of spirits, and live?' For they, indeed, for a few days, held us as they thought fit in discipline; but He for our benefit, in order to our being participators of his holiness.—οὐ π. μ. ὑποταγησόμεθα, &c., 'shall we not then obediently suffer what is inflicted by τῷ Πατρὶ τῶν πνευμάτων?' a peculiar expression, and variously explained. Some, regarding the sentence as antithetic, and repeating ἡμῶν from the preceding clause, interpret, 'Father (i. e. Creator and Vivifier) of our souls.' Yet to this it may be objected, that God is the Creator of the body as well as the soul (and so at Num. xvi. 22, God is addressed as ὁ Θεὸς τῶν πνευμάτων καὶ πάσης σαρκός); and indeed the sense thus arising is scarcely suitable to the argument. By others, the expression is taken as a Hebraism for spiritual Father, as opposed to our fleshly fathers. This, however, is too limited a view of the expression, which may rather be supposed to refer to the work of regeneration, effected by the Divine Spirit, whereby faithful Christians are said to be 'begotten again' of God, 1 Pet. i. 3. 1 John v. 18. Thus, then, as Calv. observes, 'while God is the Father both of our souls and bodies, yet, as in creating our souls he uses not the instrumentality of men, and also by the power of his Spirit he in a wonderful manner renews them, he is peculiarly, κατ' ἴδιον, styled the γησόμεθα τῷ Πατρὶ τῶν πνευμάτων, καὶ ζήσομεν; <sup>10</sup> οἱ μὲν γὰρ πρὸς ὀλίγας ἡμέρας, κατὰ τὸ δοκοῦν αὐτοῖς, ἐπαίδευον ὁ δὲ ἐπὶ τὸ συμφέρον, εἰς τὸ μεταλαβεῖν τῆς ἀγιότητος αὐτοῦ.

h Isa. 52. 17.
James 1. 12.

1 Isa. 56. 2.
Job 4. 8, 4.
Ecclus. 50.
52.

<sup>11</sup> ἡ Πᾶσα δὲ παιδεία πρὸς μὲν τὸ παρὸν οὐ δοκεῖ χαρὰς εἶναι, ἀλλὰ λύπης ὑστερον δὲ καρπὸν εἰρημικὸν τοῖς δι' αὐτῆς γυμνασμένοις ἀποδίδωσι δικαιοσύνην. <sup>12</sup> Διὸ τὰς παρειμένας χεῖρας καὶ τὰ παραλελυμένα γόνατα ἀνορθώ-

Father of spirits.' See more in Hyper. and Est. —καὶ ζήσομεν, 'and thus live,' 'attain everlasting happiness.' In the second member of the sentence at v. 10 there might have been something expressed to correspond to πρὸς ὀλίγας ἡμέρας, such as πρὸς πολλὰς ἡμέρας, namely, for our whole lives,—nay, even beyond; since the training is for eternal life, which springs from having 'become partakers of his holiness,'—words on which the best comment is 2 Pet. i. 4, ἵνα γίνησθε θείας κοινωνοὶ φύσεως, and Lev. xi. 41, cited at 1 Pet. i. 14—16, 'Be ye holy, for I am holy.' In fact, the words further develop the idea at ἐπὶ τὸ συμφέρον, and, while recognizing the power of adversity to exercise and strengthen virtue, also allude to that regenerating influence of God's Spirit (referred to in the preceding verse), whereby adversity is sanctified to the spiritual good of the faithful.

<sup>11</sup> πᾶσα δὲ παιδεία, &c.] This is, as Ebrard observes, 'a precious verse, to which, properly speaking, Christian experience can only furnish the [true heart-written] comment;' q. d. 'All discipline seems, during the time of its continuance, to be an object not of joy, but of grief; afterwards, however, it yields a peaceable fruit to those who are exercised thereby,—a fruit of righteousness.'—χαρὰς is a Genit. of quality, put for an adjective. The expression δοκεῖ is very significant, nay emphatical, importing that adversity, however for the time it seem to be not joy, but rather grief, yet in reality it is, in its effects, 'all joy.' See James i. 2.—εἰρημικόν. A peculiar use of the word, of which consequently the exact sense has been disputed. Some explain the expression pacatus, or pacificus; i. e. as bringing with it the peace with God which springs from faith: an interpretation, however, not a little harsh. Others, as Theophyl., Calv., Est., Bengel, Mackn., interpret tranquil, peaceful, lit. peace-bearing; with allusion to the result of such salutary chastisement, in producing peace of mind and peace with God (see Phil. iv. 7. Col. iii. 15), as opposed to the tumultuous impatience and rebellious murmuring too often felt and expressed during the period of correction; an interpretation, I apprehend, the best founded. See Hyper., and comp. Rom. v. 1. In δικαιοσύνη there is a Genit. of explication; q. d. 'even of righteousness.' Not, however, understanding thereby (with Kuinoel and others) rectitude, or probity, but that righteousness which has regard to God and his Law; such as is not merely external (see Phil. iii. 6, 9), but internal, when the heart is right with God; so denoting piety towards God, godliness; or it may mean, as Ebrard explains (the now entirely appropriated) righteousness in Christ. See note on James iii. 18. By δι' αὐτῆς γίγνεται is meant, by a resumption of the agonistic metaphor, 'exercised therein,' viz. in trial and tribulation. And so Jos. Ant. iii. 1, uses γυμνάζειν αὐτοὺς τοῖς χαλεποῖς. Furthermore, as πρὸς τὸ παρὸν denotes the time of suffering, so does ὑστερον the period of experiencing its benefits, when we find that 'it is good for us that we have been afflicted' (Pa. cxix. 71), and when we can say, with David, 'I know, O Lord, that thy judgments are right, and that thou of very faithfulness hast afflicted me.'

<sup>12</sup> On the above arguments respecting the wholesome uses of affliction, the Apostle now founds an impressive exhortation to constancy in the faith; and, as at the beginning of this hortatory part of the Epistle (x. 19, sq.) he had treated of the superiority of Christ's priesthood, and held out to view the severe punishments to be inflicted on apostates, since not even contempt of the Mosaic Law went unpunished; so now, on concluding at v. 12 the more general part of his hortatory portion of the Epistle, he finally excites them to perseverance in the faith. In the first place he treats on the difference between the old and the new dispensation, showing the superiority of the latter over the former; and thence (at ver. 25) argues, that if despisers of the Mosaic Law suffered the severest punishment from men, much less shall apostates from the Gospel escape punishment from God. (Kuinoel.)—τὰς παρειμένας χεῖρας—ἀνορθ. This is not, as Conyb. says, a quotation, much less from memory, as he avers, but an application of a passage of Scripture in Isa. xxxiv. 3, Sept., to the present purpose: and there is a far greater similarity between the words of the Sept. and of St. Paul than has been supposed; and even there the Hebrew original confirms the reading here. The copy used by St. Paul seems to have had (as we still find in two or three MSS.) ἐνψύσαντα, which he altered to ἀνορθ. as a more appropriate term, since the full sense here intended is, 'raise up-right the hands that hang dangling down,' namely, from utter exhaustion and unstrung nerves, the attendant on despondency. So ψαπ. is used in Plut. vi. 251, 6, παρειμύοντες τὴν ψυχὴν ἐκ τῆς συμφορᾶς. Finally, as respects χεῖρας ἀνωμύνας in the Sept., the words must be corrupt; and I doubt not that the true reading there is χεῖρας ἀνωμύνας,—an opinion confirmed by the words of St. Paul here, παρειμύνας χεῖρας; and certain it is that the terminations av and es are so similar as to be easily confounded. The term ἀνορθ. must be taken in a twofold sense, and, as applied to παραλελυμένα γόνατα, must mean strengthened, as in the Sept. Thus the words παρειμύνας and παραλελυμένα graphically represent the effects of mental depression and dejection of spirit, by terms which properly denote bodily exhaustion. In this light Bp. Sanderson seems to have viewed the expression in the following paraphrase: 'Support the hands that hang loose, and have not strength enough to lift up themselves; and bind up the feeble knees that are not well knit up in the joints, and are unable to bear up the body.'

στατε <sup>13</sup> * καὶ τροχιάς ὁρθὰς ποιήσατε τοῖς ποσὶν <sup>1</sup> <sup>1</sup> Prov. 4. 26, 27. Gal. 6. 1. 1 Rom. 12. 13. ὑμῶν, ἵνα μὴ τὸ χαλὸν ἐκτραπῇ, ἰαθῇ δὲ μᾶλλον. <sup>14</sup> <sup>1</sup> Εἰρή- 2 Tim. 2. 22. Matt. 5. 9. νην διώκετε μετὰ πάντων, καὶ τὸν ἁγιασμόν, οὐ χωρὶς οὐδεῖς 3 Cor. 7. 1. m 2 Cor. 6. 1. ὄψεται τὸν Κύριον <sup>15</sup> <sup>m</sup> ἐπισκοποῦντες μὴ τις ὑστερῶν ἀπὸ 5 Pet. 1. 10. Deut. 22. 12. ch. 2. 12. Gal. 6. 12.

13. καὶ τροχιάς ὁρθὰς—τ. ποσὶν ὑμῶν] The words are taken from Prov. iv. 26, ὁρθὰς τροχιάς ποιεῖ τοῖς ποσὶ, καὶ τὰς δούδας σου κατεύθυνε. The meaning (withdrawing the metaphor) is, that 'they should avoid or remove every obstacle which might impede them in running their Christian course; whether of self-indulgence on the one hand, or of a slavish fear on the other;' the whole, Stuart says, conveying the idea that to go straight forward in their Christian course, regardless of any afflictions to which this may subject them, is the only way of safety for those who are in danger of halting. This may be true, if there be (as Ebrard states) a reverting back to the exhortation at vv. 2, 3. By the χαλόν, he observes, 'the readers are themselves meant, in so far as they had already grown slack in the race, and were thus (speaking figuratively) lamed. They are to take care not to break entirely, or to dislocate their limbs, i. e. to become entirely incapable of going on in the race; they are rather to strive to recover their original strength and vigour.' This is very specious; but, I apprehend, scarcely what the Apostle had in mind; and to suppose, with Dr. Peile, that vv. 16—17 present what the Apostle had in his mind when he wrote v. 12, is only to increase a difficulty already, on the foregoing view, too great for even a Calvin to overcome. Besides, it leaves the words ἰαθῇ δὲ μᾶλλον wholly out of count, as inexplicable. I am inclined to think, that the only true view of the sense is that pointed out by Est. thus: 'Verisimile est non de quacumque grossius claudicatione loqui Apostolum; sed de eâ, quæ contingit in semitâ fidei, dum incipit nutare et inclinare ad defectionem a fide suscepta, quales erant ex Hebræis multi. Minus autem est claudicare, quam errare. Non enim qui claudicat aberrat de viâ. Monet ergo, ut, si qui inter eos sint claudicantes, id est, ad defectionem prout propter afflictiones, quas fidei causâ patiebantur, statim adhibitâ paternâ curâ de medicamentis doctrinæ, consolationis atque exhortationis, utantur et confortentur, ne neglecti longius abducantur et corruant.' I find this confirmed by Theophyl. thus: Ἀλλὰ μᾶλλον σπουδάσατε, ἵνα ἰαθῇ τὸ ἐν ὑμῖν χαλόν, τουτ' ἐστὶ, εἴη τινα ἀπιστίας ἔχητε μίχρη, τουτ' ἐστὶν, διορθώητε μᾶλλον. Ποῦ γὰρ ἐν τῷ ὑποκρίνῃ ἀπιστία;

14. The Apostle now proceeds to remind them of various duties to which their Christian profession, and the times in which they lived, rendered it necessary that they should pay a particular regard. (Stuart.) Exhortations to peace and to holiness are well introduced after that to perseverance in the faith, since the former would much contribute to produce and promote the latter.—καὶ τὸν ἁγιασμόν. The term ἁγιασμός in general signifies purity of heart and life, conformity to God (Lev. xix. 2), and to the holy example of Christ. But, from what follows, ver. 16, it would seem meant (as the ancient and the best modern Commentators are agreed) to denote purity of morals, and espec. that which forms the principal part of sanctification, the abstaining from fornication. So it is said, 1 Thess. iv. 3, τοῦτο γὰρ ἐστὶ τὸ θέλημα τοῦ Θεοῦ, ὁ ἁγιασμός ὑμῶν, &c.; and so at ver. 8 the two terms ἀκαθαρσία and ἁγιασμός are opposed. And in this Est. acquiesces, as the simpler view;—though he places first another, which is, perhaps, the true meaning intended by the Apostle;—namely, 'such purity of heart as may issue in purity of life,' what is adverted to at Matt. v. 8, 'without which no man shall see the Lord:' no wonder, since, as Calv. observes, at the close of his able note, 'non aliis oculis videbimus Deum, quam qui reformati fuerint ad ejus imaginem.'

15. Here the exhortations at v. 14 are repeated, only in the inverse order. 'They are carefully to see (each one for himself, and also the one for the other, by means of that παρακλήσις described in ch. x. 24, seqq.) "that no one remain behind the grace of God," an expression which is still to be explained from the allusion to a race towards a goal. And they are likewise to take care "that no up-springing root of bitterness cause disturbance, and thereby may be defiled."' (Ebrard.)—ἐπισκοποῦντες μὴ τις, &c. lit., 'seeing to it;' i. e. looking diligently, both to themselves and to others. At μὴ τις ὑστερῶν supply ἴσται, as in Deut. xxix. 18. By τῆς χάριτος τοῦ Θεοῦ is usually understood the Christian religion; the caution being thus supposed to be against apostasy. Yet such a sense is forbidden by the term ὑστ., unless that be taken, in a very unusual sense, for deficere. Hence it is better to understand the expression to denote the special mercy and favour of God in giving us his sanctifying grace; and, from the close connexion of this clause with the preceding one, καὶ τὸν ἁγιασμόν, οὐ χωρὶς οὐδεὶς ὄψεται τὸν Κύριον, we may suppose the two sentiments to have a mutual affinity; the admonition being, that 'no one fall off,' i. e. by not improving, and thus lose that portion of sanctifying grace given from above, whereby alone he can be enabled to fulfil the injunction to 'perfect holiness in the fear of God,' 2 Cor. vii. 1. 2 Thess. ii. 13. On tracing the scope of the whole passage, it will, I apprehend, be seen, that the words μὴ τις ὑστερῶν—πολλοὶ contain the general sentiment intended to be expressed; and the two following clauses, μὴ τις πόρνος, ἢ βίβηλος, &c., certain particular ones, serving the purpose of exemplification, and meant to make the warning in question more pointed. Thus, as the words μὴ τις ῥίξα πικρίας, &c., are meant (as appears from the passage of Deut. xxix. 18 here adverted to) of the crime of apostasy, or unbelief, or of profaneness in general; so what follows, μὴ τις πόρνος, ἢ βίβηλος, is directed against sensuality or worldly-mindedness in general; the persons thus profane and profane being compared with n Gen. 28.

28.
Eph. 5. 2.
Col. 3. 5.
1 Thess. 4. 2.
o Gen. 27. 34.
etc.

τῆς χάριτος τοῦ Θεοῦ μή τις ῥίζα πικρίας ἄνω φύουσα ἐνοχλῇ, καὶ διὰ ταύτης μανθῶσι πολλοί. <sup>16</sup> ἢ μή τις πόρνος, ἢ βέβηλος ὡς Ἡσαῦ, ὃς ἀντὶ βρώσεως μιᾶς ἀπέδοτο τὰ πρωτότοκια αὐτοῦ. <sup>17</sup> ὅστε γὰρ ὅτι καὶ μετέπειτα, θέλων κληρονομήσαι τὴν εὐλογίαν, ἀπεδοκίμασθη· μετανοίας γὰρ τόπον οὐχ εὑρε, καίπερ μετὰ δακρῶν ἐκζητήσας αὐτήν.

Esau, because, as he sold his birthright for a mess of pottage, so such an one sells the favour of God for gratifications the most fleeting and worthless. In thus explaining the expression ῥίζα πικρίας at once of apostasy, or semi-apostasy by unbelief, and of a corrupt life, I am supported by the authority of Theodor. ; and also of Est., who thus lays down the sense: 'Advigilate, ne quis sit inter vos, qui tamquam radix amaricans, quæ fructum amarulentum ac fellis instar abominabilem proferre nata sit, sursum germinet ac pullulet, hoc est, fructus edat amarulentos vitiosorum operum, aut perversorum dogmatum, quibus unitas vestra, quam habetis in Christo, turbetur; sed si quis talis sit, aut sanetur quam primum, aut exstirpetur. Ad doctrinæ perversitatem et fidei corruptelam pertinere hanc radicis metaphoram, potius quam ad alia vitia, probabile fit ex loco illo Deut. ubi adversus cultum falsorum Deorum hæc Moses concionatur.' With respect to the nature of the metaphor in these words, μή τις ῥίζα πικρίας—ἐνοχλῇ, we may here trace one of the many agricultural allusions found in the New Test.; the infection of 'evil communication' being compared to that of bitter and noxious weeds stifling their way into a garden,—which strike their roots deep and wide, so as to be with difficulty eradicated, and spread so fast as to infect the ground in every direction; an allusion dropped in the term following, μανθῶσι, which denotes, in a general way, the pernicious influence in question to corrupt the faith and morals of the persons. Comp. v. 15, and see note, and my Lex. in v. In order to avoid the confusion of metaphor in ἐνοχλῇ and μανθῶσι, Grot., Whitby, Mill, and Valckn. would, for ἐνοχλῇ, read ἐν γολῇ, which is supported by the Hebrew text in the passage of Deut. xxix. 18, here referred to. But since 7 MSS. of the Septuagint (including the Alexandrian) read as in the Apostle's text, it is little probable that the other reading was the general one in his age. Indeed, the researches of Jackson of Leicester, cited in Holmes's Septuagint, go far to prove that such was a true rendering of the Hebrew, according to the copies used by the LXX., and that the Masoretic reading of our present copies is wrong. Be that as it may, such seems to have been the reading of the Septuagint, whether the true one or not matters little, since the words in question are not a regular quotation, but only (as at ver. 12) an application of the passage to the case in point; and the above reading being suited to the Apostle's purpose was adopted by him.—καὶ διὰ τ. μανθῶσι πολλοί. The MS. A. and one other, have οἱ πολλοί, which reading is adopted into the text by Lachm. and Tisch., but on very insufficient authority, though a far stronger would not justify the change, which seems to have been made in consequence of what was annotated, with less than his usual judgment, by Grot., who seemingly approving of οἱ πολλοί, explains it to mean plebs, quæ, he remarks, "a Doctoribus facile corruptipar," referring to Gal. v. 9, where it is said that a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump. But the leaven does not always come from the Teachers, but sometimes from the taught, as the history of all sects and heresies tends to show. Besides, the idiom οἱ πολλοί to denote plebs no where occurs in the New Test., nor was it likely to occur.

16. μή τις πόρνος, &c.] These words (as we have before seen) are illustrative of the preceding; and, as Calv. observes, having first exhorted them to 'holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord,' the Apostle now warns them against such things as are especially contrary thereto,—fornication and profaneness. So meaning to say, 'lest, for instance, any of you be a fornicator.' In subjoining ἢ βέβηλος the Apostle, as Calv. well points out, 'descends from what is particular to what is general,—from fornication, which is one of the things contrary to holiness, to profaneness, which is the general opposite of holiness;' and, accordingly, βέβ. denotes, 'one who treats sacred things with contempt, who has no sense of religion, and lives without God in the world; who despises spiritual blessings, from being wholly carnal and sensual, and therefore will readily barter his heavenly inheritance for sensual gratification of any kind.'—ἀντὶ βρώσεως μιᾶς, a forcible expression, to intimate how fleeting are the gratifications of sense, as well as how dearly purchased. Comp. Plut. de Ser. Num. Vind. c. xi., where Lysimachus, after surrendering himself to his pursuing enemies, the Getæ, to obtain a draught of water to slake his thirst, is represented as exclaiming, φῶν τῇ ἐμῇ κακίᾳ ('grovelling baseness') ὅτι δι' ἄδωκόν οὐτω βραχίαιαν ἐστέρημαι βασιλείαν τελευκῆς!

17. ἀπεδοκίμασθη] 'he was (i. e. his request was) rejected.'—μετανοίας γὰρ τόπον, &c. The best Expositors are agreed that the term μετάνοια here simply denotes a changing of any one's intention (as in Thucydides, iii. 36, 5, ὅστερτις μετάνοιά τις εἶδεν αὐτοῖς, καὶ ἀναλογισμένῃ, &c., and Jos. Bell. i. 4, 4), and that τόπος here denotes means; the general sense being, 'he found no means of inducing [Isaac] to change his intention, or alter his words.' Comp. Wiesd. Sol. xii. 10, κρίνων δὲ καταπραχὸν ἰδίδουε (read ἰδίδουε) τόπον μετανόας, and Clemens Alex. i. 7, μετανόας τόπον ἰδούκε. According to the more common interpretation, by which the term μετανόια is understood of Esau, the αὐτὴν will have to be referred to εὐλογίαν, meaning, as Conyb. says, that he sought to reverse the consequences of his fault, and obtain the blessing; but this involves great harshness.

18 Ὁ γὰρ προσελήλυθατε ψηλαφωμένῳ ὄρει, καὶ κεκαυμένῳ πυρὶ, καὶ γνόφῳ καὶ σκότῳ καὶ θυέλλῃ, 19 καὶ σάλπιγγος ἤχῳ καὶ φωνῇ ῥημάτων, ἧς οἱ ἀκούσαντες παρητήσαντο μὴ προστεθῆναι αὐτοῖς λόγον, 20 οὐκ ἔφερον γὰρ τὸ διαστελλόμενον. Καὶ ν p Exod. 19.

12, 30.
& 30. 18.
Deut. 5. 22.
9 Exod. 20.
Deut. 5. 5.
22. & 18. 18.
Exod. 19. 18.

18—21. In again urging on his readers the duty of perseverance in faith and holiness, the Apostle dwells on the superior excellence of the Christian religion; contrasting the condition of worshippers under the Old and that under the New law, which he designates by the two holy mountains, Sinai and Sion; illustrating the subject from the narration at Exod. xix. 20, sq., and with reference also to Deut. iv. 11. v. 5. The latter dispensation, he shows, is not, as was the Mosaic, severe, onerous, and minatory; but holds out salvation, and infuses joy, hope, and confidence. Hence, however, he argues that its very superior excellence would render its rejection proportionably more criminal. 'The magnificent peroration now introduced (commencing, indeed, at v. 1 of this chap., but here concentrated), had for its object a powerful appeal to his readers to aim at such a faith (like that of ch. xi.) as should realize to itself as well what is subjective and earthly (τὰ ἐπίγεια), as what is purely spiritual and heavenly (τὰ ἐπουράνια), so as to effectually reach the now disclosed ὁδὸν τῶν ἀγίων.' (Peile.) 'Prædicat (Apostolus) magnitudinem gratiæ, quæ nobis patefacta fuit per Evangelium, ut reverenter eam excipere dicamus.' (Calv.)

18. οὐ γὰρ προσελήλυθατε, &c.] The γὰρ has reference to the caution at ver. 15, μὴ ὑστερεῖν ἀπὸ τ. χάρ. τ. Θ. Προσέρχασθαι is a term denoting religious service and worship generally; though it may designate, as here, embracing a religion. Of the expression ψηλαφ. the sense has been disputed. Many Expositors explain it, 'touched [from heaven]'; scil. ἐν πυρὶ, by lightning, with which, as the narration of Moses shows, the mountain was struck. But the term ψηλαφάω signifies, not to touch, but (what were quite unsuited to the idea of fire) to feel of, to handle. Hence it is better to retain the ancient and common interpretation, by which ψηλαφωμένοις is taken for ψηλαφητῶς, in the sense ad contractabilem, 'which may be handled'; and so will be equiv. to αἰσθητῶς and ἐπιγίγνωσκ., denoting 'material and corporeal, or palpable and tangible mount, in opposition to the incorporeal, spiritual, and heavenly one,' the heavenly Sion, ver. 22. This is confirmed by Calv., Hypel., and Est., of whom the first-mentioned remarks, 'Mons Sinai manibus palpari potest; mons vero Sion non nisi Spiritu comprehenditur.'—κεκαυμένῳ πυρὶ is best rendered, 'that burneth with fire'; Perf. Pass. in Pres. sense. Comp. Hom. Il. xix. 376, καί μιν πυρὸς, Part. Imperf. The words following advert to the tremendous circumstances attending the promulgation of the law at Mount Sinai, and which struck such terror into those present at it; circumstances whose august dignity must not be lowered by attempts at minute explanation; and where (as in similar passages at 1 Cor. xv. 52, and 1 Thess. iv. 16) it becomes the expositor to 'pull off his shoes from off his feet, as being on holy ground.' The wording here is formed on Deut. iv. 11, καὶ ἐγένοντο σκότος καὶ γνόφος καὶ θέλλα ἐπὶ γῆν, &c., and ch. xix. 16. The word γνόφος is very rare in the Class. writers, but it occurs in Lucian de Morte Peregr. § 45, γνόφον καταβάττοι καὶ κύμα ἰγυίραντος, where the term is used probably in derision of the use (as obsolete) of the word in the Sept. and St. Paul. For σκότος, Lachm. and Tisch. edit. from several MSS., γόφος, a very specious reading, but one which cannot be received except on much stronger external authority. Internal evidence may seem to be in its favour; but I much suspect it to be no other than an emendation of style introduced by certain Critics who had in mind 2 Pet. ii. 4 & 17. Jude 6 & 13, and such passages of the Classical writers as Plut. Alcib. 28, ὁ μύρον ἐξείλετο ἐπιτείνοντα καὶ βροντὰς καὶ γόφος. That Paul here employed the word σκότος, may be with great probability argued from the fact, that he nowhere uses the word γόφος; and such is almost certain from Exod. x. 22 (which passage was evidently had in view by him here, and served to suggest the phraseology here employed), ἐγένοντο σκότος, γνόφος, θέλλα. As respects the term θέλλα, derived from the Sept. of Deut. iv. 11, it there corresponds to the Hebr. חָשָׁךְ, though it does not represent its sense thick darkness; but it was adopted with allusion to the violent tempest that accompanied the cloud, the thunder, and the lightning of Sinai, Exod. xix. 16, 18. xx. 18.

19. καὶ σάλπ. ἤχῳ καὶ φωνῇ ῥημάτων] Render: 'and to sound of trumpet and voice of words' (Deut. iv. 11), denoting Divine communication by words, introduced by sound of trumpet. See Exod. xix. 19.—παρητήσαντο μὴ προστεθῆναι αὐτοῖς λόγον, lit. 'entreated for the word (namely, the φωνὴ ῥημάτων, the verbal communication) not to be added (i. e. further addressed) to them.' Of the rare use of μὴ and the infin. after παραιτ., see other exx. in my note on Thucyd. v. 63, 3. I doubt not that the reading προσθεῖναι arose from certain Critics who stumbled at the very uncommon use of προστίθηναι in the Passives, and hence substituted the Active, which, however rare, is found in Isocr. p. 238, προσθεῖναι οὐδὲν εἶχον τοῖς αἰρημένοις, and Demosth. p. 99 & 304, προσθέσω δὲ, &c. The Apostle prob. had here in mind the words of the Israelites to Moses, Exod. xx. 19, λάλησον σὺ ἡμῖν, καὶ μὴ λαλεῖτω πρὸς ἡμᾶς ὁ Θεός, as also the words of the Sept. Version of Deut. xviii. 16, οὐ προσθήσομεν ἀκούσαι τὴν φωνὴν Κυρίου τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ, &c.; which passage, and Deut. v. 25, ἐάν προσθέμεθα ἀκούσαι τὴν φωνὴν—ἀποθανούμεθα, doubtless suggested to the Apostle this peculiar expression, προστεθῆναι τὸν λόγον.

20. Here the Apostle adverts to a circumstance which had espec. caused their alarm,—namely, that so strict was the edict which forbade the mountain to be touched, that even a beast touching it was to be stoned. See Exod. xix. 13.—τὸ διαστελλόμενον, meaning, 'the strict interdiction,—that if even,' &c. Conybe. places a full stop after διαστ., 'because (he adds) that which the Israelites "could not bear" was not

Gal. 4. 20.
Rev. 5. 12.
1 Th. 5. 10.
Phil. 3. 20.
Deut. 28. 2.
Jude 14.

Luke 10.
20.
Gen. 18. 28.
ch. 11. 40.
Phil. 3. 12.

θηρίον θίγῃ τοῦ δρους, λιθοβοληθήσεται [ἡ βολίδι κατατοξευθήσεται].<sup>21</sup> καὶ, οὕτω φοβερὸν ἦν τὸ φανταζόμενον,—Μωϋσῆς εἶπεν Ἐκφοβός εἰμι καὶ ἔντρομος<sup>22</sup> ἄλλα προσεληλύθατε Σιών δρει, καὶ πόλει Θεοῦ ζώντος, Ἱερουσαλήμ ἐπουρανίῃ καὶ μυριάσιν, ἀγγέλων<sup>23</sup> πανηγύρει, καὶ ἐκκλησίᾳ

the order for killing the beast, but the utterance of the commandments of God.' But that cannot be admitted, for no words are there recorded. And whatever they were, the people did not hear them, and therefore could not treat that 'no more might be spoken to them.' Besides, the strong term διαστῆλαι, denoting 'a strict edict' (like the διαμαρτυρῆσαι in Sept.), requires the term to be taken with the following strict injunction, which refers to Exod. xix. 12, 13, where it is not confined to beasts, but extended to men, who are placed first. The words ἡ βολίδι κατατοξευθήσεται are, with reason, cancelled by Lachm., Scholz, and Tisch.; for the overpowering authority of external evidence against the words forbids us to suppose that they were omitted by the scribe, from λιθ. and κατατ. each ending with -θήσεται.

21. τὸ φανταζόμενον meaning, 'the fearful sight,' spectacle, as we should say. A use of φαντ. which, though rare, is found in Plato, p. 313 & 376. Lucian, t. iii. 43, πολυμορφόν τι καὶ θέαμα καὶ φανταζόμενον. The words καὶ ἔντρομος, though not found in the Sept., are confirmed by 2 Macc. xiii. 2, εἶδε τὸν λαόν ὅτι ἱστῖν ἔντρομος καὶ ἐκφοβός, where read, from the Alex. and other MSS., ἐκφ. The Apostle was justified in ascribing these words, ἐκφοβός, &c., to Moses, since they are implied in what was uttered by him on the solemn occasion in question, as recorded in Deut. xviii. 16, 'Let me not hear again the voice of the Lord my God, neither let me see this great fire any more that I die not [of fear];' where for 'Let me,' &c., it were better rendered, 'I must not hear—I must not see—lest I die [of fear].'

22—25. Here the contrast between the two dispensations is strongly marked. By Σιών is meant the heavenly Zion, as opposed to the palpable or tangible mount Sinai; and the general sense intended (withdrawing the sublime imagery under which it is couched) is this: 'You are now admitted to the privileges of the heavenly city,—are come to a dispensation mild and benign,—which will lead to the possession of all the glories and blessings of the celestial Jerusalem. Here, however, it is of importance to ascertain what is the exact subject of the present description. Most Commentators suppose this to be the Christian Church on earth. To this reference, however, Kuin. strongly objects, as being inconsistent with the words μυριάσιν ἀγγέλων, and those further on, πνεύμασι δικαίω τεταλεισμένοι. The intent of this portion is rather, he thinks, to set forth the certainty of that blessedness destined for Christ's faithful worshippers; a blessedness as sure as if they were already enjoying it,—inasmuch that they are said, in a manner, to have already arrived at heaven, and the life everlasting; see ix. 11, 13, 14, compared with xi. 10, 14. Such, too, is the view taken by Knapp, Stuart, and Abp. Newc., who remarks, that 'Christians are represented as already come to that state which faith and obedience will secure to them.' Considering, however, the manifest contrast here presented of the new with the old dispensation, I see not how the sense first mentioned can be excluded, under any plea of certain expressions occurring, which might seem unsuitable thereto. Both the above senses, indeed, may be supposed to have been intended; the economy of Christ's Church on earth, with all its promises and ordinances, being intimately connected with that which, we have reason to think, subsists in the holy abode of God and Christ in heaven, to which it is continually transmitting fresh inhabitants. See Rev. xi. 1, 2 xiv. 1—5. xxi. 9—27. I am, however, inclined to think that the former sense was at first the sole one intended, and, properly speaking, terminates at the words Ἱερουσαλήμ ἐπουρανίῃ (though resumed at ver. 24); after which, for the encouragement of those now fighting 'the good fight of faith' is, at ver. 23, interspersed imagery suited to no other than the heavenly Jerusalem, in the full sense of the expression, even Heaven itself; the persons here addressed being represented as having already joined the great family of God in heaven, and become registered citizens of the heavenly Jerusalem (over which reigns God, the supreme Ruler of all), and already in the blessed presence of Christ, the Mediator of that covenant which had brought them thither. And here it may be observed, that at the words καὶ διαθήκης νέας μυστήρ the writer forsakes the imagery suited to the Church of God in heaven, and returns to that on earth; for Ἰησοῦ seems to belong to the former, and μυστήρ διαθήκης νέας to the latter; Ἰησοῦ being the vinculum which connects them; though the term προσεληλύθατε must be accommodated in sense to each. In the latter they are said to come to Christ, as coming to his religion, embracing the covenant and dispensation obtained by his mediation; and not mediation only, but atonement (as is expressed in the next words, καὶ αἵματι θαντῆρου, which contain a contrast to the typical sprinkling under the Levitical law; see Exod. xxiv. 8); an atonement, it is said (by a boldly sublime figure, probably suggested by that at Gen. iv. 10, φωνῇ αἵματος τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ σου βοᾷ πρός με, ἐκ τῆς γῆς), which 'speaketh better things than the blood of Abel,'—namely, inasmuch as that cried aloud to God for vengeance, this proclaims pardon and peace. Such, then, appears to be the general import of the whole passage. As respects the phraseology itself, Ἱερουσαλήμ ἐπουρανίῃ is in apposition with, and explanatory of, the preceding; and on the sense see note on xi. 10. The term πανηγύρι properly denoted any solemn festival, as that of the Olympic or Pythian games, at which great multitudes used to be assembled together (see Blomfield on Æschyl. Theb. 206, and my note on Thucyd. iii. 104, 1); and thus the word was adopted by the LXX.

πρωτοτόκων ἐν οὐρανοῖς ἀπογεγραμμένων, καὶ κριτῇ Θεῷ πάντων, καὶ πνεύμασι δικαίων τετελειωμένων <sup>24</sup> καὶ διαθήκης <sup>u Gen. 4. 10. Exod. 24. 8. 1 Tim. 2. 8. ch. 5. 6. & 9. 15. & 10. 22. & 11. 4. 1 Pet. 1. 2. x ch. 2. 1, 2. & 10. 22, 25.</sup> νέας μεσότης Ἰησοῦ, καὶ αἵματι ῥαντισμοῦ * κρείττον λαλοῦντι παρὰ τὸν Ἀβελ. <sup>25</sup> Ὡς βλέπετε, μὴ παρατήσηθε τὸν λαλοῦντα· εἰ γὰρ ἐκείνοι οὐκ ἔφυγον, τὸν ἐπὶ [τῆς] γῆς παρατησάμενοι

Comp. Eurip. H. Fur. 1283, εἰς ποῖον ἱερὸν ἢ πανήγυριν (sacred assemblage as unto a temple) φίλων εἰμ', and Alex. ap. Athen., p. 463, ἐπιδημίας δὲ τυγχάνειν ἡμᾶς καὶ τοὺς ζῶντας, ὥσπερ εἰς πανήγυριν τινα ἀφικνούμενοι. Hence is confirmed the propriety of the punctuation of the next words, which I have adopted, with the best Critics, from Bengel to Vater, Kuin., Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch., who show that while the common punctuation, καὶ μυριάσις ἀγγέλων, πανηγύρεαι καὶ ἐκκλησίαι, involves a pleonasm unsuitable to the dense brevity of the writer, this is required by the structure of the whole portion, of which each paragraph is commenced by καὶ, and continued, where any addition is made to it, by nouns in apposition, without any conjunctive particle between them. Render: 'and to myriads, even the joyful convocation or assembly of angels, as hymning the praises of God around his throne;' compare Rev. v. 11, seq., and Ps. cxlviii. 2. The term πρωτότοκος here simply denotes (without any reference to the original idea of primogeniture, see Kuin. and Stuart) 'those who enjoy distinguished privileges, or are well beloved,—those a little after designated as 'the spirits of just men made perfect;' including, however, those who, in every age, have lived in the faith and fear of Christ, whose robes have been washed in the blood of the Lamb, and who are accordingly admitted to the 'inheritance of the saints in light.'—ἀπογεγραμμένων should be rendered 'enrolled;' the term being employed suitably to the preceding ones πόλεις καὶ ἐκκλησίαι. Heaven is often in the New Test. represented under the figure of an earthly political society, of which those entered on its list are citizens, with allusion to which the heavenly city is represented as having its 'book of life,' wherein are inscribed the names of those admitted to salvation, though that is not here applicable.—At κριτῇ Θεῷ πάντων there is a transposition for Θεῷ κριτῇ πάντων. The expression κριτῇ πάντων has, indeed, been thought scarcely suited to the context; but we may suppose (with Kuin.) that this is a designation of God intended at once for consolation and for warning. By the term πνεύμασι must, of course, be understood the disembodied spirits, as 1 Pet. iii. 19, τοῖς ἐν φυλακῇ πνεύμασι, and the Song of the three children, v. 63, εὐλογαῖτε, πνεύματα καὶ ψυχὰι δικαίων, τὸν Κύριον.—Τετέλει. signifies consummated by admission to their final state of glory and happiness. See notes at xi. 39, and Phil. iii. 12. Instead of the t. rec. κρείττερον, most of the MSS. and Versions, together with several Fathers and all the early Editions except the Erasmus, have κρείττον, which has been adopted by Grieb., Matth., Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch. The common reading may, as Kuin. thinks, have been introduced from vi. 9, vii. 19, vii. 6. x. 34; but it would rather seem to have come from the πρώτος, and the A to have arisen from the A following. The expression signifies what is more salutary and available towards removing the wrath of God,—namely, mercy and pardon. By Abel must of course (as Bp. Middl. and Kuin. observe) be meant, by implication, the blood of Abel, or as Abel speaks by his blood; for, as Crell., Theophyl., Rosenm., and Stuart explain, while that called for vengeance (see Gen. iv. 10) on the murderer, that of Christ (the blood of sprinkling) speaks (i. e. assures us of) atonement and pardon, promising us admission to the true holy of holies, heaven itself. See x. 19.

25. With the latter clause of the preceding verse is connected the first of this, introducing an earnest exhortation not to reject this Jesus, who by his blood cries for grace to sinners saved, and who addresses them now by the ministers of his Gospel, to come to him and be saved. This I find confirmed by Est., who ably traces the sense thus: 'Cum ad sanguinem melius loquentem quam Abel accesseritis, omni studio cavendum vobis est, ne eum, qui per sanguinem suum longe meliora loquitur, omnibus veniam propensens, omnesque ad salutem Evangelii sui ministros, aut simpliciter recusatis, aut (quod deterius est) etiam contemnatis.'—At the next words, εἰ γὰρ ἐκείνοι οὐκ ἔφυγον, &c., 'exhortationem confirmat a penā recusantium, atque hanc probat a minori, id est, ad eo, quod magis erat verisimile.'—At οὐκ ἔφυγον supply, from the subject matter, διηρη; as at ἡμεῖς, also φυσζόμεθα. Ἀποστρ. signifies, 'turn away from,' reject, or renounce; a stronger term than παρατησάμενοι just before.—With respect to the words τὸν ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς χρηματίζοντα, as opposed to τὸν ἐν οὐρανῷ, their sense has been not a little disputed. One thing is clear,—that χρηματίζω here signif. 'to promulgate the will of God to man,' as Jer. xxix. 18, λόγον ἐχρημάτισαν ἐν τῷ ὄνοματί μου, and Heb. viii. 5, καθὼς κατεχρημάτισται Μωϋσῆς, and xi. 7, and oft. in Josephus. Most Commentators understand by these two expressions Moses and Christ; the former as being God's internuncius on earth; the latter as speaking from heaven, by the Apostles and ministers in the Gospel. Yet thus the emphasis would be rather in words than in sense; and the sentiment expressed would involve something not a little incongruous and frigid. Some, indeed, understand the two expressions of God; others, the latter only: but the former mode is quite inadmissible, and the latter not a little harsh. There is here evidently a reference to Moses and Christ, though not, I conceive, in the way above adverted to. It is best (with Cramer, Storr, Boehme, and Kuinoel) to take the two expressions τὸν ἐπὶ γῆς (for such, instead of ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, has been rightly edited, from many MSS. and early Editions, by Grieb., Matth., Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch.), and τὸν ἐν οὐρανῷ as belonging, not to χρηματίζω, but to δυνατίζω understood, so as to be equiv. to the adjectives ἐπιγίγνομαι and οὐράνιος. Comp. i. 1. That ὁ δὲ χρηματίζοντα, πολλῶ μᾶλλον ἡμεῖς οἱ τὸν ἀπ' οὐρανόθεν ἀποστρεφόμενοι. <sup>26</sup> οὐ ἡ φωνὴ τὴν γῆν ἐσάλειψε τότε νῦν δὲ ἐπήγγελται, λέγων "Ἐτι ἅπαξ εἰγὼ σείω οὐ μόνον τὴν γῆν, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὸν οὐρανόν. <sup>27</sup> Τὸ δὲ ἔτι ἅπαξ δηλοῖ τῶν σαλευομένων τὴν μετάθεσιν, ὡς πεποιημένων, ἵνα μείνῃ τὰ μὴ σαλευό-γ Hag. 2. 6.

ver. 19.

2 Ps. 102. 27.
Matt. 24. 28.
3 Pet. 2. 10.

ἐπὶ γῆς may be for ἐπίγειος, is plain from 1 Cor. xv. 47, ὁ πρῶτος ἀνθρώπος ἐκ γῆς, χοϊκός. Thus also the expression τὸν οὐρανόθεν ἀπ' οὐρανόθεν here corresponds to ὁ Κύριος ἐκ οὐρανοῦ there; denoting the heavenly origin of Christ. Hence, though almost all Commentators repeat χρηματίζοντα ἀπ' οὐρανόθεν, yet it seems not only unnecessary, but even improper, as not agreeable to the Apostle's meaning; which, I apprehend, was to designate Jesus as Him who actually came from heaven, the Lord from heaven; q. d. 'not merely an inspired person such as Moses, but as Son of God, One with, and therefore representing, the DEITY.' This I find confirmed by Ebrard, who explains χρηματ. ἐπὶ γῆς to denote 'God the Son;—God, as revealing himself.' Comp. 1 Cor. x. 1, seqq.

26. οὐ ἡ φωνή, &c.] i. e. 'whose voice sounding from Sinai.' See sup. v. 19. The best Expositors are in general agreed that the word οὐ refers (as grammatical propriety would require) to Christ, notwithstanding that the thing is in Exodus ascribed to God; nor is there any inconsistency, since the New Test. and the Rabbinical writings agree in representing it as the SON OF GOD, who appeared to the patriarchs, who delivered the Law by angels, and who was the ANGEL-JEHOVAH worshipped in the Hebrew Church. See Acts vii. 53, and 1 Cor. x. 4, 9. By ἐσάλειψε is meant, lit. 'made it shake as a ship at anchor is tossed by the waves.' Comp. the noble passage of Æschyl. Prom. 1080, αἰθρὴ δ' Ἐρεθίσθη βροντῇ, σφακίλῃ τ' Ἀγρίων ἀνέμων (the convulsive force of the winds) χθονὰ δ' ἐκ πυθμένων Αὐταῖς βίβαις πνίγμα κραδαίνου, Κύμα δὲ πόντου τραχεῖ ροθίῳ ἐνυγχόσσει, τῶν τ' οὐρανίων Ἀστρων δίδουσι. On this and the next verse Ebrard well remarks, 'The same Christ, who has already revealed himself on Sinai as the lawgiver, and who now speaks from heaven as Mediator, will come again as Judge. In proof of this passage, Hag. ii. 6, is adduced, which, in its original import, really refers to the coming of Christ to set up his kingdom in glory. Paul plainly lays emphasis on two points in the passage, first on this,—that at the second coming of the Messiah, not merely are local appearances of nature to take place on a part of the earth, but heaven and earth, the whole visible created world, is to be shaken and un- hinged; secondly on this,—that the shaking is to take place ἐτι ἅπαξ, consequently is to be such a shaking as makes any repetition superfluous, such therefore as is to un hinge and change every thing that, generally speaking, is in its nature changeable.' In the citation from Hag. ii. 7, Sept., there is represented the general sense of the Hebrew, though with a slight change of words, for adaptation to the present purpose; and οὐ μόνον—ἀλλὰ is intended to strengthen the sentiment. It would seem, too, that St. Paul did not intend to stop at οὐρανόν, but to go forward to the end of ver. 7; and, indeed, the mention of the first words would, to persons so conversant in Scripture, readily bring to mind the whole. The words plainly predict that mighty change in religion, which was to be introduced by the promulgation of the Gospel. In these, and other descriptions given by the Prophets (as Isa. xiii. 13, and Joel ii. 10, iii. 16), of the changes which should precede, and the mighty power which should accompany, the last and perfect dispensation of Christ, the thing is represented by God's shaking—not, as at the giving of the Law, the earth only, but both the earth and the heaven, i. e. effecting a complete and total change.—To advert to a matter of reading. For οἶσω, Lachm., Scholz, and Tisch. edit οἶσω, for which there is strong external authority; to which I can make no addition. But internal evidence is in favour of οἶσω, as being the more likely to have been altered. Even in the passage of the Sept. the MSS. fluctuate between οἶσω and οἶσω. The latter may seem called for by the Hebrew; but, considering that the event foretold was very shortly to come to pass, the present οἶσω was prob. adopted to express that it was, in a manner, just taking place.

At v. 27, τὸ δὲ ἔτι ἅπαξ—μετάθεσιν, there is a carrying out of the sense in the passage of the Prophet in a further development, by a sort of application of what is contained therein. Of the words δηλοῖ τῶν σαλ. μετάθεσιν the lit. sense is, 'denotes the change of place of the things that are put into such extreme commotion, so as to be ready to fall and perish.' So Jos. Ant. iii. 7, 1, βούλεται δὲ συνακτῆσαι θά- λου, as much as to say, 'This yet once more signifieth the removal of the things that are put in commotion;' evidently meaning the abolition of the polity, rites, and ordinances of the Jewish dispensation: of which use of ἅπαξ an ex. is adduced by Carpzov from Philo, p. 305, τὸ μὲν γὰρ ἅπαξ, τοῖς, &c. But of ἔτι ἅπαξ no ex. has been adduced: yet it occurs in 4 passages of the Sept., Judg. xvi. 18. Hag. ii. 7. Gen. xviii. 33. Judg. vi. 3. In the Class. writers the only passage in which I have noted it is Polym. Strat. iv. 3, 8, where it is repeated: "Ἐτι ἅπαξ ἐπα- γάγωμεν (accedamus) ἔτι, γινώσκου, ἀπαξ. Of σαλ. the use here is nearly the same as in Matt. xxiv. 29, though συγκυκλίσαι used in Jos. Bell. iv. 4, 5, would have been better Greek. Of ὡς πεποιημένων the sense is, upon the whole, best explained, 'as of things that were merely created, and therefore so constituted as to be temporary.' Thus πεποιημένων will be for χειροποιήτων, condita, substantia, as opposed to τοῖς ἀσκαυτοῖς, as at viii. 2. ix. 24, τοῖς ἰσχυροῖς; it being meant, that 'the ancient order of things, viz. the Jewish dispensation, will be changed, removed, abolished, in like manner as the objects of the natural creation: all which change or abolition of the old dispensation was to take place, in order that a new one might be introduced which should undergo no change; ἵνα μείνῃ τὰ μὴ σαλευόμενα, i. e. continue to the μενα. 28 <sup>a</sup> διὸ βασιλείαν ἀσάλευτον παραλαμβάνοντες, ἔχωμεν <sup>a</sup> 1 Pet. 2. 8.

 χάριν δι' ἧς λατρεύωμεν εὐαρέστως τῷ Θεῷ μετὰ αἰδοῦς καὶ εὐλαβείας 29 <sup>b</sup> καὶ γὰρ ὁ Θεὸς ἡμῶν πῦρ καταναλίσκον. <sup>b</sup> Deut. 4. 24.
 Isa. 66. 15.
 Ps. 97. 3.

end of the world unshaken, so as not to be abolished.'

28, 29. Here we have an inference from the preceding, forming a continuation of the exhortation commenced at ver. 25, to peace and holiness; and constituting, as Hyper. observes, a conclusion to the three sensory considerations preceding, espec. the last; q. d. 'Such being the case, let us,' &c. The full sense of the two vv. may be thus expressed, 'Wherefore, receiving [as an inheritance] a kingdom not to be removed (see Dan. ii. 44. vii. 18. Col. i. 18. 1 Thes. ii. 12. 2 Pet. i. 11), let us hold fast grace (of faith imparted by the Spirit), whereby we may serve God acceptably (i. e. by 'being accepted in the Beloved,' Eph. i. 6. Rom. iii. 24), with reverence and God-fearing piety; for our God is also a consuming fire (as well as Love).' See Rom. ii. 5, 16. 2 Cor. v. 10, seqq. 2 Thes. i. 7, seqq. 1 Pet. iii. 4.—But, to advert to particulars, and notice the principal expressions, which conduce to this sense: and 1) the term ἔχωμεν—which is susceptible of several senses, and is variously explained. The ancient, and several modern Expositors, as Rosenm., Dind., Stuart, Boehme, Kuin., Ebrard, and Conyb., explain, 'let us have gratitude, whereby we may serve,' &c., and they refer for an ex. to Luke xvii. 9, χάριν ἔχουσιν. But that will scarcely prove even that such might be the sense, did the context permit; but it assuredly does not; as has been ably evinced by Est. thus: 'Primum, quia non addit Apostolus, cui gratia sit habenda, videlicet Deo; quod alias non solet omittere. Deinde quia ἔχουσιν χάριν, habere gratiam, pro eo, quod est gratias addere, non est styl. Apostolici. Utuntur enim Apostoli passim verbo εὐχαριστῆν. Postremo quia non bene quadrat huic sensui quod sequitur: per quam serviamus.' It would rather seem that the sense is, as I long thought, 'Let us seek to have grace,' &c.; a use of ἔχουσιν (also found at Matt. xiii. 12, and Luke viii. 18, δοτε γὰρ ἔχει, δοθήσεται αὐτῷ), by which it signif. 'to have to good purpose, by keeping and improving it.' And so Dr. Peile, who explains the passage to mean, 'Let us have infused into us, be dutiful and submissive recipients of, the grace of God.' And so Doddr., it seems, thought, who observes, that 'in this oblique intimation, by which it is, as it were, taken for granted that we may certainly have grace if we take proper methods for obtaining it, there is something peculiarly impressive.' True; if we could be sure that this 'oblique intimation' is really conveyed; but of that, on consideration, I greatly doubt. After all, however, I finally acquiesce in the interpretation of Calv., Hyper., Beza, Est., Pisc., Capell., Bp. Fell, Hamm., Whitby, and Expositors generally, confirmed by the Pesch. Syr. Version. Upon the whole, the fullest and ablest tracing of the sense is that of Hyper., who concludes thus: 'Discent hinc Christi cives et discipuli, Regnum Christi in gratia et fide versari. Ex gratia scilicet offerri, per fidem verò apprehendi et assumi.' Comp. Eph. ii. 8, and espec. Rom. v. 2 (which is the best comment here, Δι' οὗ τὴν χάριν ταύ-την, ἢ ἰσχύκαμεν. Thus χάρ. will denote the grace of regeneration through the Holy Spirit. Comp. Tit. iii. 5, with 1 Pet. i. 3. It is frivolous to argue, as Mr. Conyb. does, that the above interpretation would require κατέχωμεν τὴν χάριν. He cannot be unaware how very oft. ἔχω is used for κατέχω both in the New Test. (e. gr. John xiv. 20, ὁ ἔχων τὰς ἐντολάς μου καὶ τῶν. 1 Cor. xi. 6. Phil. iii. 9. 1 Tim. iii. 9. 2 Tim. i. 13. Heb. vi. 19. Rev. ii. 24, seqq.) and in the Class. writers. As to the Article, though it might better have been inserted, yet it may be dispensed with as being implied; and thus the sense may be expressed, 'Let us hold fast grace whereby, i. e. such grace as &c.' Robt. Steph. first saw this, and accordingly he removed the comma after χάριν, and rightly. 2) As to the phrase which concludes the verse, μετ' αἰδ., it is from its difficulty variously interpreted; and, as oft. is the case under such circumstances, there is a variety of reading. For αἰδοῦς, MSS. A, C, D, and 5 cursives, with the Copt. Version, and Chrysa., have δέους, which is adopted by Lachm. and Tisch., but rejected by Matth., Griesb., and Scholz; rightly; since external authority is quite insufficient, and internal is against δέους, for had that been the original reading, who would have thought of altering it to αἰδοῦς? But the opposite was not unlikely to be done by Critics, who did not well understand αἰδοῦς, and thought the idea of fear necessary to be put in, as in Ps. ii. 11. Phil. ii. 11, 12, and oft. elsewhere. Besides, the authority of all the MSS. except 8 is confirmed by the Pesch. Syr. Version. Other copies, with the Vulg. and Ital. Versions, have δέου καὶ αἰδ., and others φόβου, for δέου: which only confirms my suspicion, that the variation of reading sprang from fastidious and presumptuous Critics. It is no wonder that they should stumble at the αἰδοῦς, about which even the best modern Expositors are not agreed. There is no well-founded objection to 'reverence,' meaning 'filial reverence,' if, at least, we interpret the next words, 'and yet holy fear' = 'a God-fearing spirit.' I am, however, inclined to think that by αἰδοῦς is meant, 'modestia, humilitas,' of which sense, as will appear from Estius' note, the word αἰδ. is quite susceptible. That modestia is so used in Latin is certain, and sometimes 'modesty' in English, in our old authors, as opposed to pride and arrogance. So Shaksp., 'Much ado,' &c., Act ii. 3. And so Foxe has 'modest humility,' and others 'modest diffidence.' And I doubt not that Paul had in mind Mic. vi. 8, 'What doth the Lord require of thee, but — to walk humbly with thy God?' for such, notwithstanding what the most recent Expositors say, is the true sense, as Rosenm. maintains; and this, he remarks, is confirmed by the Chaldee Paraph., and a kindred expression in Prov. xi. 2, where the Hebrew has a near derivative of the same terms, and the Sept. has στόμα ταπεινῶν (read ταπεινῶν), as opposed to 'arrogance.' As to the accompanying term, εὐλαβ., it is meant to further develop the idea here, and signif. 'a God-fearing spirit,' — a fear of offending God by any approach to self-right-

a Rom. 12.
10. Eph. 4. 2.
1 Pet. 1. 22.
2 Tim. 1. 7.
2 Tim. 2. 2. 4. 4. 5.
b Gen. 18. 1.
2 Tim. 1. 12.
1 Pet. 4. 9.
c Matt. 23.
28.
Rom. 12. 16.
Col. 4. 12.
1 Pet. 2. 3.
d Exod. 22. 8.

XIII. 1 <sup>a</sup> Ἡ φιλαδελφία μενέτω <sup>2 b</sup> τῆς φιλοξενίας μὴ ἐπι-λανθάνεσθε διὰ ταύτης γὰρ ἔλαβόν τινας ξενίσαντες ἀγγέλους.
3 <sup>c</sup> Μιμνήσκεσθε τῶν δεσμίων, ὡς συνδεδεμένοι τῶν κακοχου-μένων, ὡς καὶ αὐτοὶ ὄντες ἐν σώματι. 4 <sup>d</sup> Τίμιος ὁ γάμος ἐν πᾶσι, καὶ ἡ κοίτη ἀμίαντος· πόρνοι δὲ καὶ μοιχοὺς κρινεῖ ὁ Θεός.
5 <sup>d</sup> Ἀφιλάργυρος ὁ τρόπος· ἀρκοῦμενοι τοῖς παροῦσιν. αὐτοὺς eous pride. How the word comes to have this sense I have fully shown in my Lex. That Calv. alone, perhaps, of the Expositors, had this view of αἰδοῦς is plain, since he says it is here intimated that no observance is approved by God, unless accompanied with a spirit of humility and modestia.

XIII. The portion of the Epistle which now follows is occupied with particular exhortations to various duties; not, however, brought forward abruptly and unconnectedly, but closely related to each other, and with reference to the purpose and scope of the whole Epistle. 'First,' observes Ebrard, 'in vv. 1—5 we have exhortations respecting the individual life as such; then in vv. 7—17, respecting the relation of the individual to the doctrine and the profession; and finally, in vv. 18—25, the conclusion of the writing.'

1. ἡ φιλαδελφία μενέτω] 'let brotherly love continue to be practised;' meaning, 'let mutual love one to another, as Christians, continue to be cultivated [as heretofore], and firmly rooted in your lives and conversation.'

2. τῆς φιλοξενίας] A virtue closely connected with the foregoing, and a main evidence thereof; being one especially to be practised towards their Christian brethren, since the distress occasioned by persecution would cast many upon the charity of others.—ἔλαβόν τινας ξενίσαντες 'unconsciously entertained.' So meaning to evince that greater honour among men, and consequently reward from God, sometimes attends the discharge of this duty, than the circumstances of the case would lead us to expect. There is allusion to the cases of Abraham, and of Lot, of whom the former entertained three, and the latter, two angels. See Gen. xviii. 1, and xix. 1.

3. μιμνήσκεσθε τῶν δεσμίων, &c.] meaning, that 'they should have such a lively fellow-feeling with the prisoners, as if they were fellow-sufferers;' though from the context the term μιμη. must imply relief as well as sympathy.—τῶν κακοχουμένων, 'those who are suffering distress, namely, for the Gospel's sake; see supra xi. 37.—By the words ὡς καὶ αὐτοὶ ὄντες ἐν σώματι it is intimated, that they themselves are, while yet alive, exposed to similar distress, so as to need sympathy and support from others.

4. τίμιος ὁ γάμος] Strict propriety of language would lead us to supply here, as many do, ἵστι. But the foregoing and the following context being hortatory almost obliges us to supply ἵστι, which, however rare in the Class. writers, is not unfrequent in the Scriptures, as Rom. xii. 9, ἡ ἀγάπη ἀνυπόκριτος. This latter view is supported by the authority of Chrys. and Theophyl.; and it is required by the denunciation contained in the next words.—ἀμίαντος, i. e. undefiled by commerce with others. Comp. Phytias ap. Stob. Eccl. p. 444, 26, τὸ περὶ τῶν ἐνάν ἡμῶν ἀδιάφορος καὶ ἐμικτος θερμαίνον ἀνδρός. Marriage may well be enjoined to be held and kept in honour by purity unstained, from its being elsewhere characterized as an holy state, and one signifying the mystical union between Christ and his Church. Nay, it is spoken of as a holy state even by the heathen philosopher Plutarch, Amat. § 4, ἥτις (scil. συνόδου ἀνδρὸς καὶ γυναικὸς) οὐ γέγονεν, οὐδ' ἵστιν ἱερωτέρα κατάξυσται.—Ἐν πᾶσι may simply mean 'among persons contracting it,' without exception on the score of peculiar engagements to piety and holiness.—In the next words, καὶ ἡ κοίτη ἀμίαντος, we have a particular injunction, intended for the married,—namely, that they should keep themselves from adultery, or uncleanness; ἡ κοίτη being a term to signify (as often in the later writers) marriage. So we have the phrase κοίτην μιαινῶν in Josephus and Plutarch. This injunction is then followed up with a solemn assurance, which seems to have reference to both the preceding injunctions; q. d. 'Let the single marry; for fornicators God will judge: let the married keep themselves pure from adultery; for adulterers God will judge,' i. e. condemn and punish. This judgment, then, the Apostle denounces not only against adultery, but fornication, which leads to it. How different from the heathen sages and legislators,—who tolerated simple fornication, as tending to preserve the virtue of married women! See Plato in his Philebus, cited in Athenæus, 511, D.

5. ἀφιλάργυρος ὁ τρόπος] scil. ἵστι. Τρόπος here stands for ἥθος, denoting, as oft. in the Class. writers, 'habits and character;' lit. 'turn of mind,' 'disposition.' Ἀρκ. τοῖς παροῦσιν, meaning, by an ellipse of πράγμασι (expressed in Dinarch, p. 94, 34), 'be content with your present condition.' So Phocyl. 4, ἀρεσθῆσαι τοῖς παρίονσι, καὶ ἀλλοτρίων ἐπείχεσθαι.—αὐτοὶ γὰρ εἰρηκεῖ, &c. Here is assigned the strongest of all reasons for this contented acquiescence,—namely, the assurance of God, that He will never forsake those who put their trust in Him; αὐτοὶ here referring to Θεοῦ just before, q. d. 'for He has Himself said in His word.' Where this is said, has been disputed. It would seem that the Apostle had espec., though not exclusively, in view Deut. xxxi. 8; for, if we there read, with the Alex., Ald., Compl., and some other MSS., οὐ μὴ σε ἀντ', οὐδ' σε μὴ ἐγκαταλίψω as is required by the sense in ἐγκατ., the difference will be only in the change of person—which is often resorted to in such cases for the sake of adapting what is said to the occasion in point; espec. considering that the Apostle seems also to have had in mind Josh. i. 5, ἴσθαι μετὰ σου, καὶ οὐκ ἐγκαταλείψω σε. The manner in which the citation following (from Pa. cxxviii. 6) γὰρ εἶρηκεν Οὐ μὴ σε ἀνῶ, οὐδ' οὐ μὴ σε ἐγκαταλίπω ὥστε θαρρύνοντας ἡμᾶς λέγειν Κύριος ἐμοὶ βοηθὸς, καὶ οὐ φοβηθήσομαι τί ποιήσει μοι ἄνθρωπος; 7 Ἰμνη-μονεύετε τῶν ἡγουμένων ὑμῶν, οἵτινες ἐλάλησαν ὑμῖν τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ ὧν ἀναθεωροῦντες τὴν ἐκβασιν τῆς ἀναστροφῆς, μι-μέισθε τὴν πίστιν.

8 Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς χθὲς καὶ σήμερον ὁ αὐτός, καὶ εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας. 9 Ἐδιδασχάις ποικίλαις καὶ ξέναις μὴ † παραφέρεσθε καλὸν γὰρ χάριτι βεβαιοῦσθαι τὴν καρδίαν, οὐ βρώμασιν, ἐν

Pa. 52. 4
 11, 12.
 2. 118. 6
 1. ver. 17.
 ch. 6. 12.

Eph. 4. 14.
 1 John 4. 1.
 Rom. 14. 17.
 Col. 2. 8, 16.
 1 Tim. 4. 2.

is introduced, serves to shew that the passage was commonly employed for the purpose of consolation; q. d. in the words of Bp. Sanderson, 'Lean upon God's Providence, and repose thyself upon his promises; and contentment will follow.'

7. μνημονεύετε 'preserve in mind,' namely, so as to feel grateful for their instruction, and to follow their example. By the expression τῶν ἡγουμένων are, I apprehend, meant, not (as is commonly supposed) spiritual pastors and masters (elsewhere called προϊστάμενοι); but simply guides to the faith; what is here said, having regard, I conceive, not to discipline, (as further on, ver. 17, πειθεσθε τοῖς ἡγουμένοις), but to doctrine. ἡγουμένων, instead of being (what Translators usually make it) a Present, is, as appears from ἐλάλησαν following, an Imperfect. The meaning, then, is this: 'Bear in mind the spiritual guides who first guided you into the faith, by preaching to you the Gospel, and led you into the way of righteousness.' See Pa. xxiii. 3.—ἀναθεωροῦντες, 'attentively reflecting on.' We have here, as Theophyl. remarks, a metaphor taken from painting, in learning which art the pupils carefully look up at the picture of their master which they are copying. Τὴν ἐκβ. τ. ἀναστ., meaning, 'the result of their conduct,' or manner of life; viz. as seen in their blessed exit from this life, and the termination of their earthly trials by entering into the joy of their Lord. The next words advert to the means by which they might best follow their examples and attain their end,—namely, by 'imitating their faith;' constancy in the profession of the true faith, so as not to be hurried out of course by strange doctrines; ver. 8.

8, 9. Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς χθὲς καὶ σήμερον, &c.] It is not agreed what is the exact reference here,—whether to the verses which precede, or to those which follow. The former view is adopted by the ancient and very many modern Commentators, espec. Calv., and, recently, Ebrard; the latter, by some of the most eminent modern ones, espec. those of the last half century; which is preferable. But we may suppose the reference to be twofold,—namely, both to that which precedes and that which follows. And as what is here said may have been suggested by the words μνησθε τὴν πίστιν in the former verse, so, it would seem, in these words Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς, &c., we have a vinculum to unite the sentiments both at ver. 7 and ver. 9; q. d. 'Jesus Christ is always the same, yesterday, to-day, and for ever; his faith is always the same. Let, then, your faith be the same; and be not carried away, &c.' Comp. Gal. i. 8, 9. I find this view confirmed by Est., who ably traces the ratiocination thus: "Fides vestra est in Jesum Christum, sicut et fuit vestrorum prepositorum; atqui Jesus Christus semper idem est: ergo et fides vestra eadem esse debet cum fide illorum; ideoque necesse est, ut illorum fidem imitemini;" which explanation, he adds, not only aptly conjoins this portion with the preceding, but also with the following context. "Si enim Christus semper idem est, ac proinde fides eadem; non ergo debetis mutare doctrinam fidei semel acceptam, nec aures prebere magistris alias doctrinas adferentibus." By 'Christ' may well be denoted (as at Rom. viii. 10, and Eph. iv. 20) the doctrine of Christ; yet also with a marked reference to his eternal and immutable nature and person. Here, by reference to the unchangeableness of Christ, spoken of in the preceding v. the Apostle applies himself to enforce an admonition to shun 'manifest and strange doctrines,' i. e. doctrines in themselves varying, multiform, and inconsistent, though all alike foreign to 'the truth, as it is in Jesus,' which is always the same. Such is the general sentiment; though the reading is disputed. For the t. rec. περιφερό. MSS. A, C, D, and very many cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1182, 1183, 1190, 1196, and several ancient Mss. copies), with some Versions and Fathers, have παραφ., which I have, with all the Critical Editors, from Beng. to Tisch., received, espec. since internal evidence is in its favour; for though παραφ. and περιφ. in composition are perpetually confounded, yet here παραφ. yields a stronger and better sense,—there being here a metaphor taken from a ship carried out of its course by violent winds. So Plut. Arat. 12, has πρὸς δὲ μέγα πνεῦμα—παραφερόμενος μόλις ἤλθοτο τῇ Ἀδριαί, and Timol. c. 6, αὶ δὲ κρίσις εἰσέπνοι, αὶ παραφέρονται ὑπὸ τῶν ἰσχυρῶν καὶ φύγων, where the allusion is to a vessel hurried out of her course, this way and that way, by the violent Levantine winds, so as never to be able to keep any course. Here, then, the full sense intended is: 'Be not carried away [from the truth] by the gusts of diverse and novel doctrines hurrying you this way and that,' i. e. doctrines varying one from another, and all differing from the simple truth as it is in Jesus. It is, however, possible that περιφ. is the true reading, as thus the sense will be, 'whirled around,' as in Jude 12, where see note.—καλὸν γὰρ χάριτι βεβαιοῦσθαι. This is meant to show why we ought to keep to simple and certain doctrine;—and that from the end of doctrine, which is to confirm and establish us, and assure us respecting God's grace. So Calv., and recently h 1 Cor. 9.

12. & 10. 18.

i Exod. 29.
14.

Lev. 4. 12.
21. & 6. 26.

& 16. 27.
Num. 10. 9.

k John 19.
17, 18.

Acta 7. 58.
1 Joh. 11. 26.

Acta 5. 61.
m Mic. 2. 10.

Phil. 3. 20.
ob. 11. 10, 16.

οἷς οὐκ ὠφελήθησαν οἱ περιπατήσαντες. <sup>10</sup> Ἐχομεν θυσιαστήριον, ἐξ οὗ φαγεῖν οὐκ ἔχουσιν ἐξουσίαν οἱ τῇ σκηνῇ λατρεύοντες.

<sup>11</sup> ὧν γὰρ εἰσφέρεται ζώων τὸ αἷμα περὶ ἁμαρτίας εἰς τὰ ἁγία διὰ τοῦ ἀρχιερέως, τούτων τὰ σώματα κατακαλεῖται ἔξω τῆς παρεμβολῆς. <sup>12</sup> Διὸ καὶ Ἰησοῦς, ἵνα ἀγιάσῃ διὰ τοῦ ἰδίου αἵματος τὸν λαόν, ἔξω τῆς πύλης ἔπαθε. <sup>13</sup> Τοῖνυν ἐξερχώμεθα πρὸς αὐτὸν ἔξω τῆς παρεμβολῆς, τὸν ὀνειδισμὸν αὐτοῦ φέροντες. <sup>14</sup> οὐ γὰρ ἔχομεν ὧδε μένουσαν πόλιν, ἀλλὰ τὴν μέλλουσαν Peile. Thus χάρις is used nearly as at xii. 28; and as Est. well observes, 'in illa stabile bonum animus sine inventum homines.' Now this staidness is not formed by variety and novelty, but by simplicity and certainty: therefore diverse and novel doctrines are not to be admitted. From the words following, οὐκ ὠφελήθησαν, it is plain that καλὸν ἐστὶ here is for συμφέρι, as at 1 Cor. vii. 1 & 26. ix. 15. By καρδία is meant the soul of man, which is confirmed and refreshed by simple and sound Gospel doctrine, producing a heartfelt peace.

10. This is a passage which, owing to the recondite nature of the metaphors employed, involves no little difficulty. Much here depends upon the connexion of v. 10 with vv. 9 & 11, which Kuin., after a full discussion, lays down as follows: 'We Christians are not to rest on those ritual injunctions so scrupulously observed by the Jews, as to meats lawful or unlawful, and meats sacred: we have a sacred meat, and that far more precious, yet such as they who are of Moses' law cannot eat, for it is the flesh of the peculiar victim.' He further observes, that the expression of τῇ σκηνῇ λατρεύοντες, though properly applicable to the Jewish priests, yet is here used of those generally who approach the altar as worshippers. Now Christ is a peculiar victim, like that offered on the day of expiation, which even the priests were forbidden to eat. Θυσιαστήριον most of our best Commentators suppose to be put, by metonymy, for the victim offered on the altar, being suggested by the βρώματα preceding; q. d. 'We Christians, too, have our sacrifice (namely, that of Christ by his atonement, shadowed out in the Law and typified in the Lord's Supper), of which those who rest their hopes of salvation on the ritual sacrifices of the Mosaic Law (viz. Jews or Judaizers) have no right to partake;' i. e. they are not authorized to eat, with any hope of benefit thereby, seeing that they rest their hopes of salvation on another and very different one.—At οὐκ ἔχουσιν ἐξουσίαν Tisch. cancels, what even Lachm. spared, ἐξουσίαν, from two inferior MSS.—quite uncritically, since, from the small number of MSS. which have not the word, it is next to certain that it was omitted by accident. Indeed, the word could not here well be dispensed with. And moreover the phrase ἔχιν ἐξουσίαν (as used of privilege) occurs at Rom. ix. 21. 1 Cor. ix. 5, 6, and ἔχιν ἐξουσίαν φαγεῖν in 1 Cor. ix. 4.

11, 12. These verses are illustrative of the preceding; and, as Stuart observes, 'their chief object is to introduce Christ as an example of suffering, in order to impress on the Hebrews the necessity of perseverance in their Christian profession, amidst all their trials and difficulties.' There is, however, meant to be an indirect comparison between the Jewish sacrifice on the great day of atonement and the expiatory sacrifice of Christ. Indeed a regular antithesis runs through the whole passage, both in words and things. As, in sacrifices περὶ ἁμαρτίας, the victims were burnt out of the camp, so Christ was carried out of the city (according to a custom then common) and nailed to the cross. In this respect, too, Christ was like unto these victims,—namely, that he suffered without the gates of Jerusalem. 'The blood of the former was presented before God in the most holy place; the blood of the latter, in the eternal sanctuary above, ix. 12, 23, 24. The bodies of the beasts used for the former were consumed or destroyed without the camp; the body of Jesus was sacrificed or destroyed without the gate of Jerusalem. The atoning sacrifice of Christians is analogous, then, to that of the Jews, but of infinitely higher efficacy.' Comp. ix. 13, 14. x. 4, 12.

13. τοῖνυν ἔξέρχ., &c.] Most Expositors here interpret, 'let us abandon the profession of Judaism, and abide by that of Christianity.' To this sense, however, Kuin. justly objects, as little agreeable to the context; and he (in common with Rosenm., Dind., and Stuart) adopts the one assigned by Chrys.: 'Let us, after his example, patiently endure the "cruel mockings," persecutions, and revilings of the Jews;—all, in short, that is to be borne for Christ and his name's sake.' Thus, then, to 'go out to him' is to bring ourselves to the same mind as that with which he went thither, and so to consider what he there suffered for us, as to be prepared ourselves to 'endure all things' for his sake.—In the words τὸν ὀνειδισμὸν αὐτοῦ φέροντες there is (as at Matt. x. 38) an allusion to Christ's bearing his cross; for by the expression τὸν ὀνειδισμὸν is to be understood the cause of his reproach,—the cross.

14. οὐ γὰρ ἔχουσιν, &c.] Here is suggested a reason why they should be prepared to thus suffer for Christ's sake,—namely, 'since they have here no permanent city, but seek one yet to come,' even the heavenly Jerusalem above mentioned, the city which hath foundations (i. e. a permanent abode), xi. 10. xiv. 38. The full sense, express and by implication, of vv. 13, 14, is drawn forth by Dr. Peile thus: 'Therefore let us be content to have no πόλις, no earthly Jerusalem, or place which the Lord hath chosen for his more immediate worship and service (John iv. 21—23); but confessing ourselves, as did the Patriarchs (xi. 13—16), to be making our present life of faith our appointed way to a better life to come, be willing—yea, even rejoice—to bear the reproach ἐπιζητούμεν. <sup>15</sup> Δι' αὐτοῦ οὖν ἀναφέρωμεν θυσίαν αἰνέσεως διαπαντὸς τῷ Θεῷ, τοιούτεσι καρπὸν χειλέων ὁμολογούντων τῷ ὀνόματι αὐτοῦ. <sup>16</sup> Τῆς δὲ εὐποιίας καὶ κοινωνίας μὴ ἐπιλαν-θάνεσθε· τοιαύταις γὰρ θυσίαις εὐαρεστεῖται ὁ Θεός.

<sup>17</sup> Πείθεσθε τοῖς ἡγουμένοις ὑμῶν καὶ ὑπέκτετε· αὐτοὶ γὰρ ἀγρυπνοῦσιν ὑπὲρ τῶν ψυχῶν ὑμῶν, ὡς λόγον ἀποδώσοντας· ἵνα μετὰ χαρᾶς τοῦτο ποιῶσι, καὶ μὴ στενάζοντες· ἀλυσιτελὲς γὰρ ὑμῖν τοῦτο. <sup>18</sup> Προσεύχεσθε περὶ ἡμῶν πεποίθαμεν γὰρ, ὅτι καλὴν συνείδησιν ἔχομεν, ἐν πᾶσι καλῶς θέλοντες ἀναστρέφεσθαι. <sup>19</sup> Περισσότερος δὲ παρακαλῶ τοῦτο ποιῆσαι, ἵνα τάχιον ἀποκατασταθῶ ὑμῖν.

of being called after the Name of One that was crucified, and despised as the self-denying subjects of a Kingdom not of this world.

<sup>15</sup> δι' αὐτοῦ οὖν ἀναφέρωμεν—Θεῷ] It is justly observed by Kuin., that the exhortation now subjoined is deduced not from what immediately preceded, but from the whole argumentation, espec. vv. 10—12. The sense is, 'By Him therefore (i. e. Christ) [as our Mediator and High Priest] let us offer up, [in return for the blessings of the Gospel, not the bloody sacrifices of animals, or the vain oblations of the fruits of the earth, but] the sacrifice of praises; i. e. by thanksgiving for his benefits; a use of αἶν. peculiar to the Hellenistic Greek, and found in the Sept. at Ps. cvii. 22, and also in the Apocrypha, at Judith xvi. 1. Ecclus. xxxii. 2, and 1 Macc. xiii. 51: καὶ εὐχαρίστησαν εἰς αὐτὴν (turrem) μετὰ αἰνέσεως καὶ βαίων. See also note on John xii. 13. The words following, τοιούτεσι καρπὸν χειλέων, &c., are explanatory of the preceding; the sense being, 'I mean the fruit or oblation of lips (a mode of expression derived from Hos. xiv. 2, καρπὸν τῶν χειλέων ἡμῶν), giving thanks to his name.' Thus, then (says Dr. A. Barrow, Sermon. viii.), while we are no longer required to yield material, we are still bound to yield spiritual sacrifices (1 Pet. ii. 5). We must burn incense still,—that of fervent devotion; and send up continually to heaven the thank-offering of praise.'

<sup>16</sup> τῆς δὲ εὐποιίας—μὴ ἐπιλανθ. Render, 'almsgiving, moreover, and contributing (to the necessity of the poor) forget not (to practise); for with such sacrifices is God well pleased,' = 'such are the sacrifices with which,' &c.

<sup>17</sup> πείθεσθε τ. ἡγούμεν.] The Apostle here reverts to the admonition at v. 7, in order to further develop the idea there. There is a natural association in the whole context, well traced by Ebrard thus: 'Paul began with the mention of those leaders of the Church who had suffered martyrdom; he had brought them forward as an example of faith: from them he passed to faith itself, as opposed to foreign doctrines; then to the obligation above all to be established in grace, to the grand development of the idea that the Jew is the excommunicated party, while the Christian, precisely when he is excommunicated, then first truly enters into the true holy of holies; finally, to the doctrine, that the internal reproduction of the sacrifice of Christ—the bearing the reproach of Christ—together with love to the brethren, are the only sacrifices which God desires from the Christian (not as atoning sacrifices, but as thank-offerings); and love to the brethren leads him back, at last, to the duty towards the ἡγούμενοι, those, namely, who are still living.' And what are those duties? Those of ready obedience, by giving due heed to their admonitions and exhortations. And why? 'Because they vigilantly watch over your souls.' The next words, ὡς λόγ. ἀποδ., point at the principle of action which impels them to act as watchmen,—the considering them 'as those who must render an account' [at the day of judgment]; implying the awful responsibility of ministers; comp. Ezek. iii. 17, 18. In the next words, ἵνα μετὰ χαρᾶς τ. π., many refer τοῦτο to λόγον ἀποδ., and suppose an ellipsis thus: '[Obey them, I say,] that they may give this account with joy.' But this is quite inadmissible; because the account the ἡγούμεν. have to give is not of their success, but of their ἀγρυπνία to obtain it. Besides, the words must be referred to ἀγρ., as being the primary thing; and the other as introduced to show the consequences thereof. Thus the sense, as Est. says, is: 'Ut curam vestri agant cum alacritate et gaudio, et non gemant sub onere; sed levius illud ferant, dum vident, se non inaniter in vobis laborare.' The next words, ἀλυσιτελὲς γὰρ ὑμ. τ., 'for that were unprofitable for you,' are rightly referred by Calv., Hyper., and Est., not, as they are by many Expositors, to λόγον ἀποδώσ., but to ἀγρ. ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν, q. d. 'It were disadvantageous to yourselves that your pastors should exercise their heavily laborious offices among you with heavy hearts and desponding anticipations.'

<sup>18</sup> 19. προσεύχεσθε περὶ ἡμῶν· πεποίθαμεν γὰρ, &c.] The full sense is, 'Pray for us; for we trust [we merit it] by having a good conscience,—in all things studious to act righteously and holily; or ἐν πᾶσι may mean, 'in the sight of all persons.' With καλὴν συνείδησιν ἔχομεν comp. Jos. ii. 21, 7, παρ' οἷς ἂν ἀγαθὸν τὸ συνιδόντες ἔχωμεν, and 2 Cor. i. 12, ἡ καύχησις ἡμῶν αὐτῇ ἵστι, τὸ μαρτύριον τῆς συνείδησεως ἡμῶν, ὅτι ἐν ἀπλότῃ, καὶ ἐλικρινείᾳ Θεοῦ—ἀνιστράφημεν ('have conducted ourselves'),—a passage evidently from the same writer as the present. In ver. 21 and 22, Lachm. adds καὶ λόγῳ το ἔργῳ, το ποιῶν he prefixes αὐτὸς, and changes ἀνίστασθαι to ἐνίστασθαι—all on the authority of one or two MSS., and against every principle of sound criticism.

Isa. 44. 11.
Ezek. 34. 23.
Zech. 9. 11.
John 10. 11.
1 Pet. 3. 22.
2 & 4.
1 & 2 Thoms. 2.
17.
1 Pet. 5. 10.
Phil. 2. 13.

20 ὁ δὲ Θεὸς τῆς εἰρήνης, ὁ ἀναγαγὼν ἐκ νεκρῶν τὸν ποιμένα τῶν προβάτων τὸν μέγαν ἐν αἵματι διαθήκης αἰωνίου, τὸν Κύριον ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν, 21 καταρτίσαι ὑμᾶς ἐν παντὶ ἔργῳ ἀγαθῷ—εἰς τὸ ποιῆσαι τὸ θέλημα αὐτοῦ, ποιῶν ἐν ὑμῖν τὸ εὐάρεστον ἐνώπιον αὐτοῦ—διὰ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ ᾧ ἡ δόξα εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας τῶν αἰώνων. ἀμήν.

22 Παρακαλῶ δὲ ὑμᾶς, ἀδελφοί· ἀνέχεσθε τοῦ λόγου τῆς παρακλήσεως καὶ γὰρ διὰ βραχέων ἐπέστεila ὑμῖν. 23 Γινώσκετε τὸν ἀδελφὸν Τιμόθεον ἀπολελυμένον, μεθ' οὗ (ἐὰν τάχιον ἔρχηται) ὄψομαι ὑμᾶς. 24 Ἀσπάσασθε πάντας τοὺς ἡγουμένους ὑμῶν, καὶ πάντας τοὺς ἁγίους. ἀσπάζονται ὑμᾶς οἱ ἀπὸ τῆς Ἰταλίας. 25 ἡ χάρις μετὰ πάντων ὑμῶν. ἀμήν.

Πρὸς Ἑβραίους ἐγράφη ἀπὸ τῆς Ἰταλίας διὰ Τιμοθέου.

20, 21. ὁ δὲ Θεὸς τῆς εἰρήνης, &c.] The full sense is, 'May God, the author of peace, who raised from the dead the great and supreme Shepherd of the sheep (even the Lord Jesus Christ), by the blood of the everlasting covenant [offered by that great Intercessor], may He make you perfect in every good work, to the doing of his will, ["which is your sanctification;"] [in order thereto] working in you the power to do what is well-pleasing in his sight;' see Phil. ii. 13. On the expression ὁ Θεὸς τῆς εἰρήνης, see Rom. xv. 33, and on τὸν ποιμένα τῶν προβάτων, John x. 11. The epithet αἰωνίου applied to διαθήκης is used by way of contrast with the temporary one of the Jewish law.—The words following, διὰ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, connect with καταρτίσαι preceding; the intermediate words being parenthetical. Render: 'for Jesus Christ his sake.' Possibly, however, they may be meant to connect with what immediately goes before: in which case the passage will imply (as Bp. Sanderson thinks, Sermons, p. 378) that our good works are pleasing unto God upon these two grounds; 1. because he worketh them in us;

2. because he looketh upon us and them in Christ Jesus. Comp. Isa. xxvi. 12.

22. ἀνίχισθε τοῦ λόγου τῆς παρακλήσεως] On the full sense of παρακλ. see note on Rom. i. 12.—καὶ γὰρ διὰ βραχέων ἐπέστεila ὑμῖν. The best mode of meeting the difficulty which has been found at διὰ βραχ. is to take the view of Thom. Aquin., the 'four words' referring to the first seventeen verses of this concluding chapter.

23. ἀπολελυμένον] 'A careful comparison of Phil. ii. 23, 24, will all but prove, (1) that the writer's meaning here was, "know that our brother Timotheus (Acts xvi. 2, 3), in whose company I shall see you, in case the Lord speed him on his way to you (1 Thess. iii. 11), has already taken his departure from Rome;" (2) that the writer, consequently, was no other than St. Paul; (3) that the Epistle to the Hebrews was written shortly after that to the Philippians, and when the Apostle had now seen so much of the issue of his long detention in Rome, as to be anticipating (v. 19) his speedy restoration to his freedom as a Christian Missionary and Evangelist.' (Pelle.)

ΙΑΚΩΒΟΥ ΤΟΥ ΑΠΟΣΤΟΛΟΥ

ΕΠΙΣΤΟΛΗ ΚΑΘΟΛΙΚΗ.

I. <sup>1</sup> ΙΑΚΩΒΟΣ, Θεοῦ καὶ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ δούλος, a John 7. 8.
Acts 2. 8.
2. 1.
3. 18. 11.
1 Pet. 1. 1.
ταῖς δώδεκα φυλαῖς ταῖς ἐν τῇ διασπορᾷ, χαίρειν.

WE are now arrived at the Epistles called Catholic; an appellation variously accounted for, but, by the generality of Commentators, supposed to have been given, because they were addressed, not to any particular Church (like the Epistles of St. Paul), but to Christians in general. The appellation, however, was not coeval with the time when these Epistles were written, but given at a much later period; probably at the time when the Canon of Scripture was first settled. Such catholicity must be taken with much modification, and seems to denote the Christian Church, in general of a country or clan, as the Jewish of the Eastern or Western Dispersion, then the Churches of, as we should say, Jewish Christendom. Two of these Epistles, indeed, (2nd and 3rd John) are the farthest from Catholic, yet it is not improbable that, at the time when the appellation was first given, those Epistles had not been received into the Canon of Scripture, and that afterwards they were placed after 1st John, as being by the same writer.

But to proceed to the Epistle now under consideration;—since two Apostles of the name of James are mentioned in the New Test., there has been some doubt as to which of them was the writer of this Epistle. The learned, however, are in general agreed that it was not the son of Zobedee, but the son of Alphaeus or Cleopas, called 'the Less' and 'the Just;' who was Bishop of Jerusalem, and is called brother, or near kinsman, of our Lord, Gal. i. 19. He was regarded as espec. an Apostle to the Jews, and accordingly was at an early period appointed Bishop of the Church at Jerusalem, and as such was a prominent member of the first Council held there A.D. 49. With respect to the date of the Epistle, we know that this James was put to death in a tumult of the Jews, A.D. 62; and internal evidence (arising from allusions to the troubles which were then disturbing Judæa, and did not long precede the destruction of Jerusalem) is thought to show that it must have been written only a short time previous to that period; and the learned in general fix it at 60, or 61. Dr. Davidson, indeed, assigns to it as early a date as 45; thus making it the earliest of all the Epistles: but whether he has succeeded I doubt. He has, at least, shown that the arguments for so late a date as the above mentioned are any thing but satisfactory. Perhaps here, if any where, 'in medio tutissimus ibis.' This Epistle (like 2nd Peter and 2nd and 3rd John) was not at first received as Canonical; but after a severe scrutiny (attesting the great caution of the primitive Church in receiving any books into their Canon), all doubts respecting its genuineness being removed, it was at a very early period admitted into the sacred Volume.

The Epistle consists of three parts: the first of which (chap. i.) is hortatory; the second (chap. ii.—v. 6) accusatory; the third (chap. v. 7—20) partly hortatory and conciliatory, partly accusatory and monitory. The design of the writer was, to guard Christians against the corrupt practices of the Jews, namely, such as, under the form of religion, denied the power of it; and to warn them against being deceived into the opinion, that the profession of doctrines, the possession of intellectual knowledge, and the observance of outward forms, can stand for practical religion, i. e. 'faith which worketh by love,' and moral obedience: 'thereby,' as Mr. Wesley observes, 'reproving the Antinomian spirit which had even then sprung up in the Church and infected many of its members, who perverted the glorious doctrine of justification by faith into an occasion of licentiousness.' Moreover, the Apostle here intends, not only to reprove the evil-living and the worldly-minded, and set right those who were misinformed as to the nature of the Gospel, but also to comfort and encourage those who had right notions of it, and were regulating their lives by its requisitions,—to console those who were suffering under sickness, or sinking under the persecutions of their adversaries, with the assurance, that 'the Lord is mindful of them, and can heal their sickness, in answer to prayer;' also that their adversity and the tyranny of their adversaries would be alike short, since the coming of the Lord to judgment was near at hand. Mr. Hartwell Horne has, in his Introduction, observed, that Luther in his earlier course spoke slightly of this Epistle (calling it 'an Epistle of straw'); excluding it from the sacred Canon, on account of its alleged contradiction to St. Paul's doctrine of Justification by Faith; but

b Matt. 5. 11, 12.
Acts 5. 41.
Rom. 5. 2.
Heb. 11. 34

<sup>2</sup> ἅπαν χάριν ἡγήσασθε, ἀδελφοί μου, ὅταν πειρασμοὶ περιπέσῃτε ποικίλοις <sup>3</sup> γινώσκοντες ὅτι τὸ δοκίμιον ὑμῶν
1 Pet. 1. 6. c Rom. 5. 2. 1 Pet. 1. 7.

that more mature experience induced him subsequently to retract his opinion. But this is not correct. He never retracted the sentiment, but only removed it from the editions after 1524. Archdeacon Haro, indeed, contends that even in the preceding words of the passage, the modes in which they are introduced, and the scope of the context, greatly diminish the gravamen of the charge made against the Reformer, who, in the part of the Preface in question, in pointing out, for the instruction of Bible students, those Books of the New Test. which are of the greatest importance, first says, that 'the Gospel of St. John is to be valued far beyond the other three Gospels,' and concludes thus: 'St. John's Gospel and First Epistle, the Epistles of St. Paul, espec. those to the Romans, Galatians, and Ephesians, these are the books which set Christ before you, and teach you every thing necessary for you to believe, though you were never to hear of any other book or doctrine. Therefore the Epistle of James is quite an Epistle of straw by the side of these, for it has no true Evangelical character.' Now Luther's zealous Apologist urges in extenuation, that the obnoxious expression is not used positively, but relatively, in comparison with those books of the New Test. in which the special doctrines of the Gospel are brought forward more fully and explicitly. He bids us 'bear in mind that the Epistle in question had been turned by those who exaggerated and perverted its meaning into the main prop of those very errors concerning faith and justification which it was Luther's peculiar mission to overthrow;—and who would make a man an offender for a word uttered in the strife of so awful a conflict?' But, notwithstanding this clever special pleading, Luther must still remain liable to grave censure for using an irreverent comparison of some books of the Inspired Word with others thereof. Besides, it is untrue that the books Luther specifies do teach us every thing necessary for a Christian to know. For, not to mention the Apocalypse, there is the Epistle to the Hebrews, which has ever been regarded as the great fortress of Orthodoxy, and the Scandalum Socinianorum, evincing above the other books of the New Test. the Deity of Jesus Christ. As to Luther's allegation, that 'the Epistle has no true Evangelical character,' that depends on the determination of the long litigated question, as to the accordance in doctrine between the Apostles Paul and James, on which the reader is referred to Thos. Scott, and to Prof. Scholef. in his Two Sermons before the University of Cambridge, where the apparent discrepancy is satisfactorily removed, and the general harmony in doctrine, notwithstanding the difference in object of the two writers, is ably evinced. That difference in object is proved to a demonstration by the Prof. And as to the general harmony in doctrine, that is peculiarly well proved in the following passage of Bp. Hopkins, quoted by the Prof.: 'There is no opposition at all between the two Apostles; for St. Paul only excludes works from being the way and means of our justification, and St. James only excludes that faith which is without works.—St. Paul's scope is, to show by what we are justified; and that, he tells us, is by faith. St. James's scope is, to show what kind of faith that is which must justify us; not an empty, vain, fantastical faith, but such as is operative, and productive of good works. His intent is not to exclude faith from our justification, no, nor so much as to join works with it in partnership and commission; for v. 23, he tells us the Scripture was fulfilled which saith, "Abraham believed God, and it was imputed to him for righteousness;" the very place St. Paul (Rom. iv. 3. Gal. iii. 6) makes use of to prove justification by faith; and therefore when he saith a man is justified by works, he contends for nothing else than a working faith. St. Paul and St. James fully accorded about this doctrine of justification by faith. St. Paul affirms that it is faith alone which justifies; St. James denies that a lonely faith can justify; and we assent to both as true; for the faith which alone justifies us is not a lonely or solitary faith, but accompanied and attended by good works.'

As respects manner and style, this Epistle is characterized by deep earnestness and simple pathos, by grandeur of thought, and beauty of imagery. It possesses a singular vividness of thought and pointed terseness of expression (see Col. iv. 6), united, at the same time, with an unaffected simplicity quite apart from all logical power. We observe an almost oratorical (not rhetorical) δυσότης and force in the reproptis, yet tempered with true Christian meekness; and finally, a sound wisdom, and practical strong good sense, in the counsels, such as may well be called (in the Apostle's own words) 'the meekness of wisdom.' The composition may be characterized generally by its concise sententiousness and graphic power; the sentences rising sometimes by climax to sublimity; the diction distinguished by its neatness and general purity of expression. I cannot perceive 'the air of artificial, nor indeed 'want of easy flow,' ascribed to it by Dr. Davidson; there is every where the stamp of nature, as well as the power of truth, and as easy a flow of expression as can well be found in the N. Test.

I. 1. Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ δούλου.] On this expression see note at Rom. i. 1. That the title ἀπόστολος is not added, will, as Benson observes, by no means prove the writer not to have been an Apostle; since the same omission may be observed in the Epistles of St. John and those of St. Paul to the Philippians, Ephesians, and Thessalonians. As to the Inscription ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις ταῖς ἐν τῇ διασπορᾷ, the expression ταῖς ἐν διασπ. may be an abstract for the concrete διασπαρμέναις, as sometimes in the Sept. But there is rather an ellipse of the Particip. of εἶμι, 'those who are in the dispersion.' Comp. Just. Mart. cum Tryph., ταῖς τῶν ἐν διασπ. εὐχάς. It is true that there were properly two Dispersions; the Eastern (beyond the Euphrates) and the Western; which latter had commenced at the time of Alexander the Great, and increased so much, that, in the Apostle's age, all the commercial and manufacturing cities of Syria, Egypt, and other parts of the sea-coasts of Africa, Asia Minor, Greece, Italy, and Spain, were full of

τῆς πίστεως κατεργάζεται υπομονήν. <sup>4</sup> Ἡ δὲ υπομονὴ ἔργον τέλειον ἔχέτω, ἵνα ᾗτε τέλειοι καὶ ὁλόκληροι, ἐν μηδεὶν λειπόμενοι. <sup>5</sup> <sup>d</sup> Εἰ δέ τις ὑμῶν λείπεται σοφίας, αἰτείτω παρὰ τοῦ

<sup>d</sup> Prov. 1. 1.
<sup>e</sup> Matt. 7. 7.
<sup>f</sup> 21. 22.
<sup>g</sup> Mark 11. 24.
<sup>h</sup> John 14. 13.
<sup>i</sup> 15. 7.
<sup>j</sup> 16. 24.
<sup>k</sup> 1 John 3. 22. & 5. 14.

them. The persons who formed the latter cultivated the use of the Greek tongue, as if it had been their vernacular one, because it was indispensably necessary to the commercial transactions by which they almost invariably lived. These Jews of the Western Dispersion were by far the most numerous; and therefore it may be thought the Apostle employed the Greek tongue; though, had he addressed himself to the Eastern Dispersion, he would prob. have written in the Syro-Chaldee. But the strict sense of the wording points to all Jewish Christians out of Palestine, and therefore must embrace both Dispersions; or rather 'to all Jews in Dispersion'; and therefore it is bootless to inquire where these Jewish Christians, espec. in St. James's view, were. But if the early date, so ably maintained by Dr. Davidson, be the true one, we may readily suppose with him, not, indeed, that the persons addressed were the disciples scattered abroad after the death of Stephen, Acts viii. 1, but that it, at any rate, included them; and that St. James had chiefly in view Jewish Christians scattered about in the regions of Syria, Cilicia, and the neighbouring parts, where the Greek language was espec. cultivated, and spoken by Jews. The subjoined term χαίρειν (sub. λίγαι) is the usual form of salutation; as we find it in Acts xv. 23 used by the Council of Jerusalem in addressing the converted Gentiles, and prob. dictated by the Apostle himself.

2. πάσαν χαρὰν—ποικίλους] An admonition, serving to pave the way to the first topic treated of in this Epistle,—namely, patience under affliction, and constancy in adhering to the Gospel; a subject on which the Apostle proceeds to enter without any of those preliminary considerations with which writers in general would have introduced it; as, for instance, 'Though it may seem to you hard that God's people should be so afflicted, yet consider your afflictions not as regards their present evil, but their future good; and accordingly count,' &c. Πάσαν χαρὰν, 'nought but joy,' i. e. a matter of pure and entire rejoicing; see Col. i. 9—11, and 1 Tim. i. 16: of which use of πάς several examples are adduced by Wetst. and Hottinger. Comp. Eurip. Med. 454, πάν κέρδος ἦγον ζημιουμένη φυγῇ. By πειρασμοί are denoted trials and tribulations generally, espec. such as serve to try religious faith, by proceeding from the persecutions of Heathen adversaries. The term ποικίλους has reference to 'the various kinds' of trial by persecution, and proceeding from unjust accusations to the most cruel deaths. Περιπίπτειν with a Dat. is equiv. to ἐπιπίπτειν etc (as Luke x. 30); though it is a stronger expression, and always used of what is calamitous, as in Thucyd. ii. 54, τοιούτων πάθει περιπεσούσας.

3. γινώσκ. ὅτι—ὑπομονήν] This is intended to confirm and illustrate the assertion of the preceding verse. There seems, too, to be a brevity in the expression, whereby a link in the chain of argument is passed over, which may be thus supplied: 'knowing as ye do, that afflictions are trials of your faith, and that it is this trying of your faith which [alone] produces patient endurance of what God may lay upon you,' &c. True it is, as St. Paul says, Rom. v. 4, ὑπομονὴ κατεργάζεται δοκιμὴν: but δοκιμὴν differs from δοκιμή in this,—that the latter denotes the proof or test itself, the former, the δοκιμασία, or act of proving. The reading, indeed, is more than disputed, inasmuch as τῆς πίστεως is cancelled by Tisch., but retained by Lachm.; very rightly, for the external evidence for the removal of τῆς πίστεως is next to nothing, being only that of one cursive MS., the later Syr. Version, and a Latin Father. I say one MS., for what Dr. Mill alleges, Barb. 1, is a mere shadow. And as to MS. B, which Tisch. adduces, he there stands alone, nor is there any proof that the MS. has not the words; hence we suppose their presence. Tisch. perhaps imagines that they have been foisted in from 2 Pet. i. 7; but of that there is no proof, nor the slightest probability, inasmuch as the words are indispensable to the tolerable expression of the sense intended by the Apostle. In short, there is every reason to suppose that they were in one, or say two MSS., omitted, by the negligence of the scribes.

4. ἡ δὲ ὑπομονή—ἔχέτω] A somewhat unusual mode of expression, put, as Hotting. thinks, for τῆς δὲ ὑπομ. ἔργον τέλειον ἴστω. It might have been so expressed; but with equal propriety, and more force and spirit, it has been expressed as it is, inasmuch as the true and full sense is, 'But, however (knowing, as ye do, this truth), [comp. John xiii. 17.] let (only) patience have her perfect work (obtain full scope) in you.' So Est.: 'Patentia vestra ne deficiat, sed opus suum perducit usque ad finem; sic enim erit opus absolutum atque perfectum, et re, et fructu.'—The next words, ἵνα ᾗτε τέλ., point at the true end and aim of all profession of faith,—namely, to produce practical results, so that the professor may be τέλ. καὶ ὁλόκληρ., terms nearly synonymous, and the latter = ὁλοτελής, 1 Thess. v. 23. The proper difference between the three terms is well expressed by Tittman, de Syn., p. 181, thus: 'Ὁλόκληρος est integer suis partibus; τέλειος est perfectus et solutus omnibus numeris (so ὁλοκληρία at Acts iii. 16); ὁλοτελής est omni ex parte perfectus.' The two terms in question seem, as Loesn., Hotting., and Pott suppose, to be used with allusion to the sacrificial law of the Jews, by which both the victims and the sacrificing priests were required to be τέλειοι, ὁλόκληροι, and ἁμωμοί. But the Apostle follows up what he has said by way of explanation, with a phrase of ordinary use, ἐν μηδ. λειπόμενοι, 'in nothing falling short of, deficient in nothing essential to the performance of every good work;' comp. Jos. Ant. ix. 11, 2, οὐδμίαι ἀρετῆς ἀπελείπετο. In requiring of them to be thus perfect, the Apostle requires no other than his Master had done before him, Matt. v. 48, ἵνα ὡσπερ ὁ Πατὴρ ὑμῶν ὁ ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς τέλειός ἐστι. They are 'to aim at, copy,' the perfect exemplar,—that of their Divine Master.

5. αἰ δέ τις ὑμῶν λείπεται σοφίας, &c.] The διδόντος Θεοῦ πᾶσιν ἀπλῶς, καὶ μὴ ὀνειδίζοντος, καὶ δοθήσεται αὐτῷ. <sup>6</sup> Αἰτεῖτω δὲ ἐν πίστει, μηδὲν διακρινόμενος· ὁ γὰρ διακρινόμενος ἔοικε κλύδωνι θαλάσσης ἀνεμιζομένῃ καὶ ῥιπιζομένῃ. <sup>7</sup> Μὴ γὰρ οἴεσθω ὁ ἄνθρωπος ἐκείνος, ὅτι λήψεται τι παρὰ τοῦ Κυρίου· <sup>8</sup> ἂν ἡρ διψυχὸς ἀκατάστατος ἐν πάσαις ταῖς ὁδοῖς αὐτοῦ. <sup>9</sup> Καυχάσθω δὲ ὁ ἀδελφὸς ὁ ταπεινὸς ἐν τῷ ὕψει αὐτοῦ

X x

o Matt. 21.

22.

Mark xi. 22.

24.

1 Tim. 2. 2.

f ch. 4. 2.

Matt. 6. 22.

24.

2 Pet. 2. 14.

2. 14.

best Expositors are in general agreed, that by σοφία is here meant, not 'spiritual knowledge,' but 'practical wisdom, prudence, and judgment' (as iii. 13, 15, 17. 2 Pet. iii. 15),—namely, how to act in any critical conjuncture; such being highly instrumental to the τίσις ἔργων just mentioned, by enabling them to improve their afflictions to their own spiritual benefit and the glory of God. Yet the term may also be meant to denote that 'spiritual wisdom' by which we are enabled to see ωλεσμός, and ωλες, afflictions come, and how they are to be improved; see Zwingli and Beza. The words, indeed, seem meant (as Thom. Aquin., Aret., and Calv. suggest) to anticipate a possible objection: 'But we have not the gift so to think or act.' To which it is replied, 'Seek it, then, of God,'—namely, says Oecumen., inasmuch as He it is who must originate this 'perfect work.' However, by the wisdom here spoken of may be understood not only the wisdom how to act and how to suffer, but how to live, or walk worthy of their high calling.—τοῦ δίδόντος Θεοῦ πᾶσιν ἀπλῶς, meaning, 'who giveth this, and all other good gifts, to all men,' &c. The term ἀπλῶς is by some ancient and by the recent Commentators in general explained simpliciter, candidè,—namely, as opposed to the selfish motives and private ends which too often accompany human gifts. So at Rom. xii. 8, we have ὁ μεταδίδων, ἢ ἀπλότητι. But the sense commonly assigned, liberally, abundantly, is far more simple and natural, and is confirmed by 1 Tim. vi. 17, 'he giveth men all things richly to enjoy.' Yet together with the idea of liberal bounty that of promptitude may be conjoined, inasmuch as God is not only 'more ready to hear than we to pray,' but, in his mercy, more ready to give than we are to ask, giving us at once more than we desire or deserve. See Calv. There is much meaning in the subjoined expression, καὶ μὴ ὀνειδ.; q. d. 'He does not [as men often do] rebuke those who ask with importunity, or give to them contumeliously,—or, having given, upbraid them with the benefits bestowed;' dwelling on them with that irksome commemoration, of which it is finely said by Seneca, 'lacerat animum et premit,' as implying a sort of reproach. So in a passage of Menander some one is represented as saying to such a giver, καλῶς ποιεῖς, οὐ καλῶς ὀνειδίζεις· ἔργον καθύλας πλούσιον πρωχέ λόγος; and justly it is observed by Plut., de Adul. p. 64, ἅπαντα ὀνειδίζομένη χάρις ἐπαχθεῖ καὶ ἐχάρις. True is the observation of Calv., that 'men, even the most liberal, are apt to make mention of former benefits, in order to excuse themselves for not bestowing future ones; God, on the contrary, is ever ready to crown former with fresh benefits without end and without limit.'—καὶ δοθήσεται αὐτῷ. A promise most sure and most comfortable,—but which must, as Bp. Sanderson shows in his 2d Sermon, ad Clerum, be understood with the limitations, 'if God shall see it expedient to grant what we ask, and if we pray for it as we ought.'

6. αἰτεῖτω δὲ—διακρ. The full sense is, '[But he who would obtain what he asks,] let him ask [it] in firm faith, ἐν πληροφορίᾳ, full assurance,'—namely, of God's power to give, and of his willingness to bestow it, as far as shall be fitting; that being the pledge and condition of success.—μηδὲν διακρ., i. e. with an undoubting reliance: a sense of διακρ. which has been explained at Matt. xxi. 21. Mark xi. 23. Acts x. 20. See also my Lex. This is then illustrated by comparing the state of mind of one who doubts with a wave of the sea: a figure sometimes employed in the Class. writers to designate the contrary to γαλήνη, or 'calm confidence.'—ἀνεμιζομένη καὶ ῥιπιζομένη. Ἀνεμιζομένη and ῥιπιζομένη here, as ἀλυσσινίζομαι and παρφέρισθαι at Eph. iv. 14, signify 'to be raised by the wind into waves, or ripples.' And so in Philo, cited by Wetst., we have εἰ μὴ πρὸς ἀνέμου ῥιπιζοῖτο τὸ ὕδωρ. Here we have an apt image of the mind of an unstable man, fluctuating between belief and disbelief, hope and despair. So Dio Chrysa., p. 368, speaking of the mob, αἰα, ἔστατος κακὸν, θαλάσσης ὁμοίον, ὅτ' ἀνέμου ῥιπιζέται.

7, 8. These verses are closely connected, and γὰρ has reference to a clause omitted; q. d. '[Let him, I say, ask in faith:] for otherwise he must not suppose he shall obtain any thing;' an assertion then confirmed by a weighty apophthegm, introduced, for greater effect, per asyndeton.—διψυχος is a very rare word, but found in Clement, 1 Ep. to the Corinthians, and the Const. Apost., and is nearly synonymous with δύλοχος and ἐπώλεος. In its present use and application it means 'a man of unsettled and fluctuating sentiments, too solicitous about the present to attain the future,—too anxious about the future to secure the present; who this moment would sacrifice all for eternity, and the next would renounce every thing for this present life.' Now it is implied that such a one will not obtain his request, because, unstable in all his purposes, he cannot ask with that undoubting faith which is indispensable in him who addresses God in prayer.

9—11. The Apostle now passes from general to particular trials,—from those of Christians in general to those of the poor in particular, as contrasted with the rich; admonishing the poor not to be cast down and depressed by their poverty, nor the rich to be puffed up by their riches; suggesting certain considerations, to the one of comfort, to the other of humiliation; but expressed, for greater force, by an anecdotes, or anecdotes. Here, then, the Apostle, having prob. in mind Jer. ix. 23, adverts to the temptations peculiar to poverty and riches respectively,—in the former to discontent, in the latter to pride and arrogance; and with reason, inasmuch as both conditions have their particular anæres. So it is well observed by the great Philocean Historian, ἡ μὲν πένις, ἀνάγκη τὴν τόλμαν παρέχουσα, ἡ δὲ ἐξουσία, ἔβροι τὴν πλάνησιν καὶ φρονηματι, αἱ δ' ἄλλαι εὐντυχίαι, ὁργῇ τῶν ἀνθρώπων, ὡς ἐκαστὴ τις κατέχεται ὑπ' ἀνηκίστου τινος κρείσσαντος, ἐξάγουσιν ἐν τοῖς κινδύνους. (Thucyd. iii. 46.) Against, then, the temptations to each respectively are suggested various Christian considerations, with which may be compared similar ones of St. Paul, espec. at 1 Cor. vii. 22, a passage in its nature and mode of expression closely resembling the present. In both these cases the high party required lowering, and the low, raising; and this the Gospel is fully able to effect, by the one being taught to cultivate contentment, by the other to study humility and beneficence.—καυχᾶσθω, as applied to the poor brother, signifies, 'Let him, instead of being depressed by the consideration of his humble station in life, find matter of joyful exultation, by considering his high condition in another view,—namely, that he is a child of God, and admitted to the privileges of the Gospel.'—ἐν τῇ ταπεινώσει αὐτοῦ, i. e. that he is brought by the fear of God, and the truth of the Gospel, to be lowly in heart, and poor in spirit: comp. Jer. ix. 23. In the words following is suggested a strong argument for the speedy cultivation of this humility, on the part of the rich,—namely, as existing in the instability of wealth.

10 ε ὁ δὲ πλούσιος, ἐν τῇ ταπεινώσει αὐτοῦ. ὅτι ὡς ἄνθος χόρτου παρελεύσεται.—<sup>11</sup> ἀνέτειλε γὰρ ὁ ἥλιος σὺν τῷ καύσωνι, καὶ ἐξήρανε τὸν χόρτον, καὶ τὸ ἄνθος αὐτοῦ ἐξέπεσε, καὶ ἡ εὐπρέπεια τοῦ προσώπου αὐτοῦ ἀπώλετο.—οὕτω καὶ ὁ πλούσιος ἐν ταῖς πορείαις αὐτοῦ μαρανθήσεται. <sup>12</sup> ἡ Μακάριος ἀνὴρ δὲ ὑπομένει πειρασμόν, ὅτι, δοκιμοὶ γενόμενοι, λήψεται τὸν στέφανον τῆς ζωῆς, ὃν ἐπηγγείλατο ὁ Κύριος τοῖς ἀγαπῶσιν αὐτόν.

<sup>13</sup> Μηδεὶς πειραζόμενος λεγέτω, ὅτι “ἀπὸ [τοῦ] Θεοῦ πειρά-

10. ὅτι ὡς ἄνθος χόρτου παρᾶ.] An image frequent both in the Script. and Class. writers, taken from the ephemeral duration of the gaudy flowers of the field.

11. ἀνέτειλε γὰρ ὁ ἥλιος, &c.] Here we have the image further unfolded; γὰρ pointing at the reason of the foregoing comparison, as in a similar case, ver. 24, and elsewhere. Moreover here, as often in the parables of our Lord, the development of the imagery merges into a narration of the things signified therein.—σὺν τῷ καύσωνι, not 'with a burning heat': 1. because that sense would render the Article useless; 2. because it were (as Bp. Middl. observes) unnatural to represent the sun as rising with its heat, which cannot be intense, compared with that of noon. In short, the learned are agreed, that by the expression τῷ καύσωνι is denoted 'the burning wind' called in Hebrew צפ, and in the Sept. rendered by καύσων, and in Arabia called the Simoom. Now this, as we learn from Oriental travellers, often blows up at sunrise. See Chardin, Shaw, Niebuhr, and Barchhardt. The above view is, moreover, confirmed by Jonah iv. 8, prob. in the Apostle's mind, καὶ ἰγνίτο, ἅμα τῷ ἀνατείλει τὸν ἥλιον, προστάξεν ὁ Θεὸς πνεύματι καύσωνι, συγκαίοντι, &c.—οὕτω καὶ ὁ πλούσιος, &c. Here we have the application: 'So [suddenly] periseth the rich man in the midst of his occupations.'

12. Here the subject at vv. 2, 3, is resumed, and a gnome generalis is subjoined, resulting from what was said at vv. 9, 10 (ver. 11 being a parenthetical illustration), and of which the sense is, 'Accordingly, or on the other hand, blessed is the man [whether he be rich or poor] that endureth temptation or trial; for,' &c. Ὁ δοκιμοὶ γενόμενοι the sense is best rendered, according to the Pesch. Syr. and Vulg. Versions, 'after he has been approved.' See note on 1 Cor. xi. 19. The term δοκ. is supposed to be an agonistic one, and it is illustrated by Kypke from the δοκιμασία of the Grecian ἀγῶνες. So Philo, t. i. 152, ἡ ἐκκιρμίνων γὰρ ἰσχύς, ὥστερ' ἐξ ἀγῶνος λαρεῦ, καὶ ἀποδοκιμασμένων. See note on 1 Cor. ix. 27. On στίφανος τῆς ζωῆς see note at 2 Tim. iv. 8. By ὁ Κύριος must be meant the Lord Jesus, as appears from his several declarations while on earth, in which is the oft-repeated promise, 'I will give eternal life.' See Matt. x. 37. John iv. 14. x. 28. xiv. 23.

13—18. Having spoken of the benefit of temptations in the sense of trials, the Apostle now touches on temptations in the more usual sense, namely, solicitations to sin [which may be called internal, as those, external trials]; guarding his readers against the fatal error of ascribing such temptations to God, as if impelling men to sin. Such, he says, proceed not from God, but from the lusts of men, which, if yielded to, will bring death rather than a crown of life; and therefore, though trials may be ascribed to God, yet temptations, in the bad sense, must not. Sin and death proceed from the lusts and wickedness of men; whereas God is not the author of evil, but the giver of all good. (Benson.) Many probably excused their immorality, by pleading (as the corruption of our nature urges men of every age to do) the force of temptation,—and seeking refuge in the doctrine of necessity, as the Pharisees did, by the very same dogma: in opposition to which, the Apostle assures them, that as afflictions are not sent by God to make men worse, but better, so when trials of virtue generate temptations to sin, no man must dare to say that he is tempted by God [thus making God the Author of sin]; for as God is not tried or tempted to moral evil (i. e. is not liable to evil, and consequently cannot be tempted to sin), so he of himself tempteth no man: a truth this, recognized even by the wisest Heathens. See Hom. Od. i. 32. So also in a passage of Epicurus, cited by Theile, it is said, i Hœa. 13. 9.

Matt. 5. 28.
& 15. 19, 20.
J Job 15. 30.
Ps. 7. 14.
Rom. 6. 31.
1 Prov. 3. 6.
John 8. 27.
1 Cor. 4. 7.
Mal. 3. 6.
Rom. 11. 29.

ζομαι" ὁ γὰρ Θεὸς ἀπειραστός ἐστι κακῶν, πειράζει δὲ αὐτὸς οὐδένα. <sup>14</sup> ἕκαστος δὲ πειράζεται, ὑπὸ τῆς ἰδίας ἐπιθυμίας ἐξελκόμενος καὶ δελεαζόμενος <sup>15</sup> εἴτα ἡ Ἐπιθυμία συλλαβοῦσα τίκτει Ἀμαρτίαν ἢ δὲ Ἀμαρτία ἀποτελεσθεῖσα ἀποκίει Θάνατον. <sup>16</sup> Μὴ πλανᾶσθε, ἀδελφοί μου ἀγαπητοί <sup>17</sup> πᾶσα δόσις τὸ θεῖον τε καὶ μακάριον, οὐτὰ αὐτὸ πρᾶγματα ἔχει, οὐτε ἰτίροιτε παρέχει, where for πράγματα I conjecture ταράγματα.

13. πειραζόμενος] Of course implying, as Bp. Sanderson suggests, that the person yields to the temptation.—The τοῦ before Θεοῦ is cancelled by Lachm. and Tisch., on very strong external authority. But internal evidence is rather in favour of it, as also the custom of St. James, who sometimes uses the Article with Θεός where it might be dispensed with, as, for instance, at iv. 4.

14. ἕκαστος δὲ πειράζεται, ὑπὸ τῆς ἰδίας ἐπιθυμίας ἐξελκ., &c.] 'But whosoever is tempted and impelled to sin, is hurried away and enticed by his own lust,' or evil desire. Ἐπιθυμία has here the Article, because it is personified; on which see note at Col. iii. 5. The term ἐξελκεσθαι signif. prop. 'to draw off or away,' and, in a moral sense, to draw away from the paths of virtue. So Xenophon (cited by Raphael) has εἰ αὐτὸς ἐπιδεικνύει ἑαυτὸν μὴ ὑπὸ τῶν παρανότων ἡδονῶν ἐλκόμενον ἀπὸ τῶν ἀγαθῶν, and Test. xii. Patr., εἰς πορνείαν μὲ ἐξελκύσαστο. From what follows, however, there would seem to be a metaphor taken from a harlot, such as is, in the Tabula Cebetis, represented as laying hold of men, and drawing them off to their company. In δελεαζόμενος there is a piscatory metaphor, added to complete the idea. So Athen., p. 308, ἀνελκυσθεὶς δὲ οὐ δελεάζεται, οὐτε σαρκὶ οὐτε ἄλλῳ τινὶ ἐμψύχῳ. The term is, indeed, one not unfrequently used, in this metaphorical sense, of pleasure, desire, hope, &c., agreeably to the saying of Plato, that men are caught with pleasure, as fishes with a hook and bait. So Plutarch, in a strikingly similar passage, cited by Pott, says, τὸ γλυκὺ τῆς ἐπιθυμίας, ὥσπερ δέλιον, ἐξέλκειν ἀνθρώπου. 'Thus, then (says Bp. Sanderson), every man's temptation, if it take effect, is merely from his own lust. It is his own act and deed, and to be imputed to himself alone. Persecutions, and all occurrences without, are not the chief causes, nor indeed causes at all, but the occasions only of the soul's fainting under them. Temptations or trials they are, but no more. The will has its natural liberty still, and it is at our choice whether we will yield or no. But every man is tempted (i. e. cum effectus, or so as to be overcome by the temptation) by his own lusts, of what kind soever.' By the lust (ἐπιθυμία) here spoken of ought not to be understood (what many take it to mean) ungoverned sexual inclination only,—but, in a general way, the vehement desire for any object (wealth, power, or fame—see 1 Cor. iii. 4), such as cannot be attained without sin. Indeed the idea of ἐπιθυμία here in the mind of St. James seems to have been the very one attached by St. Paul to what he calls τὸ φρόνημα τῆς σαρκός, Rom. viii. 6, where it is similarly said, τὸ φρόνημα τῆς σαρκός, θάνατος; of which expression the import is well represented in the IXth Article of our Church by 'the lust of the flesh,' namely, that propensity to evil springing from the inward depravity of our corrupt nature.

15. εἴτα ἡ Ἐπιθυμία συλλαβοῦσα, &c.] Here lust, or evil concupiscence, is represented as a harlot, who allures men to her impure embraces, (see Prov. vii. 10,) and, from that conjunction, conceives and brings forth SIN; and when Sin is grown up, she is represented as following the same lewd courses with the same man, and the issue is DEATH, which destroys the sinner. This, then, is the true genealogy of Sin and Death. Lust is the mother of Sin, and Sin is the mother of Death, and the sinner the parent of both. Comp. Rom. vii. 8—13, though the genealogy there is just the reverse. Hence, I would observe, may be emended and illustrated a corrupt and most obscure passage of Æschyl. Agam. 738—746, where, after saying that 'Υβρις begets, to the evil of men, a new progeny, he adds, Νεσάρ φασὶν κότον, Διμήσα τῶν ἀμαχῶν Ἀλίων θράσος μελαί-Ναε μελάρθρουσιν ἄναι, Εἰδομένην τοκεῦσιν. I would there, with Dr. S. Butler, read νεσάρ φασὶν κότον, which is confirmed by a passage of Theogn., cited by Wakef.: τίκτει τοι κόρος ὕβρις, also by Hdtot. viii. 77. Indeed, that κόρον ought there to be read, is placed beyond doubt by a passage of Pind. Olymp. i. 90, κόρῳ δ' Ἰλῆν (ῥαββὺν) Ἄταν, where, by a similar personification as that of the Apostle, we have in Ἄτη a personification of human folly, by which men are hurried into vice and destruction. Finally,—with a view, probably, to the above passages of Pind. and Æschyl.,—Longin. de Sublim. § 44, after pointing out φιλαργυρία and φιληδονία as the two great diseases of the moral world, similarly says of these, that, where they abide long in any one, they soon generate fresh ones, νεοττοποιεῖται, καὶ ταχέως γινόμενα περὶ τεκνοποιῶν, ἀλαζονίαν τε γέννησι καὶ τύφῳ καὶ τρυφῇ; and these, it is added, breed ὕβριν, καὶ παρανομίαν, καὶ ἀναισχυρίαν. And so in a fine passage of Æschin. contra Timarch., p. 27, 5: Μὴ γὰρ οἴεσθαι τὰς τῶν ἐδικημάτων ἀρχὰς αὐτὸ θῆναι, ἀλλ' οὐχ ὅτ' ἀνθρώπων δολιχγυίας γίνεσθαι—ἀλλ' αἱ προτιτεῖσι τοῦ σώματος ἡδοναί, καὶ τὸ μῆδιν ἱκανὸν ἠγύσθαι, ταῦτα πληροὶ τὰ ληστῆρία, ταῦτ' εἰς τὸν ἐκ-ακτροκέληγτα ἐμβιβάζει, ταῦτά ἐστιν ἐκείστω ποινῇ.

16, 17. Here we have a confirmation of what was said at ver. 13, ὁ γὰρ Θεὸς ἀπειραστός ἐστι κακῶν, πειράζει δὲ αὐτὸς οὐδένα and that, as Calvin says, by an argumentum à reprobationibus; showing, that as God is confessedly the author of all good, to suppose him to be the author of evil were absurd, as well as profane. This erroneous notion, then, the Apostle refutes, by opposing to it the contrary truth,—namely, that so far from God being the author of moral evil, by tempting men to sin, he is the giver of every good gift, the great Source of all good, the GOOD BEING.

16. μὴ πλανᾶσθε, ἀδελφοί μου &c.] A formula ἀγαθὴ, καὶ πᾶν δώρημα τέλειον, ἄνωθεν ἐστὶ, καταβαῖνον ἀπὸ τοῦ Πατρὸς τῶν φώτων, παρ' ᾧ οὐκ ἐνὶ παραλλαγῇ ἡ τροπῆς τοῦ ἀποσκίασμα. <sup>18 m</sup> Βουληθεὶς ἀπεκύκυσεν ἡμᾶς λόγῳ ἀληθείας, εἰς τὸ εἶναι ἡμᾶς ἀπαρχὴν τινα τῶν αὐτοῦ κτισμάτων.

m John 1. 13.
2. 2.
1 Cor. 4. 15.
Gal. 4. 19.
1 Pet. 1. 22.
Matt. 20. 18.
Jer. 2. 2.
n Prov. 17.
Eccl. 5. 1, 2.

19 n "Ὡστε, ἀδελφοί μου ἀγαπητοί, ἔστω πᾶς ἄνθρωπος ταχύς similar to several in St. Paul's Epistles, as 1 Cor. vi. 9. xv. 33. Gal. vi. 7, soliciting serious attention to some momentous (though not sufficiently acknowledged) truth, by a caution against the opposite error. Comp. Matt. xxii. 29. Gal. vi. 7. 1 Cor. xv. 33.

17. The argument here is, that, as God is the Author of all good, it was absurd to suppose Him to be the Author likewise of evil, which would be contrary to his nature as God. By τῶν φώτων is meant, by way of climax, 'fully complete.'—τοῦ Πατρὸς τῶν φώτων. Of this expression various interpretations have been proposed; some Commentators assigning to it a physical, others, a metaphorical sense. It may be best to suppose both here intended, though chiefly the former, and that by an allusion not only to the sun, but also to the other celestial luminaries; q. d. 'the Creator of the heavenly bodies;' so called Ps. cxxxv. 7. Jer. iv. 23. In the latter and secondary sense, the expression may be understood to allude to the spiritual light, and consequently happiness, which is dispensed by God in the Gospel. So John i. 4, it is said, καὶ ἡ ζωὴ ἦν τὸ φῶς τῶν ἀνθρώπων. In παρ' ᾧ οὐκ ἐνὶ παραλλαγῇ ἡ τροπῆς ἀποσκίασμα, there are supposed to be astronomical metaphors, suggested by the use of the term φῶτα, often denoting, in the Sept., the heavenly bodies, of which God is the Maker and Framer, thus serving to mark the immutability of God's benevolent purposes. So it is said in Mal. iii. 6, ἐγὼ Κύριος—οὐκ ἠλλοίωμαι, with reference to that immutability of the Divine purposes, of which the heathen philosophers in general frequently speak. I am, however, rather inclined to think that, although the words are all three properly technical terms in astronomy, they are here employed popularly, with only a faint allusion to their scientific acceptance; just as in our old writers the word parallels is used with allusion to bodies running along side by side of each other, though not in the mathematical sense equidistantly. This is very much the case with ἀποσκίασμα here, and still more with παραλλαγῇ, inasmuch that it seems best to suppose that it is here meant simply to be taken in the ordinary sense, for variation, meaning variableness, ἠλλοίωσις, as Heyck. interprets the word; doubtless from this passage, and evidently deriving the gloss from the ancient Commentators. Here, then, by τροπῆς will simply be denoted mutatio, mutabilitas, as in Plato, p. 102, τροπαὶ καὶ ἠλλοιώσεις, and not unfrequently elsewhere.

18. βουληθεὶς ἀπεκύκυσεν—κτισμάτων] This is meant to confirm and illustrate the above assertion, πᾶσα δόσις ἀγαθὴ, &c. The expression βουληθεὶς is by some understood of God's sovereign will or pleasure; by others, of his goodness and grace. Both senses seem intended, and the best comment on this expression is the similar one, Eph. i. 5, κατὰ τὴν εὐδοκίαν τοῦ θελήματος αὐτοῦ. In the words ἀπεκύκυσεν ἡμᾶς λόγῳ ἀληθείας we have a recurrence to the metaphor at ver. 15; there being here given a kind of genealogy of Righteousness (as there of Sin), of which God is the Prime Mover. Otherwise for ἀπεκύκυσεν we should have had the usual term ἀνεγίνεσκαι, denoting our regeneration by the Gospel. See 1 Pet. i. 3, 23. This, then, is analogous to the sonship spoken of at Gal. iii. 26. John i. 12, seq. iii. 3, seq. Eph. iv. 22, seqq.

19—21. An inference (as indicated by ὥστε) is now drawn from what has been said of God's goodness in bringing men to the knowledge of him by the word of truth; and that by way of admonition, though Expositors are not agreed whether it regards the words immediately preceding, or others farther back. It would seem to have respect to the whole of what has been said concerning the dealings of God with men in the work of salvation, vv. 5, 12, 13, 17, 18; q. d. 'Since God is the liberal giver of wisdom and every good and perfect gift, the Father of lights, unchangeable in his attributes, who tempteth no man, but of his free benignity hath begotten us again by the Gospel to be the first-fruits of his creatures, and hath promised a crown of life to those who love and obey him,—therefore, let every one,' &c.—It is true, that for ὥστε, 5 MSS., A, B, C, and 2 cursives (to which I can add nothing), with the Vulg. and some later Versions, have ἵνα, which has been adopted by Lachm. and Tisch.—very uncritically, for external authority is not at all for, and internal evidences is quite against the reading—since it might well arise from an error of the scribes, though it destroys the inference, here intended to be drawn from what has been said; q. d. 'Such being the case, let every man,' &c. Indeed, I cannot find that ἵνα was ever used in the sense Mind, know this, as introducing a caution, or an exhortation, which the Critics here are obliged to bring in, in order to produce any sense, however lame. The general admonition here given, ἵνα πᾶς—λαλῇσαι, together with another just after subjoined, γίνεσθε ποιῆται λόγου, καὶ μὴ μόνον ἀκοῦσαι, forms, as it were, a fact, on which the Apostle dilates (with the exception of a digression at ii. 1—13, censuring the undue respect of persons in religious assemblies) up to iv. 12. The substance of what is contained in these general admonitions is,—that 'they should feel alacrity in receiving the word of truth, the Gospel, and in hearing it should be prompt to listen (comp. Eccles. v. 11, γίνου ταχύς ἐν ἀκοῇσαι), but slow to speak (i. e. dogmatically or dictatorially);' also that they should not give way to that hot-headed controversial spirit (for which the Jews were so marked, see Hor. Sat. i. 4, 12) which makes men impatient of contradiction, and apt to break out into invectives against those who oppose what they think the truth. This position the Apostle fortifies by the general axiom, that 'the angry disputation of man can never promote the knowledge nor furεἰς τὸ ἀκοῦσαι, βραδὺς εἰς τὸ λαλήσαι, βραδὺς εἰς ἀργίην 20 ὁ ὅρη γὰρ ἀνδρὸς δικαιοσύνην Θεοῦ οὐ κατεργάζεται. 21 Διὸ ἀποθέμενοι πᾶσαν ρυπαρίαν καὶ περισσεῖαν κακίας, ἐν πρᾶτῃ δέξασθε τὸν ἔμφυτον λόγον τὸν δυνάμενον σῶσαι τὰς ψυχὰς ὑμῶν. 22 Ὑποθέτετε δὲ ποιηταὶ λόγου, καὶ μὴ μόνον ἀκοαταί, παραλογιζόμενοι ἑαυτοὺς. 23 Ὅτι εἰ τις ἀκοατῆς λόγου ἐστὶ o Eccl. 7. 9.

 y Col. 3. 6.
 1 Pet. 2. 1.
 Ps. 26. 9.
 Acts 15. 23.
 Rom. 1. 16.
 q Matt. 7. 21.
 Luke 11. 23.
 Rom. 2. 13.
 1 John 4. 7.
 r Luke 6. 46.

ther the interests of true religion.' Moreover, he, at v. 21, admonishes them not to rest in hearing only, but so to learn the Gospel, as to act upon it. He, however, puts this as strongly as possible, introducing it as a conclusion from the great truth laid down at v. 18, and, at the same time, further carrying out the two admonitions just given. In doing this he, however, interweaves a fresh admonition formed on v. 15, exemplifying the evil influence of concupiscence and sin by its evil results. Render: 'Wherefore (such being the case), sin producing death spiritual—putting away from you all uncleanness,' &c. Thus, then, they are first to 'cease to do evil,' to lay aside all the iniquities of their former life (seeking, in the words of 2 Pet. i. 9, τὸν καθαρισμὸν τῶν πέλαι μαρτιῶν); then 'to learn to do well;' to embrace the truth with alacrity, hear and learn its doctrines with docility, and lastly to put in practice whatever knowledge they have acquired. Referring the words, however (with most recent Expositors), to those which immediately precede (ὁ ὅρη γὰρ ἀνδρὸς, &c.) the terms ρυπαρίαν and περισσεῖαν κακίας are not an Hendiad, but form a climax, including every kind of foulness of morals (what in Latin is expressed by spurcitia; comp. molusmodi sordide, 2 Cor. vii. 1), even so exceeding all bounds of turpitude, and utterly unsuitable to what might be looked for from those who are expected to be a kind of ἀπαρχὴ τῶν κτισμάτων, v. 18. Of the term δέξασθε, conjoined with ἔμφυτ., the full sense is, as Calv. expl., 'ita suscipite ut verè inseratur (verbum), ut viva fiat insitio, quæ veluti cum corde nostro coalescat.' The term ἔμφ. is usually taken to signify engrafted, by a metaphor, derived from the grafting of trees. But, in point of fact, the term never bears the sense of engrafted, but invariably that of implanted, as it may be supposed to do here. The full sense intended is, what the Pesch. Syr. Translator freely expresses by 'implanted in our nature,' the term being used according to that agricultural metaphor, by which the effects of the Gospel on the heart of man are compared to seed sown, or seedlings implanted in the ground (comp. Luke viii. 15), with allusion to that cardinal doctrine of the Gospel,—that holiness and righteousness are not natural to the human heart, but require first to be implanted there by a Divine hand, and then nurtured by the Spirit of grace. At any rate, the term implies that the heavenly doctrine is not only communicated to the mind, but is implanted in the soul,—so much so, as to produce a second nature. Comp. 1 Pet. i. 23, ἀναγεννημένοι—ἐκ σπορῆς—ἐφθάρτων, and 2 Pet. i. 4. So St. Barnab., Epist. § ix., terms the gift of understanding the mystical sense in the O. T., ἡ ἔμφυτος δωρεὰ τῆς διδασχῆς τοῦ Θεοῦ. And in Hdol. ix. 24, we have, καὶ μετὰ ταῦτα ἔμφυτον μαρτυκὴν εἶχε, 'divinitus donum,' 'divinitus ingeneratum, i. e. insitum.' The sense of ἐν πρᾶτῃ is well pointed out by Calv. thus: 'Hoc verbo significat modestiam et facilitatem mentis ad discendum compositam, qualem Isaias (lvii. 15) describit, quum dicit, Super quem requiescit Spiritus meus, nisi super humilem et quietum?' Thus the expression denotes a mixture of humility and docility. Comp. Eph. iv. 2, ταπεινοφροσύνην καὶ πραότητα, where I have shown that 'meekness' in our old writers is sometimes used for 'humility,' and is oft. found so combined with it as to form one idea.

22. In order to trace the connexion here we must consider the reference, which is both to v. 19, ταχὺς εἰς τὸ ἀκοῦσαι, and to v. 21, δυνάμενον σῶσαι τ. ψυχ. ὑμ., the former directly, the latter indirectly. The full sense may be thus expressed: 'But then [in order that the word of truth may really produce those blessed effects on the soul which it was designed to do] ye must be not hearers only,' &c. That is not enough (however prompt to hear, and even to listen), ye must in deed carry out what the Gospel prescribes to be done. Comp. Rom. ii. 13. With the admonition καὶ μὴ μόνον ἀκοαταί we have conjoined, in the next words, παραλογιζόμενοι ἑαυτοὺς, a warning; it being thus intimated that, by being mere hearers only, they will but deceive themselves, and not attain the expected salvation. See vv. 26, 27; and comp. Matt. vii. 21. Rom. ii. 13.

23—25. Here the Apostle illustrates the case of the unfruitful hearer by a familiar comparison, presenting a most apt emblem thereof.

23. ὅτι εἰ τις ἀκοατῆς λόγου, &c.] meaning (as Hamm. explains) 'that the word of God is a glass, reflecting to a man the portraiture of himself, ὁποῖός ἐστι, whether there be any thing amiss in him; and he that hears the word of God and doeth it not, is as if a man should look upon and contemplate his face in a looking-glass, and no more. As for any use or effect of this looking, he behold and went away, and presently forgot. When he has seen what blemishes are to be corrected, to be reformed in him, he contents himself with having seen them, thinks no more of them, and forgets to amend them.' There is, in short, a familiar comparison, in which the word of God is represented as a glass reflecting to a man the portraiture of himself. The words καταρ. τὸ π. τῆς γαστ. αὐτοῦ may best be rendered, 'surveying his native person (or face)'; where τῆς γαστ. is a phrase for Adject. γαστρίος = γαστρίος, 'native,' such as nature has made it, in opposition to what art might make it. So Est., 'Ita dicitur ad differentiam litteræ, aut faciæ faciæ.' Thus it is the very physiognomy, the identical likeness. Comp. Artemid. On. ii. 7, where he says, κατατρίβεισθαι δὲ, καὶ ὁρᾶν τὴν ἑαυτοῦ εἰκόνα ὁμοίαν ἐν κατόπτρῳ, ἀγαθόν. It is strange that Dr. Peile should render καταρ. by 'fasteneth his gaze upon'; where the context requires quite the reverse,—namely, the καὶ οὐ ποιητῆς, οὗτος ἔοικεν ἀνδρὶ κατανοοῦντι τὸ πρόσωπον τῆς γενέσεως αὐτοῦ ἐν ἐσώπτρῳ <sup>24</sup> κατενόησε γὰρ ἑαυτὸν καὶ ἀπελήλυθε, καὶ εὐθέως ἐπελάβετο ὁποῖος ἦν. <sup>25</sup> Ὁ δὲ παρα- 2 Cor. 2. 12.

ch. 2. 12.
John 12. 17.
Luke 6. 47.
1 Pt. 24. 12.
ch. 2. 4.
1 Pet. 2. 10.
1 Pet. 12. 11.
12.
κίψας εἰς νόμον τέλειον τὸν τῆς ἐλευθερίας, καὶ παραμείνας, οὗτος, οὐκ ἀκροατῆς ἐπιλησμονῆς γενόμενος, ἀλλὰ ποιητῆς ἔργου, οὗτος μακάριος ἐν τῇ ποιήσει αὐτοῦ ἔσται. <sup>26</sup> Εἰ τις δοκεῖ mere looking at it, by a careless glance. Thus the words at v. 24 may be rendered, 'for he takes a peep at himself, and is off, straightway forgetting,' &c. Est. ably traces the gist of the comparison.

25. Here the Apostle contrasts with the case of the careless that of the attentive hearer, and, in the above-mentioned sense, κατανοοῦντι is antithetically opposed to παράκλινος, which, as it primarily signifies 'to stoop down, for the purpose of carefully looking at' (see Luke xxiv. 12. John xx. 5, 11), sometimes, as here, denotes simply 'to look at attentively;' see 1 Pet. i. 12, εἰς τὰ ἐπιθυμοῦσιν ἄγγελοι παράκλιναι. Here, however, there is, by an accommodation to the same metaphor (of a looking-glass) as in the foregoing sentence, the sense to look fixedly at a glass.—νόμον τέλειον τὸν τῆς ἐλευθερίας. Not meaning, as some explain, the Moral law, as opposed to the Ceremonial one; for that, however it may deserve such a title in itself, cannot give liberty to such as transgress it. Nor must we, with others, explain it 'the Gospel;' but rather, in a general sense, the law of Divine Revelation in the Gospel, which may truly be said to be the Law of Liberty, and that in various respects; 1. as being in itself of a free spirit, not burdened with alarish ceremonies; 2. as freeing those, who embrace it and fulfil it, at once from the burdensome observances of the Mosaic Law, and from bondage to the Law of sin in their members (Rom. vii. 23), liberating them from the curse of the broken Moral Law, and bringing them (as St. Paul says, Rom. viii. 21) from 'the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God;' see Rom. viii. 12—17. Gal. iv. 21, seqq. Heb. xii. 18, seq. This, then, is no other than what St. Paul, at Rom. viii. 2, calls 'the law of the spirit of life in Christ,' which 'hath made' us 'free from the law of sin and death.' Now this is here justly styled τέλειος, both as being perfect in itself, and in its character, as containing a perfect rule of life (see Pt. xix. 7. Rom. xii. 2); and also as making its votaries perfect, by repairing and restoring the defaced image of God, in which man was originally created. See Col. iii. 10. 2 Cor. iii. 18. This Law is represented as a mirror into which the Christian may look, to judge of his true spiritual character. By the term παράκλινος is denoted fixedness and permanency of attention.—ἀκροατῆς ἐπιλησμονῆς. Here ἐπιλησμονῆς is a Genit. sub. for adject. There is here an indirect opposition between ἔργον and λόγος, the sense, when fully evolved, being, 'not a hearer [only of the word], but a doer [of the deed] or work enjoined in the word.'—ἐν τῇ ποιήσει, scil. αὐτοῦ, 'by his doing [i. e. what the law enjoins].' Comp. Eccles. xix. 17, ποίησις νόμου.

26. The Apostle here brings the admonition close home to their bosoms, and that by drawing a marked line of distinction between true and feigned religion. Accordingly, he here—with reference, we may suppose, to certain persons among those whom he is addressing,—puts the case of one who has the reputation of piety (δοκεῖ ὁρθῶς εἶναι, on which form of expression see my note on Thucyd. i. 79, 1), and, as appears from what follows, 'thinketh himself,' but mistakingly, 'to be pious;' and who, moreover, doth not bridle his tongue, is not βραδὺν εἰς τὸ λαλῆσαι. This man's religion, it is said, is vain, and will profit him nothing. See my Lex. To advert to a matter of verbal criticism. The words ἐν ὅμῳ, not in A, B, C, and 5 cursives (I add Cov. 4, omitted by Mill), and almost all the Versions, were rejected by Matth. and Bengel, and have been removed from the text by Griesb., Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch., with some reason; for, though the words may seem confirmed by 1 Cor. iii. 18, εἰ τις δοκεῖ σοφὸς εἶναι ἐν ὅμῳ (sine v. lect.). James iii. 18, τίς σοφὸς καὶ ἐπιστάμενος ἐν ὅμῳ; ch. v. 13 & 14; yet these several passages only serve to render more probable the supposition that the words were introduced from the marginal scholia. More likely is it that they should have been added to the text than withdrawn from it. They may have been added, to make the sentiment more direct and personal; but they may have been removed, because not in their right place, which is in some ancient MSS. assigned to them. But it would seem that the Apostle did not use the words, in order that he might make the sentiment more general (and consequently more weighty), as supr. v. 19 & 23, εἰ τις ἀκροατῆς. Thus in 1 Cor. viii. 2, εἰ τις δοκεῖ ('seems to himself') εἰδέναι τι, the sentiment is left general for the same reason; and I am inclined to approve of what Tisch. has done in there cancelling the ἐγώ, from several of the best MSS., several Versions, and some Fathers; and the omission of the words there is confirmed by the passage here,—for, although two MSS. insert ἐγώ, which is adopted by Lachm., yet it plainly arose from certain correctors, who thought, as did the Vulg. and some other ancient Translators, that some Conjunction was wanting; not bearing in mind that such weighty sententiae as this, and 1 Cor. viii. 2, are by the best writers brought forward without being introduced by any Conjunction, whether continuative or otherwise. Exx. are not unfrequent in the Class. writers, especially Thucyd. and Aristot., and not a few occur in the New Test., e. g. James i. 19. 1 Tim. iv. 12, 19. 1 Thess. v. 15, 22. 1 Cor. vii. 12.—ἐπαυτὸν καρδίας is synonymous with the παράλογ. ἑαυτοῦ at ver. 22. By not bridling the tongue is meant, the giving loose to vain and frivolous, or boastful and slanderous, discourse. Of the metaphor in χαλῶναι, several examples are adduced by Wetstein.

θρησκος εἶναι [ἐν ὑμῖν], μὴ χαλινωγῶν ἡλώσσαν αὐτοῦ, ἀλλ' ἀπατῶν καρδίαν αὐτοῦ, τούτου μάταιος ἡ θρησκεία. <sup>27</sup> Ὁ θρησκεία καθαρὰ καὶ ἀμίαντος παρὰ [τῷ] Θεῷ καὶ Πατρὶ αὐτῇ ἐστὶν ἐπισκέπτεσθαι ὀρφανούς καὶ χήρας ἐν τῇ θλίψει αὐτῶν, ἄσπιλον ἑαυτὸν τηρεῖν ἀπὸ τοῦ κόσμου.

a Lev. 19. 15.
Deut. 1. 17.
& 16. 18.
3 Chron. 19.
7.
Prov. 24. 23.
& 26. 21.
Ecclus. 42. 1.
Matt. 23. 15.

II. <sup>1</sup> Ἀδελφοί μου, μὴ ἐν προσωποληψίαις ἔχετε τὴν πίστιν τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ τῆς δόξης. <sup>2</sup> ἐὰν γὰρ εἰσέλθῃ εἰς τὴν συναγωγὴν ὑμῶν ἀνὴρ χρυσοδακτύλιος ἐν ἐσθῇτι λαμπρᾷ, εἰσέλθῃ δὲ καὶ πτωχὸς ἐν ρυπαρᾷ ἐσθῇτι, <sup>3</sup> καὶ ἐπιβλέψῃτε ἐπὶ

27. θρησκεία καθαρὰ — ἐστὶν] Here, as Paley well remarks, the Apostle is describing religion, not in its principles, but in its effects. Having declared what religion is not, he now points out what it is. This, however (as Carpzov and Grot. observe), is not to be taken as a description of the whole of religion, but as an illustration of its nature and effects, by a reference to some of its principal duties, — beneficence and moral purity. See Matt. xxv. 34, seqq. — παρὰ τῷ Θεῷ καὶ Πατρὶ. Render: 'before God, even the Father.' 'Ἀμίαντος' is subjoined to καθαρὰ, both to strengthen the sense, and to correspond to the term ἄσπιλον in the next clause. On ἐπισκέπτεσθαι see note at Matt. xxv. 36. By the words following, ἄσπιλον ἑαυτὸν, &c., is meant the keeping oneself apart from the sinful pursuits, corrupt maxims, and evil customs of the world. See 1 John ii. 13—16. 2 Pet. ii. 18—20.

II. The connexion here is by Pott supposed to be with what immediately precedes, by a sort of illustration et contrario. But it is rather with the general subject of vv. 22—27 of the foregoing Chapter, — namely, the necessity of doing, and not merely hearing or believing the Gospel; implying the great truth, that the external part of religion is fruitless, when men live in the neglect of its moral duties. Indeed, the scope of this whole Chapter seems to be, that of further inculcating what was before said, on the necessity of doing, as well as professing. This the Apostle presses on their attention, by pointing out the breach of the duty in their general conduct, even when engaged in the performance of religious services: the poor being, in the places of Divine worship, treated with contumely, and elsewhere suffered to starve, and their miseries only visited with faint good wishes. Accordingly, the first part of this Chapter (vv. 1—13) is occupied in animadverting on their breach of the most important of the works of the Gospel law, — Christian love in its widest sense. This serves to introduce, in the second part (v. 14, fin.), a serious warning against an error prevalent in that age (almost general, indeed, amongst the Jews, and which also might lead to the neglect of other moral duties, as well as charity), — namely, that a speculative belief of the doctrines of the Gospel was sufficient to save men, however deficient they might be in those moral duties which it enjoins. He then proceeds to show the emptiness of such faith, and consequently its inadequacy to salvation, by some plain and familiar examples, tending to evince that moral actions are the only sure evidence of a true and well principled faith, and that where these do not exist, all else is valueless.

1. μὴ ἐν προσωποληψίαις, &c.] From the above introductory remarks, it is clear that μὴ here is not (as some suppose it) interrogative, but prohibitive. And of the expression ἐν προσωποληψίαις ἔχειν τὴν πίστιν, the true sense seems to be, 'Do not so hold the faith of Christ, as to show respect of persons.' This plural use of the word προσωποληψία is, indeed, very rare, — perhaps no where else occurring, — inasmuch that one might suspect the ε to have arisen from the ε following, and, indeed, a few MSS. have it not. But probably that was only an emendation; and the common reading is defended by 2 Pet. iii. 11, ἐν ἀγλαῖς ἀναστροφαῖς καὶ εὐσεβείαις, and Col. iii. 22, μὴ ἐν ὀφθαλμοδουλείαις. Moreover, as Hottinger here observes, the plural use of abstract nouns substantive is found in good writers, — namely, 'ubi not. tam notio generalis, quam res vel eventa singularia significantur.' — τῆς δόξης may be construed with πίστιν before; but it is better joined with τοῦ Κυρίου; by which it will stand for ἐνδόξου, as in similar expressions at 1 Cor. ii. 8. Heb. ix. 5. Acts vii. 2. Eph. i. 17. And so ἐν δόξῃ at 2 Cor. iii. 9.

2. ἐὰν γὰρ εἰσέλθῃ] This is intended to illustrate by example what was meant by ἐν προσ. ἔχ. τὴν πίστιν. — τὴν συναγωγὴν ὑμῶν. From what is said at vv. 4, 6, 9, some Expositors would render this, not 'your place of worship,' but 'your judicial assemblies;' such being, they say, by a Jewish custom, held in the places of worship. Yet of the word συναγωγή to signify of itself a judicial assembly, no example has been adduced. Such, however, may be included, if the term be taken to denote (what it very well may) a place of assembly, whether for worship, or for judicial purposes. On either of which occasions this προσωποληψία would be alike improper. Certain it is that συναγωγή was sometimes used to denote a Christian place of worship; as, indeed, might be expected; the term being, in its peculiar convenience, likely to be retained, with other similar ones, by the Jewish Christians. And here, it may be observed, the singular is used generally for the plural. — ἀνὴρ χρυσοδακτύλιος, meaning (like χρυσόχειρ in Lucian) one who wears rings on his fingers, as the rich generally did. The word is no where else found, but it is formed analogically, like χρυσοπλάκαμος, &c. — λαμπρᾷ. 'splendid,' 'sumptuous' (so Rev. xviii. 14, τὰ λαμπρὰ), — namely, as opposed to the term following, ρ. παρὰ, shabby; as the word is used in Joa. Ant. vii. 11, & ρ. πακοῖν ἐσθῆτα.

τὸν φοροῦντα τὴν ἐσθῆτα τὴν λαμπράν, καὶ εἶπητε αὐτῷ· Σὺ κάθου ὧδε καλῶς, καὶ τῷ πτωχῷ εἶπητε· Σὺ στήθι ἐκεῖ, ἢ κάθου ὧδε ὑπὸ τὸ ὑποπόδιόν μου <sup>4</sup> καὶ οὐ διεκρίθητε ἐν ἑαυτοῖς, καὶ ἐγένεσθε κριταὶ διαλογισμῶν πονηρῶν ; <sup>5</sup> ὁ ἄκουσατε, ἀδελφοί μου ἀγαπητοί· οὐχ ὁ Θεὸς ἐξελέξατο τοὺς πτωχοὺς τοῦ κόσμου [τούτου], πλουσίους ἐν πίστει, καὶ κληρονόμους τῆς βασιλείας, ἧς ἐπηγγείλατο τοῖς ἀγαπῶσιν αὐτόν ; <sup>6</sup> ὑμεῖς δὲ ἡτιμάσατε τὸν πτωχόν. Οὐχ οἱ πλούσιοι καταδυναστεύουσιν ὑμῶν, καὶ αὐτοὶ ἔλκουσιν ὑμᾶς εἰς κριτήρια ; <sup>7</sup> οὐκ αὐτοὶ βλασφημοῦσι

3. ἐπιβλέψατε ἐπὶ] i. e. 'look upon with respect and favour,' like the Latin inspicere.—καλῶς is for ἐν καλῷ, 'in a good place.' So Lucian, Ver. Hist. ii. 13, καλῶς ἐκάθισιν.

4. καὶ οὐ διεκρίθητε—πονηρῶν:] On the construction and sense of this passage some difference of opinion exists. One thing is certain, that the sentence is interrogative; for by understanding it declaratively, the sense arising will be most frigid and forced. As to the sense, not a little disputed, some Expositors take it to mean, 'ye are in doubt, or hesitation.' But there is no reason to abandon the sense assigned by the ancient and most modern Expositors, 'are ye not partial?' i. e. 'do ye not, then, make partial distinctions;' and, by implication, 'acting on wrong estimates, and passing rash, if not unjust, decisions?'—ἐν ἑαυτοῖς is for ἐν ἀλλήλοις, or ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ ὑμῶν, as Mark xi. 23. The words καὶ (οὐκ) ἐγένεσθε κριταὶ διαλογισμῶν πονηρῶν are explanatory of the foregoing; and the Genitive here is one not of object, but, by Hebraism, put for our attributions; q. d. 'are ye not judges who surmise evil,' (as it is said, Matt. ix. 4, ἰσχυρὶ ὑμῶν ἐνθυμησθε πονηρὰ ἐν ταῖς καρδίαις ὑμῶν:) who form your judgments on erroneous reasonings and false estimates? viz. by judging of any one's worth by his outward appearance; in short, that kind of judgment against which Christ himself warns, John vii. 24, 'Judge not according to the appearance, but judge ye righteous judgment.'

5—7. The Apostle now convicts them at once of impiety and of folly by this unjust preference; showing that the class of persons whom they despise are espec. objects of God's favour; while they whom they thus prefer, are those by whom Christ's followers are espec. oppressed.

5. οὐχ ὁ Θεὸς ἐξελέξατο τοὺς πτωχοὺς, &c.] This choice, and the favour which it implies, are to be understood only as that resulting from the better disposition towards the Gospel evinced by the class in question, from their not being entangled in the temptations which beset the rich. The term ἐξελ. is, however, not to be so understood, as to imply respect of persons; for that would suppose, on the part of God, no other than what is reprobated in men. See Calv.—τοῦ κόσμου τούτου. I am now of opinion that τούτου may have come from the margin, where it was supplied in order to more fully develop the sense. And, indeed, propriety might seem to require it, since there is an opposition between this world and that to come. Accordingly, had τούτου been written, it could never have been purposely cancelled; but it was not unlikely to be in the margin, and so to have come into the text. As to the reading τῷ κόσμῳ, adopted by Lachm. and Tisch., from A, B, C, but no cursives, external authority is too slender to warrant its reception; espec. since internal evidence is not in its favour. Considering its existence in so very few MSS., all of one family, it may have arisen from error of scribes, who oft. confound ov and ω: or it may have arisen from Critics, who stumbled at the construction, though justified by 1 Cor. i. 27,—and thus brought in what was more perspicuous in expression,—'poor in the sight of the world,' as Dr. Peile renders; though I see not how the words are susceptible of that sense. As for the construction of πλουσίων, it is not so much in opposition to πτωχῶν, 'as there is,' observes Peile, 'the proleptic use of the Accus. (Jelf's Gr. Gr. § 439, 2), setting forth the effect of the verb ἐξελέξ.,' q. d. 'Hath not God chosen those who are poor as regards this world (such as the world calls poor) to be rich in respect of Faith?' I find this confirmed by Est., 'Sensus est, Deum elegisse et vocasse pauperes hujus sæculi, ut faceret eos divites caterisque donis spiritualibus divites?' He further remarks, that the Apostle says, ἀγαπῶσιν, not πιστεύουσιν, 'ne quis fide otiosus, et dilectionis vacuus, regnum sibi polliceretur.' Of course, by 'the loving' must be meant 'the practically loving,' by observing his precepts; as our Lord himself says, John xiv. 21, ὁ ἔχων τὰς ἐντολὰς μου καὶ τηρῶν αὐτάς, ἰκινῶς ἵστιν ὁ ἀγαπῶν με. That the Apostle had this passage in his mind there can be no doubt.

6. ὑμεῖς δὲ ἡτιμάσατε τὸν πτωχόν] 'Whereas ye regard not the poor man,' = 'treat him with disdain.' Comp. Theogn. 621, πᾶς τις πλούσιον ἀνδρᾷ τιμᾷ, ἀτίμῳ δὲ πτωχόν. 'This was,' as Dr. Peile observes, 'the crying sin of the ante-Christian times, both among the Heathens and the Jews' (see John vii. 48, 49, and notes); and the old leaven of Pharisaic pride and exclusiveness, though with Christian profession, had not availed to purge it out. 'Are not the rich those who lord it over you? are not they the persons who haul you into the courts of justice? are not they the persons who blaspheme, defame, or profane the honoured name [of the Redeemer] pronounced over you [at baptism]?' namely, by calling Him impostor. It is well observed by Calv., that this is not said to incite them to avenge themselves on the rich (for that were contrary to their Christian profession); but it is merely mentioned in order to set forth the unreasonableness of their conduct in thus paying court to their oppressors, and alighting their no injury.

d Lev. 19. 15. τὸ καλὸν ὄνομα τὸ ἐπικληθὲν ἐφ' ὑμᾶς; <sup>8</sup> εἰ μὲν τοι νόμον Matt. 22. 39. τελεῖτε βασιλικόν, κατὰ τὴν γραφὴν Ἀγαπήσεις τὸν πλη-Mark 12. 31. σίον σου ὡς σεαυτὸν, καλῶς ποιεῖτε <sup>9</sup> εἰ δὲ προσωπο-
 Rom. 13. 8. ληπτέιτε, ἁμαρτίαν ἐργάζεσθε, ἐλεγχόμενοι ὑπὸ τοῦ νόμου ὡς 2. Gal. 3. 12. παραβάται. <sup>10</sup> Ὅστις γὰρ ὄλον τὸν νόμον τηρήσει, πταίσει e Lev. 19. 15. δὲ ἐν ἐν, γέγονε πάντων ἔνοχος. <sup>11</sup> εἰ γὰρ εἰπὼν Μὴ μοι-Deut. 1. 17. χεύσης, εἶπε καὶ Μὴ φονεύσης· εἰ δὲ οὐ μοιχεύσεις, φονεύ-2. 18. 15. σεις δὲ, γέγονας παραβάτης νόμου. <sup>12</sup> οὕτω λαλεῖτε καὶ οὕτω f Deut. 27. ποιεῖτε, ὡς διὰ νόμου ἐλευθερίας μέλλοντες κρίνεσθαι. <sup>13</sup> ἡ γὰρ
 28. κρίσις ἀνίλεως τῷ μὴ ποιήσαντι ἔλεος [καὶ] κατακαυχᾶται ἔλεος Matt. 5. 19. κρίσεως.

k Matt. 7. 28. <sup>14</sup> τί τὸ ὄφελος, ἀδελφοί μου, ἐὰν πίστιν λέγῃ τις ἔχειν, ἔργα
 ch. 1. 22.

8. The Apostle now shows that this respect of persons involves a violation of the Law; here urging what is not only a positive injunction of that Law, but what forms a fundamental principle of all Divine law, and consequently extends to the Gospel likewise; for the best Expositors are agreed that the term βασιλικός, as it often denotes what is principal, or eminently good and excellent (thus Plato says, τὸ μὲν ὀρθὸν νόμος ἐστὶ βασιλικός, and in Jos. Bell. iii. 10, 8, the term βασιλική is used in the sense præstantissima), so it is here applied to this maxim, as being what Christ, Matt. xxii. 38, calls the πρώτη καὶ μεγάλη ἐντολή, and St. Paul, Rom. xiii. 10, and Gal. v. 14, designates as the πλήρωμα νόμου; with reference to the superior obligation and pre-eminence of this precept, as governing all the other duties to our neighbour.

9. εἰ δὲ προσωποληπτέιτε, &c.] q. d. 'But if ye have respect to persons [spec. if ye are partial to your own persons] that is not well,—nay, ye commit sin, being, indeed, convicted by the law as transgressors.' By the law is here meant the law just mentioned, or such others as more particularly forbade respect of persons, as Lev. xix. 15. Now any one may be popularly said to be convicted by a law, when he acts contrary to its injunctions.

10. ὅστις γὰρ—ἔνοχος] Πάντων ἔνοχος is for ἔνοχος κρίματι πάντων; meaning, 'is amenable to condemnation as a breaker of the whole body of the Law,' and consequently his punishment will be proportioned to his offence. On the proper force of the term ἔνοχος see note at Matt. xxvi. 66. 1 Cor. xi. 27. Here, then, the Apostle goes yet further, and affirms that he who thus offends against the particular law in question will be condemned as a transgressor of the Divine law in general, and thereby be obnoxious to the punishment of transgression; for 'who he who keepeth, or endeavours to keep, the whole of the Law, except in one point (and especially if that be against the scope of the whole), wherein he deliberately, presumptuously, and habitually offends (for the argument itself implies these limitations), he is adjudged to punishment as a transgressor of the law, quite as much as if he had broken all its precepts.' Now it was an acknowledged principle among the Jewish casuists, that the wilful breach of one law of a body of laws involves a transgression of the whole; and accordingly the Apostle here means to say, that the same is applicable to the laws of the Christian code. And, in the present case, he who offends in one point may espec. be pronounced guilty, inasmuch as the one point concerns Christian charity, 'on which hang all the law and the Prophets'; see Matt. xxii. 40.

11. This verse serves to explain and illustrate what was said in the preceding; the reason of the thing, q. d. 'He is one who made the whole law; therefore whosoever offends in any one particular, whatever it may be, offends against God himself, and so is guilty of the non-obscurrence of the whole Law.—γέγονας παραβάτης νόμου, meaning (as Bp. Middl. explains), 'Thou art a violator of that morality which the whole and every part of the Law was designed to promote.'

12, 13. Of these verses, v. 12 contains a general admonition, founded, by way of inference, and that followed up at ver. 13, by a particular denunciation, serving for exemplification. The inference in question is (as Aretius observes) this: 'therefore our lives and conversation are to be so framed that we may be judged according to the law of love.'

12. οὕτω λαλεῖτε καὶ οὕτω, &c.] The word κρίνεσθαι here is very emphatic; q. d. 'you are to be judged by the law of liberty, of which you boast; it being shown (as Bp. Middl. remarks) that the παραβάτης νόμου does not act as one who shall be judged by the law of liberty. The general sense, then, seems to be that expressed by Dr. Burton: 'Do not be so fond of talking of your law of liberty, as if you might act as you pleased; but rather remember, that you will be judged by this law of liberty.' The νόμος ἐλευθερίας here spoken of is that of which mention was made supra i. 25, where see note. Moreover, διὰ νόμον is for κατὰ νόμον. The γὰρ, ver. 13, has reference to a clause omitted; q. d. '[And remember how you exercise judgment on earth;] for,' &c. These two clauses, ἡ γὰρ κρίσις—κρίσεις, have in them an adagio air; and of the term κατακαυχᾶται the sense seems to be that expressed by Vater, 'non solum latatur, sed confidenter expectat;' meaning (by a use of κατὰ found in Thucyd. iii. 83), 'has not the least fear of judgment;' which must, however, be limited in the present application, to import, that pity shown to others, as it were, disarms severe judgment.

δὲ μὴ ἔχῃ; μὴ δύναται ἡ πίστις σῶσαι αὐτόν; 15 Ἐὰν δὲ <sup>1 Luke 8. 11.</sup> <sup>1 John 8. 17.</sup> ἀδελφὸς ἢ ἀδελφὴ γυμνοὶ ὑπάρχωσι, καὶ λειπόμενοι ὡς τῆς ἐφημέρου τροφῆς, 16 εἶπη δὲ τις αὐτοῖς ἐξ ὧν “Τπάγετε <sup>m 1 John 8. 16—18.</sup> ἐν εἰρήνῃ, θερμαίνεσθε καὶ χορτάζεσθε,”—μὴ δώτε δὲ αὐτοῖς τὰ ἐπιτήδεια τοῦ σώματος· τί τὸ ὀφελος; 17 οὕτω καὶ ἡ πίστις, εἰ μὴ ἔργα ἔχῃ, νεκρά ἐστὶ καθ’ ἑαυτήν. 18 Ἄλλ’ ἐρεῖ τις· <sup>2 ch. 2. 18.</sup> <sup>3 Math. 7. 17.</sup> <sup>Rom. 8. 1.</sup> <sup>4 Cor. 8. 17.</sup> <sup>5 2. 1.</sup> <sup>6 Thess. 1. 2—18.</sup> Σὺ πίστιν ἔχεις, κἀγὼ ἔργα ἔχω· δείξον μοι τὴν πίστιν σου· † ἐκ τῶν ἔργων σου, κἀγὼ δείξω σοι ἐκ τῶν ἔργων μου τὴν πίστιν

14—26. The Apostle now reverts back to the subject treated of supr. i. 22—27, that they should ‘be not hearers only, but doers of the word;’ thereby showing that all but practical religion is vain and ineffectual for salvation. And here he glances at a kindred subject,—the error of those who (falling into the Jewish notion, that the profession of a covenanted religion was sufficient, without suitable practice,—and perverting the Gospel doctrine of justification by faith) maintained, that faith alone without works would avail for salvation. By the supposed case of one thus professing to have faith, but at the same time being destitute of works, he shows that such a faith will be utterly unavailable for salvation; and at vv. 15, 16 he illustrates this intuity by a familiar comparison, and one bearing upon the very failure in question. The whole passage is espec. appealed to by some writers who are opposed to the Scriptural doctrine of Justification by Faith; and also by others, who endeavour from hence to support views which involve the doctrine of a mixed Justification. In refutation of which view, and in proof of the virtual harmony of the doctrines of the two Apostles, St. Paul and St. James, the reader is referred, besides the notes on the following passage, to some remarks on this important subject in the Introduction to this Epistle, and espec. to a masterly passage of Bp. Hopkins there cited.

16. ὑπάγετε ἐν εἰρήνῃ, &c.] Forms of expression constituting such sort of common-place expressions of good will, as similar ones in Homer, Odys. vi. 207, πρὸς γὰρ Διὸς εἰσὶν ἔπαρτες Ζεῖνοί τε Πηλεΐδαι τε, and Menand. ap. Stob. Serm. p. 512, Gesn., Ἀσὶ νομίζουσθ’ οἱ πίνοντες τῶν θεῶν. The inference is, ‘As good words, even if accompanied by good will, do not profit the distressed; so neither does faith, without works, benefit the believer; it is of itself dead; i. e. utterly without effect; resembling good words to the poor, unattended with actual relief.’—τὰ ἐπιτήδεια τοῦ σώματος. This is for the purer Grecism, τὰ περὶ τοῦ σώματος. So Artem. i. 77, ἡ γὰρ τὸ σῶμα τὸ ἑαυτῆς τινὶ παρέχουσα, ἐκδίδωκε καὶ τὰ περὶ τὸ σῶμα παρέχοι αὐν.

18. ἀλλ’ ἰπρὶ τις, &c.] A passage which, with the appearance of plainness, has not a little embarrassed Expositors, both ancient and modern. And here, as in other cases of difficulty and perplexity, not a few various readings exist. Of these may be especially noticed that remarkable one, by which, instead of the lectio recepta ἐκ, many MSS. and most of the ancient Versions have χωρὶς, which has been adopted by almost all Critics, and edited by Griesb., Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch. According to this the Apostle is supposed to prove the necessity of good works, by showing the impossibility of evincing the existence of faith without them; q. d. (ironically) ‘Show me now the excellence of thy faith [if thou canst] without works.’ I will not believe that the faith of which thou boastest is worthy of the name, unless thou show it me in re, and by thy deeds. Yet this reading, as it is inferior to the other in external authority, so also is it in internal evidence; for far more likely is it that ἐκ should have been altered to χωρὶς, than χωρὶς to ἐκ; espec. considering the occurrence of χωρὶς at ver. 20. That χωρὶς, the plainer, should be purposely altered to ἐκ, the more difficult, reading, were in the highest degree improbable; and utterly impossible is it that χωρὶς could be accidentally altered to ἐκ, any more than ἐκ to χωρὶς. In short, the reading in question is, Matthæi thinks, a mere ‘correctio arguta,’ or ingenious mode of removing the difficulty of the passage. To reject, then, a reading so strongly attested as ἐκ, were unwarrantable, unless it could be shown to yield either no sense, or one utterly unsuitable, which is by no means the case; for while it yields a sense equally good in itself and suitable to the context as χωρὶς, it is superior to it in weight of sentiment and pointedness of expression; q. d., in the words of Theile, ‘Nay, rather to such a person any one might well say, Now then thou hast faith, and I have works; now show me thy faith, if thou canst, namely, from thy works; and I could most easily show thee from my works any faith.’—On carefully reconsidering, for my ninth Edition, this perplexing question, I am of opinion that the t. rec. is untenable. It is impossible to extract from it any suitable sense, without doing great violence to the words; even Dr. Peile’s defence of it, however clever, is but special pleading; and his own version is liable to the same objection as those of others. However, while χωρὶς yields exactly the sense which the context calls for, how it could ever have been changed into ἐκ, it is not easy to see. Hence I cannot help suspecting that ἐκ, if not the true reading, is founded upon it; and I have little doubt, that the Apostle wrote ἐκτὸς ἔργων, sine operibus, and that ἐκτὸς, being written abbreviatim, was, by some scribe, taken as put for ἐκ, espec. considering that ἐκ τῶν ἔργων occurs in the next clause. In most, however, of the early MSS. χωρὶς, it seems, had place, which prob. arose from a very ancient gloss, for this use of ἐκτὸς in the sense sine is very unusual. It may, indeed, be urged that χωρὶς is used at v. 20. But the Apostle might here use ἐκτὸς, for the sake of the correctio turn which it imparts,—namely, free from works, being unburdened by them. Such also is

μον. 19<sup>ο</sup> Σὺ πιστεύεις ὅτι ὁ Θεὸς εἷς ἐστι; Καλῶς ποιεῖς· καὶ τὰ δαιμόνια πιστεύουσι, καὶ φρίσσουνσι. 20 Θέλεις δὲ γινῶναι, ὦ ἄνθρωπε κενέ, ὅτι ἡ πίστις χωρὶς τῶν ἔργων νεκρά ἐστίν; 21 Ῥ' Αβραὰμ ὁ πατὴρ ἡμῶν οὐκ ἐξ ἔργων ἐδικαιώθη, ἀνευέγκας 22 Ἰσαὰκ, τὸν υἱὸν αὐτοῦ ἐπὶ τὸ θυσιαστήριον; 23<sup>α</sup> Βλέπεις ὅτι ἡ πίστις συνήργει τοῖς ἔργοις αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐκ τῶν ἔργων ἡ πίστις ἐτελειώθη; 23<sup>β</sup> καὶ ἐπληρώθη ἡ γραφή ἡ λέγουσα· Ἐπίστευσε δὲ Ἀβραὰμ τῷ Θεῷ, καὶ ἐλογίσθη αὐτῷ εἰς δικαιοσύνην καὶ φίλος Θεοῦ ἐκλήθη. 24 Ὁράτε [τοῖνυν] ὅτι ἐξ the use of ἐκτός in Plato, p. 22, ἐκτός ὦν τοῦ φθόνου, and p. 188, ἐκτός τοῦ γαλοῦν ἰστώντι. And so Hdol. iv. 13, 3, and Soph. Ant. 4, have ἐκτός ἀτης. Indeed, ἐκ and ἐκτ' (ἐκτός) have been elsewh. confounded by the scribes, e. g. in Xen. Hipp. vii. 4, and Apol. 4. Nor is this the only passage in the N. T. where χωρίς has been obtruded into the text of MSS. by way of gloss for ἐκτός. Thus at 2 Cor. xii. 3 we have, in all the MSS. but three (B, D, E), εἰτε ἐν σώματι εἰτε ἐκτός τοῦ σώματος, for which those three have χωρίς τοῦ σώμ. And, though in that passage Lachm. and Tisch. have admitted χωρίς into the text, there cannot be the least doubt that it was either a mere gloss of the Scholiasts, or an emendation of certain Critics who wished for a more exact term. I have little doubt that some MSS. will yet be found that have ἐκτός. Indeed Est. (after Valerius) attests that there are such. He adds that the Pesch. Syr. and Vulg. (and he might have added the Ethiop.) Translators had that reading in their MSS.; which is quite probable; and yet he omits to avail himself of this clue to find his way out of the difficulty, and rejects ἐκτός, on the ground that it no where is used in the sense sine in Scripture, forgetting the above-cited passage of 2 Cor.

19. σὺ πιστεύεις—φρίσσουνσι] Here we have an illustration of the position at ver. 17. To show the vanity of such a faith as does not influence the conduct, the Apostle adverts to the fundamental article of all true religion, the existence of one God, the only object of worship, as distinguished from the worship paid to idols,—a doctrine held alike by the Jews and the heterodox Christians here alluded to. By the belief here spoken of is to be understood a merely speculative and inoperative belief; such an involuntary belief as even the demons entertain, who, we know, confessed Jesus to be the Christ, the Son of God. See Luke iv. 41.

20. The Apostle now proceeds to confirm the above assertion from Scripture.—ἀσθρόνα κενί, 'foolish man.' An address, like others of our Lord and of St. Paul, used by any one when inculcating that of which the truth is so obvious, as scarcely to require proof; but also employed in cases of grave and just reprehension.—ὅτι ἡ πίστις χωρὶς τῶν ἔργων νεκρά ἐστίν. An apophthegm which may be illustrated from the arts of common life, in which theory is dead (i. e. useless) if not carried into practice.—νεκρά ἐστίν. The Vat. MS. and two others, the Sahidic and Arm. Versions, and some MSS. of the Vulg., have ἀργή, which has been received into the text by Lachm. and Tisch. But see my note on Rom. ii. 14. It has certainly the appearance of being a mere gloss, or an easier reading. Νεκρά thus used is meant to signify fruitless, producing nothing, like a dead tree; comp. 2 Pet. i. 8, οὐκ ἀργοὺς οὐδὲ ἀκάρπους.

21. In proof and illustration of the foregoing assertion, of the necessity of good works to a true justifying faith, the Apostle adduces the examples of Abraham and of Rahab. Ἀντιτίκας is well rendered by Prof. Scholeff., 'in offering up,' i. e. in being ready to offer him; for it is always regarded in Scripture as a real sacrifice. Abraham's justification by faith had, indeed, taken place long before this offering up of his son, and, as the Professor observes, 'all that this action did towards it was supplying the evidence of the nature of the faith by which he was justified.' For a complete refutation of the discrepancy which at first seems to subsist between St. James and St. Paul on faith and works, the reader is referred to the Introduction and Bp. Bull's Harm. Apost. Suffice it here to say, with Wesley, 'there is no contradiction between the Apostles; because, 1. they do not speak of the same faith; St. Paul speaking of living faith,—St. James here of dead faith: 2. they do not speak of the same works; St. Paul speaking of works antecedent to faith,—St. James, of works subsequent to it.'

22. ἡ πίστις σ. τ. ἰ. α.] 'his faith wrought with his works;' i. e. was subservient to the production of them: a rare use of συνεργεῖν, but of which examples are adduced from Philo. Καὶ ἐκ τῶν ἔργων—εἰτελ., 'and by works his faith was rendered complete,' made available to justification by actual obedience. See 2 Cor. xii. 9.

23. ἐπληρώθη] meaning, as Abp. Newe, explains, 'was thus more fully verified,' though it was equally true at the time it was spoken. Ἐκλήθη, 'he was regarded,' accounted as. At φίλος Θεοῦ the Article is here not used, because φίλος Θεοῦ forms a title. The expression is used with allusion to what occurs in 2 Chron. xx. 7, and Isa. xli. 8, 'the seed of Abraham, my friend.' The title is ascribed to Abraham, not so much because God frequently appeared to and conversed with him, as because he entered into a covenant of perpetual friendship with him and his seed. See Gen. xxii. 16.

24. 'Here we have,' as Dr. Burton says, 'the conclusion, "Ye see, therefore, that works may contribute to show a man's justification, and the act of faith is not the only thing which proves it;"' a conclusion so suitable, and even necessary, that we cannot but censure the rashness of Lachm. and Tisch. in cutting it out, on the auἔργων δικαιοῦται ἄνθρωπος, καὶ οὐκ ἐκ πίστεως μόνον; <sup>25</sup> *Ὁμοίως δὲ καὶ Ῥαὰβ ἡ πόρνη οὐκ ἐξ ἔργων ἐδικαιώθη ὑποδεξαμένη τοὺς ἀγγέλους, καὶ ἑτέρα ὁδῷ ἐκβαλοῦσα; <sup>26</sup> Ὡς περ γὰρ τὸ σῶμα χωρὶς πνεύματος νεκρὸν ἐστίν, οὕτω καὶ ἡ πίστις χωρὶς τῶν ἔργων νεκρά ἐστίν.

III. <sup>1</sup> *Μὴ πολλοὶ διδάσκαλοι γίνεσθε, ἀδελφοί μου, εἰδότες ὅτι μείζων κρίμα ληφύμεθα· <sup>2</sup> *πολλὰ γὰρ πταίομεν ἅπαντες. Εἴ τις ἐν λόγῳ οὐ πταίει, οὗτος τέλειος ἀνὴρ δυνατὸς χαλιναγωγεῖσαι καὶ ὅλον τὸ σῶμα. <sup>3</sup> *<sup>c</sup> Ἰδὲ, τῶν ἵππων τοὺς χαλινούς εἰς τὰ στόματα βάλλομεν πρὸς τὸ πείθεσθαι αὐτοὺς ἡμῖν, καὶ

a Matt. 7. 1.
b Matt. 23. 8.
c Rom. 2. 20.
d 21.
e Eccles. 7. 20.
f Prov. 20. 9.
g Eccles. 14. 1.
h & 19. 18.
i & 20. 11.
j Matt. 12. 37.
k ch. 1. 22.
l 1 Pet. 3. 10.
m Ps. 32. 2.

thority of a very few MSS., unaware, it seems, of the fact, that Particles, espec. οὐν, are oft. omitted through the carelessness of scribes, ignorant sometimes of the abbreviation by which they are often expressed.

<sup>25, 26.</sup> ἡ πόρνη] On the sense of this term see note at Heb. xi. 31. Ὑποδ., 'by having received into her house.' Ἐκβαλ., 'by having put them forth,' sent them away: a sense occurring in Matt. ix. 25. Ἐτέρα ὁδῷ, i.e. by a different way from that by which they had entered,—namely, by the wall. By being justified it is meant that she was justified in the same way as was Abraham,—namely, by works proceeding from faith, and also by faith made perfect by works. The same conclusion, therefore, as that expressed at ver. 24, is here implied, with a striking similitude employed to enforce it, namely, that as a lifeless corpse is not a man, so the faith which does not produce good works, is only the dead carcass of faith, and not the living and genuine Christian faith. It is not vital, and therefore fails of leading to salvation. Of τῶν ἔργων, works considered as the fruits of faith, the best comment is the parallel passage of Gal. v. 6, where see note, and espec. the passage of Theophrastus there cited.

III. On the connexion here much has been written, but little determined; and indeed some have thought there is none. It should seem that the purpose of the Chapter is to further develop the admonition supra i. 19, 'let every man be slow to speak;' the Apostle meaning thus to repress their too great fondness for talking rather than acting,—and espec. when the vice showed itself, as it too often did, by persons setting up for teachers, though without the proper qualifications for the office.

1. μὴ πολλοὶ διδάσκαλοι γίνεσθε] This may be considered as a popular and familiar mode of expression, for 'let there not be among you a πολυδιδασκαλία.' By teachers we are to understand not so much public ministers, as private instructors and monitors in religion. In giving the reason why they should avoid this evil, the Apostle, waving higher considerations, only adverts to what may be called a motive of interest—'knowing that we [who are teachers] will be called to a stricter account than others, and, if found wanting, incur severer punishment.'

2. πολλὰ γὰρ πταίομεν ἅπαντες] Γὰρ refers to a clause omitted; q. d. '[And reason have we to fear we may be found deficient:] for in many respects we all err by speaking hastily, inconsiderately, and rashly;' lit. 'tripping in one's speech.' I doubt not that St. James had in mind Sirach xxv. 8, μακάριος—ὃς ἂν ἐν γλώσσῃ οὐκ ὀλισθήσῃ, 'doth not slip in his speech.' Implying that 'as all persons are liable to committing faults, so they who take upon themselves the office of teaching, make their liability the greater.' In the next words the Apostle enforces the caution in question, from the difficulty of governing the tongue,—adverting to one especial error into which persons, who set up for teachers, mostly run,—namely, that of too great vehemence of speech and bitterness of censure, or, in some way or other, 'speaking unadvisedly with their lips.'—εἴ τις ἐν λόγῳ οὐ πταίει, οὗτος, &c., meaning, 'If any one, indeed, offend not in speech, he is [comparatively] a perfect man; able, we may presume, [if he can govern his tongue,] to hold in subjection the other members of the body likewise;' i.e. all his appetites and passions; and 'thereby,' as Benson observes, 'he will be best able to instruct the ignorant, and rebuke the guilty.' That the assertion of the Apostle is to be understood with the above due qualification, is evident at once from the very nature of the thing, and from the whole tenour of what the Apostle is saying; from which it appears that no one comes at all near to perfection, properly speaking. Consequently, by the term perfect is to be understood in such a kind and degree of completeness as human frailty permits.

3, 4. Here we have the importance of this government of the tongue illustrated by two similitudes, in which it is shown that, as we manage the most untractable horses by bridles, ver. 3, and steer ships, even in the midst of storms, by means of a small helm,—ver. 4, so the tongue is a little member,—yet boasting great things, ver. 5. That such is its power, is further shown at vv. 6—10; from which it follows, that he who is able to govern his tongue, is able to govern his bodily passions too: thus evincing, that 'little things can effect great objects.'

3 ἰδὲ, τῶν ἵππων, &c.] q. d. 'He who has a proper controul over his tongue can govern his whole body, just as he who holds a horse by the bridle governs and turns about his whole body.' Comp. Pa. xxxii. 9, Sept., which was prob. here had in view by the Apostle. This twofold analogy of a horse and of a ship may be the more easily accounted for by considering that the ancient Greek Class. writers often institute comparisons 'de re equestri et re nauticā.' So Eurip. Hippol. 1216, ἥρπας' ἥντας χερσὶν, 'Ελακε δὲ, κάπην ὥστε ναυβέτης ἀνὴρ.

δλον τὸ σῶμα αὐτῶν μετάγομεν. <sup>4</sup> Ἰδοὺ καὶ τὰ πλοῖα, τηλεκαῦτα ὄντα, καὶ ὑπὸ σκληρῶν ἀνέμων ἐλαυνόμενα, μετώγεται ὑπὸ ἐλαχίστου πηδαλίου, ὅπου ἂν ἡ ὁρμὴ τοῦ εὐθύνοντος βοῦληται· <sup>5</sup> οὕτως καὶ ἡ γλῶσσα μικρὸν μέλος ἐστὶ, καὶ μεγαλυνεῖ. Ἰδοὺ ὀλίγον πῦρ ἥλικην ὕλην ἀνάπτει! <sup>6</sup> καὶ ἡ γλῶσσα πῦρ, ὃ κόσμος τῆς ἀδικίας. οὕτως ἡ γλῶσσα καθίσταται ἐν τοῖς μέλεσιν ἡμῶν, ἡ σπιλοῦσα δλον τὸ σῶμα, καὶ φλογίζουσα

4 Ps. 12. 3, 4.
67. 9, 10.
Prov. 12. 18.
Eccl. 12. 2.
e Prov. 12. 1.
d 16. 27.
e 26. 30, 31.
Isa. 30. 27.
Matth. 12. 11, 12, 13.

4. Ἰδοὺ καὶ τὰ πλοῖα—ὕπο ἐλαχίστου πηδαλίου] So Aristot. oars, Quæst. Mech. 1. v., μεγίστη πλοίων κινεῖται ὑπὸ μικροῦ οἰακος.—μετώγεται, 'are moved about'; a very rare idiom, for the Class. περιάγεται, which I can find no where else except in Schol. on Hom. Od. ix., where he explains πόδα ὑπὸς by τὸν μεταγωγόν τὸ πηδάλιον.—ὅπου ἂν ἡ ὁρμὴ, &c. The word ὁρμὴ here is not well translated force. It rather means, as the Pesch. Syr. renders, impetus, will; in which sense the term is often used by the later Historians. So in Procop. p. 67, Dionys. Hal. p. 611, and Nicoph. p. 28 (Corp. Byz.), we have ἡ ὁρμὴ τοῦ εὐθύνοντος, 'the will of the steersman.'

5. οὕτως καὶ ἡ γλῶσσα, &c.] The full sense is, '[As ships are turned about with a comparatively small implement,] so also the tongue, though a little member compared with the rest of the body, boasts of effecting great things.' However, the words καὶ μεγαλυνεῖ may best be rendered, 'and yet boasteth great things,' i. e. of effecting great things. Comp. Ecclus. xxvii., ἀγαθὸν καὶ κακόν, [ὡς καὶ θάνατος:] καὶ (yet) ἡ κυριεύουσα ἐνδυναμεῖ αὐτῶν γλῶσσά ἐστιν, 'is that [power] which ruleth over them;' an hyperbolic expression, to set forth the power of the tongue in the world. This use of μεγαλυνεῖ, with accus. of thing wrought or effected by the boaster, is very rare; but I find it also in Lucian, Philops. c. 38, μή σοι ἐπιστά δόξω περὶ ἱμαντὸς μεγαλυνεῖσθαι, i. e. boast of doing things incredible.—ὀλίγον—ἀνάπτει. It is not agreed whether ὕλην signif. materialism, 'a mass, or heap, of wood,' or silicium. The former sense may be confirmed from Thucyd. ii. 75, where the word signif. 'a pile of fagots'; but the latter is well supported; so Hom. Il. ii. 455, ἥντε πῦρ ἀδελῶν ἐπιφλέγει δσπετον ὕλην. And so the Pesch. Syr. But the former is the more usual; and it is here more agreeable to the context, for in the words following, 'the world of iniquity' is represented as inflamed by the malicious and evil tongues of men; the world being represented as ὕλη, or fuel for the fire, and the tongue as the fire. Indeed this interpretation is placed beyond doubt by Ecclus. xi. 32 (which seems to have been here present to the mind of St. James), ἀπὸ σπινθήρος πυρὸς πληθύνεται ἀνθρακία, 'a pile of coal (or charcoal) is filled [with fire].' Comp. also Ecclus. xviii. 10, κατὰ τὴν ὕλην πυρὸς οὕτως ἱκκαυθίσεται.

6. καὶ ἡ γλῶσσα—ἀδικίας] A difficulty here presents itself, chiefly turning on the term κόσμος, which some would alter, while others propose to understand it in a sense different to that usually assigned to it. The context, however, rather requires the word to be taken, in the common acception, to denote an immense congeries. It is justly observed by Bp. Jebb, that 'the image of fire, thus elicited, is immediately applied to the tongue; while the image of vastness naturally induces a mention of the world.' 'The Apostle,' Calv. observes, 'contrasts the smallness of the tongue with the immenseness of the world, or universe.' The first clause, καὶ ἡ γλῶσσα πῦρ, forms, Dr. Peile remarks, a 'simple proposition, which the Apostle's strong sense of the evil he would describe, expands into the words that follow.' Those he ably renders thus: 'A world of iniquity, so to speak, is the tongue found among our members, defiling, as it does, the whole body, and inflaming the circulation of the animal system, and itself inflamed by hell-fire.' The only objection to this version is, that it takes for granted the use of οὕτως, for ὡς εἰπών, without sufficient warrant. Accordingly, I would prefer taking it for οὕτως ὡς, c. πῦρ: though, after all, the construction is anomalous. Considering the difficulty involved in the ὡς, it is no wonder that it should have been expunged by ancient Critics, as we find by MSS. A, B, C, and 5 survives (to which I can only add Lamb. 1184). Yet Bengel, Griesb., Lachm., and Tisch., with singular false judgment, have cancelled it; while Matth., Scholz, and Dr. Peile, rightly, retain it.—καὶ φλογίζουσα—γίγνεται; q. d. 'it is that which sets on fire, and destroys the whole course (lit. "wheel") of life from its beginning to its decline;' i. e. by raising and fostering hatred and enmity, it renders life a scene of misery. It may, however, be best explained of the inflammation of the evil passions of human nature, which inflame, not to say poison, the course of society. For, as Bp. Butler observes, 'this wantonness of speech sows the seeds of strife among men, and inflames little disgusts and offences into envied enmity, which, if let alone, would wear away of themselves.' It can scarcely, however, be said, with Kutta and Dr. Peile, that there is medical imagery, which there would be if τροχὸς were to be referred to the circulation of the blood. The term τροχὸν is best explained of the whole course of life, which is thus elegantly compared to a wheel, with allusion to the vicissitudes of life, and also to the constant recurrence of the same events, all continually tending to the same final catastrophe at the close. So St. Isidore Pelus. finely remarks on the expression: τροχοῖσιν γάρ ἐστιν ὁ χρόνος τῆς ζωῆς, οἱ αὐτοὶ ἀνακυκλούμενοι, 'continually turning round on itself;' an apt emblem of life's vicissitude. Compare Anacreon, iv. 7, τροχὸν ἄρματα γὰρ οἶα, βίαιος τρέχει κυλισθεῖς.—καὶ φλογίζουμένη ὑπὸ τῆς γλῶσσης, meaning (as Bp. Jebb well expresses it), 'it is also a world, itself inflamed from hell,' i. e. the powers of hell,—the Devil and his angels, who, through the medium of the evil passions of our nature, inflame men with 'darts tempered in hell,' and τὸν τροχὸν τῆς γενέσεως, καὶ φλογίζομένη ὑπὸ τῆς γέεννης.

 7 Πᾶσα γὰρ φύσις θηρίων τε καὶ πετεινῶν, ἔρπετων τε καὶ ἐναλίων, δαμάζεται καὶ δεδάμασται τῇ φύσει τῇ ἀνθρωπίνῃ 8 τὴν δὲ γλῶσσαν οὐδεὶς δύναται ἀνθρώπων δαμάσαι ἀκατά- 1 Pa. 14. 2. σχετον κακὸν, μεστὴ τοῦ θανατηφόρου. 9 Ἐν αὐτῇ εὐλογοῦμεν Gen. 1. 25.
27. & 3. 1.
 τὸν Θεὸν καὶ Πατέρα, καὶ ἐν αὐτῇ καταρώμεθα τοὺς ἀνθρώπους 2. 4.
1 Cor. 11. 7.
 τοὺς καθ' ὁμοίωσιν Θεοῦ γεγρονάσας 10 ἐκ τοῦ αὐτοῦ στόματος ἐξέρχεται εὐλογία, καὶ κατάρρα. Οὐ χρη, ἀδελφοί μου, ταῦτα οὕτως γίνεσθαι! 11 Μήτι ἡ πηγὴ ἐκ τῆς αὐτῆς ὀπῆς βρῦει τὸ γλυκὺ καὶ τὸ πικρὸν; 12 μὴ δύναται, ἀδελφοί μου, συκὴ ἐλαίας good them to sin with this instrument of all evil, the tongue.

7, 8. Other associations now arise. 'The consideration of the world and of the wheel of nature, or generation, would naturally lead a contemplative mind to expatiate over the vast scene of nature, animate and inanimate. Thus St. James introduces the whole brute creation, whether dwelling upon the earth, or beneath it, in the air, or in the waters of the sea.' (Bp. Jebb.) Of this passage the scope is to show, by a new reason, what an evil thing the tongue is—inasmuch as it continues always uncontrolled, whereas the most ferocious animals may be tamed.

7. πᾶσα γὰρ φύσις θηρίων, &c. Here I would not, with some, regard the term φύσις as pleonastic. Neither would I, with others, take the words πᾶσα φύσις as standing for πάντα τὰ ἐν φύσει θηρία, to denote what we call the various kinds of animals. It would rather seem that φύσις is here used, by a popular mode of expression, to denote genus, in that sense by which we speak of the brute species, or animal creation, as distinguished from the human species, or rational creation. Comp. a noble passage of similar expression in Soph. Ant. 342—348: κοφροῦσιν τε φύλον ὄρ- | εἶθον ἐμφιβαλὼν ἔγχι, | καὶ θηρῶν ἀγρίων ἰθὺν, | πόσσου τ' ἰαλῶν φύσιν | στείλαισι δικτυκλώσταισι, | ἀριφραδὲς ἀνὴρ: where all these are so many particulars intended to illustrate the power of man to tame the animals. But, to return to the present passage; in the Genitives θηρίων, πετεινῶν, &c., we have Genit. of enumeration, equiv. to τὰ θηρία, καὶ πετεινά, καὶ ἔρπετα, καὶ ἐναλία. The distribution of the brute creation, here laid down, is founded on that at Gen. ix. 2, 3, and Pa. viii. 7, 8, Sept.; which passages are the best illustration of the present: nor is there any thing to contravene the threefold division generally adopted, suitably to the three elements, earth, air, and water. The same distribution is also found in the Class. writers; as appears from the above-cited passage of Sophocles, to which I add another from a Greek Poet, Alcman, cited by Bp. Blomfield on Æschyl. Choeph. 679. Finally, the words δαμάζεται καὶ δεδάμασται, far from being pleonastic, form a most energetic mode of expression, to imply not only that the thing may be done, but that it is habitually done.

8. τὴν δὲ γλῶσσαν, &c. 'but the tongue of men can no one subdue;' meaning, that 'the evils produced by the tongue are more difficult to check than any suffered from beasts the most savage.' In the words following, καταράσκειν κακόν, μεστὴ τοῦ θανατηφόρου, there is a blending of two images; one taken from a virulent disease, which cannot be stopped; and the other from the bite of a venomous reptile, which cannot be healed. In the latter of these we may recognize an allusion to Pa. cxi. 3, 'adders' poison is under their lips.'—To advert to a matter of reading. For καταράσκειν Lachm. and Tisch. read κατάσκειν, from three MSS. and the Vulg. But, from what I have said in my suppl. note, it is evident that κατάσκειν cannot be admitted, and that κατάσχειν (which the Pesch. Translator must have had in his copy) is required by the context. Thus the sense will be, 'is an evil irrepressible,' said perhaps with allusion to the former comparison of a fire.

9—13. The Apostle now enforces the duty of restraining the tongue, on the ground of the inconsistency of employing to wicked and pernicious purposes that faculty of speech by which we are enabled to laud and magnify God, even the Father, q. d. the use of the tongue is to praise God for his benefits; the abuse of the tongue is to curse 'man formed after his image' (see Gen. i. 26, 27). Accordingly, 'the tongue is an organ of infinite mischief, as being the worker of contraries, such as nature itself abhors.'

9. ἐν αὐτῇ εὐλογοῦμεν, &c. 'That blessing and cursing should proceed from the same mouth is evidently unnatural. Hence the Apostle now proceeds to prove, by analogies of nature, that "these things ought not to be so." His analogies, however, are so derived as to complete his picture of the world. He draws our attention to the department of inanimate nature; and that every part of this visible creation may contribute to the illustration of his subject, the four elements (ver. 11) stand forth as representatives of unorganized matter; and (ver. 12) various kinds of trees as representatives, at once, of organic bodies and of vegetable life.' (Bp. Jebb.) By the grave and dignified rebuke at ver. 10, οὐ χρη, ἀδελφοί μου, ταῦτα οὕτως γίνεσθαι, it is shown how unsuitable it is, that the noblest of God's creatures should so abuse the high faculties bestowed on him by his Maker. This the Apostle then illustrates from two familiar examples, 'arguing,' as Grot. says, 'from what is impossible in nature, to what is incongruous in morals': a mode of reasoning also adopted by our Lord, Matt. vii. 16.'

11, 12. μήτι ἡ πηγὴ, &c. By the interrogation is implied strong negation; with allusion to which it is added, in the next clause, οὐτως οὐδέμια, &c. It is true that there, for οὐδέμια—γλυκὴ MSS. A, B, C, and 6 curatives, have οὐ ποιῆσαι, ἢ ἄμπελος σῦκα; οὕτως οὐδεμία πηγὴ ἄλκυον καὶ γλυκὺ ποιῆσαι ὕδωρ.

h Gal. 6. 4.
ch. 1. 21.
Eph. 6. 8.
1 Rom. 12.
12.

h 13 Τίς σοφός καὶ ἐπιστήμων ἐν ὑμῖν; δεῖξάτω ἐκ τῆς καλῆς ἀναστροφῆς τὰ ἔργα αὐτοῦ ἐν πρᾶτῃτι σοφίας. 14<sup>1</sup> Εἰ δὲ ζῆλον πικρὸν ἔχετε καὶ ἐριθείαν ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ ὑμῶν, μὴ κατακαυχᾶσθε καὶ ψευδεσθε κατὰ τῆς ἀληθείας. 15<sup>2</sup> Οὐκ ἔστιν αὕτη ἡ ἀλκυὸν γλυκὺ, which has been edited by Griesb. and Lachm.; but I have thought proper, with Matthæi and Scholz, to retain the t. rec.; for though the other be the more brief, it is not the more difficult reading; and we can better account for the longer having been cut down to a shorter and neater mode of expression, than the shorter expanded into a more diffuse and less elegant one.

1<sup>1</sup> 1 Cor. 2. 6.
7.

13. Having cautioned them against the abuse of the tongue, the Apostle now proceeds to strike at the root of that evil, warning them against envy and malice in their hearts; assuring them that meekness, peace, and beneficence, proceed from heaven; but that envy and contention are the offspring of hell. (Benson.) We may rather suppose it to have been the intent of the Apostle first to enforce the admonition supra i. 22, γίνεσθε ποιῆται λόγου, and then, at ver. 14, to advert to the other subject. In short, as Aretius observes, 'to reduce the grand subject of the Epistle (that of adorning our Christian faith by a suitable life) to a general proposition,—that it is true and heavenly wisdom to thus "adorn the doctrine of God our Saviour in all things." As introductory, however, to this, he, in the words τίς σοφός, &c., glances at the original fountain of these bitter waters, pride and vain-glory,—the frequent offspring of false wisdom, and naturally productive of envy and contention; though at those words τίς σοφός, &c., τίς is not, as is generally supposed, put for εἰ τίς ἐστι, but has a much stronger sense; q. d. 'Is there no wise and discreet person among you? [If there be] let him show his wisdom,' &c. The Apostle prob. had in mind Jer. ix. 12, τίς (ὁ) ἀνθρώπος ἐν ὑμῖν—συνέτω (for συνίτω), and espec. Hos. xiv. 10, τίς σοφός καὶ συνέτω ταῦτα; ἢ συνέτω καὶ ἰπικγνώσεται αὐτά; where for ἢ some copies have καὶ, others τίς: the former reading is preferable; though I suspect that neither had place in the original, but crept in from the Syr. Version, or perhaps from the Hebrew, and the Chaldee Paraphrase. Of course it is left to be supplied from the preceding context. It is strange that so many Expositors should have wished to remove the interrogation and to take γ for the relative Pron. qui, and τίς, there and here, for εἰ τίς, which some MSS. have, but from a gloss. The Critics had not, it seems, the taste to perceive the force of the interrogation there and here, which serves for a personal appeal, as also in Pa. cvi. 43, τίς σοφός, καὶ φυλάξει ταῦτα; Comp. also infr. v. 13, κακοποιεῖ τις ἐν ὑμῖν; προσευχίσθω. I may add, that in ἐν πρᾶτῃτι σοφίας James had prob. in mind Prov. xxii. 4, Συμμ. ὕστερον πρᾶτῃτος φόβου Κυρίου, where the Sept. has γενεὰ σοφίας; though there, for γενεὰ, the true reading seems to be γένηα, (for γένηα, a form found in Hdot. ii. 108, 2,) which signifies honorary rewards; and this is confirmed by the Hebrew term, which means the rewards of humility. Comp. Cratin. Chir. fr. i. 3, ἡδυλόγη σοφία βροτῶν, a wisdom not arrogant, but accompanied, as suitable to weak man, with humility. By ἐπιστήμων is here meant, 'discreet,' by the possession of that τακτ, so necessary to any one who has to instruct others.—δεῖξάτω ἐκ τῆς καλῆς, &c., meaning, 'Let him show, by a virtuous life and right conduct, the works of wisdom [as well as utter the words]; and that a mild wisdom, such as is accompanied by meekness and humility.' By the ἔργα here spoken of we may understand, with Schneckenburg, 'singula σοφίας documenta, quorum series continua τὴν καλὴν ἀναστροφήν efficit.' On the term ἀναστρ. see note at Gal. i. 13. In the expression πρᾶτῃτι σοφίας (which stands for σοφία πράξι) the Apostle glances at the proud, morose, and dictatorial dispositions of the teachers in question, and other self-appointed censors.

14. εἰ δὲ ζῆλον πικρὸν, &c.] The declarative form is here undoubtedly the true one; and the sense, however disputed, may be, 'But if ye have bitter envy and strife in your heart, do not boast yourselves, and lie against the truth;' i. e. 'the truth of plain facts.' Comp. Joa. Bell. Pref. § 1, καταψεύδονται τῶν πραγμάτων, and espec. Diod. Sic. T. i. p. 12, ἐνία δὲ καταψεύσθαι τῆς ἀληθείας. However, the Apostle's full meaning seems to be that laid down by Dr. Peile thus: 'If in your (really unregenerate and unchanged) hearts and lives ye so belic the Truth of the spiritual Man, as exemplified and embodied in JESUS (Eph. iv. 20—24), better were it that you should cease to pride yourselves on being Christians, than be found in your practice witness, not for, but against the religion which you profess. Comp. 2 Cor. xiii. 8.' But Dr. P. should have adduced Calvin's able tracing of the scope, on which the above representation is founded:—'Notat Apostolus fructus, qui ex nimia austeritate nascuntur, quæ mansuetudini est contraria. Necesse est enim, ut immodicus rigor pravæ emulationes gignat, quæ in contentionem mox erumpunt. Emulationem dixit amarā, quia non regnat nisi dum animi veneno malignitatis infecti sunt, ut omnia in amarulentiam convertant. Ergo ut vere glorierimur, nos omne Dei filios, jubet nos placide et modeste agere cum fratribus; aliqui mentiri nos pronuntiat, dum Christianum nomen jactamus.'

15. Having before (supra i. 5, seq.) adverted to the want of wisdom, and the means of acquiring it, the Apostle now enters upon a description of it, vv. 15—18; and in order to this, he makes a previous distinction between true and false wisdom,—between that which is heavenly, and that which is mere earthly wisdom; depicting both according to the true source from which they proceed, and the proper fruits by which they may be known.—οὐκ ἔστιν αὕτη, &c. Render, 'This is not the wisdom which cometh down from σοφία ἄνωθεν κατερχομένη, ἀλλ' ἐπίγειος, ψυχικὴ, δαιμονιώδης

16 ὅπου γὰρ ζήλος καὶ ἐριθεία, ἐκεῖ ἀκαταστασία καὶ πᾶν φαύ-

11 Cor. 2. 2.
Gal. 5. 20.

λον πρᾶγμα· 17 ἡ δὲ ἄνωθεν σοφία πρῶτον μὲν ἀγνή ἐστίν, ἔπειτα εἰρηνικὴ, ἐπιεικὴς, εὐπειθὴς, μεστὴ ἐλέους καὶ καρπῶν ἀγαθῶν, ἀδιάκριτος καὶ ἀνυπόκριτος. 18 Καρπὸς δὲ [τῆς]

m Prov. 11.
15.
Hos. 10. 12.
Matt. 5. 9.
Phil. 4. 11.
Heb. 12. 11.
a Rom. 7. 22.
1 Pet. 2. 11.

δικαιοσύνης ἐν εἰρήνῃ σπείρεται τοῖς ποιοῦσιν εἰρήνην.

IV. 1 Ἀπόθεν πόλεμοι καὶ μάχαι ἐν ὑμῖν; οὐκ ἐντεῦθεν, ἐκ above, but is mere earthly (i. e. animal or carnal, belonging only to the natural man) wisdom, nay demoniacal; meaning, such as we may conceive of demons, whose wisdom is but cunning and deceit, and is subversive of all order,—qualities the very opposite to those by which true wisdom (which is then described) displays itself. The implied notion of craft is not the only one here intended, nor indeed the principal one. That is τὸ πονηρόν, 'evil,' 'wickedness,' as suited to evil spirits, and derived from the Evil one ὁ πονηρός. Ψυχικὴ, 'animal,' or 'natural,' as opposed to πνευματικὴ; consequently implying the natural corruption of man, and the need of preventing grace. See more on 1 Cor. ii. 14.

16. ὅπου γὰρ [ζήλος, &c.] We have here (as Calvin observes) an argumentum à repugnantibus; envy producing effects the very opposite to those of true wisdom, as described at the next verse.—By ἀκαταστ. is meant 'disorder,' 'commotion,' 'tumult.' The best comment on these vv. are the kindred ones at 1 Cor. iii. 3. xiv. 32. 2 Cor. xii. 20, where see notes. The expression καὶ πᾶν φαῦλον πρᾶγμα, is said by dicmas to denote 'every sort of what is morally bad.'

17. Having shown what is not, the Apostle now proceeds to show what is, true wisdom, describing it by its qualities,—all in direct opposition to those of these arrogant self-constituted teachers. First it is pure, in respect of its objects, motives, and tendency, 'perfecting holiness in the fear of God;' see supra i. 27. 2. It is peaceable and peace-making, disposed to cultivate 'peace with all men,' and to promote it among them; see supra i. 19. 3. It is gentle and forbearing, ready to comply in all things not sinful; see ver. 3, and supra i. 21. 4. It is easy to be persuaded to what is reasonable, or to admit any reasonable extenuation of error. 5. It is full of mercy and compassion, abounding in the good fruits springing from thence, beneficence and charity to the poor and afflicted. 6. It is impartial, having no respect for persons or parties; comp. 1 Cor. iii. 3, 4. Finally, it is described as free from hypocrisy, free from the affectation of superior sanctity, which is commonly found to accompany the spiritual pride alluded to in 2 Cor. xii. 20, φουσιώσεις.

18. Now are represented the effects of this peaceable spirit.—καρπὸς δὲ τῆς δικαιοσύνης, &c. Here the δὲ is continuative, and serves to conclusion. Render, 'Furthermore (in short), the fruit of righteousness is sown in,' or 'by peace, for them who make peace (i. e. whose doings make for peace).' By σπείρεται it is intimated that as the οἱ ποιῶντες ἀγαθῶν sow these good fruits in and for peace, and by making peace, so shall they reap a rich harvest thereof, meaning that, 'They who cultivate a peaceful temper may assure themselves that they shall reap the fruits of it in a harvest never ceasing,— namely, in a world where righteousness flourishes in eternal peace.' Comp. a similar agricultural metaphor in Antiphan. Inc. Fab. frag. iv. 4, παραβοθῶν τοῖς φίλοις, Σπείρειν τε καρπὸν χάριτος, (meaning kindness, good will to others) ἡδίστην θῶν. See note on Matt. x. 34.—To advert to a few matters of phraseology. In εἰρήνῃ there is a tacit opposition to the ἀκαταστασία above. The force of τῆς δικαιοσύνης is debated, and scarcely admits of being brought to any certain determination. Est., after ably tracing the sense, 'thinks it is this, that 'ex pace, tamquam semine, provenire vitam æternam, quæ ad fructus ac merces justitiæ, i. e. vita æterna (and so Whitby, cited in my former Edd.) vel ipsam justitiæ, tamquam fructum, colentibus pacem.' Drs. Burton and Peile think the sense is, that 'persons [accepted with God, for Christ's sake] who live peaceably on earth, sow a seed, which will produce to them righteousness (final acceptance with God), and peace in heaven.' The τῆς before δικαιοσύνη, not found in several ancient MSS. (I add Lamb. 1182, 1184) and Theoph., is cancelled by Lachm. and Tisch., with reason, since internal evidence is rather against the word, whose absence is confirmed by Phil. i. 11, καρπὸν δικαιοσύνης, and Heb. xii. 12, καρπὸν εἰρηνικῶν δικαιοσύνης, which may seem to decide the force of δικ. here, and fix it to the interpretation of Dr. Burton.

IV. From exhortations to the cultivation of peace, the Apostle slides into reprehension of the opposite dispositions as evinced in quarrels and disputes,—dispositions to which too many among them, espec. of those exercising the office of teachers, or arrogating to themselves that title, were prob. prone; and all to be traced to one original spring, the lusts and passions natural to the human heart. (Pott.)

1. πόλεμοι καὶ μάχαι | 'contests and strifes;' whether civil or religious, is not agreed. We may suppose both; the Jews being prone at once to sedition and to religious disputes. In either case the contests themselves originated in the same source, the cherished lusts of those from whom they proceeded. Here, then, the Apostle means to say (as Bp. Sanderson well expresses it), 'Marvel not to see so many scandals, divisions, distractions, and wranglings in the Church, and factions and convulsions in the commonwealth, so long as there is pride and selfishness in every man's bosom, or, indeed, any other lust unsubdued; for all these wars and fightings from without, what other are they than the scum of the pot that boils within? even the ebullitions of those lusts that war in our members, and the dictates of a corrupt nature.' Comp. 1 Pet. ii. 11. Rom. vii. 23, and notes.—To advert to a matter of verbal criticism. Lachm. and Tisch. read, from 8 MSS.

b Job 27. 9.
 & 28. 12.
 Ps. 66. 18.
 Prov. 1. 20.
 Isa. 1. 15.
 Jer. 11. 11.
 & 14. 12.
 Ezek. 8. 13.
 Zech. 7. 12.
 Mic. 8. 4.
 Rom. 8. 28.
 1 John 2. 21.
 & 3. 14.
 c Ps. 22. 27.
 John 16. 19.
 & 17. 14.
 Gal. 1. 10.
 1 John 2. 18.
 d Gen. 4. 8.
 & 3. 21.

τῶν ἡδονῶν ὑμῶν τῶν στρατευομένων ἐν τοῖς μέλεσιν ὑμῶν ;
 2 Ἐπιθυμεῖτε, καὶ οὐκ ἔχετε φονεύετε καὶ ζηλοῦτε, καὶ οὐ δύνασθε ἐπιτυχεῖν μάχεσθε καὶ πολεμεῖτε, οὐκ ἔχετε δὲ, διὰ τὸ μὴ αἰτεῖσθαι ὑμᾶς· 3<sup>b</sup> αἰτεῖτε, καὶ οὐ λαμβάνετε, διότι κακῶς αἰτεῖσθε, ἵνα ἐν ταῖς ἡδοναῖς ὑμῶν δαπανήσγητε. 4<sup>c</sup> Μοιχοὶ καὶ μοιχαλίδες, οὐκ οἴδατε ὅτι ἡ φίλια τοῦ κόσμου ἐχθρα τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐστίν ; Ὅς ἂν οὖν βουλευθῇ φίλος εἶναι τοῦ κόσμου, ἐχθρὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ καθίσταται. 5<sup>d</sup> ἢ δοκεῖτε ὅτι κενῶς ἡ γραφή λέγει ; Πρὸς

(I add Lamb. 1182, 1184), and some late Versions and Theoph., πῶθεν πάλ. καὶ πῶθεν μ. But this reading, which is not in the manner of the Apostle, seems a mere alteration (having for its purpose to strengthen the sense) introduced by certain half-learned Critics, who did not see that by πόλεμοι καὶ μάχαι are denoted 'quarrels and contests of all kinds between man and man,' both political and civil, may even religious. By τῶν ἡδονῶν understand 'the lustful passions,' 'cravings after sensual pleasures,' which incite men to fierce contest for the means of gratifying those lusts. Of ἡδ. as thus used for ἐπιθυμῖαι, an ex. occurs in Xen. Hist. iv. 3, 2. vi. i. 4, αἱ τοῦ σώματος ἡδοναί, and it is found sometimes in Plato. Here, however, the lusts for sensual gratifications are figuratively represented (for more lively impression) as seated in the various members of the body. Comp. Col. iii. 5. In the present passage, however, these members of the body are figuratively represented as carrying on a war against the soul. Comp. 1 Pet. ii. 11, ἐπιχρῖσθαι, and Rom. vii. 23, where see note.

2, 3. What is said in these verses is illustrative of the foregoing; there being here presented a sort of concise, but comprehensive, description of 'the carnal mind (even the passions and appetites of our corrupt nature), which is enmity against God.' And most graphically does the Apostle describe its aims and purposes, and the disappointment of those purposes, tending to make manifest its emptiness and utter folly. Of this briefly-worded passage (vv. 2, 3) the general sense is this: 'Ye eagerly pursue whatever your lusts prompt. Ye nourish a bloody hatred and envy of all who stand in the way of your designs; yet ye cannot attain to that which ye seek;' i. e. ye cannot have that which might satisfy your cravings. 'Ye battle hard [to obtain what may gratify your desires]; but ye possess [them] not. Ye have not [what would satisfy you], because ye ask not for it [even true peace and happiness]. Ye do seek, perhaps, for it, but ye obtain it not, because ye seek it amiss; i. e. only in order that you may consume [what you obtain from God] upon your lusts [where God has decreed it should not be found];' meaning, that they do not seek for what they aim at, true happiness ['our being's end and aim'], where alone it can be found, in righteous obedience to the will of him who is alone 'able to make all' happiness, as all 'grace,' to 'abound.' The various particulars above supplied are, I apprehend, no more than the context requires to be understood. And as respects the most important one, that which may be supposed to form the object of all this vehement desire and anxious striving,—namely, something that should satisfy that ardent desire of happiness natural to the human heart, the same view is, I find, adopted by the able Commentator Theile.—For φονεύετε, some would conjecture φθονεῖτε; as thinking the former too strong a term. But for an alteration so unauthorized no real necessity exists; since the expression may very well be understood of intention rather than act; as in Sophocles, Œd. Tyr. 534, φονεῖν ὡν τοῦδε τάνδρος, a disposition, however, involving much of the guilt of actual murder. See 1 John iii. 15. At αἰτεῖτε καὶ οὐ λαμβ. there is, as Est. remarks, a pre-occupation of the plea, 'Nay, but we do ask and seek of God by daily prayer.' Answer: 'Be it so: but ye ask amiss; therefore it is that ye do not receive.' The next words serve to illustrate the import of the κακῶς (which signifies lit. wickedly), and show it to mean, 'for evil purposes,' that ye may consume what ye ask for on your lusts, i. e. in gratifying them.

4. The Apostle now resorts to the language of severe reproof, seriously warning them to abstain from those lusts whence come strifes and dissensions, and indeed from all excessive attachment to the things of this world. (Pott.) For such, Commentators in general are agreed, is adverted to in the expressions μοιχοὶ καὶ μοιχαλίδες, which may be supposed to denote spiritual adultery (see Isa. lvii. 15. Jer. iii. 8, 9, comp. with Matt. xii. 39. Mark viii. 33), or that base worldly-mindedness which sacrifices the love of God to the pleasures of the world.—ἡ φίλια τοῦ κόσμου, 'friendship with the world which lieth in sin,' which is an implied enmity to God, as being at variance with his plans for the promotion of virtue and happiness.

5. ἢ δοκεῖτε ὅτι] This disjunctive use of ἢ at the beginning of an interrogative sentence is rare, but occ. in Arrian, Epict. ii. 17, 'ἢ καὶ οὗτοι τὰς φωνὰς ταύτας ἀπηχοῦμαι; and Matt. xxvi. 53, ἢ δοκεῖτε ὅτι οὐ δύναμαι, &c. However, in the words following some difficulty is involved, inasmuch as, though the words purport to be a citation from Scripture, they are no where to be found there; 'nor,' observes Prof. Scholefield, 'if we take πνεῦμα in the sense of the human disposition,—as seems in this view to be necessary,—does it appear capable of explanation why this should be called "the spirit that dwelleth in us," which, on the other hand, is a very usual, and proper, and intelligible description of the Holy Spirit, who comes into believers for the very purpose. To avoid this difficulty, some resort to conjecture, while others suppose the words taken from an Apocryphal book, or regard them as an interpolation,—methods alike objectionable. It is best to suppose the expression ἡ γραφή to refer, not to any particular passage of Scripture, but only to the general tenour of Scripture in its φθόνον ἐπιποθεῖ τὸ πνεῦμα δ κατέκρινεν ἐν ἡμῖν; <sup>6</sup> *Μεῖζονα <sup>6</sup> Job 22. 29.

 δὲ δίδωσι χάριν διὸ λέγει· Ὁ Θεὸς ὑπερηφάνοις ἀντιτάσ-σεται, ταπεινοῖς δὲ δίδωσι χάριν. <sup>7</sup> *Ἐποτάγητε οὖν τῷ Θεῷ. ἀντίστητε τῷ Διαβόλῳ, καὶ φεύζεται ἀφ' ὑμῶν <sup>8</sup> *ἐγγί-σατε τῷ Θεῷ, καὶ ἐγγίει ὑμῖν. Καθαρίσατε χεῖρας, ἁμαρτωλοὶ, καὶ ἀγνίσατε καρδίας, δίψυχοι. <sup>9</sup> *ἡ ταλαιπωρήσατε καὶ πενθή<sup>6</sup> Job 22. 29.
<sup>7</sup> Prov. 8. 34.
<sup>8</sup> Matt. 23. 12.
<sup>9</sup> Luke 1. 52.
<sup>10</sup> 14. 11.
<sup>11</sup> 18. 14.
<sup>12</sup> 1 Pet. 5. 5.
<sup>13</sup> Eph. 4. 27.
<sup>14</sup> 1 Pet. 5. 9.
<sup>15</sup> 2 Chron.
<sup>16</sup> Isa. 1. 16.
<sup>17</sup> ch. 1. 8.
<sup>18</sup> Matt. 5. 4.

declarations on the above subject, of friendship with the world, or worldly-mindedness (on which subject see John xv. 18—20. Matt. vi. 24. Luke xvi. 13, 15, &c.); also, that the verse is to be divided into two interrogative clauses. And so the passage is pointed by Carpzov, Calv., Griesb., Knapp, and Scholz. The sense, then, will be (as Prof. Scholef. renders), 'Do ye think that the Scripture speaketh in vain? Does the Spirit that dwelleth in us lust to envy?' In both cases οὕτως is, of course, to be understood, thus: 'Think ye that the Scripture speaketh in vain [or without good reason in condemning this worldliness]? No! And again, do you think that the Holy Spirit which dwelleth in us is prone to envy? does the new nature which he creates produce such fruits? See Gal. v. 22—26. No! On the contrary, he giveth more grace, in order to resist it.' This last clause, indeed, some suppose to have reference, not to envy, but to a worldly spirit. We may, however, understand it of all the unchristian dispositions above adverted to; q. d. 'Nay, so far from that, he giveth more grace than to leave those who obey his holy motions to such worldly and unchristian tempers.' Thus far in my former Edd. I would now take a somewhat different view. As to the objection advanced by the Prof. against taking πνεῦμα in the sense 'man's disposition,' as far as it is founded on the words associated with it, δ κατέκρινεν ἐν ἡμῖν, though they are highly suitable to the Holy Spirit, they are very applicable to the disposition of mind and heart of man, which may be said, by a sort of Hebraism, to dwell in him, as being inherent in him, i. e. implanted by nature, embred. Such is the use of ἐμφυτοί and ἐστίς, as said of dispositions inherent in man, which may be said to dwell with man, because ever with him to actuate him. And in this sense the words will have an additional force, by a certain energy thus imparted to the sentiment in πρὸς φθόνον ἐπιποθεῖ, it being thus intimated that 'this proneness to envy and jealousy is inherent in the heart of man; a truth borne out at once by Scripture and by experience. Nor is this construction and sense of ἐπιποθεῖν so rare but that it is found also in Ps. xlii. 1, Sept., ἐπιποθεῖ ἡ ψυχὴ μου πρὸς σε, and Ps. lxxx. 3, and lxi. 10. It is plain, that 'to lust towards envy,' or 'jealousy,' means 'to have a proneness towards those passions.' If the interrogation in the second clause be retained, the sense must be, 'Does the spirit dwelling in us, amended by the Spirit [from on high], have a lusting towards envy? does it produce such fruits? No, certainly!' But thus some violence is done to the words, from being necessary to suppose an ellipsis of an οὕτως emphatic, and to regard the οὐ as standing for οὐχι! Accordingly, it would seem better to consider the words πρὸς φθόνον—ἡμῖν as declarative, and to encounter, as well as we can, the difficulty involved in γραφῇ. I am inclined to think, with Est., that 'the words are meant to be taken as a quotation from Scripture, though conveyed as a sentiment founded on experience, and abundantly confirmed by Scripture.' I entirely agree with him in regarding the words as altogether parallel to those supr., v. 2 and 3, ἐπιθυμεῖτε καὶ οὐκ ἔχετε, αἰτεῖτε, καὶ οὐ λαμβάνετε, for the present passage breathes a tone of reproach similar to that which pervades the above; and a similar reason is there expressed why the askers or seekers do not receive what they ask or seek,—namely, because their spirit lusts, desires, and seeks in a wrong spirit, subservient only to envy. By Scripture Est. fully shows is to be understood, that which was intimated and implied in the foregoing αἰτεῖτε, καὶ ('and yet') οὐ λαμβάνετε. Indeed, there seems little doubt that the Apostle had in mind, and intended to suggest to the minds of those whom he addressed, the Scripture (i. e. passage of Scripture) contained in St. Matthew's Gospel as above cited, and which is accordant with various passages of the Old Test., thus putting St. Matthew's Gospel on the footing of γραφὴ θεόπνευστος 2 Tim. iii. 16. It is true that one difficulty, occasioned by taking the above view (however agreeable to the context, and suited to the Apostle's argument), is this, that in δίδωσι, at the beginning of the next verse, the subject required cannot be found in πνεῦμα: though I agree with Est. it may be fetched out of what is implied in ἡ γραφῇ. For, as observes Est., 'considering that Scripture is the word of God to man, and what the Scripture promises, God himself promises, so here θεὸς may very properly be understood to be implied in Divine Scripture.'

6. In the words here cited from Prov. iii. 34, ὑπερηφάνοις must, from the present application, be supposed to comprehend all the foregoing classes of persons—the envious, the vain, the censorious, the quarrelsome, the spiritually proud, and the worldly; who, as they resist the grace, and, in various ways, transgress the will of God, may be said to be ὑπερήφ., as setting themselves against God. Comp. 1 John ii. 15, 16, and Ecchyl. Pers. 832—6, Blomf.

Ζεῖτε τοὶ κολαστὴ τῶν ὑπερκόπων ἀγαν φρονημάτων ἱπαστιν. εὐθρονοὶ βαρεῖ. Πρὸς ταύτ' ἱκνῶν, σωφρονεῖν κεχρημένον, πινύσκει· εὐλόγοις νοουθήμασι λῆξει θεοβλαβερὺν ὑπερκόπων θράσει.

8. ἀγνίσατε καρδίας] This we must understand to be not merely (as Bp. Jebb points out) by cultivating sincere repentance, but also by seeking the μεῖζονα χάριν above mentioned, from Him who hath promised to give it, the help of the Spirit enabling the persons both to will and to do; to be no longer δίψυχοι, but whole-minded, chiefly intent on serving God, no longer fluctuating between His friendship and the friendship of the world.

σατε καὶ κλαύσατε. Ὁ γέλως ὑμῶν εἰς πένθος μεταστραφήτω, καὶ ἡ χαρὰ εἰς κατήφειαν. <sup>10</sup> Ταπεινώθητε ἐνώπιον τοῦ Κυρίου, καὶ ὑψώσει ὑμᾶς.

1 Job 22. 30.
Prov. 22. 32.
Matt. 23. 12.
Luke 14. 11.
& 18. 14.
1 Pet. 5. 6.
& Matt. 7. 1.
Luke 6. 37.
Rom. 2. 1.
1 Cor. 4. 5.

1 Matt. 10.
26.
Rom. 14. 4.

11 <sup>κ</sup> Μὴ καταλαλεῖτε ἀλλήλων, ἀδελφοί· ὁ καταλαλῶν ἀδελφοῦ, καὶ κρίνων τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ, καταλαλεῖ νόμον, καὶ κρίνει νόμον· εἰ δὲ νόμον κρίνεις, οὐκ εἶ ποιητὴς νόμου, ἀλλὰ κριτής. <sup>12</sup> Εἰς ἐστὶν ὁ νομοθέτης ὁ δυνάμενος σῶσαι καὶ ἀπολέσαι· σὺ τίς εἶ, ὃς κρίνεις τὸν ἕτερον;

9. Here we have graphically described the workings of repentance. Of the two clauses ὁ γέλως—μεταστραφήτω and καὶ ἡ χαρὰ εἰς κατήφειαν, the former reoscrutates the state of temporary sorrow: waiting being but the action of the feelings when excited, not a calm habitual temper of the mind and heart. Thus it is most correctly opposed to laughter, also the temporary effect of temporary excitement. The latter clause describes not any thing external, or dependent in any degree on animal impressibility, but a disposition whose root is in the heart; dejection being a sense of sorrow mingled with shame, the daughter of contrition, and the parent of humility. So Bp. Jebb, who defines κατήφειαν by 'the feeling of mingled grief and shame that expresses itself by downcast eyes.' But it may be confined to grief (both that of attrition and of contrition); and agreeably to this view Plut. de Vit. Pud. c. 1, defines κατήφειαν by λύπη κατὰ βλάβην ποιούσαν, though 'regret,' or 'self-reproach,' may be conjoined. So in Thucyd. vii. 19 and 75, κατήφειαν is associated with κατὰ μνηστροφῶν αὐτῶν. Thus may arise the idea of that mourning for sin adverted to in Isa. lxi. 3, and Matt. v. 5, which, implying 'repentance not to be repented of, leads to solid spiritual comfort, the oil of joy for mourning, and the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness,' so that the true Gospel mourners may become trees of righteousness, the planting of the Lord.

10. ταπεινώθητε ἐνώπιον—ὑμᾶς This sentence terminates the moral process, and so, while recommending them to 'turn unto' their God 'with weeping and mourning' (Joel ii. 12), for, as Bp. Jebb observes, the 'fruit of well-tempered dejection is religious humiliation before God: with this the Apostle had commenced, and with this he concludes; annexing only the sure and certain result and reward of humiliation, so pursued, and so attained;' at the same time he suggests, for their comfort, that 'such a sorrow,' if it be indeed that 'godly sorrow which worketh repentance' (2 Cor. vii. 10), will not be unheeded by him who is 'ever ready to forgive, and plenteous in mercy to all them that call upon him.'

11, 12. Here the Apostle takes occasion to warn them against another evil disposition nearly allied to a quarrelsome and envious spirit,—namely, that of ensoriousness and detraction (a subject before touched, ch. iii., but here resumed and expanded), reminding them that such arrogant censoriousness was, in effect, censuring, or setting at nought, the Christian law, which forbids such a disposition, 1. by slighting its prohibitions against detraction; 2. by sitting in judgment upon the fitness of the law rather than performing it; and by thus setting up to be arbiters of the law, usurping the office at once of law-giver and judge from Him who alone has the power of condemning or acquitting, awarding destruction, or bestowing salvation. Comp. Rom. xiv. 4, which passage is the best comment on the present.

11. νόμον] By this some understand the law of Moses; others, the Gospel: but it is best, with Bp. Middl., to suppose the term here, as in Rom. ii. 25, to have reference to law in general, i. e. moral obligation in its most general sense, = religion; the Apostle meaning thus to inculcate, that 'to all religion, candour and good will are essential, whether we be Jews, Christians, or even of the number of those who are a law unto themselves. Religion of every kind forbids calumny, and accordingly he who is guilty of it, tramples on all religious sanctions by thus usurping the prerogative of the one Judge universal.'—ποιητὴς νόμου is, at least in this sense, an Hellenistic phrase; for in Class. usage it would only mean 'a law-maker.' It is of very rare occurrence; though I have noted it in 2 Macc. ii. 67, and ποιῆσαι νόμον in Eccles. v. 19. On the term καταλαλῶν see my Lex.

12. εἰς ἐστὶν ὁ νομοθέτης, &c.] meaning, 'Thou intrudest into a province that is none of thine. There is one lawgiver and Judge [and one only], who [alone] hath the right and power to save [those who obey him] and to destroy [those who disobey him; such being the case], who art thou [weak and erring mortal, thyself accountable to that one Judge], that dardest to wrest judgment from his hands, and exercise it on another?'—To advert to a matter of reading. After νομοθέτης, Griesb., Matth., Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch. add καὶ κριτής, from the two most ancient MSS., upwards of 40 others (to which I add Lamb. 1184), almost all the Versions, and several Fathers,—perhaps rightly; for the addition seems called for by the subsequent words, and indeed by the Article ὁ before νομ., since the sentiment conveyed is that 'there is one Person, who is the Lawgiver and Judge, who alone can,' &c. After σὺ very many MSS. (to which I add Lamb. 1182, 1183, 1184, 1196, and a few Mus. copies) subjoin δέ, which is adopted by Lachm. and Tisch.; but wrongly, since it is plainly an addition proceeding from those Critics who did not perceive the force of the asyndeton, nor call to mind a similar passage of Rom. xiv. 4, σὺ τίς εἶ ὁ κρίνων ἀλλότρου, where not a single copy has any Particle. For ἕτερον, Lachm. and Tisch. read πλησίον, from 12 MSS. (I add Lamb. 1182, 1184), the Pesch. Syr., Vulg., and other Versions, and Theophyl.; perhaps rightly; for internal evidence is quite 13 <sup>m</sup> Ἀγε νῦν, οἱ λέγοντες· “Σήμερον * καὶ αὐριον † πορευ- <sup>m</sup> Prov. 27.

 σώμεθα εἰς τήνδε τὴν πόλιν, καὶ † ποιήσωμεν ἐκεῖ ἐνιαυτὸν ἕνα, <sup>1</sup> Luke 12. 18.
 καὶ † ἐμπορευώμεθα, καὶ † κερδήσωμεν.” 14 <sup>n</sup> οὔτινες οὐκ ἐπί- <sup>n</sup> Job 7. 7.
<sup>1</sup> Eccl. 30. 6.
<sup>1</sup> Cor. 7. 31.
<sup>1</sup> ch. 1. 10.
<sup>1</sup> Pet. 1. 17. 1 John 2. 17.

in its favour, ἕτερον being seemingly a mere gloss.

13—16. The Apostle next proceeds to reprove the self-sufficiency, worldly spirit, and unbelieving irreligious language, which were manifested by many in another way. (Scott.) Presuming too much on the present life, and not sufficiently considering ‘how frail’ they are (Pa. xxxix. 4), and how perpetually dependent on the providence of God, they spoke too confidently of the future.

13. Ἀγε νῦν] A form of soliciting attention, like δεῦτε δὴ in Origen’s Version of Isa. i. 18. In the words that follow, σήμερον καὶ αὐριον—κερδήσωμεν, the Apostle represents the worldly-minded persons in question as saying, what perhaps was usually only the subject of their thoughts (see Pa. xiv. l. liii. 1); but his rebuke is well pointed and just. The allusion is to the commercial business, in which almost all foreign Jews were engaged, and for the furtherance of which they had to take long journeys to distant trading places, as Tyre, Alexandria, Antioch, Ephesus, Corinth, Rome, &c. For καὶ αὐριον, Lachm. edits ἡ αὐριον from very slender external authority, and quite against internal evidence, since the ἡ is manifestly a gloss.—Ἐμπορευώμεθα. Lachm. and Tisch. adopt the Fut. Ind. form in this and the following verbs, on competent authority; which is confirmed by the circumstance that the Fut. is absolutely required by the context in ἐνιαυτὸν ἕνα here and διαξουσίαι at ver. 16.—τὴνδε τὴν πόλιν. Render: ‘this or that city,’ the purpose of the Pron. being merely to advert to some projected city. So v. 15, ποιήσωμεν τοῦτο ἢ ἑκείνο.

14. οὔτινες—αὐριον] lit. ‘ye who know not (i. e. though ye know not) [the event of] the morrow,’ i. e. whether you shall retain your wealth, or be withdrawn from all enjoyment of it by hopeless sickness, or removed from all possession of it by death. Comp. Prov. xxvii. 1, with Sophocl. Œd. Col. 567, “Ἐξοιδ’, ἀνὴρ ὦν, χῆτι τῆς ἐς αὐριον οὐδὲν πλὴν μοι σοῦ μέτεστιν ἡμέρας.—To advert to a matter of reading. For τὸ τ. αὐρ. Lachm. reads τὰ τ. αὐρ. (from MS. A, and 4 cursives, to which I add Lamb. 1182, 1184, 1185), but wrongly; for the context requires the Singular; the sense being, as the Pesch. Syr. Translator renders, ‘what shall be on the morrow,’ ‘the event of the morrow,’ by an ellipsis of ἰσόμενον, or such like. Vain were it to seek to defend the τὰ from such passages as Rom. viii. 5, τὰ τῆς σαρκὸς, for the Plural is there as much required, as the Sing. is here. In illustration of this sentiment the Apostle subjoins, ποῖα γὰρ ἡ ζωὴ ὧν; &c. ‘For what (or, how fleeting) is your life! how short a span is it at the utmost!’—αὐριον γὰρ, &c.; q. d. ‘[It is as nothing.] for ’tis a vapour, appearing for a short time, and then vanishing away,’ even as an ignis fatuus. Compare Wisd. ii. 2, 4. Similar sentiments are found in Hom. Il. vi. 146, and Horat. Art. Poët. 60. The conclusion is, that we ought not to be too anxious to provide necessities for so short a sojourn, but should cast ourselves wholly on the protection of that God on whom we entirely depend, and study to seek his favour.—To advert to a matter of reading. Of the two γὰρ, the former is absent from MS. B (to which I add Lamb. 1184); the latter from MS. A (to which I add Lamb. 1182), and it is cancelled by Lachm. He might as well have cancelled both, since they stand on the same footing; and in each case were, I doubt not, removed by Critics, who thought one of them useless, and stumbled at the tautology, but differed as to which γὰρ to retain. That they should not have known the force of the second γὰρ is not surprising, since it is peculiar, being, I now think, not causative, but intensive (like our Engl. why); a use of the Particle espec. found in the case of sentences exclamatory. Render: ‘Why, ’tis a vapour, or ‘smoke.’ MS. B, and 10 cursives (to which I add Cov. 4, omitted by Mill), indeed, for ἰστ. have ἰστα, which has been received into the text by Lachm. and Tisch.; but most uncritically, since the canon which prefers the more difficult and harsh reading has its exceptions, one of which is that the reading shall not exhibit any thing wholly unprecedented, not to say incongruous; which is quite the case here, for it is not men, as persons, who are by so many writers compared with ‘smoke,’ ‘vapour,’ ‘shadow,’ or other images of what is fleeting, but ‘the life of man.’ So when αἰμις, or αἰμις, is used in Eccles., and also αἰμις αἰμις is used in the same book, it is not of the persons of men, but their state, or, as we should say, their life. As to the superiority of external authority for ἰστα, if it did exist, that could not decide the question, in cases where (as here) words are so much alike as to be continually confounded by the scribes; and here the ἰστα arose from error of scribes. The reading ἰστ. is confirmed by the Pesch. Syr. Version. “Ἐσται, found in 50 MSS., is only another error of the same kind. Instead of δὲ, Lachm. and Tisch. edit, from 6 MSS., καί; but the reading has nothing to recommend it, nor is the authority existing for it competent. I suspect that St. James wrote δὲ καί, which, indeed, is found in a great number of MSS.: and the formula is one of very frequent occurrence in N. T., though in several of the passages the καί is omitted in a few MSS., espec. where, as here, it does not seem to convey any additional sense.—ἰστα δὲ φ. Several MSS. read καὶ φ., and not a few δὲ καί, while a few very ancient ones (to which I add Lamb. 1182) have no Particle at all. There is, accordingly, the strongest evidence that there originally was none (and therefore I have now bracketed the δὲ); and this course is confirmed by supra iii. 17, πρῶτον μὲν—ἰστα in all the copies. It is true that at Heb. vii. 2 we have πρῶτον μὲν—ἰστα δὲ καί; but St. Paul is not St. James. Besides, there the καί does not belong to the δὲ, but to the following word. And in 1 Thess. iv. 17, we have πρῶτον ἰστα. Thus in the purest Class. writers ἰστα is used without δὲ, even when πρῶτον μὲν has preceded; e. g. Æschyl. Pers. 523, Θοῖοι μὲν πρῶτον ἐξασθαι θέλω, ἰστα, στασθε τὸ τῆς αὔριον! (ποία γὰρ ἡ ζωὴ ὑμῶν; ἀτμὶς γὰρ ἐστὶν ἡ πρὸς ὀλίγον φαινόμενη, ἔπειτα [δὲ] ἀφανιζομένη) <sup>15</sup> ἀντὶ τοῦ λέγειν ὑμᾶς· Ἐὰν ὁ Κύριος θελήσῃ, καὶ ζήσωμεν, καὶ ποιήσομεν τοῦτο ἢ ἐκείνο· <sup>16</sup> νῦν δὲ καυχᾶσθε ἐν ταῖς ἀλαζονείαις ὑμῶν. Πᾶσα καύχησις τοιαύτη πονηρὰ ἐστίν. <sup>17</sup> Εἰδότε οὖν καλὸν ποιεῖν, καὶ μὴ ποιοῦντι, ἁμαρτία αὐτῷ ἐστίν.

V. 1 <sup>a</sup> Ἄγε νῦν, οἱ πλούσιοι, κλαύσατε ὀλολύζοντες ἐπὶ ταῖς ταλαπωρίαις ὑμῶν ταῖς ἐπερχομέναις. <sup>b</sup> Ὁ πλοῦτος ὑμῶν σέσηπε, καὶ τὰ ἱμάτια ὑμῶν σητόβρωτα γέγονεν <sup>c</sup> ὁ χρυσοὺς ὑμῶν καὶ ὁ ἄργυρος κατὰνται, καὶ ὁ ἰὸς αὐτῶν εἰς

&c.; and Aristoph. Plut. 657, 772. Theom. 190. Ecc. 62.

15. ἀντὶ τοῦ λέγειν—ἐκείνο] These words are closely connected with σήμερον καὶ αὔριον, the clause ποία γὰρ—ἀφανιζομένη being parenthetical. Render: 'instead of saying [as ye ought], If the Lord please that we live, we will do so and so.' Even the Heathens, indeed, used expressions of this sort, though, we may suppose, rather as words of course than with any settled belief in the Providence of God.—καὶ ζήσωμεν, καὶ ποιήσ. The Fut. Ind. form at ποιήσ. is preferable for the same reason as at v. 13; but propriety of language absolutely requires ζήσωμεν, for which there is strong external authority (confirmed by internal evidence), and it has the support of the Pesch. Syr. Version. Nevertheless Lachm. and Tisch. edit ζήσωμεν, in defiance of their own punctuation; for the reading they follow requires Wetstein's punctuation—ζήσωμεν, καὶ ποιήσωμεν.

16. νῦν δὲ καυχᾶσθε ἐν ταῖς ἀλαζονείαις ὑ.] The full sense is, 'Whereas now (as the case too frequently now is) ye pride yourselves in your vauntful projects and proud plans, [anticipating a sure success.]' Comp. 1 John ii. 16, ἡ ἀλαζονεία τοῦ βίου. Jos. Bell. iv. 3, 5, ἐπὶ λαλοῦντο—τοῖς ταλιμασίαις.

17. εἰδότε οὖν καλὸν, &c.] An inference or conclusion meant to preoccupy the possible objection, 'We all know this:' to which it is replied, 'Well, then, he who sins against light and knowledge is guilty of an aggravated offence;' lit. 'to him there is sin,' answering to what is said, Gen. iv. 7, 'sin lieth at the door.' See Luke xii. 47. John ix. 41. xv. 22. Rom. i. 20. By the term καλὸν is meant 'what is right,'—namely, the acknowledging of the Providence of God, the humble expression of dependence on which is bounden duty.

V. 1—6. Some Commentators suppose this portion to be addressed to the unbelieving Jews, among whom the Jewish Christians lived under persecution, and of whom many were rich, and led a dissolute life. Accordingly by the miseries here adverted to are, they think, to be understood those in which the Jews, even in foreign countries, were involved, together with those of Judæa itself, during the war with the Romans, and which the rich must have been especially exposed to suffer. I prefer, however, with others, as Carpzov, Rosenm., and Schott, to understand the Apostle's words in a more extensive view, as meant to apply alw to, if not exclusively intended for, those worldly-minded and nominal Christians whom he censures supra v. 13—17; persons whose minds were wholly devoted to the business and the pleasures of this life. Here, then, enumerating the evils which shall one day overtake eventually the rich and prosperous of this world, the Apostle, we may suppose, has in view, besides particular evils belonging to particular times, those evils which in all times and ages may be said to result from riches abused,—evils which, in the present misery and future woe entailed on their possessors, may well be called so many 'sorrows with which they have pierced themselves through' (1 Tim. vi. 10.) 2, 3. Here, under lively imagery derived from the Prophets of old, is designated the perishable nature of all earthly possessions. See Job xiii. 28. Ps. xxi. 9. Isa. x. 16, xxvii. 11, and espec. Lam. iv. 1.—In the words ὁ πλοῦτος—κατὰνται are represented three kinds of wealth, 1. that consisting in agricultural produce, especially corn, wool, &c. 2. That consisting in costly clothes, or webs of cloth (Hdod. iv. 43). 3. That of gold or silver, whether in ingots, or coined into money. These are all severally represented as perishing, not by the using, but for want of use, by being hoarded up uselessly. The first kind of wealth is graphically represented as rotting in the granaries, for want of being dealt out for use. This sort of wealth is that espec. adverted to in the parable of the rich man, Luke xii. 16—21, where such riches are termed τὰ γυνήματα τῆς γῆς καίματα. By the term σέσηπε applied to this sort of wealth is denoted the rotting by mildew, or being eaten up by insects. The term σητόβρωτα applied to the garments and cloth (τὰ αγαθὰ καίματα σὺν τῇ παλλὰ, Luke xii. 19), corresponds to σὺν καὶ βρώσει in Matt. vi. 19. Comp. Menand. Frag. Incert. xii., ὁ μὲν λόγος τοῦ σιδήριον λυγίσαι—τὸ δ' ἱμάτιον ('the cloth') οἱ σήτες. By κατὰνται, as applied to the third particular (the precious metal) is denoted the growing rusty for want of being kept bright by a liberal circulation. Of this amazing of useless wealth it is well said by Philoeterus ap. Athen. p. 280, D.: Εἰς αὐτὸν οὐχὶ φρονητέον (scil. εἶναι) δεῖν ἵσταται. Περιέργον ἵσταναι ἀποκαίεσθαι παντὶ ἱσῶλον ἰδὼν ἀργύριον. So I point the passage. In vv. 2, 3, is designated the rich miser, who denieth himself what is necessary, v. 2, letting his wealth go unused (v. 3), or withholding more than is meet.—By καὶ ὁ ἰὸς αὐτῶν σὺν μαορ. is meant 'that their non-use by a liberal circulation will afford matter for their condemnation.' Comp. Eurip. Hippol. 1061, ἡ δὲ δόλος μαρτύριον ὑμῖν ἔσται, καὶ φάγεται τὰς σάρκας ὑμῶν ὡς πῦρ· ἐθησαυρίσατε ἐν ἐσχάταις ἡμέραις. <sup>d Lev. 19. 12.</sup> <sup>Deut. 24. 14.</sup> <sup>Job 24. 10.</sup> <sup>Mal. 2. 6.</sup> <sup>Ecclus. 24.</sup> <sup>Job 31. 12.</sup> <sup>Luke 16. 19.</sup> <sup>1. 2.</sup> τῶν ἐργατῶν τῶν ἀμισθίων τὰς χώρας ὑμῶν, ὁ ἀπεστερημένος ἀφ' ὑμῶν, κρᾶζει· καὶ αἱ βοαὶ τῶν θερισάντων εἰς τὰ ὦτα Κυρίου Σαβαὼθ εἰσεληλύθασιν. <sup>5.</sup> <sup>6.</sup> <sup>7.</sup> <sup>8.</sup> <sup>9.</sup> <sup>10.</sup> <sup>11.</sup> <sup>12.</sup> <sup>13.</sup> <sup>14.</sup> <sup>15.</sup> <sup>16.</sup> <sup>17.</sup> <sup>18.</sup> <sup>19.</sup> <sup>20.</sup> <sup>21.</sup> <sup>22.</sup> <sup>23.</sup> <sup>24.</sup> <sup>25.</sup> <sup>26.</sup> <sup>27.</sup> <sup>28.</sup> <sup>29.</sup> <sup>30.</sup> <sup>31.</sup> <sup>32.</sup> <sup>33.</sup> <sup>34.</sup> <sup>35.</sup> <sup>36.</sup> <sup>37.</sup> <sup>38.</sup> <sup>39.</sup> <sup>40.</sup> <sup>41.</sup> <sup>42.</sup> <sup>43.</sup> <sup>44.</sup> <sup>45.</sup> <sup>46.</sup> <sup>47.</sup> <sup>48.</sup> <sup>49.</sup> <sup>50.</sup> <sup>51.</sup> <sup>52.</sup> <sup>53.</sup> <sup>54.</sup> <sup>55.</sup> <sup>56.</sup> <sup>57.</sup> <sup>58.</sup> <sup>59.</sup> <sup>60.</sup> <sup>61.</sup> <sup>62.</sup> <sup>63.</sup> <sup>64.</sup> <sup>65.</sup> <sup>66.</sup> <sup>67.</sup> <sup>68.</sup> <sup>69.</sup> <sup>70.</sup> <sup>71.</sup> <sup>72.</sup> <sup>73.</sup> <sup>74.</sup> <sup>75.</sup> <sup>76.</sup> <sup>77.</sup> <sup>78.</sup> <sup>79.</sup> <sup>80.</sup> <sup>81.</sup> <sup>82.</sup> <sup>83.</sup> <sup>84.</sup> <sup>85.</sup> <sup>86.</sup> <sup>87.</sup> <sup>88.</sup> <sup>89.</sup> <sup>90.</sup> <sup>91.</sup> <sup>92.</sup> <sup>93.</sup> <sup>94.</sup> <sup>95.</sup> <sup>96.</sup> <sup>97.</sup> <sup>98.</sup> <sup>99.</sup> <sup>100.</sup> <sup>101.</sup> <sup>102.</sup> <sup>103.</sup> <sup>104.</sup> <sup>105.</sup> <sup>106.</sup> <sup>107.</sup> <sup>108.</sup> <sup>109.</sup> <sup>110.</sup> <sup>111.</sup> <sup>112.</sup> <sup>113.</sup> <sup>114.</sup> <sup>115.</sup> <sup>116.</sup> <sup>117.</sup> <sup>118.</sup> <sup>119.</sup> <sup>120.</sup> <sup>121.</sup> <sup>122.</sup> <sup>123.</sup> <sup>124.</sup> <sup>125.</sup> <sup>126.</sup> <sup>127.</sup> <sup>128.</sup> <sup>129.</sup> <sup>130.</sup> <sup>131.</sup> <sup>132.</sup> <sup>133.</sup> <sup>134.</sup> <sup>135.</sup> <sup>136.</sup> <sup>137.</sup> <sup>138.</sup> <sup>139.</sup> <sup>140.</sup> <sup>141.</sup> <sup>142.</sup> <sup>143.</sup> <sup>144.</sup> <sup>145.</sup> <sup>146.</sup> <sup>147.</sup> <sup>148.</sup> <sup>149.</sup> <sup>150.</sup> <sup>151.</sup> <sup>152.</sup> <sup>153.</sup> <sup>154.</sup> <sup>155.</sup> <sup>156.</sup> <sup>157.</sup> <sup>158.</sup> <sup>159.</sup> <sup>160.</sup> <sup>161.</sup> <sup>162.</sup> <sup>163.</sup> <sup>164.</sup> <sup>165.</sup> <sup>166.</sup> <sup>167.</sup> <sup>168.</sup> <sup>169.</sup> <sup>170.</sup> <sup>171.</sup> <sup>172.</sup> <sup>173.</sup> <sup>174.</sup> <sup>175.</sup> <sup>176.</sup> <sup>177.</sup> <sup>178.</sup> <sup>179.</sup> <sup>180.</sup> <sup>181.</sup> <sup>182.</sup> <sup>183.</sup> <sup>184.</sup> <sup>185.</sup> <sup>186.</sup> <sup>187.</sup> <sup>188.</sup> <sup>189.</sup> <sup>190.</sup> <sup>191.</sup> <sup>192.</sup> <sup>193.</sup> <sup>194.</sup> <sup>195.</sup> <sup>196.</sup> <sup>197.</sup> <sup>198.</sup> <sup>199.</sup> <sup>200.</sup> <sup>201.</sup> <sup>202.</sup> <sup>203.</sup> <sup>204.</sup> <sup>205.</sup> <sup>206.</sup> <sup>207.</sup> <sup>208.</sup> <sup>209.</sup> <sup>210.</sup> <sup>211.</sup> <sup>212.</sup> <sup>213.</sup> <sup>214.</sup> <sup>215.</sup> <sup>216.</sup> <sup>217.</sup> <sup>218.</sup> <sup>219.</sup> <sup>220.</sup> <sup>221.</sup> <sup>222.</sup> <sup>223.</sup> <sup>224.</sup> <sup>225.</sup> <sup>226.</sup> <sup>227.</sup> <sup>228.</sup> <sup>229.</sup> <sup>230.</sup> <sup>231.</sup> <sup>232.</sup> <sup>233.</sup> <sup>234.</sup> <sup>235.</sup> <sup>236.</sup> <sup>237.</sup> <sup>238.</sup> <sup>239.</sup> <sup>240.</sup> <sup>241.</sup> <sup>242.</sup> <sup>243.</sup> <sup>244.</sup> <sup>245.</sup> <sup>246.</sup> <sup>247.</sup> <sup>248.</sup> <sup>249.</sup> <sup>250.</sup> <sup>251.</sup> <sup>252.</sup> <sup>253.</sup> <sup>254.</sup> <sup>255.</sup> <sup>256.</sup> <sup>257.</sup> <sup>258.</sup> <sup>259.</sup> <sup>260.</sup> <sup>261.</sup> <sup>262.</sup> <sup>263.</sup> <sup>264.</sup> <sup>265.</sup> <sup>266.</sup> <sup>267.</sup> <sup>268.</sup> <sup>269.</sup> <sup>270.</sup> <sup>271.</sup> <sup>272.</sup> <sup>273.</sup> <sup>274.</sup> <sup>275.</sup> <sup>276.</sup> <sup>277.</sup> <sup>278.</sup> <sup>279.</sup> <sup>280.</sup> <sup>281.</sup> <sup>282.</sup> <sup>283.</sup> <sup>284.</sup> <sup>285.</sup> <sup>286.</sup> <sup>287.</sup> <sup>288.</sup> <sup>289.</sup> <sup>290.</sup> <sup>291.</sup> <sup>292.</sup> <sup>293.</sup> <sup>294.</sup> <sup>295.</sup> <sup>296.</sup> <sup>297.</sup> <sup>298.</sup> <sup>299.</sup> <sup>300.</sup> <sup>301.</sup> <sup>302.</sup> <sup>303.</sup> <sup>304.</sup> <sup>305.</sup> <sup>306.</sup> <sup>307.</sup> <sup>308.</sup> <sup>309.</sup> <sup>310.</sup> <sup>311.</sup> <sup>312.</sup> <sup>313.</sup> <sup>314.</sup> <sup>315.</sup> <sup>316.</sup> <sup>317.</sup> <sup>318.</sup> <sup>319.</sup> <sup>320.</sup> <sup>321.</sup> <sup>322.</sup> <sup>323.</sup> <sup>324.</sup> <sup>325.</sup> <sup>326.</sup> <sup>327.</sup> <sup>328.</sup> <sup>329.</sup> <sup>330.</sup> <sup>331.</sup> <sup>332.</sup> <sup>333.</sup> <sup>334.</sup> <sup>335.</sup> <sup>336.</sup> <sup>337.</sup> <sup>338.</sup> <sup>339.</sup> <sup>340.</sup> <sup>341.</sup> <sup>342.</sup> <sup>343.</sup> <sup>344.</sup> <sup>345.</sup> <sup>346.</sup> <sup>347.</sup> <sup>348.</sup> <sup>349.</sup> <sup>350.</sup> <sup>351.</sup> <sup>352.</sup> <sup>353.</sup> <sup>354.</sup> <sup>355.</sup> <sup>356.</sup> <sup>357.</sup> <sup>358.</sup> <sup>359.</sup> <sup>360.</sup> <sup>361.</sup> <sup>362.</sup> <sup>363.</sup> <sup>364.</sup> <sup>365.</sup> <sup>366.</sup> <sup>367.</sup> <sup>368.</sup> <sup>369.</sup> <sup>370.</sup> <sup>371.</sup> <sup>372.</sup> <sup>373.</sup> <sup>374.</sup> <sup>375.</sup> <sup>376.</sup> <sup>377.</sup> <sup>378.</sup> <sup>379.</sup> <sup>380.</sup> <sup>381.</sup> <sup>382.</sup> <sup>383.</sup> <sup>384.</sup> <sup>385.</sup> <sup>386.</sup> <sup>387.</sup> <sup>388.</sup> <sup>389.</sup> <sup>390.</sup> <sup>391.</sup> <sup>392.</sup> <sup>393.</sup> <sup>394.</sup> <sup>395.</sup> <sup>396.</sup> <sup>397.</sup> <sup>398.</sup> <sup>399.</sup> <sup>400.</sup> <sup>401.</sup> <sup>402.</sup> <sup>403.</sup> <sup>404.</sup> <sup>405.</sup> <sup>406.</sup> <sup>407.</sup> <sup>408.</sup> <sup>409.</sup> <sup>410.</sup> <sup>411.</sup> <sup>412.</sup> <sup>413.</sup> <sup>414.</sup> <sup>415.</sup> <sup>416.</sup> <sup>417.</sup> <sup>418.</sup> <sup>419.</sup> <sup>420.</sup> <sup>421.</sup> <sup>422.</sup> <sup>423.</sup> <sup>424.</sup> <sup>425.</sup> <sup>426.</sup> <sup>427.</sup> <sup>428.</sup> <sup>429.</sup> <sup>430.</sup> <sup>431.</sup> <sup>432.</sup> <sup>433.</sup> <sup>434.</sup> <sup>435.</sup> <sup>436.</sup> <sup>437.</sup> <sup>438.</sup> <sup>439.</sup> <sup>440.</sup> <sup>441.</sup> <sup>442.</sup> <sup>443.</sup> <sup>444.</sup> <sup>445.</sup> <sup>446.</sup> <sup>447.</sup> <sup>448.</sup> <sup>449.</sup> <sup>450.</sup> <sup>451.</sup> <sup>452.</sup> <sup>453.</sup> <sup>454.</sup> <sup>455.</sup> <sup>456.</sup> <sup>457.</sup> <sup>458.</sup> <sup>459.</sup> <sup>460.</sup> <sup>461.</sup> <sup>462.</sup> <sup>463.</sup> <sup>464.</sup> <sup>465.</sup> <sup>466.</sup> <sup>467.</sup> <sup>468.</sup> <sup>469.</sup> <sup>470.</sup> <sup>471.</sup> <sup>472.</sup> <sup>473.</sup> <sup>474.</sup> <sup>475.</sup> <sup>476.</sup> <sup>477.</sup> <sup>478.</sup> <sup>479.</sup> <sup>480.</sup> <sup>481.</sup> <sup>482.</sup> <sup>483.</sup> <sup>484.</sup> <sup>485.</sup> <sup>486.</sup> <sup>487.</sup> <sup>488.</sup> <sup>489.</sup> <sup>490.</sup> <sup>491.</sup> <sup>492.</sup> <sup>493.</sup> <sup>494.</sup> <sup>495.</sup> <sup>496.</sup> <sup>497.</sup> <sup>498.</sup> <sup>499.</sup> <sup>500.</sup> <sup>501.</sup> <sup>502.</sup> <sup>503.</sup> <sup>504.</sup> <sup>505.</sup> <sup>506.</sup> <sup>507.</sup> <sup>508.</sup> <sup>509.</sup> <sup>510.</sup> <sup>511.</sup> <sup>512.</sup> <sup>513.</sup> <sup>514.</sup> <sup>515.</sup> <sup>516.</sup> <sup>517.</sup> <sup>518.</sup> <sup>519.</sup> <sup>520.</sup> <sup>521.</sup> <sup>522.</sup> <sup>523.</sup> <sup>524.</sup> <sup>525.</sup> <sup>526.</sup> <sup>527.</sup> <sup>528.</sup> <sup>529.</sup> <sup>530.</sup> <sup>531.</sup> <sup>532.</sup> <sup>533.</sup> <sup>534.</sup> <sup>535.</sup> <sup>536.</sup> <sup>537.</sup> <sup>538.</sup> <sup>539.</sup> <sup>540.</sup> <sup>541.</sup> <sup>542.</sup> <sup>543.</sup> <sup>544.</sup> <sup>545.</sup> <sup>546.</sup> <sup>547.</sup> <sup>548.</sup> <sup>549.</sup> <sup>550.</sup> <sup>551.</sup> <sup>552.</sup> <sup>553.</sup> <sup>554.</sup> <sup>555.</sup> <sup>556.</sup> <sup>557.</sup> <sup>558.</sup> <sup>559.</sup> <sup>560.</sup> <sup>561.</sup> <sup>562.</sup> <sup>563.</sup> <sup>564.</sup> <sup>565.</sup> <sup>566.</sup> <sup>567.</sup> <sup>568.</sup> <sup>569.</sup> <sup>570.</sup> <sup>571.</sup> <sup>572.</sup> <sup>573.</sup> <sup>574.</sup> <sup>575.</sup> <sup>576.</sup> <sup>577.</sup> <sup>578.</sup> <sup>579.</sup> <sup>580.</sup> <sup>581.</sup> <sup>582.</sup> <sup>583.</sup> <sup>584.</sup> <sup>585.</sup> <sup>586.</sup> <sup>587.</sup> <sup>588.</sup> <sup>589.</sup> <sup>590.</sup> <sup>591.</sup> <sup>592.</sup> <sup>593.</sup> <sup>594.</sup> <sup>595.</sup> <sup>596.</sup> <sup>597.</sup> <sup>598.</sup> <sup>599.</sup> <sup>600.</sup> <sup>601.</sup> <sup>602.</sup> <sup>603.</sup> <sup>604.</sup> <sup>605.</sup> <sup>606.</sup> <sup>607.</sup> <sup>608.</sup> <sup>609.</sup> <sup>610.</sup> <sup>611.</sup> <sup>612.</sup> <sup>613.</sup> <sup>614.</sup> <sup>615.</sup> <sup>616.</sup> <sup>617.</sup> <sup>618.</sup> <sup>619.</sup> <sup>620.</sup> <sup>621.</sup> <sup>622.</sup> <sup>623.</sup> <sup>624.</sup> <sup>625.</sup> <sup>626.</sup> <sup>627.</sup> <sup>628.</sup> <sup>629.</sup> <sup>630.</sup> <sup>631.</sup> <sup>632.</sup> <sup>633.</sup> <sup>634.</sup> <sup>635.</sup> <sup>636.</sup> <sup>637.</sup> <sup>638.</sup> <sup>639.</sup> <sup>640.</sup> <sup>641.</sup> <sup>642.</sup> <sup>643.</sup> <sup>644.</sup> <sup>645.</sup> <sup>646.</sup> <sup>647.</sup> <sup>648.</sup> <sup>649.</sup> <sup>650.</sup> <sup>651.</sup> <sup>652.</sup> <sup>653.</sup> <sup>654.</sup> <sup>655.</sup> <sup>656.</sup> <sup>657.</sup> <sup>658.</sup> <sup>659.</sup> <sup>660.</sup> <sup>661.</sup> <sup>662.</sup> <sup>663.</sup> <sup>664.</sup> <sup>665.</sup> <sup>666.</sup> <sup>667.</sup> <sup>668.</sup> <sup>669.</sup> <sup>670.</sup> <sup>671.</sup> <sup>672.</sup> <sup>673.</sup> <sup>674.</sup> <sup>675.</sup> <sup>676.</sup> <sup>677.</sup> <sup>678.</sup> <sup>679.</sup> <sup>680.</sup> <sup>681.</sup> <sup>682.</sup> <sup>683.</sup> <sup>684.</sup> <sup>685.</sup> <sup>686.</sup> <sup>687.</sup> <sup>688.</sup> <sup>689.</sup> <sup>690.</sup> <sup>691.</sup> <sup>692.</sup> <sup>693.</sup> <sup>694.</sup> <sup>695.</sup> <sup>696.</sup> <sup>697.</sup> <sup>698.</sup> <sup>699.</sup> <sup>700.</sup> <sup>701.</sup> <sup>702.</sup> <sup>703.</sup> <sup>704.</sup> <sup>705.</sup> <sup>706.</sup> <sup>707.</sup> <sup>708.</sup> <sup>709.</sup> <sup>710.</sup> <sup>711.</sup> <sup>712.</sup> <sup>713.</sup> <sup>714.</sup> <sup>715.</sup> <sup>716.</sup> <sup>717.</sup> <sup>718.</sup> <sup>719.</sup> <sup>720.</sup> <sup>721.</sup> <sup>722.</sup> <sup>723.</sup> <sup>724.</sup> <sup>725.</sup> <sup>726.</sup> <sup>727.</sup> <sup>728.</sup> <sup>729.</sup> <sup>730.</sup> <sup>731.</sup> <sup>732.</sup> <sup>733.</sup> <sup>734.</sup> <sup>735.</sup> <sup>736.</sup> <sup>737.</sup> <sup>738.</sup> <sup>739.</sup> <sup>740.</sup> <sup>741.</sup> <sup>742.</sup> <sup>743.</sup> <sup>744.</sup> <sup>745.</sup> <sup>746.</sup> <sup>747.</sup> <sup>748.</sup> <sup>749.</sup> <sup>750.</sup> <sup>751.</sup> <sup>752.</sup> <sup>753.</sup> <sup>754.</sup> <sup>755.</sup> <sup>756.</sup> <sup>757.</sup> <sup>758.</sup> <sup>759.</sup> <sup>760.</sup> <sup>761.</sup> <sup>762.</sup> <sup>763.</sup> <sup>764.</sup> <sup>765.</sup> <sup>766.</sup> <sup>767.</sup> <sup>768.</sup> <sup>769.</sup> <sup>770.</sup> <sup>771.</sup> <sup>772.</sup> <sup>773.</sup> <sup>774.</sup> <sup>775.</sup> <sup>776.</sup> <sup>777.</sup> <sup>778.</sup> <sup>779.</sup> <sup>780.</sup> <sup>781.</sup> <sup>782.</sup> <sup>783.</sup> <sup>784.</sup> <sup>785.</sup> <sup>786.</sup> <sup>787.</sup> <sup>788.</sup> <sup>789.</sup> <sup>790.</sup> <sup>791.</sup> <sup>792.</sup> <sup>793.</sup> <sup>794.</sup> <sup>795.</sup> <sup>796.</sup> <sup>797.</sup> <sup>798.</sup> <sup>799.</sup> <sup>800.</sup> <sup>801.</sup> <sup>802.</sup> <sup>803.</sup> <sup>804.</sup> <sup>805.</sup> <sup>806.</sup> <sup>807.</sup> <sup>808.</sup> <sup>809.</sup> <sup>810.</sup> <sup>811.</sup> <sup>812.</sup> <sup>813.</sup> <sup>814.</sup> <sup>815.</sup> <sup>816.</sup> <sup>817.</sup> <sup>818.</sup> <sup>819.</sup> <sup>820.</sup> <sup>821.</sup> <sup>822.</sup> <sup>823.</sup> <sup>824.</sup> <sup>825.</sup> <sup>826.</sup> <sup>827.</sup> <sup>828.</sup> <sup>829.</sup> <sup>830.</sup> <sup>831.</sup> <sup>832.</sup> <sup>833.</sup> <sup>834.</sup> <sup>835.</sup> <sup>836.</sup> <sup>837.</sup> <sup>838.</sup> <sup>839.</sup> <sup>840.</sup> <sup>841.</sup> <sup>842.</sup> <sup>843.</sup> <sup>844.</sup> <sup>845.</sup> <sup>846.</sup> <sup>847.</sup> <sup>848.</sup> <sup>849.</sup> <sup>850.</sup> <sup>851.</sup> <sup>852.</sup> <sup>853.</sup> <sup>854.</sup> <sup>855.</sup> <sup>856.</sup> <sup>857.</sup> <sup>858.</sup> <sup>859.</sup> <sup>860.</sup> <sup>861.</sup> <sup>862.</sup> <sup>863.</sup> <sup>864.</sup> <sup>865.</sup> <sup>866.</sup> <sup>867.</sup> <sup>868.</sup> <sup>869.</sup> <sup>870.</sup> <sup>871.</sup> <sup>872.</sup> <sup>873.</sup> <sup>874.</sup> <sup>875.</sup> <sup>876.</sup> <sup>877.</sup> <sup>878.</sup> <sup>879.</sup> <sup>880.</sup> <sup>881.</sup> <sup>882.</sup> <sup>883.</sup> <sup>884.</sup> <sup>885.</sup> <sup>886.</sup> <sup>887.</sup> <sup>888.</sup> <sup>889.</sup> <sup>890.</sup> <sup>891.</sup> <sup>892.</sup> <sup>893.</sup> <sup>894.</sup> <sup>895.</sup> <sup>896.</sup> <sup>897.</sup> <sup>898.</sup> <sup>899.</sup> <sup>900.</sup> <sup>901.</sup> <sup>902.</sup> <sup>903.</sup> <sup>904.</sup> <sup>905.</sup> <sup>906.</sup> <sup>907.</sup> <sup>908.</sup> <sup>909.</sup> <sup>910.</sup> <sup>911.</sup> <sup>912.</sup> <sup>913.</sup> <sup>914.</sup> <sup>915.</sup> <sup>916.</sup> <sup>917.</sup> <sup>918.</sup> <sup>919.</sup> <sup>920.</sup> <sup>921.</sup> <sup>922.</sup> <sup>923.</sup> <sup>924.</sup> <sup>925.</sup> <sup>926.</sup> <sup>927.</sup> <sup>928.</sup> <sup>929.</sup> <sup>930.</sup> <sup>931.</sup> <sup>932.</sup> <sup>933.</sup> <sup>934.</sup> <sup>935.</sup> <sup>936.</sup> <sup>937.</sup> <sup>938.</sup> <sup>939.</sup> <sup>940.</sup> <sup>941.</sup> <sup>942.</sup> <sup>943.</sup> <sup>944.</sup> <sup>945.</sup> <sup>946.</sup> <sup>947.</sup> <sup>948.</sup> <sup>949.</sup> <sup>950.</sup> <sup>951.</sup> <sup>952.</sup> <sup>953.</sup> <sup>954.</sup> <sup>955.</sup> <sup>956.</sup> <sup>957.</sup> <sup>958.</sup> <sup>959.</sup> <sup>960.</sup> <sup>961.</sup> <sup>962.</sup> <sup>963.</sup> <sup>964.</sup> <sup>965.</sup> <sup>966.</sup> <sup>967.</sup> <sup>968.</sup> <sup>969.</sup> <sup>970.</sup> <sup>971.</sup> <sup>972.</sup> <sup>973.</sup> <sup>974.</sup> <sup>975.</sup> <sup>976.</sup> <sup>977.</sup> <sup>978.</sup> <sup>979.</sup> <sup>980.</sup> <sup>981.</sup> <sup>982.</sup> <sup>983.</sup> <sup>984.</sup> <sup>985.</sup> <sup>986.</sup> <sup>987.</sup> <sup>988.</sup> <sup>989.</sup> <sup>990.</sup> <sup>991.</sup> <sup>992.</sup> <sup>993.</sup> <sup>994.</sup> <sup>995.</sup> <sup>996.</sup> <sup>997.</sup> <sup>998.</sup> <sup>999.</sup> <sup>1000.</sup> <sup>1001.</sup> <sup>1002.</sup> <sup>1003.</sup> <sup>1004.</sup> <sup>1005.</sup> <sup>1006.</sup> <sup>1007.</sup> <sup>1008.</sup> <sup>1009.</sup> <sup>1010.</sup> <sup>1011.</sup> <sup>1012.</sup> <sup>1013.</sup> <sup>1014.</sup> <sup>1015.</sup> <sup>1016.</sup> <sup>1017.</sup> <sup>1018.</sup> <sup>1019.</sup> <sup>1020.</sup> <sup>1021.</sup> <sup>1022.</sup> <sup>1023.</sup> <sup>1024.</sup> <sup>1025.</sup> <sup>1026.</sup> <sup>1027.</sup> <sup>1028.</sup> <sup>1029.</sup> <sup>1030.</sup> <sup>1031.</sup> <sup>1032.</sup> <sup>1033.</sup> <sup>1034.</sup> <sup>1035.</sup> <sup>1036.</sup> <sup>1037.</sup> <sup>1038.</sup> <sup>1039.</sup> <sup>1040.</sup> <sup>1041.</sup> <sup>1042.</sup> <sup>1043.</sup> <sup>1044.</sup> <sup>1045.</sup> <sup>1046.</sup> <sup>1047.</sup> <sup>1048.</sup> <sup>1049.</sup> <sup>1050.</sup> <sup>1051.</sup> <sup>1052.</sup> <sup>1053.</sup> <sup>1054.</sup> <sup>1055.</sup> <sup>1056.</sup> <sup>1057.</sup> <sup>1058.</sup> <sup>1059.</sup> <sup>1060.</sup> <sup>1061.</sup> <sup>1062.</sup> <sup>1063.</sup> <sup>1064.</sup> <sup>1065.</sup> <sup>1066.</sup> <sup>1067.</sup> <sup>1068.</sup> <sup>1069.</sup> <sup>1070.</sup> <sup>1071.</sup> <sup>1072.</sup> <sup>1073.</sup> <sup>1074.</sup> <sup>1075.</sup> <sup>1076.</sup> <sup>1077.</sup> <sup>1078.</sup> <sup>1079.</sup> <sup>1080.</sup> <sup>1081.</sup> <sup>1082.</sup> <sup>1083.</sup> <sup>1084.</sup> <sup>1085.</sup> <sup>1086.</sup> <sup>1087.</sup> <sup>1088.</sup> <sup>1089.</sup> <sup>1090.</sup> <sup>1091.</sup> <sup>1092.</sup> <sup>1093.</sup> <sup>1094.</sup> <sup>1095.</sup> <sup>1096.</sup> <sup>1097.</sup> <sup>1098.</sup> <sup>1099.</sup> <sup>1100.</sup> <sup>1101.</sup> <sup>1102.</sup> <sup>1103.</sup> <sup>1104.</sup> <sup>1105.</sup> <sup>1106.</sup> <sup>1107.</sup> <sup>1108.</sup> <sup>1109.</sup> <sup>1110.</sup> <sup>1111.</sup> <sup>1112.</sup> <sup>1113.</sup> <sup>1114.</sup> <sup>1115.</sup> <sup>1116.</sup> <sup>1117.</sup> <sup>1118.</sup> <sup>1119.</sup> <sup>1120.</sup> <sup>1121.</sup> <sup>1122.</sup> <sup>1123.</sup> <sup>1124.</sup> <sup>1125.</sup> <sup>1126.</sup> <sup>1127.</sup> <sup>1128.</sup> <sup>1129.</sup> <sup>1130.</sup> <sup>1131.</sup> <sup>1132.</sup> <sup>1133.</sup> <sup>1134.</sup> <sup>1135.</sup> <sup>1136.</sup> <sup>1137.</sup> <sup>1138.</sup> <sup>1139.</sup> <sup>1140.</sup> <sup>1141.</sup> <sup>1142.</sup> <sup>1143.</sup> <sup>1144.</sup> <sup>1145.</sup> <sup>1146.</sup> <sup>1147.</sup> <sup>1148.</sup> <sup>1149.</sup> <sup>1150.</sup> <sup>1151.</sup> <sup>1152.</sup> <sup>1153.</sup> <sup>1154.</sup> <sup>1155.</sup> <sup>1156.</sup> <sup>1157.</sup> <sup>1158.</sup> <sup>1159.</sup> <sup>1160.</sup> <sup>1161.</sup> <sup>1162.</sup> <sup>1163.</sup> <sup>1164.</sup> <sup>1165.</sup> <sup>1166.</sup> <sup>1167.</sup> <sup>1168.</sup> <sup>1169.</sup> <sup>1170.</sup> <sup>1171.</sup> <sup>1172.</sup> <sup>1173.</sup> <sup>1174.</sup> <sup>1175.</sup> <sup>1176.</sup> <sup>1177.</sup> <sup>1178.</sup> <sup>1179.</sup> <sup>1180.</sup> <sup>1181.</sup> <sup>1182.</sup> <sup>1183.</sup> <sup>1184.</sup> <sup>1185.</sup> <sup>1186.</sup> <sup>1187.</sup> <sup>1188.</sup> <sup>1189.</sup> <sup>1190.</sup> <sup>1191.</sup> <sup>1192.</sup> <sup>1193.</sup> <sup>1194.</sup> <sup>1195.</sup> <sup>1196.</sup> <sup>1197.</sup> <sup>1198.</sup> <sup>1199.</sup> <sup>1200.</sup> <sup>1201.</sup> <sup>1202.</sup> <sup>1203.</sup> <sup>1204.</sup> <sup>1205.</sup> <sup>1206.</sup> <sup>1207.</sup> <sup>1208.</sup> <sup>1209.</sup> <sup>1210.</sup> <sup>1211.</sup> <sup>1212.</sup> <sup>1213.</sup> <sup>1214.</sup> <sup>1215.</sup> <sup>1216.</sup> <sup>1217.</sup> <sup>1218.</sup> <sup>1219.</sup> <sup>1220.</sup> <sup>1221.</sup> <sup>1222.</sup> <sup>1223.</sup> <sup>1224.</sup> <sup>1225.</sup> <sup>1226.</sup> <sup>1227.</sup> <sup>1228.</sup> <sup>1229.</sup> <sup>1230.</sup> <sup>1231.</sup> <sup>1232.</sup> <sup>1233.</sup> <sup>1234.</sup> <sup>1235.</sup> <sup>1236.</sup> <sup>1237.</sup> <sup>1238.</sup> <sup>1239.</sup> <sup>1240.</sup> <sup>1241.</sup> <sup>1242.</sup> <sup>1243.</sup> <sup>1244.</sup> <sup>1245.</sup> <sup>1246.</sup> <sup>1247.</sup> <sup>1248.</sup> <sup>1249.</sup> <sup>1250.</sup> <sup>1251.</sup> <sup>1252.</sup> <sup>1253.</sup> <sup>1254.</sup> <sup>1255.</sup> <sup>1256.</sup> <sup>1257.</sup> <sup>1258.</sup> <sup>1259.</sup> <sup>1260.</sup> <sup>1261.</sup> <sup>1262.</sup> <sup>1263.</sup> <sup>1264.</sup> <sup>1265.</sup> <sup>1266.</sup> <sup>1267.</sup> <sup>1268.</sup> <sup>1269.</sup> <sup>1270.</sup> <sup>1271.</sup> <sup>1272.</sup> <sup>1273.</sup> <sup>1274.</sup> <sup>1275.</sup> <sup>1276.</sup> <sup>1277.</sup> <sup>1278.</sup> <sup>1279.</sup> <sup>1280.</sup> <sup>1281.</sup> <sup>1282.</sup> <sup>1283.</sup> <sup>1284.</sup> <sup>1285.</sup> <sup>1286.</sup> <sup>1287.</sup> <sup>1288.</sup> <sup>1289.</sup> <sup>1290.</sup> <sup>1291.</sup> <sup>1292.</sup> <sup>1293.</sup> <sup>1294.</sup> <sup>1295.</sup> <sup>1296.</sup> <sup>1297.</sup> <sup>1298.</sup> <sup>1299.</sup> <sup>1300.</sup> <sup>1301.</sup> <sup>1302.</sup> <sup>1303.</sup> <sup>1304.</sup> <sup>1305.</sup> <sup>1306.</sup> <sup>1307.</sup> <sup>1308.</sup> <sup>1309.</sup> <sup>1310.</sup> <sup>1311.</sup> <sup>13</sup>

† Deut. 11. 7<sup>ε</sup> Μακροθυμήσατε οὖν, ἀδελφοί, ἕως τῆς παρουσίας τοῦ Κυρίου. Ἴδου, ὁ γεωργὸς ἐκδέχεται τὸν τίμιον καρπὸν τῆς γῆς, μακροθυμῶν ἐπ' αὐτῷ, ἕως ἂν λάβῃ ὑετὸν πρῶϊμον καὶ ὄψιμον.
 8 μακροθυμήσατε καὶ ὑμεῖς, στηρίζετε τὰς καρδίας ὑμῶν, ὅτι ἡ παρουσία τοῦ Κυρίου ἤγγικε. 9<sup>η</sup> Μὴ στενάζετε κατ' ἀλλήλων, ἀδελφοί, ἵνα μὴ [κατα]κριθῆτε ἰδού, ὁ κριτὴς πρὸ τῶν θυρῶν
 1<sup>η</sup> Matt. 6. 12. ἔστηκεν. 10<sup>1</sup> Ὑπόδειγμα λάβετε τῆς κακοπαθείας, ἀδελφοί μου, Expositors, as Mackn., Rosenm., Abp. Newc., and Bp. Jebb, and, of ancient ones, by Œcumen. and Theophyl. As an argument for this latter view of the sense, Bp. Middl. urges that the hypothetical use of the Article, by which τὸν δίκαιον would stand for τὸν δίκαιον, would present too strong an expression. With far greater reason may we urge against the above view, the forced and jejune sense which must thus be assigned to the words following, οὐκ ἀντιτάσσεται ὑμῖν: namely, 'the Saviour opposes not your perverseness;' or, as Dr. Burton explains, 'He is not opposing you in your career of national ungodliness and obduracy, but lets you fill up the measure of your sins.' On the whole, the latter view, —ably supported by Calv. and Est.,—seems preferable. In the concluding clause, οὐκ ἀντιτάσσεται ὑμῖν, the purpose of the Apostle is to further set forth the guilt of this cruelty and oppression, by representing it as inflicted on the helpless and unresisting; see Calv. And how little effectual resistance the oppressed poor could, in that age, make to the oppressing rich, no one, conversant with ancient literature, will need to be informed. I need only refer to the passage of Juvenal, Sat. iii. 299, 'Libertas pauperis hæc est, Pulcratus rogat, et pugnis concisus adorat, Ut liceat pascis cum dentibus inde reverti.' I must not omit to add, that the interpretation by which τὸν δίκαιον is taken to denote our Lord Jesus Christ is ably refuted by Est., who decidedly prefers to understand the poor just man; and he remarks that elsewhere in Scripture ὁ δίκαιος, in this emphatical sense, is opposed to the rich and powerful. And he adduces, as exx., Isa. lvii. Pa. xciii. 21, et al. It is remarkable that the learned theologian should have omitted to adduce Wisd. ii. 12—18, which must have been in the mind of St. James; and, accordingly, he must have intended to take τὸν δίκαιον in the generic sense. How Bentley could have brought himself to suppose that St. James wrote not οὐκ ἀντίτ., but ὁ Κύριος οὐκ ἀντίτ., I am at a loss to imagine; and still more how Bp. Middl. could call the conjecture 'ingenious.'

7. Here the Apostle turns to the Christian converts suffering under their oppression, and exhorts them patiently to endure the injuries inflicted on them, seeing that the advent of the Lord Jesus Christ approaches. This he confirms and illustrates by the example of the husbandman, and by those held out to them in the suffering Prophets. (Pott.)—μακροθυμήσατε. The term has here a double signification; namely, patiently endure, and patiently wait for. Comp. Heb. x. 36, seqq., ὑπομονὴν γὰρ ἔχτε χριστῶν, 'for need ye have of patience'—until ὁ ἐρχόμενος ἔξῃ,—a passage forming the best comment on the present. By τῆς παρουσ. τ. Κ. seems meant, by a double sense, 'the advent of Christ at the destruction of Jerusalem,' and 'the final advent;' espec. the latter.—τὸν τίμιον καρπὸν. So called, as supplying that which forms the most necessary part of food to man, 'bread, the staff of life.' Τὸν πρῶϊμον, meaning the autumnal, as ὄψιμον does the vernal rains. Lachm. and Tisch. cancel ὑετὸν from a few MSS. But it cannot well be dispensed with. Nor is it likely to have been omitted, for, while the complete expression occurs several times in the Sept., no where do I find there the Adject. employed without ὑετὸν.

8. στηρίζετε τὰς καρδίας ὑ. i. e. 'stablish your hearts in faith and patience.'—ἤγγικε, 'hath drawn nigh;' i. e. 'is all but at hand;' which is required by πρὸ τῶν θυρῶν ἔστηκεν, just after. Comp. Matt. xxiv. 33.

9. μὴ στενάζετε κατ' ἀλλήλων.] The Common Version here is any thing but happy, whether in its textual or its marginal reading. Grudge, and groan, do not well represent the sense of the original; at least, if groan be retained, it must be understood to denote, not the groan of discontent, but the groan of querulous impatience, which likes to find fault with others, and accuse them of injuries, sometimes imaginary, and mostly exaggerated. See Calv. Some characters are naturally querulous and impatient of others' infirmities, forgetting their own; others are suspicious, and prone to resent injuries. Both classes of persons are here admonished to practise forbearance and long-suffering, lest they be condemned by their own judgment,—mindful that, with what measure they mete, it shall be measured to them again: besides which, it behoves them to consider that the common Judge of all standeth at the door. The ἵνα μὴ κατακρ. here is equiv. to ἵνα μὴ εἰς ὑπόκρισιν τίεσθῃ, at v. 12. And accordingly the κατα should be removed. Indeed it is found in very few MSS., and those of the lowest order. The ὁ before κριτῆς has no place in several MSS. and the t. rec. (the Elz. Ed.); but it is found in the Stephanic text, and in the great body of the MSS.; and it is required by propriety of language, the sense being, 'the Judge κατ' ἐξοχῆν,' who is at Acts x. 42 denominated ὁ ὠριζόμενος κρ. ζώντων καὶ νεκρῶν.

10. To encourage them to patient endurance, the Apostle now points to the examples of those who had trodden the same thorny path before them; so supplying what has ever been a powerful incentive to 'the faith and perseverance of the saints.'—ὑπόδειγμα λάβετε. On the force of ὑπόδειγμα see note at John xiii. 15.—τῆς κακοπαθείας. The expression may be understood to mean, 'constancy in enduring sufferings;' or it may with μακροθυμίας just after form an Hendiadys, to denote 'patient endurance of evils.' On the various evils endured by the Prophets, see Heb. xi. 33, seqq.—ὃ ἐλάλησαν καὶ τῆς μακροθυμίας, τοὺς προφῆτας, οἱ ἐλάλησαν τῷ ὀνόματι Κυρίου. <sup>11</sup> Ἰδοὺ, μακαρίζομεν τοὺς ὑπομένοντας. τὴν ὑπομονὴν Ἰωβ ἠκούσατε, καὶ τὸ τέλος Κυρίου εἶδετε· ὅτι πολὺ-σπλαγχνός ἐστιν ὁ Κύριος καὶ οἰκτιρμων. <sup>12</sup> Πρὸ πάντων δέ, ἀδελφοί μου, μὴ ὀμνύετε, μήτε τὸν οὐρανὸν μήτε τὴν γῆν, μήτε ἄλλον τινα ὄραν ἢ τῷ δὲ ὑμῶν τὸ ναὶ, ναὶ, καὶ τὸ οὐ, οὐ· ἵνα μὴ ὑπὸ κρίσιν πέσητε. <sup>13</sup> Κακοπαθεῖ τις ἐν ὑμῖν; προσ-

k Num. 14.
18.
Job 1. 21, 22.
Eccl. 40. 10.
Ps. 106. 8.
Matt. 5. 11.
1 Matt. 5. 34.
2 Cor. 1. 17.
18.
2 Chron.
12.
Ps. 50. 16.
Eph. 5. 19.
Col. 3. 16.

τῷ ὀνόματι Κ. This is intended to at once set forth the high character of those who 'endured the like things,' and to give greater point to the argument; q. d. 'If their high commission did not atone them from suffering; if they bore such evils, well may ye.'

11. μακαρίζομεν 'we pronounce those blessed,' agreeably to Christ's words, Matt. v. 11, 12. —τοὺς ὑπομ., 'who bear with patience the trials appointed for them by God.' On this absolute use, see note on Rom. xii. 12. Here we may suppose the Apostle to have had in mind the words of Dan. xii. 12, μακάριοι οἱ ὑπομένοντες, with which comp. Matt. xxiv. 13. —τὸ τέλος Κυρίου. Render: 'the [happy] end which the Lord wrought for him, putting an end to his sufferings;' with reference to what is said, Job xlii. 12.

12. μὴ ὀμνύετε] 'leave off swearing.' The Apostle now takes occasion to advert to one among other modes of expressing impatience, namely, by the use of angry oaths uttered under impatience, and from great provocation; for such, as Bp. Sanderson and Abp. Newc. show, are meant by the oaths here spoken of. Besides these, however, we may suppose,—espec. from the use of the solemn formula πρὸ πάντων,—that the Apostle here speaks generally of all oaths used in common conversation; such kind of swearing being, there is reason to think, very prevalent among the Jews. So Philo, vol. ii. p. 271, cited by Wetst., testifies to the prevalence of this profane practice thus: ἀλλὰ καὶ παραλαβίτω τις, εἰ βούλεται, μὴ μὴν τὸ ἀνωτάτω καὶ προσβύτατον εὐθεὶς αἰτίαν, ἀλλὰ γῆν, ἥλιον, ἀστέρας, οὐρανόν, τὸν σύμπαντα κόσμον. That the Apostle's words have nothing to do with judicial swearing, all the best Commentators are agreed. And, indeed, such is certain from the similar words of our Lord, Matt. v. 34—37, on which, doubtless, the present injunction was formed. It may be observed that the practice of the Essenes wholly coincided with these prohibitions. Thus we find from Jos., Bell. ii. 8, 6, that they avoided swearing, as if it were worse than perjury; though there, as in the present case, the injunction, as Whiston remarks, must be supposed to have had its particular exceptions, as on certain great and necessary occasions. Thus, in the next section, we find it related of these very Essenes, who are before said to have so zealously avoided swearing, that they admitted none into their brotherhood till they had taken certain tremendous oaths to perform their several duties to God and to their neighbour; so evidently not accounting this any violation of the rule 'not to swear at all.' The case is the same in the Christian system, as we learn from the Apostolical Constitutions, which, although they coincide with these prohibitions of Christ and his Apostle as to swearing in general, yet they explain it elsewhere by avoiding to swear falsely, and to swear often and in vain. And so when they enjoin not to swear at all, they add that, 'If such cannot be avoided, we must swear truly;' which sufficiently serves to explain the nature and measures of this general injunction. —ἢ τῷ δὲ ὑμῶν τὸ ναὶ, ναὶ, καὶ τὸ οὐ, οὐ. This seems to have been a proverbial form of expression, to denote simple affirmation or negation; repeated, if need be, but unaccompanied with oaths. —ἵνα μὴ ὑπὸ κρίσιν πέσητε. Very many MSS., some Versions and Fathers, and some early Editions, have eis ὑπόκρισιν, which reading was received into the text by Matthæi, but again thrown out by Griesb., Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch.; very properly; since it admits of no tolerable sense: and external authority is of no great weight in a case like this. The reading arose, I suspect, from a blending of ὕπο and its gloss eis, putting eis first. Thus ὕπο and κρίσιν were causlessly joined together, and hereby the reading eis ὑπόκρισιν is well accounted for. That a gloss on ὕπο should have occurred was likely, since πίπτειν ὑπό τι (for eis τι) is of very rare occurrence, though such is found in Diod. Sic. t. ii. 269, and viii. 209 (where ὕπ' ἐξουσίας stands for eis ἐξ., which occurs in Polyb. iv. 12), also in Polyb. iv. 15, 11.

13—18. Here the Apostle adverts to other trials of patience and resignation, namely, those of sickness, or other calamity; pointing out the best means of removing, or mitigating, the evils. And first he enjoins the use of prayer, as the best balm for the wounds of affliction, and the most effectual preservative against the allurements of prosperity.

13. κακοπαθεῖ τις ἐν ὑμῖν; &c.] It has been a matter of dispute, whether these words should be taken interrogatively, or declaratively. Editors vary in opinion, but recent ones, from Griesb. to Tisch., adopt the declarative,—and certainly in the Class. writers the older Editors adopted in such a case the interrogative,—while the recent Editors have preferred the declarative, e. g. in Antiph. Διδου. frag. ii. 5, ἔστιν πολυτήλες τῷ βίῳ, τίς οὐ φθονεῖ; Dind. and Meinecke reject the interrogation of the former Edd., and write βίῳ τις. For my own part, I am now disposed to acquiesce in the declarative mode, which implies a supposition of a case, as at 1 Cor. xiv. 26, ψαλμὸν ἔχει, διδασχὴν ἔχει—πάντα, &c., where see note.—εὐχαριστεῖ τις; ψαλλέτω. Not meaning thus to say that cheerfulness is always to be so expressed (see notes on 1 Cor. xiv. 15. Eph. v. 19. Col. iii. 16); but recommending them to adapt their devotions to their present frame of mind and to external circumstances;—in sorrow and affliction offering up prayer and supplication; in joy offering 'the sacrifice of praise' ο Mark 6. 12. ευχέσθω εὐθυμεί τις; ψαλλέτω. <sup>14</sup> ἄσθενεῖ τις ἐν ὑμῶν; & 16. 12. προσκαλεσάσθω τοὺς πρεσβυτέρους τῆς ἐκκλησίας καὶ προσευξάσθωσαν ἐπ' αὐτὸν, ἀλείψαντες αὐτὸν ἐλαίῳ ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι τοῦ Κυρίου. <sup>15</sup> Καὶ ἡ εὐχὴ τῆς πίστεως σώσει τὸν κάμνοντα, καὶ ἔγερεῖ αὐτὸν ὁ Κύριος· κὰν ἁμαρτίας ἢ πεπονηκὼς, ἀφεθήσεται αὐτῷ. <sup>16</sup> Ἐξομολογεῖσθε ἀλλήλοις τὰ παραπτώματα, καὶ εὐ-

(Heb. xiii. 15), giving thanks for past and present blessings, with prayer for future ones, and for grace at all times to withstand temptations.

14. προσκαλ. τοὺς πρεσβ. τῆς ἐκκλ. I agree with Dr. Peile, that by τοὺς πρεσβ. are meant the Church Presbyters, or the order of Priests, who acted as Pastors. — προσευξάσθωσαν ἐπ' αὐτὸν — Κυρίου. 'Εν τῷ ὀνόματι τοῦ Κυρίου some construe with προσευξάσθωσαν ἐπ' αὐτὸν; others, with ἀλείψ. αὐτὸν ἐλαίῳ. We may, however, suppose them to belong to both; the whole thing being done in dependence on the aid of God, solemnly invoked in prayer. That oil (espec. the generous oil of the East) is highly salutary in various disorders, will, however, by no means prove it to be here enjoined as a medical means; for from the Gospels (see Mark vi. 13) we learn that this (which was a general remedy among the Jews) was used by the disciples even in conjunction with miraculous power. Nay, our Lord himself condescended to employ certain media in working miracles. In the case of these presbyters, as in that of the Apostles, the oil may have been only used as symbolical of the cure to be effected by the Divine means. Upon the whole, it involves, I apprehend, the least difficulty to suppose that by the healing in question is meant preternatural healing; otherwise the strong expressions ἡ εὐχὴ τῆς πίστεως σώσει τὸν κάμν., καὶ ἔγερεῖ α. ὁ Κ., and others must be taken with such a limitation as, in the present context, would involve a very great harshness. In the next generation, indeed, there is little doubt that the thing became a solemn religious ceremony comprehending a symbolical rite, the use of which tended to produce the blessings invoked, as far as was consistent with the purposes of Divine wisdom: in which case, of course, the expression prayer of faith would bear a very different sense to what it does in the present passage. Here it may be supposed to denote 'the prayer which proceedeth from that faith to which was formerly granted the power of working miracles;' see Acts iii. 16. Rom. xii. 8. 1 Cor. xii. 9. xiii. 2: in which view the sins (namely, sins sincerely repented of) of which it is here said that 'they shall be forgiven,' are supposed to be those of which the disorders in question were a temporal and judicial punishment; see Matt. viii. 17. John v. 14. 1 Cor. xi. 30, seq. The Apostle here says nothing about the sick person himself addressing the Lord of life and death, health and sickness, for his recovery: but that was so manifest a duty, as to seem unnecessary to be enjoined on any truly Christian person. Accordingly there are very few passages enjoining this duty; however, in the Old Test. one occurs in Eccles. xxviii. 9, Τέκνον, ἐν ἀρρώστιάματι σου μὴ παράβληται ('be not negligent of thy duty'), ἀλλὰ εὖζαι Κυρίῳ, καὶ αὐτὸς λήσεται.

16. Ἐξομολογεῖσθε ἀλλήλοις τὰ παραπτώ- ματα, &c.] Some, regarding this as a fresh exhortation, unconnected with the preceding context, suppose it to enjoin generally a mutual confession of faults or injuries committed against each other, with a mutual supplication to God for spiritual health. This view, however, lies open to no little objection in the harshness which it involves, of assigning such a figurative sense to λαβῆτα in a context like the present. Hence most Expositors, with reason, connecting the exhortation with what precedes, understand the injunction not as a general, but a special one, referring only to cases of dangerous sickness, and when the confession and reconciliation in question would materially tend to promote the recovery of the sick person. The 'prayer' here mentioned seems intended chiefly of the injured person, who should not only forgive, but pray for his injurer, if penitent; though it may be also understood of all other prayers for the recovery and pardon of sins of the sick person, except those mentioned at vv. 14, 15. It seems that the Apostle here meant to recommend and extol a disposition to freely confess, on all proper occasions, the wrongs we have done to any one. Certain it is that the present passage will by no means support the Romish practice of auricular confession, espec. to a priest; the confession, in the present case, being supposed to be made to the injured person, in order to obtain his forgiveness. Finally, to encourage the use of prayers for the sick, not only on the part of ministers, but that of Christians in general, there is added the assurance, καὶ ἡ ἐκείνων δέσποις δικαίων ἐπαγγουμένη, meaning, that 'the earnest prayers of the righteous have great efficacy.' At least, such is the general sense; but the exact import of this peculiar expression much depends on the true nature of the form ἐπαγγουμένη. If it be, what many suppose it, a Middle form with reciprocal sense, it will signify 'working itself,' equiv. to working, Active; and thus it will be a convertible term with ἐπαγγελία or ἐπαγγελος. As exx. of this form the Commentators who adopt the above view refer to Rom. vii. 5. 2 Cor. i. 6. iv. 12. Gal. v. 6. Eph. iii. 20. Col. i. 29. 2 Thess. ii. 7; yet, in almost every one of those passages (as I have shown in my notes thereon) a Passive force is either strongly marked or very perceptible; and in this view I am supported by Dr. Bull, Exam., p. 90, Schoettg. on Gal. and Eph., and Dindorf on Steph. Thea. in v. It is, I believe, never used as Middle, with a true Middle force in the Class. writers, and in them a Passive form is very rare; yet I have myself noticed exx. in Polyb. i. 13. 5. ix. 13, 9, Pseudo-Aristot. de Mundo, and some very late Greek writers. The question, however, is, not what it may mean in some of the above-enumerated passages (for in others it cannot but have a Passive sense), but what is its import here. Now, from the Middle form and signif. arises a very languid sense, χεσθε ὑπὲρ ἀλλήλων, ὅπως ἰαθῆτε. πολὺ ἰσχύει δέησις δικαίου ἐνεργουμένη. <sup>17</sup> Ἡλίας ἄνθρωπος ἦν ὁμοιοπαθὴς ἡμῖν, καὶ <sup>p 1 Kings</sup> προσευχῇ προσηύξατο τοῦ μὴ βρέξαι· καὶ οὐκ ἔβρεξεν ἐπὶ τῆς <sup>17, 1.</sup> γῆς ἐνιαυτοὺς τρεῖς καὶ μῆνας ἕξ. <sup>18</sup> Καὶ πάλιν προσηύξατο, <sup>2 18. 43. 45.</sup> καὶ ὁ οὐρανὸς ἵετόν· ἔδωκε, καὶ ἡ γῆ ἐβλάστησε τὸν καρπὸν αὐτῆς. <sup>Luke 4. 25.</sup> <sup>19</sup> Ἀδελφοί, ἐάν τις ἐν ὑμῖν πλανηθῇ ἀπὸ τῆς ἀληθείας, καὶ <sup>Acts 14. 15.</sup> ἐπιστρέψῃ τις αὐτόν, <sup>20</sup> γνωσκέτω ὅτι ὁ ἐπιστρέψας ἁμαρτω- <sup>q 1 Kings 18.</sup> λὸν ἐκ πλάνης ὁδοῦ αὐτοῦ, σώσει ψυχὴν ἐκ θανάτου, καὶ καλύψει <sup>41, &c.</sup> πλῆθος ἁμαρτιῶν.

whereas one strongly significant is called for by the context; and hence I agree with those Expositors who regard ἐνεργουμένη as a Passive form with Passive sense, denoting prayer 'wrought out and carried into effect in suitable words,' such as the just know how to employ, exactly as at Gal. v. 6, πίστις δι' ἀγάπης ἐνεργουμένη signifies 'faith wrought out and carried into action by deeds.' Dr. Peile's version, 'effectually put forth in duty, called into action, and making itself felt in all its inherent efficacy,' is formed on Calvin's note, who illustrates the thing thus: 'Quotidie oramus pro tota Ecclesia, ut peccata illi Deus remittat: sed tunc vere in actu est oratio, quum succurrere contendimus illis, qui laborant.'

19, 20. To the above injunctions to mutual confession, forgiveness, and prayer for each other, the Apostle now subjoins another, to mutually co-operate in correcting each other's errors in the doctrines, or failures in the practice, of Christianity.

20. καὶ καλύψει πλῆθος αἰμα.] Expositors are not agreed whether the covering here spoken of is to be understood of the sins of the convert, or of the converted. The former interpretation is espoused by Origen and several Latin Fathers, and of the moderns, by Hamm., Whitby, Wella, Atterbury, and Doddr.; the latter, by Grot., Vorst., Calv., Est., Bp. Hall, Wolf, Benson, Sherlock, Rosenm., Mackn., Abp. Newc., Pott, Scott, and almost all recent Commentators, who argue that it seems hardly consonant with the language and doctrines of the Gospel, that any sin should be forgiven, if it be unrepented, or persisted in; and if it be repented and forsaken it will be pardoned without the meritorious act here mentioned. Indeed, the latter interpretation is that alone suitable to the context; and how early it was adopted will appear from its being followed by the Pesch. Syr. Translator. Thus, then, we may suppose the meaning to be, that 'so doing he will cause these his sins to be covered up in the sight of God, and to be unpunished,—that Christ's atoning blood might cover the multitude of his sins, never to appear in judgment against him.' By this, however, we are only to understand that the good offices of the reformer will powerfully lead—be the means—to procure the forgiveness of sins and final salvation of the penitent sinner, since conversion does not necessarily imply final perseverance, and therefore can by no means ensure salvation.

ΠΕΤΡΟΥ ΤΟΥ ΑΠΟΣΤΟΛΟΥ

ΕΠΙΣΤΟΛΗ ΚΑΘΟΛΙΚΗ ΠΡΩΤΗ.

a John 7. 38.
Acts 2. 6, 9, 10.
James 1. 1.

I. 1* ΠΕΤΡΟΣ, ἀπόστολος Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, ἐκλεκτοῖς παρ-επιδήμιος διασπορᾶς Πόντου, Γαλατίας, Καππαδοκίας, Ἀσίας,

THE authenticity, and consequently canonical authority, of this Epistle, has never, until recently, been disputed. On the time, however, when, and the place where, it was written, nothing certain can be pronounced. Indeed of the history of St. Peter's life subsequent to his being at Antioch, A.D. 46, we know nothing from the New Test. That he suffered martyrdom at Rome at the close of the reign of Nero, about the year 64, we learn from the early Ecclesiastical Historians; and that his remains were deposited at Rome, we have the same testimony; to which I am enabled to add that of Procopius, Hist., p. 195, 10. But though the time when this Epistle was written cannot be exactly fixed, yet, from some allusions in it to the troubles in Judæa, it is supposed to have been not long before the death of the Apostle; probably about the year 63. See Prof. Steiger's Introd., § 10. With respect to the place where it was written, the determination of that point is closely connected with the interpretation of the passage at chap. v. 13, where see note. As to the persons to whom it was addressed, that, too, is a matter of some uncertainty. They were probably the Christians dispersed through various parts of Asia Minor and the East, espec. Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia,—chiefly Jews, but partly, though in a small measure, Gentiles. As regards the matter contained therein, this Epistle bears a close affinity to that of the Epistle of St. James in scope and argument, adverting to the persecutions to which the Christians were exposed, exhorting to patience and resignation, perseverance in the true faith, and inculcating universal love and the practice of all the relative duties. The great purpose of the Apostle in this Epistle was to confirm the faith of believers, chiefly Jewish Christians, and to stimulate them to continue in a holy life and conversation, and 'testifying to them that this is the true grace of God in which they stood.' 'Hence,' as observes Dr. Davidson, 'the Apostle's design was to assure them, that the truths which they had received from the lips of Paul and his assistants were the unchangeable word of God, the source of all animating hope, as well as permanent comfort, which they should appropriate with the simplicity of new-born babes; so that by means of it they might grow up to the maturity of Christian manhood. In this manner he confirms them in the faith which Paul had taught; and virtually rebukes the errorists, who had sown the seeds of corruption among them. It was also his design to exhort them to steadfastness under the trials to which they were exposed, to furnish consolation, and to regulate their conduct towards the heathen around them; that they might be sober, holy, and harmless; silencing their persecutors with well-doing. Those whom he addressed had been already rooted and grounded in the doctrines of Christianity; and therefore the Epistle is not doctrinal.' However, a most competent judge of such a matter, with equal exactness and point, remarks, that 'the heads of doctrine contained in it are many,—but the main (topics), and those espec. insisted on, are these three, Faith, Obedience, and Patience (the chief purpose being to establish Christians in believing, to direct them in doing, and to comfort them in suffering, after the most blessed example of their Master, the Lord Jesus).' Accordingly, continues he, 'the Epistle is a brief, but very clear summary both of the consolations and the instructions that are needful for the encouragement and instruction of a Christian pilgrim in his journey to heaven; elevating his thoughts and desires to that happiness, and strengthening him against all opposition in the way,—both that of corruption within, and temptation without.' (Abp. Leighton.) As to the matter of the Epistle, the style is somewhat similar to that of St. James, but has not that ready flow, nor ease of expression. There is a kind of harshness of manner, and roughness of expression, evincing an imperfect command over a foreign language. The peculiar character of the Epistle, as Dr. Davidson points out, is 'a pervading warmth of manner, corresponding to the [originally] fiery, but [now] subdued temperament of the Apostle.' However, a deep and marked earnestness appears throughout, 'as of one,' observes Dr. Davidson, 'whose soul is stirred to its very depths by the hope of future glory. With him,' continues Dr. Davidson, 'the culminating point of Christianity is Hope,—a well-grounded expectation of future glory, through καὶ Βιβνίας, <sup>2 b</sup> κατὰ πρόγνωσιν Θεοῦ Πατρὸς, ἐν ἁγιασμῷ Πνεύματος, εἰς ὑπακοὴν καὶ ῥαντισμὸν αἵματος Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ· χάρις ὑμῖν καὶ εἰρήνη πληθυνθείη.

<sup>3 c</sup> Εὐλογητὸς ὁ Θεὸς καὶ Πατὴρ τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, ὁ, κατὰ τὸ πολὺ αὐτοῦ ἔλεος, ἀναγεννήσας ἡμᾶς εἰς ἐλπίδα ζώσαν δι' ἀναστάσεως Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ ἐκ νεκρῶν, <sup>4 d</sup> εἰς κληρονομίαν ἀφθαρτον καὶ ἀμίαντον καὶ ἀμάραντον, τετηρημένην

Christ Jesus.' In short, the Epistle (which partakes largely of the character stamped on Peter's speeches in the Acts of the Apostles) is in every way worthy of the Apostle. In it, as might well be expected from the Apostle's character of mind and Christian experience, 'watchfulness (as observes Dr. Davidson) and sobriety are inculcated in proportion to the height of Christian attainments, and humility is often enjoined to lower pride.'

I. 1, 2. ἐκλεκτοῖς 'elected to the privileges of the Gospel, as being professing Christians.' By this term, as Bp. Hall says, are denoted 'those who, in their outward profession and in the judgment of charity, are reputed for the elect of God, and chosen by him to salvation.' See Rom. viii. 33. Of course it is by no means meant to be asserted that all such would be ultimately saved. They are said to be elect, as being admitted to the light of the Gospel, as distinguished from others who are still in the darkness of heathenism. By calling them elect κατὰ πρόγνωσιν Θεοῦ (for such is the construction), 'according to the foreknowledge of God' (on which expression see Acts ii. 23. Rom. viii. 28, seq. Eph. i. 5, and notes), the Apostle means to denote that the calling of these persons to the knowledge of the Gospel was (like every other circumstance relative to his gracious dispensation) foreknown by God.—παρρησίᾳ, for the more Class. παρρησία, though the word is used by the later Class. writers. By the expression παρρησία διασποράς are meant the Jewish Christians, dwelling as scattered sojourners over the countries subjoined. On διασπορά, see on John vii. 35. James i. 1, and my Lex. In the enumeration of those countries the Apostle (as Steiger observes) seems to have regarded the thing in his mind as if forming a circle, so traced as that the line should commence with Pontus, and terminate, after being carried round, at the same point.—Pontus. The ἐν, at the phrase ἁγιασμῷ Πν., means, not through, nor by, but (as in the parallel passage of 2 Thess. ii. 13, 'chosen to salvation,' ἐν ἁγιασμῷ Πνεύματος) 'in,' = 'under,' with reference to the present state of acceptance and grace in which they stand. Render: 'under sanctification of the Spirit,' 'through his sanctifying influences.' The next words, εἰς ὑπακοὴν καὶ ῥαντισμ., denote purpose or effect. See Calvin's able note, terminating with the words, 'Summa est: salutem nostram manare ex gratiâ electione Dei, sed eam simul considerandam esse ex fidei experientia, in eo quod Spiritu suo nos sanctificat. Postremò duos esse vocacionis nostræ effectus aut fines, nempe ut reformemur in obedientiam Dei, et Christi sanguine abluamur; utrumque autem esse opus Spiritus Sancti. Unde colligimus neque electionem a vocatione, nec gratiam fidei iustitiam a vite novitate separandam esse.' Thus we have here a sort of sketch of the economy of our redemption, as being the free gift of God the Father, effected by the blood of God the Son. And, accordingly, we are (in the words of Thomas Scott) 'taught to ascribe our salvation to the electing love of the Father, the redemption of the Son, and the sanctification of the Spirit; and so to give glory to the Triune God.'—χάρις ὑμῖν καὶ εἰρήνη πληθυνθείη. The same form of salutation recurs also at 2 Pet. i. 1; and without πληθ. at 1 Cor. i. 3. This form is found also in the Old Test., Numb. vi. 24—26; and so a Rabbinical writer says, 'Scribit fratris filii meridei Pax vestra multiplicetur!' Comp. also Jude 2, ἔλεος ὑμῖν καὶ εἰρήνη—πληθυνθείη.

3—5. The Apostle now opens out his subject by calling on his readers to join with him in devoutly blessing the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, for this his mercy and grace. He reminds them of the happy immortality set before them in the Gospel, and which they would obtain, if they continued true to their Christian profession. This view paves the way for the mention, at ver. 6, of trials and persecutions.

3. ὁ Θεὸς καὶ Πατὴρ τοῦ Κ. ἡ. [I. X.] On this form of expression see note at Rom. xv. 6.—κατὰ τὸ πολὺ αὐτοῦ ἔλεος. These words are highly significant, inculcating (as Luther shows) 'a most important evangelical doctrine, that it is only of the exuberant compassion of God (see Luke i. 78) that we are saved.'—ἀναγεννήσας ἡμᾶς εἰς ἐλπίδα, &c., 'who hath begotten us again unto a hope.' The best comment is at Titus iii. 5, κατὰ τὸν αὐτοῦ ἔλεον ἔσωσεν ἡμᾶς διὰ λουτροῦ ὑποκαταβάσεως, καὶ ἀνακαινώσεως Πνεύματος ἁγίου. The subjoined epithet ζώσαν is for ζωοποιούσαν, in allusion to the life and immortality brought to light by the Gospel. Comp. ὁδὸς ζωᾶς, Heb. x. 20. The 'hope' here mentioned is that of being one day (in the words of Rom. viii. 13) 'delivered from a state of bondage (to corrupt nature), and introduced into the freedom and glory of being sons of God.' This hope is represented as introduced by Christ's resurrection, inasmuch as that showed the possibility of our own resurrection, as being both a proof and pledge thereof. Thus, then, in εἰς ἐλπίδα ζωᾶς we have indicated the end and result of the new birth just before spoken of. In εἰς κληρονομίαν ἀφθαρτον, &c., v. 4, is shown the object of this hope—namely, an inheritance, here represented by such epithets as quite distinguish it from mere worldly inheritances; for whereas the latter are corruptible in themselves, and fading, as to the trivial solid comfort they impart, and its perishing nature; this, the inheritance to which the regenerate are entitled, is incorruptible in itself, and they will be rendered b Eph. i. 4.

ch. 3.
c ver. 14.
Rom. 8. 29.
d 16. 26.
e 1. 7.
f Thess. 2.
g Heb. 12. 24.
h 1 Pet. 1. 3.
i John 2. 3, 5.
j 1 Cor. 15. 20.
k 2 Cor. 1. 2.
l James 1. 18.
m 1. 5.
n Tim. 1. 12.

o John 10.
36, 39, & 17.
11, 12, 15.
Jude 1, 24.
Eph. 2, 8.
f Rom. 12.
12.
2 Cor. 4, 17.
ch. 5, 10.
Wisd. 2, 8.

ἐν οὐρανοῖς εἰς * ὑμᾶς, ὅ * τοὺς ἐν δυνάμει Θεοῦ φρουρουμένους διὰ πίστεως εἰς σωτηρίαν, ἐτοίμην ἀποκαλυφθῆναι ἐν καιρῷ ἐσχάτῳ ὅ ἐν ᾧ ἀγαλλιάσθε, ὀλίγον ἄρτι (εἰ δέον ἐστὶ) λυπη-θέντες ἐν ποικίλοις πειρασμοῖς, ὅ ἵνα τὸ δοκίμιον ὑμῶν τῆς g Prov. 17. 2. Isa. 43. 10. 1 Cor. 2. 13. James 1. 2. ch. 4. 12.

incorruptible and immortal to enjoy it. See Calv., Bena., and Scott. Of the two terms ἀφθαρτον and ἀμείνων, the former represents it as imperishable; the latter, as uncontaminated by those vices which so grievously disturb all human happiness, and untainted with that evil which, in this world, ever intermixes itself with what is good. Moreover the inheritance in question is termed ἀμείνων, 'never-fading,' because it never grows old, but perpetually endureth such as it is to all eternity. Finally, it is said to be 'reserved in heaven,' and consequently is out of the reach of frustration or deprivation,—on which see Col. i. 5. 2 Tim. iv. 8.

5. τοὺς ἐν δυνάμει Θεοῦ φρουρουμένους διὰ πίστεως εἰς σωτ.]. Render, '[for you] who are preserved and guarded by the powerful protection of God through faith unto salvation.' In the expression φρουρουμένους we have a figure derived from an impregnable fortress, where whatever is deposited is secure from all attacks: so forming a beautiful representation of the complete security of true believers under the protection of a God who is engaged by covenant to keep them safe unto salvation. By διὰ πίστεως, just after, are denoted the means through which this power of God works in us. Faith is here represented as the medium through which this event is brought about; q. d. 'through the exercise of a firm and settled faith, which endureth unto the end.' See Col. i. 23. Heb. iii. 6. Finally, in εἰς σωτηρίαν is intimated the end of that preservation and support; namely, final and complete salvation. Ἐτοίμην ἀποκαλυφθῆναι, 'ready to be revealed and imparted;' meaning, ready for them (though they are not ready for it), inasmuch as it is reserved for them. Ἐν καιρῷ ἐσχάτῳ, 'at the final consummation of all things,' at the day of judgment.

6. The Apostle proceeds, after expressing thankfulness to God on account of the blessings provided for believers, to console and animate them in their present condition; which, because of those blessings, notwithstanding their temporal sufferings, was as full of joy, as it was safe and gloriously distinguished. (Steiger.)—ἐν ᾧ ἀγαλλιάσθε, &c. Render, 'in which [circumstance] (namely, of being kept by the power of God, and in hope of his salvation) ye greatly rejoice,' &c.; meaning to say, 'this felicity ye expect, though now, for a time,—if thus it must be [by God's providence],—ye suffer annoyance under various tribulations.' These we may suppose to have been different in different persons. In some the trials would be from the infliction of Jewish or Heathen persecution; in others, from the temptations of the world, the flesh, and the Devil, with which all have, more or less, to contend, while in this earthly state of trial. And so, through means of sin, there would be many interruptions to that complete joy of which they should be made partakers at 'the revelation of Jesus Christ.' By the restriction involved in the words at δίου ἑστί (with which Luther aptly compares those infra iii. 17, εἰ θάλοι τὸ θάλημα τοῦ Θεοῦ), we are taught (as Steiger observes) that 'suffering is not absolutely necessary and salutary to the faithful.' 'They must not (says Luther) lay upon themselves a cross out of their own will, but wait for that which God may lay upon them.'

7. ἵνα τὸ δοκίμιον—Χριστοῦ] ἵνα here denotes result; these words denoting (as Steiger says) 'God's purpose in trying the faithful, and its happy result to those who are kept in the faith.' Render: 'In order that this proof of your faith [by affliction], in importance far exceeding that of gold which perisheth, though tried in the fire, may be found [to terminate] unto praise.' Here we have a comparison, ad minori ad majus, between the proof of the genuineness of gold, by the assay of fire, with that of faith, tried in the furnace of affliction: a comparison found elsewhere in Scripture (as Prov. xvii. 3, ὥστε τὸ δοκίμαζέσθαι ἐν καμίνῳ ἀργύρου καὶ χρυσοῦ, οὕτως ἐλεγκταὶ καρδίαι παρὰ τῷ Κυρίῳ), and occurring not unfrequently in the Class. writers. So Seneca de Prov. 5, 'ignis aurum probat, miseria sortes viros.' Comp. Philo, p. 54, D, ἡ φρόνησις, ἥ εἰκαστὸς χρυσὸς, ἀδύλα καὶ καθαρῶ, καὶ πεπωρωμένη καὶ δοκιμασμένη, καὶ τιμὰ φύσει, ἐκεί μὲν ἔστιν ἐν τῇ τοῦ Θεοῦ σοφίᾳ. Comp. Prov. xvii. 3. xxvii. 21. Eccles. ii. 5, and 1 Cor. iii. 13, all prob. in Peter's mind. Besides the above, however, we have another point of superiority in the proof of tried faith and virtue over that of gold tried in the fire; and that is suggested by the expression τὸ ἀπολλυμένον, by which it is intimated, that whereas the one wears out and perishes in the use,—however approved by the fire,—the other, on the contrary, in use loses nothing of its weight and value, but rather acquires more. Moreover, besides its value being increased by time, it will also (as is intimated by the words following, αἰρεθῇ εἰς ἔπαινον καὶ τιμὴν—Χριστοῦ) be found to go on in increasing glory unto eternity, 'enduring even unto everlasting life;' for the words ἐν ἀποκαλύψει Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ are to be taken in close connexion with the preceding δόξαν; this revelation of Jesus Christ at the day of judgment naturally suggesting the idea of what St. Paul speaks of at Rom. viii. 19—21, 'the revelation (or manifestation), at that day, of the glory (coexistent with Christ's, Rom. viii. 17, and therefore eternal) of the sons of God,'—the glory which shall be then revealed at the redemption of our bodies. See Rom. viii. 23.—To advert to a matter of various reading. For πολὸν τιμώτερον MSS. A, B, C, and 20 cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1182, 1183, 1194, Mus. 5116, 16184) have πολυτιμώτερον, which has been received by Griesb., Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch. But, although external authority is rather in favour of this, yet internal evidence inclines rather for the other reading. I am now ready to agree with Matthæi that the reading πολυτιμώτερον arose from the πολὸν being erroneously conjoined with τιμ. Of course the τιμ. would then be altered to τιμ.

πίστεως, πολὺ τιμιώτερον χρυσίου, τοῦ ἀπολλυμένου, διὰ πυρὸς δὲ δοκιμαζομένου, εὐρεθῇ εἰς ἔπαινον καὶ τιμὴν καὶ δόξαν, ἐν ἀποκαλύψει Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ <sup>8</sup> ὃν, οὐκ εἰδότες, ἀγαπᾶτε εἰς <sup>h John 20.</sup> ὃν, ἄρτι μὴ ὁρῶντες, πιστεύοντες δὲ, ἀγαλλιᾶσθε χαρᾷ ἀνεκλα- <sup>29.</sup> λήτῃ καὶ δεδοξασμένῃ, <sup>9</sup> κομιζόμενοι τὸ τέλος τῆς πίστεως ὑμῶν, <sup>30.</sup> σωτηρίαν ψυχῶν <sup>10</sup> <sup>1</sup> περὶ ἧς σωτηρίας ἐξεζήτησαν καὶ ἐξηρεῖ- <sup>1 Cor. 5. 7.</sup> νησαν προφῆται οἱ περὶ τῆς εἰς ὑμᾶς χάριτος προφητεύσαντες, <sup>Heb. 11. 1, 7.</sup> <sup>1 Gen. 40. 10.</sup> <sup>Dan. 5. 44.</sup>
<sup>2 P. 34.</sup>
<sup>Hag. 2. 8.</sup>
<sup>Zech. 6. 12.</sup>
<sup>Matt. 13. 17.</sup>
<sup>Luke 10. 34.</sup>

since there is no such word as πολυτίμιος. And as πολυτιμ is surely not (what Steiger calls it) the more difficult reading, so neither is it the more 'suitable,' the one being as suitable as the other. Nay, πολὺ τιμ, is more so, since it conveys a more forceful sense in a passage where force of expression might be expected; and that is a reason which, in a theological, though not critical, view, ought to have great weight. Finally, πολὺ τιμιώτ is confirmed by a similar idiom (prob. present to the mind of the Apostle) at 2 Cor. viii. 22, πολὺ σπουδαιότερον.—Τοῦ ἀπολλυμένου. Many Critics, from Grot. down to Steiger, take this as Pres. for Fut., as in 2 Pet. iii. 11, τούτων πάντων λουμένων, and 2 Thess. ii. 10, ἐν τοῖς ἀπολλυμένοις. Yet in all these passages, there is, strictly speaking, no Future sense, but the Present is used simply of what takes place customarily, and what, therefore, in a popular sense, must take place; and even the purest gold tried in the fire must perish by using. In eis ἔπαινον, &c., Steiger remarks on the accumulation of synonymes. Another instance of the same is found in Artemid. Onir. iv. 2, ἔπαινοι καὶ τιμαὶ καὶ δόξαι. But the two terms, though there synonymous, are not so here, the sense here intended being prob. this, that 'such trial is to the praise and glory of God,' i. e. to the glory of his grace. Comp. Eph. i. 14, eis ἔπαινον τῆς δόξης αὐτοῦ, and i. 6, eis ἔπαινον δόξης τῆς χάριτος αὐτοῦ.

8. The Apostle here, after the above parenthetical digression respecting the glory that is to ensue upon the close of their trials, reverts to the present condition of believers; q. d. 'I thank God for your redemption and appointment to eternal blessedness, in the view of which you do even now rejoice, notwithstanding your preparatory sufferings; ye rejoice,' he repeats again, 'with love and confidence toward the Saviour, as though you were already crowned by him with that blessedness.' (Steiger).—ὃν, οὐκ εἰδότες, ἀγαπᾶτε, &c., 'whom, though having not seen [in the flesh on earth], yet ye love; in whom, though not yet seeing, ye believe,' &c.; comp. Heb. xi. 1. John xx. 29. Steiger well remarks on the parallelism which here exists, and the double contrast here involved: 'Not to know, and yet to love, forming one contrast; and not to behold, but still, through faith to rejoice, forming another.' 'Here,' Calv. remarks, 'two things are propounded,—that they should love that Saviour whom they had not seen, and believe on him whom they had not beheld. Yet the former is produced by the latter; for faith is the cause of the love.' That their loving Christ is here placed before their believing on him, we may account for on this principle,—that while faith is the cause of love,—yet love, when sincere, may outrun faith, even as the loving and beloved disciple outran his companion, and came first to the Lord (John xx. 4). To advert to a variety of reading. For εἰδότες 12 MSS. have ιδόντες, which is adopted by Lachm. and Tisch. But no change is necessary, or, indeed, expedient; since εἰδότες may admit of the twofold sense here required, which ιδόντες could not. The full sense here intended is: 'without having known, by seeing him face to face, ye love; without now beholding him, ye, by faith, rejoice in him.' By the words ἀγαλλιᾶσθε χαρᾷ ἀνεκλήτῃ καὶ δεδοξασμένῃ it is intimated, that the trust in question is an inexpressibly joyful one. And truly as the happiness prepared in another world for the righteous is so great as to be inconceivable to human imagination (1 Cor. ii. 9), well may the joy of its expectation and anticipation be termed, as it is here, unspeakable; lit. 'joy not to be spoken out, or expressed, by adequate declaration.' In the superadded epithet δεδοξασμένη there may be a Hebraism (formed on Ps. lxxxvii. 3, et al.) for glorious or excellent; and so the Expositors who take this view explain the term δεδοξασμένη in 2 Cor. iii. 10. Thus the faith in question is represented as an inexpressible and gloriously joyful one. This, however, somewhat detracts from the sense,—the Apostle meaning, I apprehend, to inculcate a deeper verity,—namely, that 'this exulting joy carried with it glory to the persons rejoicing in the Lord,'—a glory both present (inasmuch as, to use the words of Erasmus, 'the faithful are in this world pleni gloria apud Deum') and future, considering that there is laid up for them an eternal weight of glory in His presence with whom is fulness of joy. Comp. iv. 13, ἵνα καὶ ἐν τῇ ἀποκαλύψει τῆς δόξης αὐτοῦ χαρίτε ἀγαλλιῶμενοι,—words representing the very sense here intended by ἀγαλλ. χαρᾷ ἀνεκλ., and of which the full meaning is, 'rejoice at it, and in the participation of it,' according to what we read at Col. iii. 4, ὅταν ὁ Χριστὸς φανερωθῇ, καὶ ὑμεῖς σὺν αὐτῷ φανερ. ἐν δόξῃ.

10. The Apostle now shows the preciousness of this salvation, by pointing at the deep interest taken in it by the Prophets of old, who earnestly inquired concerning it. See Luke x. 24.—περὶ ἧς σωτηρίας—προφητεύσαντες, meaning, 'concerning which felicity [and its nature] the Prophets studiously examined, and diligently inquired after; [the Prophets, I say,] who prophesied of the grace which was to come unto you.' The ἐξ ἐξεζήτησαν and ἐξηρεύσαν is (like our word owl) intensive, conveying the idea of anxious and diligent search: from which expressions it appears (as Mackn. observes) that the Prophets, in many instances, did not understand the meaning of their own prophecies, but studied them, as others did, with great care to find them out (see Dan. ix. 22. vii. 28. xii. 8), espec. as respected the Messiah. See Calv. and Est.

k Pa. 22. 7.
Ias. 58. 3. Ac.
Dan. 9. 24.
Luko 14. 29.

1 Dan. 12. 9.
12.
Acta 2. 4.
Eph. 3. 10.
Heb. 11. 13.
30.

m Luke 12.
25. & 21. 34.
Rom. 12. 13.
Eph. 6. 14.
1 Thess. 5. 6.

n Rom. 12. 2. 14
ch. 4. 1.

11 <sup>k</sup> ἐρευνῶντες, εἰς τίνα ἢ ποῖον καιρὸν ἐδήλου τὸ ἐν αὐτοῖς Πνεύμα Χριστοῦ, προμαρτυρόμενον τὰ εἰς Χριστὸν παθήματα, καὶ τὰς μετὰ ταῦτα δόξας· <sup>12</sup> <sup>l</sup> οἷς ἀπεκαλύφθη, ὅτι οὐχ ἑαυτοῖς, ἡμῖν δὲ διηκόνουν αὐτὰ, ἃ νῦν ἀνηγγέλη ὑμῖν διὰ τῶν εὐαγγελλισαμένων ὑμᾶς ἐν Πνεύματι ἁγίῳ ἀποσταλέντι ἀπ' οὐρανοῦ, εἰς ἃ ἐπιθυμοῦσιν ἄγγελοι παρακύναι. <sup>13</sup> <sup>m</sup> Διὸ ἀναξωσάμενοι τὰς ὁσφύας τῆς διανοίας ὑμῶν, νήφοντες, τελείως ἐλπίσατε ἐπὶ τὴν φερομένην ὑμῖν χάριν ἐν ἀποκαλύψει Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ.
14 <sup>n</sup> ὥς τέκνα ὑπακοῆς, μὴ συσχηματιζόμενοι ταῖς πρότερον ἐν

11. ἐρευνῶντες, εἰς τίνα—δόξας] The full sense is, 'investigating [I say] at what particular period, and in what kind of times, [whether of national prosperity or of adversity,] that would come to pass, which the Holy Spirit within them, given by Christ, had showed to them; signifying what Christ should suffer, and the glory to which he should be exalted.' Of the terms here, τίς and ποῖος, it is well observed by Steiger, 'that the former marks the object after its abstract determination, as this or that, for the object in question; the latter, its quality, its properties.' So Mark iv. 30, τίνι ὁμοιωσάμεν τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ; ἢ ὡς ποία παραβολή, &c., and Aristid. p. 91, μοῦνε δὲ ποιοὺς καὶ τίνας μάστιχα ὁρῶντες, &c., 'what sort of ships, and what particularly are they whose sight,' &c. 'Now it was natural,' says Steiger, 'that the prophets should seek for a double mark of the Advent of Christ—the announcement of the appointed distance of it as to time, and delineations of the character of that period in relation to others.' In the expression τὸ ἐν αὐτοῖς Πνεῦμα, &c., we have involved the doctrine of immediate internal revelation. Comp. Matt. x. 20. Gal. i. 15. Moreover, the Holy Spirit is here called 'the Spirit of Christ,' as being that given by Christ unto the Prophets.—τ. μ. τ. δόξας. Not 'glory,' but 'glories,' referring both to Christ's resurrection, and to the exaltation to the right hand of God subsequent to it. See John xiii. 31. Acts iii. 13. Phil. ii. 9.

12. οὐχ ἑαυτοῖς, ἡμῖν δέ] The far greater part of the MSS. have ὑμῖν, which is adopted by Griesb., Scholz, and Lachm., but most uncritically, since external authority is of little weight in the case of words so much alike, and perpetually confounded, as ἡμῖν and ὑμῖν, where internal evidence must decide, and that is quite in favour of ἡμῖν, which is absolutely required by the context. It is, besides, strongly supported by the most ancient of MSS. (B Vat.), and the most ancient of Versions, the Pesch. Syr. The general sense of the passage runs thus: 'unto whom [I say, in answer to this earnest inquiry] it was revealed, that not for their own benefit, or with relation to themselves, but for us, and to us, they were ministers of announcing those things, things [I say] (meaning the wonders of redeeming love) over which the angels bend with admiration and deep interest, while looking into and surveying them.' This is all that can safely be gathered from the expression ἐπιθυμοῦσιν παρακύναι, which, as it cannot denote perfect knowledge on the part of the holy angels, so, neither, on the other, is it to be understood to convey the idea of a mere hasty glimpse, since that is not permitted by the term ἐπιθυμοῦσιν,—though this term does not necessarily imply unfulfilled desire (for exx. of which use of ἐπιθυμ., see Eccles. vi. 2. Pa. xlv. 11, besides other passages in the Sept.), or wish beyond attainment, as though the angels in heaven had a less insight into those deep things of God than the saints on earth. Such will abundantly appear from the notes on Luke xv. 16, and xvi. 21, comp. with Eccles. vi. 2, and Pa. xlv. 11. It must, at any rate, denote attentive observation—careful inspection prompted by deep interest.

13. On the above impressive representation of the glories and blessings of the Gospel (which forms the exordium of the Epistle), are now founded certain weighty exhortations to a life suitable to such high privileges and glorious promises.—διὸ ἀναξωσάμενοι—χάριν, meaning (by a metaphor derived from the custom of the Orientals, and, indeed, the ancient world in general, of girding the long flowing robes about the loins, on engaging in any active exertion): 'Such, then, being the case, gird up the loins of your mind, engage with activity in working out your salvation; or, in other words, "keep your minds and affections continually disencumbered and prepared to run the race set before you, by casting aside all carnal prejudices, and abandoning all anxious cares about the things of this life, and whatever might prevent you from understanding, embracing, and obeying the word of truth." On the term νήφω, to denote 'serious sober-mindedness,' see 1 Thess. v. 6, and 2 Tim. iv. 5. 'Ἐλπίζετε here signif. 'to place one's hope on, as a sure ground of faith.' So at Pa. xxxiii. 18 we have ἐλπίζοντες ἐπὶ τῷ ἔλεος αὐτοῦ. Τελείως some take as standing for εἰς τέλος, 'unto the end; while others assign to it the sense constantly, or entirely. Both senses may be united. By χάριν is to be understood 'the fulness of grace' to be conferred at the period in question, and of which those addressed were now to hold fast the blessed hope. Of φερομένην ὑμῖν ἐν ἀποκαλύψει Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ the full sense is, 'which is brought, or offered, to you now, and is to be conferred on you at the appearance of Christ [to judgment].'

14. ὡς τέκνα ὑπακοῆς, μὴ συσχηματίζ., &c.] Here (says Calvin) it is intimated, 1. that we are called to God through the Gospel to the privilege and honour of adoption. 2. That we are adopted on the condition of acquitting ourselves as obedient sons; for though obedience does not make sons, yet it distinguishes sons from aliens.—ὡς τέκνα ὑπακοῆς, &c. A Hebraism for τέκνα ὑπακού.—Μὴ συσχημ. See note on Rom. xii. 2, and comp. infra iv. 2. The full sense of τῇ ἀγνοίᾳ ὑμῶν ἐπιθυμίαις· <sup>15</sup> ὁ ἀλλὰ κατὰ τὸν καλέσαντα ὑμᾶς <sup>ο Lev. 11. 44</sup> <sup>α</sup> Ἅγιον, καὶ αὐτοὶ ἅγιοι ἐν πάσῃ ἀναστροφῇ γενήθητε· <sup>16</sup> διότι <sup>ο 19. 2.</sup> γέγραπται· Ἅγιοι γένεσθε, ὅτι ἐγὼ ἅγιός εἰμι. <sup>ο 20. 7.</sup> <sup>α</sup> Καὶ <sup>Luke 1. 74.</sup> εἰ Πατέρα ἐπικαλεῖσθε τὸν ἀπροσωπολήπτως κρίνοντα κατὰ τὸ <sup>76.</sup> ἐκάστου ἔργον, ἐν φόβῳ τὸν τῆς παροικίας ὑμῶν χρόνον ἀναστρά- <sup>2 Cor. 7. 1.</sup> φητε· <sup>18</sup> εἰδότες ὅτι οὐ φθαρτοῖς, ἀργυρῷ ἢ χρυσῷ, ἐλυντρώ- <sup>ο P. Lev. 11. 44.</sup> θητε ἐκ τῆς ματαίας ὑμῶν ἀναστροφῆς πατροπαραδότου, <sup>19</sup> ὁ ἀλλὰ <sup>ο 19. 2.</sup> τιμίῳ αἵματι, ὡς ἁμνοῦ ἁμώμου καὶ ἀσπίλου, Χριστοῦ· <sup>20</sup> ὁ προ- <sup>Act 34. 19.</sup>

γνωσμένου μὲν πρὸ καταβολῆς κόσμου, φανερωθέντος δὲ ἐπ' <sup>Job 10. 34.</sup> <sup>85.</sup> <sup>Rom. 2. 10.</sup> <sup>11.</sup> <sup>2 Cor. 5. 6.</sup> <sup>ο 7. 1.</sup> <sup>Eph. 6. 9.</sup> <sup>ο 7. 1.</sup>

Col. 2. 28. Phil. 2. 12. Heb. 11. 12. r 1 Cor. 6. 20. & 7. 23. s John 1. 29, 30. Acts 20. 28. 1 Cor. 5. 7. Heb. 9. 12, 14.
1 John 1. 7. Rev. 1. 6. & 5. 9. t Acts 2. 24. Rom. 3. 25. & 16. 25. Eph. 1. 9. & 3. 9. Gal. 4. 4. Col. 1. 26. 2 Tim. 1. 9.
Tit. 1. 2. Heb. 1. 2. Rev. 12. 3.

the verse is, 'as acting in the character of obedient children, not conforming yourselves [in practice] to what were formerly, in the time of your ignorance (comp. Eph. iv. 18. 1 Tim. i. 13), the desires of your hearts.'

15, 16. ἀλλά κατὰ τὸν καλ.—αὐτοὶ ἀγ.] 'A fine vocativus argumentatur. Deus nos sibi in peculium segregat: ergo iniquitamentis omnibus puros esse oportet.' (Calv.)—ἀλλά κατὰ τὴν καλίστατα, &c., meaning, 'but, conformably to the example of him [the Holy One] who hath called you [unto salvation] (see Gal. v. 8) be ye also holy.' ὁ ἀγ., indeed, was a frequent appellation of God among the Jews, q. d. the Holy One. Here, then, we have an argument for personal holiness, on the ground that we are bound, as obedient children, to follow the example of our heavenly Father, who hath called us to the imitation of his own holiness: a truth this which the Apostle then proceeds to confirm from certain words of Scripture, in which, as Calv. observes, we have what was a frequent exhortation of God to his chosen people of old, whom, as surrounded on all sides by the profane heathen nations, from whose pernicious example they were ever in danger of suffering, he thus calls to Himself, as though he would say, 'It is with Me that you have to do; ye are mine: keep yourselves, then, from the pollutions of the heathen.'

—To advert to a variety of reading. For ὑποβόη, MSS. A, B, C, and 11 cursives (to which I can only add Lamb. 1182) have ἰσότης, which has been adopted by Lachm. and Tisch. But this seems a mere Critical alteration, derived from the Sept., which renders the Hebrew literally, whereas the purpose of the Apostle seems to have been to give the sense untrammelled by Hebraism. The ἰσὺ a little after is cancelled by Lachm. and Tisch. on the authority of only two MS., A, B, with Clem. and Cyrill.; but most uncritically, for it has place both in the Hebrew and the Sept., as also in the Pesh. Syr. and other Versions. The omission may fairly be ascribed to the various position of the words ὑποβόη and ἰσὺ, in the MSS. and the Sept., some having ἰσὺ ὑποβόη, others ὑποβόη ἰσὺ, which latter is the better supported reading, and confirmed by the Hebrew. The Apostle (as observes Steiger) had already characterized believers as 'children of obedience,' and God as 'him who called them;' accordingly, he now draws their attention to this,—whether they had been obedient to the call, and become holy, since God is so [as the high and lofty One whose name is Holy, Isa. lvii. 15]

17. We have in this verse a second argument for holiness in the life, derived from the absolute integrity of the Divine judgment, in which no bare title of profession will excuse us; but the judgment will be impartial, making no distinction between Jew or Gentile (see Acts x. 34), but judging every man's profession and character by his works. See Rom. ii. 7—11. Hence it behoved them to pass the time of their earthly pilgrimage in fear, as well as in hope (see Heb. xii. 28), 'working out their salvation with fear and trembling' (Phil. ii. 12), lest they should 'come short of the glory of God.' Considering, too, at what a price they had been redeemed—a price so infinitely precious—they ought indeed to walk worthy of it.—ἡ Πατέρα ἱπικαλίσθε τόν, &c. The best founded sense is: 'If (or "inasmuch as") ye call Father (addressed by the name of Father), Him who without partiality judgeth according to each one's work,' meaning his course of actions and life. St. Peter prob. had in mind (besides the beginning of the Lord's prayer) a passage of Jer. iii. 19, Πατέρα καλίστέ με (where some MSS. have ἱπικαλίσθε, others ἱπικαλίσασθε). St. Peter seems there to have read ἱπικαλίσθη) καὶ ἐπ' ἡμῶν οὐκ ἀποστραφίσθη.

18, 19. Here we have a third argument to holy living, from the merit of that sacrifice offered for us in the precious blood of Christ.—αἰδώς ὄντος ὁφθαλμοί, &c., ‘knowing [as ye do] and bearing in mind, that ye were not by corruptible things [however precious] (as gold and silver) liberated from your vain and foolish manner of life, received from your forefathers.’—ματαίως here signifies vicious, as Tit. iii. 9, with allusion both to idolatry and to the vices which it brought with it. In ἀνθρωπότης and τυμὴ αἵματος there is reference (by an allusion to the Paschal lamb) to the work of atonement, effected by the sacrifice of Christ; and in ἀνέμου and ἄσπ. there is an allusion to the perfection required in the legal victims, which typified the great sacrifice of Christ. See John i. 29.

20, 21. προϋπεσμένον μὲν πρὸ, &c. q.d. 'of Christ, [I say] who was fore-destined to this work of liberation and redemption, before the creation of the world,—but made his appearance in these latter times for your sakes who, through him, believe in God, that raised Him from the dead, and glorified Him; so that your faith and hope rest on (or should rest on) God.' Προϋπεσμένον is equiv. to προόριε (with which it is conjoined) at Rom. vii. 21. And so the word is used in Thucyd. ii. 64, fn. On the ex-

α Acts 2. 22.
Phil. 2. 9.

π Acts 15. 9.
Rom. 12. 10.
Eph. 4. 2.
1 Tim. 1. 5.
Heb. 12. 1.
ch. 2. 17.
γ John 1. 12.
δ 3. 9, 6.
James 1. 12.
1 John 2. 9.

ἐσχάτων τῶν χρόνων δι' ὑμᾶς <sup>21</sup> τοὺς δι' αὐτοῦ πιστεύοντας εἰς Θεὸν, τὸν ἐγείραντα αὐτὸν ἐκ νεκρῶν, καὶ δόξαν αὐτῷ δόντα· ὥστε τὴν πίστιν ὑμῶν καὶ ἐλπίδα εἶναι εἰς Θεόν. <sup>22</sup> τὰς ψυχὰς ὑμῶν ἡγνικότες ἐν τῇ ὑπακοῇ τῆς ἀληθείας, διὰ Πνεύ-ματος, εἰς φιλαδελφίαν ἀνυπόκριτον, ἐκ καθαρᾶς καρδίας ἀλλήλους ἀγαπήσατε ἐκτενῶς <sup>23</sup> ἡ ἀναγεννημένοι οὐκ ἐκ σπορᾶς pression πρὸ καταβολῆς κόσμου, see Eph. iii. 9; and on δόξαν, Acts ii. 33. iii. 13. Heb. ii. 9.—ἐν ἐσχάτων τῶν χρόνων, Lachm. and Tisch. adopt the reading ἐπ' ἐσχάτου τ. χ., found in 11 MSS., with the Syr. Version, and Cyrill. and which derives support from a passage of Heb. i. 2, ἐπ' ἐσχάτου τῶν ἡμερῶν, and 2 Pet. iii. 3, ἐπ' ἐσχάτων τῶν ἡμερῶν, where such has place in t. rec.; though there Lachm. and Tisch. think proper to read, inconsistently enough, from several MSS., ἐπ' ἐσχάτων. Surely the reading, whether ἐσχάτου or ἐσχάτων, ought to be made the same in the same writer. And considering the character of St. Peter's style, ἐσχάτων is the more likely to be genuine; while, in Heb. i. 2, ἐσχάτου is more agreeable to the style of that Epistle. In the words τὸν ἐγείραντα αὐτὸν ἐκ νεκρῶν there is reference to the evidence by which it is shown that Jesus is the Christ. By the words δι' ὑμᾶς τοὺς δι' αὐτοῦ πιστεύοντας it is intimated that the godly alone have an interest in the benefits of this redemption; the terms τοὺς δι' αὐτοῦ πιστεύοντας εἰς Θεόν serving, as Calvin observes, to express in a brief way the nature of true faith. See John xiv. 6. For πιστεύοντας, Lachm. and Tisch. read, from two MSS. and the Vulg., πιστοὺς; but on insecure grounds. Even Est., in commenting on the Vulg. Version, fideles, is obliged to explain it as put for credentes. Moreover, although πιστοὺς may seem required by the canon which assigns the preference to the less usual form of expression, yet that canon, it may be observed, does not apply in the case of expressions wholly unprecedented, which πιστὸς εἰς Θεόν certainly is, for it is found no where in New Test., nor in the Sept.; nor, as far as I know, in Jos., Philo, or the Class. writers. Again, τοὺς πιστεύοντας, not τοὺς πιστοὺς, is found in Eph. i. 19, and πάντες τοὺς πιστεύοντας in 1 Thess. i. 7, each without v. lect. We may very well suppose the reading πιστοὺς to have arisen from certain scribes mistaking the abbreviation for πιστεύοντας.

<sup>22</sup> τὰς ψυχὰς ὑμῶν ἡγνικότες, &c.] To the above exhortation to holiness the Apostle subjoins another to charity: 'Wherefore, having purified your hearts by your obedience, through the Spirit, to the true doctrine [the Gospel], so far as to bear a sincere love to your Christian brethren, see that ye [continue to] love each other with a pure heart, and ardently.' By the truth here spoken of is, of course, to be understood the truth as it is in Jesus, or the Gospel of Christ. So in John xvii. 17 the word of God in Christ is said to be the truth. See note there.—The words διὰ Πνεύματος, which have no place in six MSS., and almost all the ancient Versions, have been cancelled by Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch. But, though this may seem justified by the apparently greater probability of the words being put in than put out, yet they may have been accidentally left out in consequence of the peculiar construction of the sentence, overcharged as it is by a multitude of adjuncts, in which some one or more of them might be expected to be omitted, and then brought in at a wrong place; or, as is the case here, omitted altogether. It is difficult to imagine that so important a doctrine as that conveyed by these words,—namely, the necessity of the influence of the Holy Spirit exerted on the hearts of men, so essential both to the embracing of the Gospel, and obedience to its requirements, would have been left to be understood by implication, eoque. considering that we find St. Luke, when inculcating the same doctrine of the purification of the heart by cordial reception, in faith, of the Gospel, plainly expresses this doctrine by the insertion of this particular, δοτε αὐτοῖς τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον. And though the agent in the passage of St. Luke is said to be God, and here the Holy Spirit, yet no real discrepancy exists, since we are here to understand the Holy Spirit as sent from God through the intercession of Christ (John xiv. 6). The heart or soul, as Steiger truly observes, 'needs purification in itself, [so as both to believe and obey the Gospel.] being now in a fallen condition in bondage to the flesh. The Purifier where given, and not resisted, is the Spirit; and Christians, instead of grieving Him by clinging to their old corruptions, must purify and sanctify themselves through his power.' See more in Calv. Of course, this purification must be progressive; for, as remarks Est., 'even justified believers need still a daily increase of this purification by faith, through the Spirit;' 'quis enim (says St. Augustine) in hac vitā sic mundus, ut non sit magis purgandus?'—ἐκ καθαρᾶς καρδίας. Lachm. and Tisch. cancel καθαρᾶς from two MSS., imagining, I suppose, that the words were foisted in from 1 Tim. i. 5. and 2 Tim. ii. 22. But surely it was more likely that they should have been left out per hominem—omissionem in two MSS., than that they should have been interpolated in all the rest. Considering, too, that they are found in all the ancient Versions except the Vulg. (and their omission there is well accounted for by Est.), and may fairly be presumed to have had place in the text as early as the formation of the Pesh. Syr., we may justly suppose them to have come from the Apostle; who, in employing them, prob. had in mind the two passages of St. Paul above noticed, and possibly Matt. v. 8, as also the words of our Lord uttered in the presence of the Apostle, as recorded by St. John, xv. 3, καθαροὶ ἵστατε διὰ τὸν λόγον, &c., meaning, 'the word of God in the Gospel of Christ, dwelling in them by faith.' See v. 7.

<sup>23</sup> ἀναγεννημένοι οὐκ ἐκ, &c.] These words suggest why they are expected to be thus

φθαρτῆς, ἀλλὰ ἀφθάρτου, διὰ λόγου ζῶντος Θεοῦ καὶ μένοντος εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα. <sup>24</sup> Διότι πᾶσα σὰρξ ὡς χόρτος, καὶ πᾶσα δόξα ἀνθρώπου ὡς ἄνθος χόρτου. ἐξηράνθη ὁ χόρτος, καὶ τὸ ἄνθος [αὐτοῦ] ἐξέπεσε. <sup>25</sup> τὸ δὲ ῥῆμα Κυρίου μένει εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα. Τοῦτο δέ ἐστι τὸ ῥῆμα τὸ εὐαγγελισθὲν εἰς ὑμᾶς. II. 1<sup>a</sup> Ἀποθέμενοι οὖν πᾶσαν κακίαν καὶ πάντα δόλον, καὶ ὑποκρίσεις, καὶ φθόνους, καὶ πάσας καταλαλιὰς, <sup>2</sup> ὡς ἀρτιγέννητα βρέφη, τὸ λογικὸν ἄδολον γάλα ἐπιπο-

2 Ps. 108. 18.
Ecclesi. 14.
18.
Isa. 40. 6.
1 Cor. 7. 31.
James 1. 10.
8. 14.
1 John 2. 17.
as Ps. 102.
12. 26.
Isa. 40. 8.
Luke 16. 17.
a Matt. 18. 2.
Rom. 6. 4.
1 Cor. 14. 20.
Eph. 4. 22.
26.
Col. 2. 8.

obedient to the word of truth and kindly affectioned one to another,—namely, ‘because they have undergone a moral regeneration, which may be expected to produce the fruits of righteousness.’ Comp. infra iii. 9. John i. 10—13. iii. 3, 8, and espec. James i. 16—18, which passages form the best comment on the present. The ἀναγέννησις here spoken of is the same with the ταλιγγισία of which St. Paul speaks Tit. iii. 5, διὰ λουτροῦ ταλιγγισίας καὶ ἀνακαινώσεως Πνεύματος ἁγίου, which passage might possibly be here present to the mind of St. Peter, as suggested by the words διὰ Πνεύματος, which he had himself employed in the foregoing verse. But this regeneration and renewing of the Spirit, taken in conjunction with the purification just before spoken of, evidently adverts to the work of regeneration as carried on through the influence of the Spirit during the whole period of the Christian’s course, so that he should acquire further and further degrees of purification, among which is the perfecting holiness in the fear of God; and of this latter work of the Spirit on the mind and heart, St. Paul treats, Rom. xii. 2, and Tit. iii. 5. The expression here, μένοντες εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα, may be referred either to Θεοῦ (as it is by Grotius and Elsner, who cite Dan. vi. 26, αὐτῷ ἐστι Θεὸς ζῶν καὶ μένων), or rather to λόγου, i. e. the Gospel, which is more agreeable to the propriety of language and more suitable to the context, and is confirmed by an imitation in Papias, ap. Euseb. Hist. Eccl. viii. 39, οὐ γὰρ τὰ ἐκ τῶν βιβλίων τοσούτον με ἀφιλεῖν ὑπελάμβανον, ὅσον τὰ παρὰ ζώσης φωνῆς καὶ μυνούσης.

24, 25. In confirmation of this position, reference is now made to the words of Isa. xl. 6—8, which passage is justly regarded as prophetic of the eternal duration of the truths of the Gospel. By this, too, it may be intimated, that the carnal ordinances of the Law would soon be done away, whereas the Gospel dispensation would continue for ever. In ver. 24 the comparison is similar to those in James i. ii. & iv.

24. Here Lachm. cancels ὡς before χόρτος; and both Lachm. and (in 1st ed.) Tisch. cancel the αὐτοῦ after ἄνθος. They also change ἀνθρώπου to αὐτῆς. But these alterations are insufficiently supported, nor can we fully determine the genuine reading, unless we could know whether the Apostle here intended a citation of the words or not. Supposing that he did, the words as they stand in the t. rec.—if, at least, αὐτοῦ be, on competent authority, removed,—will fully answer that purpose. If he only intended to give the sense in substance, the text of Tisch. may be admitted; though why he should, in his 2nd ed., have restored αὐτοῦ, which he had in his 1st ed. cancelled, it is not easy to see. However, being of opinion that the Apostle here intended a citation which was called for by the occasion (namely, offering a confirmation of what he had just said), I advocate the retaining of the t. rec., with the exception that the αὐτοῦ (which may have crept in from the margin, or have been supplied by St. Peter in order to clear the sense) should be included between brackets.

25. τὸ δὲ ῥῆμα, &c.] The full sense is, ‘but the word of the Lord is [not, like man, and all the glory of man, subject to change, but] remains, and will remain, invariable, both as to its truth and its power, verified both in its promises and its threatenings, which will be accomplished to all eternity.’—τοῦτο δὲ ἐστι, &c., meaning, ‘And that eternal truth is inherent in the very doctrine which is now preached to you.’ The reason why the Apostle here uses Κυρίου for the Θεοῦ of Isa. xl. 6, 8, Sept., Dr. Peile justly thinks, is, ‘to distinguish the better between, (1) that specific announcement of good tidings (τὸ εὐαγγελισθὲν εἰς ὑμᾶς) of which he had just before made mention as the living and abiding manifestation of the Incarnate God, our Saviour and (as dwelling now not with us, but in us), our Sanctifier; and (2) that prophetic word of promise, in which Jehovah (until that in the only Son by nature He should declare himself) had spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began; John i. 18. Acts iii. 21. xiii. 32. Heb. i. 1, 2. 2 Pet. i. 19, 21.’ Accordingly, continues Dr. Peile, ‘we must, by τὸ ῥῆμα Κυρίου, in the present passage, understand “that which Jehovah hath spoken,” and which, because “the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it,” standeth fast for ever.’—ε. g. καὶ ὀφθήσεται ἡ δόξα Κυρίου καὶ δοῦνται πᾶσα σὰρξ τὸ σωτήριον τοῦ Θεοῦ, ὅτι Κύριος ἐλάλησεν, Isa. xl. 5.

II. Having shown that the faithful are regenerated by the word of God, the Apostle now exhorts those whom he is addressing to lead a life correspondent thereto: for the οὖν at ver. 1 seems to have reference, not, as most Commentators suppose, to what was just said, ver. 25 of the preceding Chapter, respecting the everlasting permanency and invariable certainty of the Gospel, but rather to the whole of what was said in that Chapter on the Christian’s privileges. At the same time it may be true what Steiger says, that this first verse is less the continuation than the resumption of the preceding exhortation at ver. 22, forming also the link of connexion with what follows.

2. τὸ λογικὸν ἄδολον γάλα] This is said by allusion to unadulterated wine, unmixed oil, or pure and genuine medicine; under which meta-b Pa. 34. 2. c Pa. 115. 22. Eph. 2. 30. d Isa. 61. 6. & 68. 21. Hec. 14. 2. Mal. 1. 11. Rom. 15. 1. Eph. 3. 31. 22. Phil. 4. 15. Heb. 2. 6. & 12. 26. & 12. 15. Rev. 1. 6. & 6. 10.

θήσατε, ἵνα ἐν αὐτῷ αὐξηθῆτε [αἰ σωτηρίας]. <sup>3</sup> εἶπερ ἐγεύσασθε ὅτι χρηστὸς ὁ Κύριος. <sup>4</sup> Πρὸς δὲ προσερχόμενοι, λίθον ζῶντα, ὑπὸ ἀνθρώπων μὲν ἀποδοδοκιμασμένον, παρὰ δὲ Θεοῦ ἐκλεκτὸν, ἔντιμον, <sup>5</sup> καὶ αὐτοὶ ὡς λίθοι ζῶντες

phor is designated pure Christian doctrine, the wholesome nursing-food of the soul. Many passages might be adduced from Plato and other Greek philosophers containing the same metaphor. After αὐξηθῆτε 42 MSS. (to which I add Lamb. 1182, 1183, and 5 ancient Mus. copies) have αἰ σωτηρίας, which words are found in almost all the ancient Versions, and were read by several Greek and Latin Fathers, and have been received into the text by Bengel, Wetst., Matth., Griesb., Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch.; in deference to whose authority I have received them in small print and in brackets. Undoubtedly they convey an important sense, serving to 'show (as Mr. Horne observes, Introd., vol. ii. p. 398) the reason why the believing Jews were regenerated, and also why they were to desire the unsullied doctrines of the Gospel, viz. that they might thereby increase, or grow up, unto salvation.' Yet it may be asked, how came words, apparently so important to the sense, to be omitted? Wetst. accounts for their omission on the supposition that they were expunged by those who thought the words would thus seem to signify that infants are excluded from salvation; while Pott supposes them to have been thrown out by those who thought they might favour the erroneous notion that we can be saved solely by the efficacy of Christian doctrine. The latter is the more probable opinion; but where, I would ask, is the proof that the integrity of the sacred text was ever so systematically tampered with from doctrinal reasons and on such slight grounds, at least by the orthodox, as to be safely returned to as a principle on which to account for the absence of words in MSS.? Until this can be established (which, I apprehend, never can, and which, if it could, would involve dangerous consequences to the certainty of our faith), I shall continue to think it far more probable that the words in question are an insertion from the early Scholiasts, and intended to complete the sense, by showing the great end here to be kept in view. In doing this, the Scholiasts adopted a phrase occurring, in the same import, supr. i. 5, and often in St. Paul's Epistles.

3. By a passage of the Old Test. the sentiment of ver. 2 is amplified; into which [passage] since a little before the subject treated of had been the Christian religion under the symbol of milk, so here it seems to be introduced by the verb ἐγεύσασθε. (Pott.) Est. well remarks, that there is here a confirmation of the foregoing exhortation to the study of Christian perfection, from the sweetness already enjoyed of the Gospel. This is one of those passages in which there is no quotation, even by accommodation of number, person, &c., from the Sept., but simply an application from Pa. xxiv. 9, by way of allusion or reference, as in 2 Cor. ix. 7, ἰαροὺν γὰρ δότην ἀγαπᾷ ὁ Θεός, 2 Thess. ii. 8, taken in conjunction with ἐκποθέσθαι just before, meant to suggest, that 'as infants, in experiencing the sweetness and purity of the mother's milk, seek it the more, and love the mother the better, so Christians having experienced the salubrity of the sincere milk of the word, should be similarly affected towards Christ.' Εἶπερ has no little significance, supposing, as Steiger says, a necessary pre-requisite, grounded on the internal motive which must excite to the enjoyment of Gospel truth, q. d. otherwise all this will go for nothing. The Apostle assumes that those whom he is addressing had come to Christ through a true conversion, and become experimentally acquainted with his goodness and the sweetness of his Gospel. It is (to use the words of Luther) as if he had said, 'Whosoever has not tasted it, to him it is not sweet, it has not reached his heart (for that is to taste when we with the heart believe); but they who have experienced it, who always seek after the food of the Word, to them it tastes well and is sweet,' i. e. is relished.

4, 5. These verses are closely connected; the former containing a protasis, the latter an apodosis; the purpose of the Apostle being here to exhort Christians not only to receive, but to observe and act upon the precepts of the Gospel. In fact they contain, as Aretius says, the consequent to the antecedent at ver. 3, as to the sweetness they acknowledged. Whence the inference is, that having experienced this goodness, they should frame their lives suitably thereto.

4. προσερχόμενοι] The term properly denotes approach generally, but is also used of that species of approach, which consists in any one's resorting to another as a teacher, and becoming his disciple; but it must here have a much deeper sense, as said of the Saviour, who Himself said, 'Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden,' &c., Matt. xi. 28.—λίθον ζῶντα. 'Christ is so called, not only in respect of his immortality, but also from his being to us the sole principle of spiritual and eternal life, and so at once a living and an enlightening stone; and believers are so called (ver. 5), we may suppose, as drawing life from Him by virtue of their union with Him as a living foundation.' (Abp. Leighton).—ἀποδοδοκιμασμένον, 'disapproved, or rejected. Αδοδοκιμασμένον, not frequently employed of Him whom the Prophet speaks of as 'despised and rejected of men,' even JESUS, whom the Jewish hierarchy refused to acknowledge. There is here an allusion to the words of Pa. cxviii. 22, where Christ is prophesied of as 'the stone which the builders rejected.'—ἐκλεκτὸν, 'select, excellent.' So in the Book of Enoch, Fabricii Cod. Pseud. V. Vet. i. 184, we have λίθον ἐκλεκτόν.

5. In the expression λίθοι ζῶντες there is an allusion to Isa. xxviii. 16, where the Prophet predicts the establishment of the Christian Church, under the image of a temple, built by God himself, of which Christ should be the corner-stone. Accordingly the Christian Church is represented as a spiritual building, whose stones are the living members of Christ's body, he himself being the Head, and the fountain of οικοδομείσθε, οἶκος πνευματικὸς, ἱεράτευμα ἅγιον, ἀνενέγκαι πνευματικὰς θυσίας, εὐπροσδέκτους τῷ Θεῷ διὰ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ.

 6 * † Διὸ καὶ περιέχει ἐν τῇ γραφῇ Ἰδοῦ, τίθημι ἐν Σιών <sup>e Isa. 28. 16.
Rom. 9. 33.</sup>
 λίθον ἀκρογωνιαίον, ἐκλεκτὸν, ἔντιμον καὶ ὁ πστεύων ἐπ' αὐτῷ οὐ μὴ καταισχυνθῇ. 7 Ἰμῶν οὖν ἡ <sup>f Ps. 118. 22.
Isa. 8. 14.
Mat. 21. 42.</sup>
 τιμὴ τοῖς πιστεύουσιν ἀπειθούσι δέ,—λίθον δὲ ἀπεδοκίμασαν οἱ οἰκοδομοῦντες, οὗτος ἐγενήθη εἰς κεφαλὴν γωνίας,—καὶ λίθος προσκόμματος καὶ πέτρα σκαν-δάλου <sup>g Luke 4. 11.
Rom. 9. 33.</sup> 8 (* οἱ προσκόπτουσι, τῷ λόγῳ ἀπειθοῦντες, εἰς δὲ καὶ <sup>h 1 Cor. 1.</sup> life to them. They are termed living stones of that building, inasmuch as they live by 'the faith of the Son of God'; He being in them. From the Temple itself the Apostle then proceeds to the service of the Temple, with reference thereto applying to Christians various titles originally applied to the Jews. They are, he shows, 'an holy priesthood' (or, as it is said, ver. 9, 'a royal priesthood') in a higher sense than the Israelites were called 'a kingdom of priests' (Exod. xix. 6); for they are appointed to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable unto God by Jesus Christ. See Rev. i. 6.—To advert to a matter of reading. For ἱεράτευμα ἅγιον Lachm. and Tisch. read στὴ ἱερ. ἅγιον, from not a few MSS., and some Fathers and late Versions; an alteration anything but well grounded, since the στὴ came evidently from the margin, though it was probably intended to fill up an ellipsis at ἀνενέγκαι. Had the learned Critics looked four verses forward to ver. 9, ὅμοις δὲ [ἴσως] βασιλείου ἱεράτευμα, they would not have hazarded so baseless an emendation, which, however, I find Tisch. has in his 2nd ed. abandoned, discarding the στὴ. With the expression ἀνενέγκαι πνιμ. θυσίας, comp. Philo. t. ii. p. 457, 10, θεραπεύται Θεοῦ γαγόναι, οὐ ᾧσα καταθόντες, ἀλλὰ ἱεροκρεπίαι, τὰς ἱαντῶν διανοίας κατασκευάζειν ἀξιούντες.

6—10. The Apostle here confirms what he had said of Christ, in relation to believers, who acquire all their glory through building upon him: and in relation to those who reject him, he reasons out of the Old Test., and in such a manner, that he strengthens the first by repeating it in a short but apposite citation (v. 6), but the other he represents at large, in words derived from other portions of Scripture, contrasting it with the relation of believers to Christ (vv. 7, 8), through which the transition is effected to the representation, set forth in the next section, of the calling of Christians in their relation to unbelievers, which transition itself contains the beginning, the principle of this representation, vv. 9, 10. (Steiger.)

6. διὸ καὶ For this very many MSS. and Versions have διὸτι, which reading has been adopted by Griesb., Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch. But, although external authority is in its favour, internal evidence supports διὸ καὶ. The formula διὸ καὶ, followed by a verb, is almost peculiar to Scripture, and is found in Luke i. 35. Acts x. 29. xiii. 35. xxiv. 26. Rom. i. 24. iv. 22. xv. 22. 2 Cor. i. 20. iv. 13. v. 9. Heb. xi. 12. xiii. 12; hence I cannot quite approve of its being rejected here. For ἐν τῇ γραφῇ Tisch. reads ἐν γραφῇ, from 4 MSS.; and Lachm. reads ἡ γραφή, from 16 MSS. and the Vulg. But that reading plainly proceeded from a corrector, who stumbled at the use of περιέχει in a passive sense. Yet the idiom is not to be removed in so summary a way; otherwise περιέχεται ἐν τῇ γραφῇ would have been a milder emendation. But this use of neut. for passive is found elsewhere in New Test. and the Sept., as also in the Classic writers, both Greek and Latin.—Accordingly περιέχει is to be taken as Imper. neut. for περιέχεται; as in Jos. Antt. xi. 4, 7, καθὼς ἐν αὐτῇ (scil. ἐπιστολῇ) περιέχει. See note on Rom. ix. 33. The words cited do not quite correspond with the words either of the Hebrew or the Sept.; but they represent the sense, though in a somewhat compressed yet clearer form; especially in that sublimer and mystical acceptance, which was doubtless intended by the Prophet in conjunction with the primary one.—ὁ πιστεύων ἐπ' αὐτῷ, 'whosoever confideth on it,' or Him; the latter springing from the former. See Steiger. Ἐπ' αὐτῷ is added in order to complete the sense, and suit the application.—Οὐ μὴ καταισχυνθῇ, i. e. 'shall not be disappointed of his hope.' See note on John viii. 51.

7. ἱμῶν οὖν ἡ τιμὴ τοῖς πιστ. Render: 'Unto you, therefore, who [thus firmly] believe, belongs the preciousness [which I speak of].' By most Commentators, indeed, τιμὴ is taken as standing for ἐντιμος; a mode of exposition which might be tolerated as regards the usus loquendi; for so in Plut. de Ia. & Osir. § 5, we have, οὐδὲν οὕτω τιμὴ Αἰγυπτίους ὡς ὁ Νεῖλος. Yet the sense thus arising is not so apposite as that yielded by the former mode.—ἀπειθοῦσι, meaning, 'the unbelieving, and [consequently] disobedient.' In this sense the term occurs also in John iii. 36. Acts xiv. 2, and elsewhere. We have here a blending of two ideas, as in the case of τοῖς ἀπολλυμένοις at 2 Thes. ii. 10—12, where see note.—Λίθος προσκόμματος, meaning, 'a stone at which any one may stumble.' Just as a corner-stone, though placed to sustain the walls of a building, yet may be stumbled at by a careless passer by, to his injury. So Steiger, too, I find, explains; observing (after the ancient Commentators and Horneius), 'that the corner-stone is commonly of a twofold nature; designedly and essentially the foundation-stone of the building, accidentally and unintentionally a stumbling-block for those who incautiously turn round the corner, and drive themselves against it; but here the latter also is given as intentional.'

8. οἱ προσκόπτουσι, τῷ λόγῳ ἀπειθοῦντες] These words are explanatory of the preceding, h Exod. 19.

5, 6.
Deut. 7. 6.
& 14. 2.
Ex. 26. 18.
Eph. 1. 14.
& 5. 5.
Col. 1. 12.
Rev. 1. 6.
& 5. 10.
1 Hos. 1. 10.
1. 2. 23.
Rom. 9. 26.
k 1 Chron.
29. 15.
Ps. 30. 12.
& 119. 19.

ἐτέθησαν.) <sup>9</sup> ἡμεῖς δὲ γένος ἐκλεκτὸν, βασιλείου ἱεράτευμα, ἔθνος ἁγίου, λαὸς εἰς περιποίησιν, ὅπως τὰς ἀρετὰς ἐξαγγεῖλητε τοῦ ἐκ σκότους ὑμᾶς καλέσαντος εἰς τὸ θαυμαστὸν αὐτοῦ φῶς. <sup>10</sup> οἱ ποτὲ οὐ λαὸς, νῦν δὲ λαὸς Θεοῦ· οἱ οὐκ ἡλεημένοι, νῦν δὲ ἐλεηθέντες.

11 * Ἀγαπητοί, παρακαλῶ ὡς παρόικους καὶ παρεπιδήμους, ἀπέχεσθαι τῶν σαρκικῶν ἐπιθυμιῶν, αἵτινες στρατεύονται κατὰ and serve to intimate the application. The con- struction here has, indeed, been disputed; some (as the older Commentators in general) construing τῷ λόγῳ with προσκομματος; others, as the Pesch. Syr. Translator, and the more recent Commentators, with ἀπειθούντες. But it is well observed by Steiger, that the construction is only grammatically, not exegetically, doubtful. And he justly thinks, with Benson, 'that the comparison here of Christ with the stone at which unbelievers stumble, taken in conjunction with the very common form of expression, ἀπειθεῖν τῷ λόγῳ and τῷ ἐξαγγελλῶ (as infra iii. 1, and

iv. 17) decides in favour of the latter construction.' According to which he well expresses the sense thus: 'But to the unbelieving,—who, because they believe not the word, stumble upon this stone,' &c.—εἰς δ. Supply προσκομμα. It is ably evinced by Mr. Horne (Introd. vol. ii. pp.
397, 398), that, from an examination of the foregoing context, the sense here cannot be, that 'God had ordained them to disobedience (for in that case their obedience would have been impossible, and their disobedience would have been no sin); but that God, the righteous Judge of all the earth, had appointed, or decreed, that destruction and eternal perdition should be the punishment of such disbelieving persons, who wilfully rejected all the evidences that Jesus Christ was the Messiah, the Saviour of the world.' There is here an allusion to the words of Isaiah, viii. 15; with which compare Matt. xxi. 44. Luke ii. 34.
Rom. ix. 32; and see also the note on Acts xiii. 47.

9, 10. Here are further set forth the high pr- ivileges which are obtained by faith in Christ (see note supra iii. 4); and that in language originally employed to denote those of God's chosen people of old.

9. ὑμεῖς δὲ γένος ἐκλεκτὸν, &c.] Of these expressions, γένος ἐκλ. is derived from Isa. xliii.
20; βασιλείου ἱεράτευμα, from Exod. xiv. 6; ἔθνος ἁγίου, from Deut. vii. 6, and xiv. 2; and λαὸς εἰς περιποίησιν (answering to λαὸς περιούσιος [at Tit. ii. 14], from Exod. xix. 5, and Mal. iii. 17. See note on Acts xx. 28, and on Eph. i. 13, 14.—ὅπως τὰς ἀρετὰς, &c., meaning, 'that ye should show forth [by words and deeds] the excellences, or perfections, of him who hath called [and drawn] you from the darkness [of ignorance, sin, and misery] to his marvellous light,' namely, 'the true light,' 1 John ii. 8;
'the light of the Lord,' Isa. ii. 5.—ἐξαγγ. lit.
signif. 'to tell those without what is done within'; and here (as Ps. lxxi. 15, and lxxiii. 28), in a general way, to tell at large. 'Ἀρετὰς is not well rendered praises: it rather signifies virtues; moral attributes—'whatever calls for praise' (see Phil. iv. 8); meaning espec. the Divine goodness; though also the other attributes of faithfulness and truth are included.

10. οἱ ποτὲ οὐ λαὸς—ἐλεηθέντες] Predicates for elevating the feeling of gratitude and confidence, derived from Hos. ii. 25. (Steiger.) The full sense intended is, 'who were not a people of God, but now are so; who were not [formerly] in favour with God, but now have become such, being received into the pale of Christ's Church.
In οὐ λαὸς the words are to be conjoined, so as to form a sort of anomalous compound, as ἐπ' οὐκ ἴθνη, at Rom. x. 19. ix. 25, τὸν οὐ—λαόν —τὴν οὐκ ἔγγα. And so the Hebrew u and the Sept. u at Deut. xxxii. 21; the idiom sometimes occurs in the Class. writers; as Thucyd. i.
137, ἡ οὐ διάλυσιν, where see my note, and Dr.
Peile's note here. To the passage of the O. T. on which these verses are formed may be added Mal. iii. 17, which served to suggest the expression here λαὸς εἰς περιποίησιν. The Prophet there introduces Jehovah saying of those that feared the Lord, ἔσονται μοι εἰς περιποίησιν, where the term περιποίησις signifies what the Latin expresses by peculium, a private property, lit.
what has been acquired by purchase, and what thus becomes any one's own. Here εἰς περιποίησιν stands for περιουσιότην, which is used by Heaych. In explaining περιούσιον, with reference to Tit. ii. 14, ὡς καθάριση ἑαυτῷ λαόν περιούσιον, which passage was here probably had in view by the Apostle. The ideas, however, of both property and of purchase are here to be kept in view, the persons in question being the Lord's own peculiar property, and that obtained at the infinite price of his own blood. Both ideas are kept in view also in Acts xx. 28, ἦν (meaning the Church of Christ) περιποιήσατο διὰ τοῦ ἰδίου αἵματος.

11, 12. Here we have an impressive exhortation to walk worthy of so precious a Gospel, by abstaining from those fleshly lusts which 'drown men in perdition,' 1 Tim. vi. 9. See Rom. vi.
12. James iv. 1. The nature of the argument here will be best understood by supposing (with Grot., Rosenm., and Pott) that the Apostle is reminding them of their situation as παρόικοι and παραπεδήμοι in a foreign country, strangers and pilgrims in this world, as compared with the next. After which, in the following verse, he takes occasion, from their situation as Christian strangers in Heathen countries, to press on them the duty of adorning the doctrine of God their Saviour in all things.

11. For ἀπέχεσθαι, very many MSS. (to which I add one Lamb. and one Mus. copy) have ἀπέχεσθαι, which reading has been adopted by Tisch.; while Lachm. retains the t. rec., with more than usual, yet misplaced caution, since the ὑμᾶς which it requires, and which he introduces τῆς ψυχῆς<sup>12</sup> τὴν ἀναστροφὴν ὑμῶν ἐν τοῖς ἔθνεσιν ἔχοντες<sup>1</sup> καλὴν, ἵνα ἐν ᾧ καταλαλοῦσιν ὑμῶν ὡς κακοποιῶν, ἐκ τῶν καλῶν ἔργων, ἐποπτεύσαντες, δοξάσωσι τὸν Θεὸν ἐν ἡμέρᾳ ἐπισκοπῆς.<sup>13</sup> Ὑποτάγητε οὖν πάσῃ ἀνθρωπίνῃ κτίσει διὰ τὸν Κύριον εἴτε βασιλεῖ, ὡς ὑπερέχοντι<sup>14</sup> εἴτε ἡγεμόσιν, ὡς δι' αὐτοῦ πεμπομένοις εἰς ἐκδίκησιν [μὲν] κακοποιῶν, ἵππα-

νον δὲ ἀγαθοποιῶν.<sup>15</sup> (ὅτι οὕτως ἐστὶ τὸ θέλημα τοῦ Θεοῦ, οἷς τ. 2. 2. ἀγαθοποιούντας φιμοῦν τὴν τῶν ἀφρόνων ἀνθρώπων ἀγνωσίαν)

merely from ancient Versions, is perhaps not found in a single MS. It may be supposed to have arisen (as also perhaps ἀνίχισθαι) from misapprehension of the construction, which is: ἀγαπᾶτε, παρακαλῶ ὡς παροίκους καὶ παρεπίδημους—ἀνίχισθαι. The intermediate and parenthetic words may be thus rendered: 'I do exhort you, as it were strangers and sojourners.' With peculiar propriety does the Apostle here say παρεπίδημους, since the Epistle was addressed παρεπίδημοι διασπορᾷ Πόντου, &c. Simil. in Heb. xi. 13, we have, ἔξουσι καὶ παρεπίδημοί εἰσιν ἐπὶ τῇ γῇ. By σαρκικαὶ ἐπιθυμίαι are here denoted not only 'fleshly lusts,' properly so called, but 'those carnal affections and passions of the mind and heart, which are equally prompted by unregenerate nature, and which are alike enmity against God.' To show the destructive tendency of these 'fleshly lusts,' and to set forth their formidable nature, the Apostle adopts in the next words a military metaphor,—representing in a strong point of view the struggle we have to maintain in this life, of the flesh against the spirit, and the fatal consequences of giving way in the contest. The same metaphor is adopted in James iv. 1. τῶν ἡδονῶν τῶν στρατευομένων ἐν τοῖς μέλεσι (where see Note).

12. τὴν ἀναστροφὴν—καλὴν. The participle ἔχοντες connects closely with ἀνίχισθαι, and consequently confirms that reading.—ἔχοντες should be rendered keeping, i. e. maintaining; and ἀναστροφὴν καλὴν, a creditable course of conduct. The same sense may be assigned to ἔχειν in Acts xxiv. 16, ἀπρόσκοπον συνείδησιν πρὸς τοὺς ἀνθρώπους, and also infr. iii. 16, συνείδ. ἔχοντες ἀγαθὴν. This use of ἔχειν for κατέχειν is found both in the N. T. and the Class. writers. See my Lex. N. T. The two passages, the one here, and that at iii. 16, are so very similar, that the same sense of ἔχειν must be assigned to both. The only real difference here is in the addition of ἐν ἡμέρᾳ ἐπισκοπῆς, which I am still of opinion is best explained to denote 'the time of God's visiting the hitherto unconvinced and unconverted with a full conviction of the truth of the Gospel.' And this sense is ably stated and well illustrated by Est. and Calv.—ἐποπτεύσαντες has been altered to ἐπισκοπούμεντες, from 8 MSS., by Lachm. and Tisch.; but propriety of language and the parallel passage of ii. 2 (in which there is no var. lect.) confirms ἐπισκοπεύς, 'on having surveyed' the καλὰ ἔργα.

13, 14. The Apostle now illustrates the general precept of vv. 11, 12, by adverting to the particular duties to be observed by those residing among the Heathens, both by Jewish and Gentile Christians. (Pett.) From the highest standing of Christians he goes straight to their most ordinary obligations,—from the glorifying of their royal priesthood to their obligation to obey human authorities. (Steiger.)

13. ὑποτάγητε οὖν, &c.] Said by way of exemplifying the καλὴ ἀναστροφή above inculcated (it being certain that submission to lawfully constituted authority is the usual attendant on well-doing); though this forms only the part of a series of special and particular exhortations on which the Apostle now enters, after general exhortation.—πάσῃ ἀνθρ. κτίσει, 'all political institution,' a very rare sense of κτ., founded on the Greek κτίσις, and the Latin creare, as used of appointing magistrates. The term βασιλ. may here have reference to the Roman Emperor, styled by the Greeks βασιλεῖς; and the expression following, ἡγεμόσιν δι' αὐτοῦ πεμπομένοις, may be understood of the Roman governors sent out from Rome to rule over the provinces with the power of life and death. In what St. Peter here says of government, as 'a human ordinance,' and what St. Paul says, Rom. xiii. 1, that 'the powers which be (or "rule") are ordained of God,' no real discrepancy exists; for, as Bp. Sanderson observes, 'the substance of the power of every magistrate is the ordinance of God, but its accidents, to wit, the specification of the circumstances thereto belonging,—as in regard of places, persons, titles, continuance, jurisdiction, subordination, and the rest,—is a human ordinance, introduced by custom, or positive law.'

15. In this parenthetical portion there is introduced an additional argument for the above, deduced from the Divine will; thus suggesting the motive for obedience. On this, however, is engrafted another, from the good effects of a blameless conduct, inasmuch as it may thus stop the mouths of foolish calumniators,—men who know not the religion they revile; for by the term ἀγνωσίαν is espec. denoted 'unjust accusation, founded on ignorance.'—φιμοῦν τὴν—ἀγνωσίαν. The reading of MSS. 96, 142, and Clem. Alex., ἡργασίαν, is not a gloss, but rather a plainer reading; for the sense (misunderstood by Est. and other Expositors) is, 'tractions,' 'operations,' as in Plato, p. 404, B, πρὸς τινὰς ἡργασίας πραγμάτων μοχθηρῶν, τὰς δὲ χρηστῶν. So, then, St. Peter might have written; but so, it seems, he did not write: accordingly, retaining ἀγνωσίαν, we must explain as well as we can. It is best interpreted, with the Vulg., 'imprudentiam,' meaning 'accidental ignorance,' 'involuntary error, or mistake, arising from want of better information, or fuller consideration,' as oft. used in Cicero, and other of the best writers, meaning 'the ignorant talking (or "calumny") of

- p John 8. 22. 16 ὡς ἐλεύθεροι, καὶ μὴ ὡς ἐπικάλυμμα ἔχοντες τῆς κακίας Rom. 6. 18. τὴν ἐλευθερίαν, ἀλλ' ὡς δούλοι Θεοῦ. 17 ὅτι Πάντας τιμήσατε, 1 Cor. 7. 22. τὴν ἀδελφότητα * ἀγαπᾶτε τὸν Θεὸν φοβείσθε, τὸν βασιλέα Gal. 3. 1, 13. τιμᾶτε.
 2 Pet. 2. 19. 18 Ὅτι οἰκέται ὑποτασσόμενοι ἐν παντὶ φόβῳ τοῖς δεσπόταις, q Matt. 22. οὐ μόνον τοῖς ἀγαθοῖς καὶ ἐπιεικέσιν, ἀλλὰ καὶ τοῖς σκολιοῖς.
 31. 19 Τοῦτο γὰρ χάρις, εἰ διὰ συνείδησιν Θεοῦ ὑποφέρει τις λύπας, Rom. 12. 10. 1 Tim. 2. 9. s Matt. 5. 10. t Cor. 7. 10.
 Eph. 4. 2. Tit. 2. 9. s Matt. 5. 10. t Cor. 7. 10.
 Phil. 2. 1. s Matt. 5. 10. t Cor. 7. 10.
 Heb. 12. 1. s Matt. 5. 10. t Cor. 7. 10.
 ch. 1. 22. s Matt. 5. 10. t Cor. 7. 10.
 & 5. 5. s Matt. 5. 10. t Cor. 7. 10.
 2 Pet. 1. 7. s Matt. 5. 10. t Cor. 7. 10.
 1 Cor. 7. 22. s Matt. 5. 10. t Cor. 7. 10.
 1 Tim. 2. 9. s Matt. 5. 10. t Cor. 7. 10.

foolish men.' This view I find confirmed by Grot., Rosenm., and Pott. Thus φιμ. is used figurat. and metaph. for 'to repress by full confutation.' Comp. Jos. de Maccab. i. 2, φιμούντα πάντα τὰ τοῦ σματος κινήματα ὑπὸ τοῦ λογισμοῦ.

16. ὡς ἐλεύθεροι.—ἐλευθερίαν]. On this text see Bp. Sanderson's Serm. 7 ad Clerum, where, after observing that 'there is not any thing in the world more generally desired than liberty, nor scarce any thing more generally abused,' he shows that 'such has been the case, even in respect of that blessed liberty which the eternal Son of God purchased for his Church.' 'Accordingly (continues he) St. Peter and St. Paul, the two chief planters of the Churches, endeavoured to early instruct believers in the true doctrine, and direct them in the right use of their Christian liberty, especially in the cases of scandal and of obedience. St. Paul usually treats of the former; St. Peter (having to deal mostly with stiff-necked and insubordinate Jews), generally the latter, and no where more fully than in this Chapter.' The learned Prelate then proceeds to show that the words of the text are to be understood as an anticipation of an objection which might be made by some new converts of the Jews; q. d. 'We have been taught that the Son of God hath made us free, and then we are free indeed, and so not bound to subject ourselves to any masters and governors upon earth,—no, not to kings, but much rather bound not to do it, that so we may preserve that freedom which Christ hath purchased for us, and reserve ourselves the more entirely for God's service, by refusing to be the servants of men. To this objection the Apostle fully replies. He tells them, that being indeed set at liberty by Christ, they are not therefore any more to enthrall themselves to any living soul, or other creature; not to submit to any ordinance of man, as slaves; that is, as if the ordinance itself did, by any proper direct and immediate virtue, bind the conscience. But yet, notwithstanding, they might and ought to submit thereunto as the Lord's freemen, and in a free manner; i. e. by a voluntary and unenforced subjection to their power, and obedience to their lawful commands. They must, therefore, take heed that they use not their liberty for an occasion to the flesh,—nor, under so fair a title, palliate an evil licentiousness, making that a cloak for their irreverent and undutiful carriage towards their superiors.' Thus, then, the general sense here intended is (as Bp. Sanderson well expresses it), 'Submit yourselves to public governors, both supreme and subordinate; be subject to your own particular masters; honour all men with those proper respects due to their stations; but do all this [not as slaves, but] as free; do it without any impeachment of the liberty you have in Christ.' The term κακία here is, as Bp. Sanderson shows, to be taken in an extended sense, of 'sin and iniquity in general,' yet with especial reference to that particular kind of it before spoken of, 'in-subordination and disobedience to lawfully constituted authority.' Accordingly the injunction of St. Peter here is akin to that of St. Paul at Gal. v. 13, μὴ τὴν ἐλευθερίαν εἰς ἀφορμὴν τῇ σαρκί, where the expression σάρξ has reference to 'carnality' of every kind.

17. 'Here the Apostle closes his general exhortation concerning subjection to superiors with four short precepts, or aphorisms, which may not unfitly be ranged into two combinations. The two former into one, thus: Honour all men, but not all men alike. You must be ready to do all offices of respect and love, as occasion serves, to every man; but you are to remark that your brethren in Christ claim a nearer interest in your affections, and charity too, than they that are without. Honour all men, but especially love the brotherhood. The two latter may be ranged into one, thus: Fear God and the king, where the fear of one will consist with the fear of the other; but where they are incompatible, hold fast to the fear of God. Yet even in this case, where you may not fear the king, still you must do him all the honour otherwise that may be.' (Bp. Sanderson.)—πάντας τιμᾶσατε, 'Honour all,'—namely, to whom honour is due. See Rom. xiii. 7: a general injunction then explained by its species. Bp. Sanderson here shows that 'the term cannot be taken in the full sense, but is rather to be understood in that laxer one, by which it imports all that esteem or regard, be it more or less, which (either in justice or charity) is due to any man in respect of his place, person, or condition, according to the eminence, merit, or exigency of any of them respectively, together with the willing performance of all such just and charitable offices, as in proportion to any of the said respects can reasonably be expected.'

18. ἀλλὰ καὶ τοῖς σκολιοῖς]. Bretschn. and others render 'iniqui,' i. e. 'qui non rectā juris viā incedunt.' But that sense is forbidden by the antithetic ἀγαθοῖς καὶ ἐπεικέσιν, which requires the sense cross-grained, choleric, ill-tempered. However, it would seem that, as the single term σκολ. is opposed to the two terms ἀγαθ. and ἐπεικέσιν, it is meant to have a twofold sense corresponding to the twofold reference; and this it very well admits. As opposed to ἀγαθ., it may here signify ungracious; though I cannot find that it ever is so used; and therefore that can only be its sense by implication. As opposed to ἐπεικέσιν, it signifies harsh, severe, and also choleric, ill-tempered.

19. τοῦτο γὰρ χάρις]. Supply ἐντὶ: mean-πάσχω· ἀδίκως. <sup>20</sup> Ποῖον γὰρ κλέος, εἰ ἀμαρτάνοντες καὶ <sup>1</sup> ch. 3. 14. <sup>2</sup> & 4. 14, 15. <sup>3</sup> u. Matt. 10. <sup>4</sup> 24. <sup>5</sup> John 12. 15. <sup>6</sup> 1 Thess. 2. 8. <sup>7</sup> Phil. 2. 5. <sup>8</sup> ch. 3. 17, 18. <sup>9</sup> 1 John 2. 6. <sup>10</sup> v. Isa. 53. 9. <sup>11</sup> 2 Cor. 5. 21. <sup>12</sup> Heb. 4. 15. <sup>13</sup> & 7. 26, 27. <sup>14</sup> 3. 9. 28. <sup>15</sup> 1 John 2. 5. <sup>16</sup> u. Matt. 27. <sup>17</sup> 26. <sup>18</sup> John 8. 46. <sup>19</sup> 40. <sup>20</sup> y. Isa. 53. 4, 5. <sup>21</sup> Matt. 8. 17. <sup>22</sup> Rom. 6. 2, 11. & 7. 6.

πολαφιζόμενοι ὑπομενεῖτε; ἀλλ' εἰ ἀγαθοποιοῦντες καὶ πάσχοντες ὑπομενεῖτε, τοῦτο χάρις παρὰ Θεοῦ. <sup>21</sup> Εἰς τοῦτο γὰρ ἐκλήθητε, ὅτι καὶ Χριστὸς ἔπαθεν ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν, ὑμῖν ὑπολημπάνων ὑπογραμμὸν, ἵνα ἐπακολουθήσητε τοῖς ἰχνεσιν αὐτοῦ. <sup>22</sup> ὃς ἀμαρτίαν οὐκ ἐποίησεν, οὐδὲ εὐρέθη δόλος ἐν τῷ στό-ματι αὐτοῦ. <sup>23</sup> ὃς λοιδορούμενος οὐκ ἀντελοιδόρει, πάσχων οὐκ ἠπέλπει παρεδίδου δὲ τῷ κρῖνοντι δίκαιος.

ing, 'This obtains acceptance with, is well-pleasing [to God]'; παρὰ Θεοῦ being here understood from Θεοῦ following, and παρὰ Θεοῦ at ver. 20. Of διὰ συνείδησιν Θεοῦ the sense is, 'through a principle of conscience as regards God,' and our duty to him, conscience being here considered as a principle guiding any one's actions (as in Rom. xiii. 5. 2 Cor. x. 25, 27, διὰ τὴν συνείδησιν), dictating to a man what to do, and warning him what not to do. See an illustration of the principle here taken for granted in Heb. xi. 25, 26.

20. The two Participles here affixed to the Verb ὑπομεν, in each clause of the sentence, and the καὶ, which seems meant to unite what ought to be kept separate, tend to render the construction here confused. It would seem that the Participles are best considered as used for Gerunds, and meant to denote limitation, as in Xen. Mem. i. 1, 18, where there are (as here) two Participles, ὀργιζομένου—ἀπειλούντων.

21—23. The Apostle now suggests a powerful motive for showing this obedience to the will of God, holding out, for their imitation, the bright example of Him who, in his sufferings for us, endured more cruel contumelies, and far greater sorrows, than we can ever be called to endure, with unshaken constancy. See Matt. xxvi. 67.—The scope and bearings of the argument at vv. 21—25, are well traced by Steiger, thus: 'We have here expressed in pregnant language, and in close succession, the double thought: 1. Ye are bound to obey Christ, because (ὅτι) he has suffered for you; 2. ye are consequently called to patient, though undeserved, suffering, because also (καὶ) Christ, while he suffered for you, suffered undeservingly, and indeed (παρὰ) with the design that ye should therein imitate him as your Pattern, [lit. "outline," by way of "copy." Comp. ἐκδοσίγμα at John xiii. 15, and see note.] By the first Christ is represented as our Master, whose call we must obey; by the second, as our Pattern, in suffering; from which it is clear, that we also must suffer patiently. These two positions are presently illustrated in an inverted order, yet so that each is distributed into two clauses, and in such a way that the two first begin with δὲ, as also the third; but the fourth, as being dependent upon the third, with ἵνα. Ver. 22 designates Christ as innocent; ver. 23, as suffering patiently,—as a Pattern; ver. 24, as a SACRIFICE for all; and ver. 24 with 25, as a PHYSICIAN AND SHEPHERD, espec. for those believing servants;—as a REDEEMER.'

21. ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν, ὑμῖν ὑπολ. I still continue to regard this as the true reading; in which I am supported by the united suffrages of Matth., Scholz, and Tisch. The t. rec. (which is that of both Elzev. and Steph.), ὑμῶν, ὑμῖν (retained by Lachm.), rests on very slender direct authority, and has internal evidence very strongly opposed to it. It is plain that the readings ὑμῶν, ὑμῖν, and ἡμῶν, ἡμῖν (the Stephanic text) were no more than two modes of getting rid of the harshness involved in ἡμῶν, ὑμῖν. Certain it is, that ὑμῖν seems called for by the Verb following ἐπακολουθήσητε: and yet the use of ὑμῖν offers no reason why the Apostle should not have written ἡμῶν; nay, a reason there is why he should,—namely, in order to place a great cardinal doctrine of the Gospel on its broadest basis; for ἡμῶν means 'us all,' i. e. 'all Christians.' So iii. 18, Χριστὸς ἔπαθεν, ἵνα ἡμᾶς προσγ. τῷ Θεῷ. Indeed ἡμῶν (found in the Pesch. Syr.) is placed beyond doubt by a passage infra, iv. 1, Χριστοῦ οὐκ παθόντος ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν ἐν σαρκί, καὶ ὑμεῖς τὴν αὐτὴν ἰστοίαν ὀκλήσασθε, where there is the same transition of person, and the words there are made to advert to the words supra, ii. 21, by means of the Particle οὐκ, which is both resumptive and conclusive. The very same change of person from ἡμᾶς to ὑμᾶς presents itself, infra, ch. v. 10, ὃ δὲ Θεὸς ὁ καλεῖσθαι ἡμᾶς καταρτίσαι ὑμᾶς. Though there the ἡμᾶς has been changed to ὑμᾶς by Tisch. (inconsistently enough); and at iv. 1, he cancels ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν, from only three MSS., as if to get rid of evidence against his false criticism at ch. ii. 21. However, on further consideration it would seem, that the same reason which calls so strongly for ἡμῶν, calls also for ὑμῖν; and hence, although the external authority existing for it is not very strong, while trifling, indeed, is that for ὑμῶν, ὑμῖν, yet, considering that the case is not one in which MSS. have any great weight, I am inclined to give the preference to ὑμῖν, espec. since it is supported by the Pesch. Syr. Version. And as to the transition of persons in the next words, that difficulty is, as we have seen, any thing but formidable, and will be lessened if we take ἵνα in the eventual sense to signify 'so as that,' thus serving to point out the result of that example which Christ left,—namely, that the persons addressed should follow his example.—ἐπακολουθήσητε τοῖς ἰχνεσιν αὐτοῦ, answering to the expression, Rom. iv. 12, στοιχεῖν τοῖς ἰχνεσι, and 2 Cor. xii. 18, περιπατεῖν τοῖς ἰχνεσι: forms of speaking, to signify (by an idiom found alike in Hebrew, Greek, and Latin), 'the following any one's example.'

24. δὲ τὰς ἀμαρτίας—ἐύλου Said in allusion to the words of Isa. liii. 12. Of the term ἀναφάρσις the full sense here is, 'who Himself (singly) bore the punishment of our sins;' comp. Heb. ix. 27, 28; which passage and the present emphatically attest the doctrine of the vicarious and ἀμαρτίας ἡμῶν αὐτὸς ἀνήνεγκεν ἐν τῷ σώματι αὐτοῦ ἐπὶ τὸ ξύλον, ἵνα ταῖς ἀμαρτίαις ἀπογεγόμενοι, τῇ δικαιοσύνῃ ζήσωμεν οὐ τῷ μῶλωπι αὐτοῦ ἰάθητε. <sup>25</sup> Ἦτε γὰρ ὡς πρόβατα ἡμεῖς πλανώμενα· ἀλλ' ἐπιστράφητε νῦν ἐπὶ τὸν ποιμένα καὶ ἐπίσκοπον τῶν ψυχῶν ὑμῶν.

1 Isa. 53. 6.
Ezek. 34. 6.
25.
27. 34.
Luke 15. 4.
John 10. 11.
Heb. 13. 20.
a Gen. 3. 19.
1 Cor. 7. 10.
2. 14. 34.
Eph. 6. 22.
Col. 2. 13.
Tit. 2. 5.

b Isa. 53. 12.
1 Tim. 2. 9.
Tit. 2. 5.
c Ps. 65. 14.
Rom. 2. 20.
27. 22.
2 Cor. 4. 12.

III. 1. Ὁμοίως, αἱ γυναῖκες, ὑποτασσόμεναι τοῖς ἰδίοις ἀνδράσιν, ἵνα καὶ εἴ τινας ἀπειθοῦσι τῷ λόγῳ, διὰ τῆς τῶν γυναικῶν ἀναστροφῆς, ἀνευ λόγου, κερδηθῶσιν, <sup>2</sup> ἐποπτεύσαντες τὴν ἐμπλοκὴν τριχῶν καὶ περιθέσεως χρυσίων ἢ ἐνδύσεως ἱματίων κόσμος· <sup>4</sup> ἀλλ' ὁ κρυπτὸς τῆς καρδίας ἄνθρωπος, ἐν τῷ atoning nature of Christ's sufferings.—ἵνα ταῖς ἀμαρτίαις ἀπογεγόμενοι, &c. These words mark the purpose of this vicarious sacrifice, and are meant to intimate the bounden duty of those for whom Christ suffered,—namely, that, being freed from the guilt of sin, and having renounced the practices of it, by being dead thereto (see Rom. vi. 2), they should live to the purpose of righteousness. This proceeds on the acknowledged principle of ancient law,—that any one's life, when forfeited by crime, and preserved by another, should be devoted to his preserver. See more in note on Heb. xi. 28.—οὐ τῷ μῶλωπι αὐτοῦ ἰάθητε, meaning, 'by whose stripes and wounds (Singular taken generally for Plural) your spiritual wounds and diseases are healed.' So Isa. viii. 3, 'He hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows;' both which expressions denote the spiritual sicknesses produced by sin. See Isa. i. 5, and note at Matt. viii. 17.

25. ὡς πρόβατα πλανώμενα· ἀλλ' ἐπιστράφητε νῦν ἰπὶ, &c. So writing, the Apostle had in mind Isa. liii. 6, and Ez. xxxiv. 6 & 23, and prob. the words of our Lord, Matt. xviii. 12, 13. For πλανώμενα, MSS. A, B, and 2 cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1196, 1 m.) have πλανώμενοι, which reading is adopted by Lachm. and Tisch., and is worthy of attention, begin somewhat confirmed by a kindred passage at Ps. cxix. 176, ἐκλαλήθην ὡς πρόβατον ἀπολωλός, and espec. Isa. liii. 6, πάντες ὡς πρόβατα ἐκλαλήθημεν. According to this reading the construction will be, ἥτε πλανώμενοι, ὡς πρόβατα πλανώμενα. But it is worthy of remark, that in the sacred writers the Participle πλανώμενος is, in such comparisons, joined not with the person, but with the sheep. So Isa. xlii. 14, ὡς πρόβατον πλανώμενον: Jer. i. 17, where it is said, 'Israel is as a scattered sheep.' Sept. πρόβατον πλανώμενον. At any rate, there is no sufficient warrant for receiving into the text a reading so slenderly supported, and where internal evidence draws two ways.—ἥτε γὰρ ὑμῶν. 'The γὰρ is meant to show the ground on which they are said to be healed: 1. because they actually needed healing; 2. but now were brought back to their original state.' (Steiger.) Here we have set forth in a strong point of view the preciousness of the salvation, by contrast with the opposite state of misery and utter destitution, represented by a most expressive and pathetic image.—In the words ἀλλ' ἐπιστράφητε νῦν, &c., we have a blending of the comparison with the thing compared; and the term ἐπίσκοπος is added after ποιμένα by way of explaining in what sense Christ is our shepherd. See note on Matt. xxiii. 37.—τὸν ποιμένα καὶ ἐπίσκοπον, &c. The full sense is, 'who is both the Shepherd, and (as a true shepherd) the care-taker of your souls, as He who careth for you. Comp. ver. 7. Perhaps St. Peter had in mind Ps. cxlii. 4, 'and there is no one that careth for my soul.' Sept. ἐκζητῶν τὴν ψυχὴν μου ('seeketh out for'), which version forms an exact representation of the Hebr., there being an allusion to one who seeks in order to save a lost sheep: in allusion to which our Lord declares (Luke xix. 10) that 'he was come to seek and to save that which was lost.' And so, at John x. 13, he is described by implication as one 'who careth for his sheep.'

III. 1. The Apostle here carries forward the duties of obedience,—from that of subjects to sovereigns, and servants to masters,—to the domestic relations of wives to husbands.—τοῖς ἰδίοις ἀνδράσιν. The term ἰδίοις is usually regarded as standing for the pronoun ἑαυτῶν; but it rather seems (with Bengel and Steiger) to be emphatic, as intended to caution wives against any suspicious attentions to other men. 'Thus (observes Steiger) every time that obedience is enjoined upon women towards their husbands, ἰδίοις is used, while the wives of men are designated only by ἑαυτῶν. See 1 Cor. vii. 2.—ἀπειθοῦσι τῷ λόγῳ, 'are not believers in the Gospel, have not embraced the Gospel.' Τῇ ἀναστροφῇ, 'the conduct;' meaning such virtuous and prudent behaviour as the Apostle here enjoins. Ἀνευ λόγου, i. e. 'without any formal argument or proof:' meaning, as Steiger explains, that 'an impression should be made by the conduct upon those whom the word has not won.' Such fruits of the Gospel supplying a tacit, but powerful, proof of its beneficial tendency, and a popular argument for its truth. On καρδ. in this sense, namely, 'to gain over to the Gospel,' to put into the way of salvation, see note at 1 Cor. ix. 19.

3. ὡν ἔστω οὐχ—κόσμος] An injunction, like a similar one, 1 Tim. ii. 9, sq., to be understood in a comparative sense; the οὐ—ἀλλὰ being for non tam—quam. With the expression περιθέσεως χρυσίων may be compared similar ones in Diod. Sic. xii. 21, καὶ περιτίθεσθαι χρυσία, and Ælian, Var. Hist. i. 26, κόμη περι- ἀφθάρτω τοῦ πράεος καὶ ἡσυχίου πνεύματος· ὃ ἐστὶν ἐνώ-πιον τοῦ Θεοῦ πολυτελές. <sup>5</sup> Οὕτω γὰρ ποτὲ καὶ αἱ ἄγναι γυναῖκες, αἱ ἐλπίζουσαι ἐπὶ τὸν Θεόν, ἐκόσμου ἐαυτὰς, ὑποτασσόμεναι τοῖς ἰδίοις ἀνδράσιν <sup>6</sup> ὡς Σάρρα ὑπήκουσε τῷ <sup>d</sup> Gen. 12. 12.

Ἀβραάμ, κύριον αὐτὸν καλοῦσα· ἥς ἐγενήθητε τέκνα, ἀγαθο-ποιοῦσαι καὶ μὴ φοβούμεναι μηδεμίαν πτόησιν. <sup>7</sup> * Οἱ <sup>e</sup> 1 Cor. 7. 2. ἄνδρες ὁμοίως, συνοικοῦντες κατὰ γνώσιν, ὡς ἀσθενετέρῳ σκεύει <sup>f</sup> 12. 23.
τῷ γυναικέῳ ἀπονέμοντας τιμὴν, ὡς καὶ * συγκληρονόμοι χάριτος <sup>g</sup> Eph. 5. 25, ζωῆς, εἰς τὸ μὴ * ἐγκόπτεσθαι τὰς προσευχὰς ὑμῶν. <sup>h</sup> Col. 3. 19.

θατοί. Point, ὡν ἔστω οὐχ ὁ ἔξωθεν, ἐμπλοκῇ τριχῶν καὶ περιόσεις χρυσεῶν, ἢ ἀνδύσεως ἱματίων, κόσμος.

4-6. The Apostle now enforces his exhortation to the internal adorning, and the conjugal respect, before enjoined, by showing that such had ever distinguished holy women in the earliest times. Of these the Apostle mentions in particular Sarah, the wife of Abraham, whom he recommends as an especial example to 'women professing godliness,' with allusion, we may suppose, to the more than feminine strength of mind, and firmness of character, which distinguished that excellent woman, in common with the other holy women here adverted to,—who were eminent examples at once of fearless trust in God, dutiful subjection to their husbands, and that undaunted perseverance in well-doing, from which no trepidation of feminine weakness could turn them aside.

4. ὁ κρυπτός τῆς κ. ἀνθρ. | i. e. 'let it extend to the mind,' τὸν ἰσὺ ἀνθρώπου, Rom. vii. 22; internal and mental, being opposed to external ornament; q. d. 'Vestments soon fade and wear out, while the internal ornament is ever-during.'
—ἐν τῷ ἀφθάρτῳ (scil. κόσμῳ) τοῦ—ἡσυχίου πν., 'quiet, composed.' Comp. Aristoph. Ran.
1000, λῆϊον ('even') πνῦμα, and Plato, τὸ λῆϊον καὶ ἡσυχίον ἦθος.

5. αἱ ἐλπίζουσαι ἐπὶ τὸν Θεόν | A form of expression derived from the Sept., and denoting 'eminent piety and devotedness to God.'

6. κύριον αὐτὸν καλοῦσα | Thereby (it is meant) acknowledging her subjection; a subjection, however, having nothing in it servile or slavish. — ἀγαθοποιούσαι καὶ μὴ φοβούμεναι μηδεμίαν πτόησιν. Of these words the true sense appears to be that assigned to them by Est., Erasm., Carpov, and Calv.: 'not being deterred from persevering in their duty, or in their Christian profession, by the timidity natural to their sex;' in other words, 'not being frightened out of the path of Christian duty by any sexual apprehensiveness.' This sense of πτόησις naturally arises out of the verb πτοεῖσθαι, in the sense used in Luke xxi. 9, and xxiv. 37. The word, however rare, is cited by Bretschn. from Philo,
p. 516, and 1 Macc. iii. 25, though in another sense. He adds, what is more to the purpose, Prov. iii. 25, οὐ φοβηθήσῃ πτόησιν ἐκελθού-σαν.

7. Before proceeding to the general precepts at ver. 8, the Apostle subjoins to the above lengthened admonition to the women, a word or two to the men, to prevent any abuse on their part of the power committed to them, and to represent the conjugal relation as one not merely of right, but of reciprocal affection. The obligation on the part of the husband to support the wife he does not touch upon; merely adverting to the higher and spiritual duties of the husband to the wife; duties partly general (consisting in that devoted affection which counts the welfare of another as its own, and therefore not according to any prescribed rule, but conformably to its own best knowledge, κατὰ γνώσιν [guided by religious principle]); and partly special, in the mutual participation of grace, in which the married persons stand in respect to eternity, and in which both parties must seek to have themselves at present confirmed. (Steiger.)—ὡς ἀσθενετέρῳ σκεύει τῷ γυναικέῳ. Many explain the term σκεῦος to signify tool, utensil, as answering to the expression ὄργανον, employed by Aristotle to designate the wife. This, however, appears any thing but the sense had in view by the Apostle, who, so far from intending thus to depreciate and degrade, here evidently (from what follows) means to elevate the weaker sex. Certain it is, that the above sense is by no means required by the expression itself, σκεῦος; for this word, as it literally signifies any thing made, so it may here very well have the sense creature, in reference to God the Creator.—ἀπονέμοντας τιμὴν. From the context it plainly appears that τιμὴ is here meant to denote 'that kind of respect, attention, and care, which is shown for valuable, but fragile, articles.' So a Rabbinical writer, cited by Schoettgen, says, 'Sicut honor quidam habetur crystallinis, quia sollicitè tractantur.' So of Abraham it is said by Philo, vol. ii. p. 36. 9, διὰ τὴν τιμὴν, ἣν ἀπέμειμε τῇ γυναικί. However, the sense to be assigned to τιμὴν will depend on the construction, and that hinges on the reading here adopted, whether συγκληρονόμοι, or συγκληρονόμοι. If the former, then the words ἀπονέμοντας τιμὴν will have to be joined with the words preceding; if the latter, then they must be taken with the words following. The former reading (which I edited) has been adopted by Lachm. Internal evidence must decide, which, though almost equally balanced, is rather in favour of συγκληρονόμοι, though involving an intolerable harshness. The ancient Versions, too, quite confirm συγκληρονόμοι, and make up for the slenderness of authority from MSS. Thus αὐταῖς may be supplied from the foregoing context, and συγκληρονόμοι taken as in apposition with it; and so the sense will be, 'bestowing due respect to them, as to those who are joint-heirs with you of the grace of life.' In the words following it is suggested why they are entitled to be thus treated, f Rom. 12. 16. 8 Ὁ δὲ τέλος, πάντες ὁμόφρονες, συμπαθεῖς, φιλάδελφοι, εὐσπλαγχνοι, † φιλόφρονες. 9 ἢ μὴ ἀποδιδόντες κακὸν ἀντὶ κακοῦ, ἢ λοιδορίαν ἀντὶ λοιδορίας· τούναντίον δὲ εὐλογούντες, εἰδότες ὅτι εἰς τοῦτο ἐκλήθητε, ἵνα εὐλογίαν κληρονομήσητε. 10 Ὁ γὰρ θέλων ζῶν ἁγαπᾶν, καὶ ἰδεῖν ἡμέρας ἁγίας, παυσάτω τὴν γλῶσσαν αὐτοῦ ἀπὸ κακοῦ, καὶ χεῖλη αὐτοῦ τοῦ μὴ λαλῆσαι δόλον. 11 Ἐκκλινάτω ἀπὸ κακοῦ, καὶ ποιησάτω ἁγαθόν· ζητησάτω εἰρήνην καὶ διωξάτω αὐτήν. 12 Ὅτι οἱ ὀφθαλμοὶ Κυρίου ἐπὶ δικαίους, καὶ ὅσα αὐτοῦ εἰς δέησιν αὐτῶν πρόσ-ωπον δὲ Κυρίου ἐπὶ ποιοῦντας κακά. 13 Καὶ τίς ὁ κα—namely, as being fellow-heirs with their husbands of the same salvation. To which is then subjoined a further reason, in the words αἰς τὸ μὴ ἐγκόπτεσθαι τὰς προσευχὰς ὑμῶν, meaning, 'in order to prevent that greatest evil arising from want of domestic harmony, that the minds of the parties cannot unite in prayer, and are, indeed, indisposed for that fervent supplication, which can alone reach the throne of grace.'—To advert to a matter of various reading. For the t. rec. ἐκκόπτεσθαι, all the critical Editors, from Wetst. to Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch., read ἐγκόπ., from vastly preponderating external authority, confirmed by internal evidence, when properly weighed; for, though ἐκκόπ. is the more difficult reading, yet it involves the objection, that the sense thus yielded, to be 'cut off, utterly destroyed,' is too strong for the occasion, since the jarings arising from want of due respect and kind attention would not, in the case of religious persons, be such as to utterly cut off all family and social prayer; though it would be interrupted and hindered, and spiritual benefit must be almost lost by alienation of affection.

8. Here are subjoined some general directions to Christians at large; exhorting them to mutual love and concord, kind treatment of all men, even enemies, as most likely to soften their animosity, and draw down the favour of God.—τὸ τέλος. This is best rendered by Erasmus, Grot., Rosenm., and Pott, 'in summa';=the Class. ἐν κεφαλαιῷ.—Ὁμόφρ. is equiv. to τὸ αὐτὸ φρονούντες at Rom. xii. 16. xv. 5, and τὸ ἐν φρονούντες at Phil. ii. 2. For φιλόφρονες several MSS., Versions, and Fathers, have ταπεινόφρ., which has been adopted by Griesb., Lachm., and Tisch. I cannot venture to follow their example; the t. rec. having decidedly in its favour not only external authority, but also, I apprehend, internal evidence; for, while it is most improbable that φιλόφρονες should have been introduced from the preceding φιλάδελφοι, it is not difficult to imagine that ταπεινόφρ. might, as Matth. supposes, arise from the Scholiasts or Catenists. Perhaps, however, it may be an ancient alteration of the homily writers; for, as Matth. observes, φιλοφροσύνη is a word occurring no where else in the New Test.; and, like φιλοξενία at iv. 9, is more of a virtus civilis, and far inferior to the rest here mentioned. On the contrary, ταπεινοφροσύνη is a Christian virtue of the highest rank, and very suitable here, as at Eph. iv. 2, and Col. iii. 12.

9. μὴ ἀποδιδόντες κακὸν, &c.] Comp. Rom. xii. 17. There is here, Steiger thinks, a climax: q. d. 'not actively to repay evil with evil, nor even with the mouth to retaliate it; but, on the contrary, to return good for evil.' See Matth. v. 44. The words following suggest a reason why the admonition should be observed; q. d. 'For to this end were ye called in the Gospel, that ye should obtain a blessing [from God], (meaning, "good of every kind;"') accordingly, it behoves you to wish and pray for blessings upon others.'

10—12. The matter in these verses is formed on, rather than contains a quotation from, Ps. xxxiv. 13, 14, though the differences are small, and the alterations only such as the better to adapt the words (which may have been partly those of the Versions of Aquila, Symm., and Theodot., as well as the Sept.) to the present purpose of exhortation. The commencing words savour of strong Hebraism, found also in Esth. ix. 22, ἄγων ἁγαθὰς ἡμέρας, 'to spend happy days'; yet it is not wholly unprecedented in the Class. writers, e. g. Anthol. Gr. i. 228, ὅταν θίγῃ τις ἡμέραν ἰδίαν καλὴν, for ἀγαθὴν, and some vestiges of a similar use of ἀγαθ. occasionally occur in Homer, Hesiod, Pindar, and Hæd.; nay, sometimes in Thucyd., e. g. iii. 82, 3, ἐν εἰρήνῃ καὶ ἀγαθοῖς πράγμασι. Such modes of expression are not confined to Hebraism, but are redolent of the simplicity of phraseology in the early ages.

12. ὅτι οἱ ὀφθαλμοί, &c.] The ὅτι seems to have reference to the admonition at ver. 9, and also the reason for its observance at vv. 10, 11. The same sense will arise, if, with Calvin, we suppose the words intended to suggest a powerful motive of consolation amidst evil of whatever kind,—that we are looked upon by the Lord, who will give us help in due season. In the words of ὀφθαλμοί, &c., God is represented as ever mindful of the righteous, and in the words following, ὅσα αὐτοῦ, &c., as ever ready to hearken to their petitions. Comp. John ix. 31. —πρόσωπον Κυρίου ἐπὶ. The state of the wicked, as opposed to that of the good, is here placed in contrast as to their treatment at the hands of God; and that contrast is rendered more pointed by the term πρόσωπον, which graphically represents the extreme displeasure of the Lord, the full sense being, 'is against them for their condign punishment' and utter destruction.

13. τίς ὁ κακῶς — γένησθαι;] Here we have a further confirmation of the foregoing senκώσων ὑμᾶς, ἐὰν τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ μιμηταὶ γένησθε; <sup>14</sup> ἄλλ', εἰ <sup>15</sup> <sup>1</sup> Isa. 8, 12.

καὶ πάσχετε διὰ δικαιοσύνην, μακάριοι· Τὸν δὲ φόβον αὐ-τῶν μὴ φοβηθῆτε, μηδὲ παραχθῆτε <sup>15</sup> <sup>1</sup> Jer. 1, 8.
τὸν Θεὸν ἀγιάσατε ἐν ταῖς καρδίαις ὑμῶν. Ἔτοιμοι δὲ αἰεὶ <sup>15</sup> <sup>1</sup> Matt. 5, 10.
πρὸς ἀπολογίαὶν παντὶ τῷ αἰτοῦντι ὑμᾶς λόγον περὶ τῆς ἐν ὑμῖν <sup>15</sup> <sup>1</sup> 2 Tim. 2, 22.
ἐλπίδος μετὰ πραύτητος καὶ φόβου <sup>16</sup> <sup>1</sup> Tit. 2, 8. ἀγαθὴν, ἵνα, ἐν ᾧ * καταλαλοῦσιν ὑμῶν ὡς κακοποιῶν, κατα-χυθῶσιν οἱ ἐπηρεάζοντες ὑμῶν τὴν ἀγαθὴν ἐν Χριστῷ ἀναστροφήν. <sup>17</sup> Κρείττον γὰρ ἀγαθοποιῶντας, εἰ θέλει τὸ θέλημα timent, by an argument deduced from common experience. Hence the assertion is to be taken (as at Prov. xvi. 7) with due limitation, as to what is ordinarily the case. From the context, indeed, it is plain that this is not to be understood as an assurance that they shall never be *harm*ed, but only not so harmed as to be utterly destroyed; though 'persecuted,' yet 'not forsaken;' though 'cast down,' yet 'not destroyed.' 2 Cor. iv. 9. This, then, and other passages of Scripture concerning temporal promises (see 2 Pet. ii. 9), are, as Bp. Sanderson observes, to be understood, not as unconditionally, but as commonly true,—and not absolutely, but with this reservation, 'unless the Lord, in his infinite wisdom, sees cause why it should be good for us to have it otherwise.' Certain it is, as Calv. remarks, that 'if there be in our minds this deep-seated persuasion, that God's promised help is sufficient for us, we shall be quite prepared to repel all the timid distrust of unbelief.'—To advert to a matter of disputed reading. For μιμηταὶ, MSS. A, B, C, and 18 cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1182, 1184), have ζηλωταὶ, adopted by Lachm., and by Tisch. Ed. 1, but rejected in Ed. 2; rightly; since it evidently arose from an emendation of the Alexandrian Critics.

14. ἄλλ', εἰ καὶ πάσχετε διὰ δικαιοσύνην, μακάριοι] An assertion intended to correct the foregoing general assertion, and meant to anticipate the obvious objection, that the righteous are observed frequently to suffer at the hands of the wicked: to which it is replied, 'True, you may suffer; but it will be for righteousness' sake, and then yours is the blessing and reward promised of the Lord.' (See Matt. v. 10.) The connexion of these words with the following, τὸν δὲ φόβον αὐτῶν μὴ φοβηθῆτε, μηδὲ παραχθῆτε, is well traced by Steiger thus: 'Happy are ye, I say, if ye suffer persecution; but this must ye do under persecution (otherwise there is no salvation in it); ye must not quail before your persecutors, but must sanctify God (i. e. fear and honour him who is really your Lord, and not man), and that in your inmost hearts;' such a deep-seated persuasion that our help is in God being (as Calv. observes) 'the best support against the misgivings of timidity or unbelief.'

15. Κύριον δὲ τὸν Θεὸν ἀγιάσατε ἐν ταῖς καρδίαις ὑμῶν] Of these words the true purport, much misapprehended, seems to be, the recognizing the holiness, wisdom, power, and other attributes of the Lord; the holding him in deep reverence, and feeling entire confidence in him, as alone able to save to the uttermost—and all this with the whole heart, so that this inward homage to the holiness of the Lord, and entire reliance on him who is mighty to save, shall be a deeply seated persuasion of our minds and feeling of our heart;—and that showing itself in our words and actions, by honouring his holy name and his word, that the name of the Lord may be glorified in us (2 Thess. i. 12). Well is it said by Abp. Leighton, 'the fear of God drives away all other fears; there is no room for them, where this great fear is; and being greater than all those, yet it disturbs not as they do; yea, it brings as great quiet as they brought trouble.'

16. συνέλθουσιν ἔχοντες ἀγαθὴν, &c.] It is not well, with some, to connect these words closely with the preceding (for thus there will arise a sense not a little forced and jejune); they must rather be taken with those in the former part of ver. 15. So Steiger explains; 'Fear God, but be ready to give an answer to inquirers, and calumniators refute by your conduct.'—ἵνα, ἐν ᾧ καταλαλοῦσιν—ἀναστροφήν. Render: 'so that, in that whereof they speak against you, as evil doers, they who thus slander your virtuous and Christian conversation may be ashamed,' i. e. put to the shame of being convicted of falsehood. For καταλαλοῦσιν ὑμῶν ὡς κακοποιῶν, MS. B, and 2 cursives, with some later Versions, have καταλαλεῖσθαι, which has been adopted by Tisch.; but on insufficient grounds, since the reading in question seems to have proceeded from some whose purpose it was to remove a certain harshness of construction, and relieve the sentence of something that seemed overloaded in the wording. It may also be remarked that, while the Active καταλαλεῖν occurs freq. in the Sept., and several times in the N. T., as said of persons, on the other hand the Passive form as used of things occurs no where, I believe, either in the Script. or the Class. writers. Certainly, there is more of propriety and suitability in the reading of the t. rec. καταλαλοῦσιν, or καταλαλοῦσιν, found in A, and 20 cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1183 and 1196), and adopted by Matth. and Lachm., and also myself, but with some hesitation, since external evidence for -λοῦσιν is inferior. However, internal evidence is in its favour, and it is also confirmed by the Pesch. Syr. Version. The term is best rendered 'calumniate;' and ἐπερ, just after, 'abtrecken,' 'to contumeliously disparage,' 'to traduce;' a use of the term which, as said of things, is very rare; yet it occ. in Demosth. cont. Mid., cited in Steph. Thes.

17, 18. The Apostle here suggests, for the comfort of those suffering under the injuries of the ungodly, certain considerations deduced from o Rom. i. 4.

 2. 5, 6.
 2 Cor. 13. 4.
 Heb. 9. 15, 28.

p Eph. 2. 17.
 ch. 4. 6.

τοῦ Θεοῦ, πάσχειν, ἢ κακοποιοῦντας<sup>18</sup> ὅτι καὶ Χριστὸς ἅπαξ περὶ ἁμαρτιῶν ἔπαθε, δίκαιος ὑπὲρ ἀδίκων, ἵνα ἡμᾶς προσαγάγῃ τῷ Θεῷ θανατωθεὶς μὲν σαρκί, ζωοποιηθεὶς δὲ [τῷ] πνεύματι 19 ἐν ᾧ καὶ τοῖς ἐν φυλακῇ πνεύμασι πορευθεὶς ἐκήρυξεν, the will of God and the example of Christ,—intimating, at the same time, a sort of warning;

 q. d. 'He who suffers for crimes can expect no recompense; but he who suffers for righteousness' sake, and in God's cause, may confidently look forward to a sure reward.' Meanwhile the consideration that he is suffering for good, and not for evil, will be a great consolation. In the words following, ὅτι καὶ Χριστὸς ἅπαξ περὶ ἁμαρτιῶν, &c. (with which compare those supra ii. 21—24), the argument is: 'If Christ suffered for us, who were then evil, how much more should we be prepared to suffer tribulation for the glory of Christ, and the good of the Gospel.'
—περὶ ἁμαρτιῶν, lit., 'on the score of, on account of, sins.' The var. lect. ὥστε is either a gloss, or an alteration suggested by such passages as Acts ix. 16. Phil. i. 29. 2 Thess. i. 5. 1 Pet. ii.
 21. For ἔπαθε, Lachm., and Tisch. (1st Ed.) read ἀπέθανε, though in his 2nd Ed. Tisch. restores ἔπαθε, very properly, since the above reading may be pronounced an alteration as baseless as that found in several MSS. supra ii. 21, which our Editor has thought fit to adopt. It may further be observed, that the term παθεῖν here has a deep earnestness and impressiveness, as it also has in Acts iii. 18. xvii. 3. Heb. ii. 18.
 v. 8. ix. 26. xiii. 12. 1 Pet. ii. 19, 23. iv. 1, in all which passages πάσχειν is preferred to ἀποθνήσκειν, from our Saviour Christ being there represented as suffering in the condition of a condemned malefactor for the sins of the whole world, being made sin that he might atone for the sins of men. It is true that the term ἀποθνήσκειν is used to denote Christ's propitiatory sacrifice in 2 Cor. v. 14, 15, but there it is only on account of the antithetic term of ζῶντας, as also in Rom. vi. 10, where ἀπέθανε has opposed to it ζῆ.—προσαγάγῃ, might 'bring us unto a state of reconciliation.' See supra ii. 21 and Rom. v. 2.
—θανατωθεὶς μὲν σαρκί—πνεύματι. The two terms σαρκί and πνεύματι are antithetically opposed; the former denoting Christ's human nature, wherein he suffered in the body; the latter, his Divine and spiritual nature. By this it is intimated, that as Christ suffered in the body, but was quickened and glorified in the Spirit, so it will be with 'them who are Christ's.'

19, 20. ἐν ᾧ καὶ τοῖς ἐν φυλακῇ πνεύμασι, &c.] This passage, as it is not a little obscure, has been variously interpreted. Many (as Beza, Elen., and Mackn.) take the meaning to be, not that 'the spirits were in prison at the time when Christ preached to them through Noah,' but that he preached by his Spirit, or Divine nature, to the antediluvians, who are now (viz. in the age of the Apostle) in prison, detained, like the fallen angels, unto the day of judgment, Jude 6.
 Thus the Apostle, they think, proposes this example to his Christian brethren as a wholesome warning to deter them from being corrupted by those around them. This exposition, however, like several others proposed, lies open to various objections. Upon the whole, I know of no interpretation involving so little difficulty as the common one, by which this is understood to denote (according to the plain tenour of the words) that Christ went down and preached (i. e. proclaimed his Gospel) to the antediluvians in Hades; and it is shown by Bp. Horsley (in an able Sermon on this text) that 'this plain and obvious sense is not to be rejected because it contains what may seem strange and unaccountable; otherwise scarcely any thing might be believed.' 'The interpretation of this whole passage (continues the learned Prelate) turns upon the expression "spirits in prison." Now it is hardly necessary to mention that spirits here can signify no other spirits than the souls of men; for we read not of any preaching of Christ to any other race of beings than mankind. The Apostle's assertion, therefore, is this, that "Christ went and preached to souls of men in prison." The invisible mansion of departed spirits, though certainly not a place of penal confinement to the good, is nevertheless in some respects "a prison." It is a place of seclusion from the external world, a place of unfinished happiness, consisting in rest, security, and hope, more than enjoyment. It is a place which the souls of men never would have entered, had not sin introduced death; and from which there is no exit by any natural means for those who have once entered. The deliverance of the saints from it is to be effected by our Lord's power. As a place of confinement, therefore, though not of punishment, it may well be called "a prison."

 The original word, however, in this text imports not of necessity so much as this, but merely "a place of safe keeping;" for so this passage might be rendered with great exactness: He went and preached to the spirits in safe keeping. And the invisible mansion of departed spirits is to the righteous "a place of safe keeping," where they are preserved under the shadow of God's right hand, as their condition sometimes is described in Scripture, till the season shall arrive for their advancement to future glory; as the souls of the wicked, on the other hand, are reserved, in the other division of the same place, unto the judgment of the great day. Now if Christ went and preached to souls of men thus in prison, or in safe keeping, surely he went to the prison of those souls, or to the place of their custody; and what place that should be but the "hell" of the Apostles' Creed, to which our Lord descended, I have not met with the Critic that could explain.
 The souls in custody, or in prison, to whom our Saviour went in his disembodied soul, and preached, were those which formerly were disobedient. The expression formerly were, or one while had been, disobedient, implies that they were recovered, however, from that disobedience, and, before their death, had been brought to repentance and faith in the Redeemer to come. To such souls he went and preached. But what did he preach to departed souls? and what could be the end of his preaching? Certainly he preached neither repentance, nor faith; for the preaching of either comes too late to the departed soul.

Εὐ<sup>1</sup> ἀπειθήσασι ποτὲ, ὅτε * ἀπεξεδέχετο ἡ τοῦ Θεοῦ μακροθυμία, q Gen. 6. 1, 4.
14. & 7. 7.
& 8. 18.
Matt. 24. 29.
Luke 17. 20.
Rom. 2. 4.
2 Pet. 2. 6.
r Eph. 5. 29.
ch. 1. 2.
ἐν ἡμέραις Νῶε, κατασκευαζομένης κιβωτοῦ, εἰς ἣν ὀλῖγαι, τού-ἐστιν ὀκτὼ, ψυχαὶ διεσώθησαν δι' ὕδατος· <sup>21</sup> ἡ καὶ ἡμᾶς ἀντίτυπον νῦν σώζει βάπτισμα, (οὐ σαρκὸς ἀπόθεσις ῥύπου, ἀλλὰ συνειδήσεως ἀγαθῆς ἐπερώτημα εἰς Θεόν,) δι' ἀναστάσεως

These souls had believed and repented, or they had not been in that part of the nether regions which the soul of the Redeemer visited; nor was the end of his preaching any liberation of them from we know not what purgatorial pains, of which the Scriptures give not the slightest information. But if he went to proclaim to them the glad tidings, that he had actually offered the sacrifice of their redemption, and was about to appear before the Father as their Intercessor, in the merit of his own blood, this was a preaching fit to be addressed to departed souls, and would give new animation and assurance to their hope of the consummation in due season of their bliss; and this, it may be presumed, was the end of his preaching.' Such also is the view of the passage adopted by Bp. Pearson (on the Creed), who remarks, that 'though this preaching was not effected by an immediate act of the Son of God, as if he personally had appeared on earth, and actually preached to that old world, but by the ministry of a Prophet, by the sending of Noah, "a preacher of righteousness;" yet to do any thing by another not able to perform it without him, as much demonstrates the existence of the principal cause, as if he did it of himself without any intervening instrument.'—For the common reading ἀπαξ ἐξεδέχετο almost all the MSS. and early Editions, except the Erasmusian and Stephanic ones, have ἀπαξεδέχετο, which is preferred by almost all the Critics, and has been edited by Matth., Griesb., Knapp, Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch.; and on just grounds; for not only is external evidence in favour of that reading, but internal; since, considering the rarity of the word ἀπαξεδέχεσθαι, it is likely that the scribes should fall into error, and mistake ἀπαξ. for ἀπαξ; and then those who revised the MSS. would perceive that ἐδέχετο was not right, and would, by reference to other MSS., alter it to ἐξεδέχετο, omitting to cancel the ἀπαξ. The force of ἀπο in this compound may be illustrated from the expression ἀποκαρτοκία at Rom. viii. 19. Phil. i. 20. The term denotes 'long and anxiously waited for,'—namely, during the 120 years given the persons in question to repent on hearing the preaching of Noah. So it is said, Isa. xxx. 18, 'for the Lord will wait to be gracious,'—εἰς ἣν ὀλῖγαι, &c. I am now inclined (with Lachm. and Tisch.) to read and point, from 8 MSS., some Versions, and some Fathers, εἰς ἣν ὀλῖγαι, —τούτῃστιν ὀκτὼ ψυχαὶ—διεσώθησαν. There is a pregnancy of sense in διεσώθ.; the meaning, expressed in full, being: 'into which a few persons [only] embarking were saved through (i. e. out of) the water.' Similar to this is the expression in 1 Cor. iii. 15, διὰ πυρὸς σωθ., and Jos. Ant. ii. 10, 1, οἱ δὲ εἰς τὴν οὐρανὴν διεσώθησαν φεύγοντες. Thus by ὀλῖγοι διεσώθ. it is intimated that few there were (only eight souls) who, by taking refuge in the ark, were saved.

21. ἡ καὶ ἡμᾶς ἀντίτυπον—εἰς Θεόν meaning, 'The antitype to which thing (namely, what corresponds to, and was figured by the preservation of Noah and his family in the ark) doth now save us, through the resurrection of Christ, as the ark did them; [I mean] baptism, which is not merely the putting away the filth of the flesh [by material water], but the answer of a good conscience towards God.' I cannot better express the full sense of the words of this verse than I have above done; but I now see cause to reject the sense which Wesley assigns to the important term σώζειν, because it has in it something vague and unmeaning,—in short, any thing but suitable to the forcible and significant character which belongs to the writings of St. Peter. Nor is the view adopted by Beza and Calv. to be regarded as satisfactory. Baptism is, I apprehend, here compared, not as a second type to the first, but as the antitype, the true spiritual deliverance; for this is expressly said to be the effect of baptism. Agreeably to this view, Est. ably paraphrases as follows: 'which water, in the thing signified by that type or figure, meaning its very antitype, which is baptism, doth now in the time of the new covenant, save us with spiritual salvation, just as that water preserved from a corporeal destruction those who were in the ark.' The same able Expositor remarks, that baptism is here said σώζειν ἡμᾶς, just as St. Paul, Tit. iii. 5, says ἰσώσειν ἡμᾶς (ὁ Θεὸς) διὰ λουτροῦ παραγγευσίας καὶ ἀνακαίνωσιν ἡμεῶν. ἀγίων, 'after the very manner that those eight were saved by that temporal deliverance by means of the ark.'—οὐ σαρκὸς ἀπόθεσις ῥύπου, meaning (according to the lit. sense of ἀπόθ.), 'not a getting rid of the filth of the flesh,' i. e., in a figurative acceptance, those evil habits and corrupt affections which defile the soul, Matt. xv. 18, and which require a washing of a different kind, even the washing of regeneration; the words being, as Est. remarks, meant to explain those which preceded,—namely, ἡ καὶ ἡμᾶς ἀντίτυπον νῦν σώζει βάπτισμα. This the Apostle does by employing a sort of rhetorical correction whereby to set forth, that in the sacrament itself of baptism there is not to be recognized so much the external purification (which of itself can only avail to the removal of the corporeal impurity) as the επερώτημα εἰς Θεόν. By the επερώτημα here spoken of (which has been not a little disputed) I am still of opinion is meant 'the engagement by promise, whereby we return answer to a question, whether we will do any thing proposed?' The answer in the affirmative implies a promise, or engagement. Thus Tertull. de Baptismo, c. 18, says, with allusion to the present passage, 'that the soul is consecrated, not by washing, but by answering,' alluding to the well-known questions in baptism. Mr. Rose (on Parkh. Lex. in v.) indeed remarks that, 'notwithstanding what has been said [as above], ἐπερώτημα does not occur in any of the Greek writers on the Roman law; but that ἐπερώτησις is used by them in the sense of stipulation (of a Ps. 110. 1.

Rom. 8. 34.
Eph. 1. 30.
Col. 3. 1.
a Rom. 8. 2.
7.
b Rom. 14. 7.
2 Cor. 5. 18.
Eph. 4. 34.
Gal. 3. 29.
1 Thess. 4.
10.
Heb. 9. 14.
c Ezek. 44. 6.
& 46. 9.
Acts 17. 30.
Eph. 4. 17.

Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ <sup>22</sup> ὅς ἐστιν ἐν δεξιᾷ τοῦ Θεοῦ, πορευθεὶς εἰς οὐρανὸν, ὑποταγέντων αὐτῷ ἀγγέλων καὶ ἐξουσιῶν καὶ δυνάμεων.

IV. <sup>1</sup> Χριστοῦ οὖν παθόντος ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν σαρκί, καὶ ὑμεῖς τὴν αὐτὴν ἔννοιαν ὀπλίσασθε, (ὅτι ὁ παθὼν ἐν σαρκὶ πέπαυται ἁμαρτίας,) <sup>2</sup> εἰς τὸ μηκέτι ἀνθρώπων ἐπιθυμίας, ἀλλὰ θελήματι Θεοῦ τὸν ἐπίλοιπον ἐν σαρκὶ βιώσαι χρόνον. <sup>3</sup> Ἀρκετὸς γὰρ ἡμῖν ὁ παρεληλυθὼς χρόνος τοῦ βίου τὸ θέλημα τῶν ἐθνῶν κατεργάσασθαι, πεπορευμένους ἐν ἀσελγείαις, ἐπιθυμίας, οἰνο-which sense he adduces two examples); and τὸ ἐπιρωτῆθῆναι is also used by them to denote a promise. Now this might of itself seem to afford sufficient proof of the usage in question. But in point of fact ἐπιρωτῆμα is found in those writers, from whom Dindorf in Steph. Thea. in v. adduces several exx., which leads me to animadvert on the want of judgment displayed by Lachm. and Tisch., who, for ἡμᾶς, at the beginning of the verse, read ὑμᾶς, from some 12 MSS., and the Vulg. and Syr. Versions. Now external authority, were it much greater than it here is, will not in this case suffice, where the words are so much alike, and words so constantly confounded as are ἡμᾶς and ὑμᾶς. In such a case internal evidence must decide, and that is here quite in favour of ἡμᾶς, which is as much called for by propriety of sentiment as at ver. 18.

22. ἐν δεξιᾷ τοῦ Θεοῦ] See note at Rom. viii. 34; and on the expressions ἐξουσιῶν καὶ δυνάμεων, see Eph. i. 21.

IV. The Apostle here returns to the subject he had been treating on at iii. 17, and again proposes the example of Christ, whom he enjoins them to imitate in his holiness as well as in his sufferings, notwithstanding the opposition they might encounter; and, for their comfort, he reminds them of a righteous judgment to come, when they should be rewarded, and their enemies punished.

1. Χριστοῦ οὖν παθόντος—ὀπλίσασθε] Of these words the sense, somewhat disputed, appears to be, 'Since, then, Christ suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves with the same temper of mind which animated him [in his sufferings], namely, that resigned, self-denying, and meek, but steadfast and resolute, frame of spirit, which results from trust in God, love to him, and zeal for his glory.—The words ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν have been cancelled by Lachm. and Tisch., on the authority of 5 MSS.,—wholly insufficient to warrant the cancelling of words which were in the text as early as the Pesch. Syr. Version. They may have been introduced from supr. iii. 18; but the interpolation would hardly have commenced so early, and extended so far, as to all the MSS. but six; for I can only add Lamb. 1182. Far more prob. is it that in those few copies the words were removed by some Critics who stumbled at the transition from ἡμῶν to ὑμεῖς, but certainly without just cause. The ἐν before σαρκί (2nd), not found in very many MSS., has been cancelled by Griesb., Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch., Ed. 1, but restored by him in Ed. 2; rightly; since internal evidence is in its favour, and it is confirmed by the Pesch. Syr. Version.

2. εἰς τὸ μηκέτι—χρόνον] In these words is expressed the result of the spirit just spoken of. Thus, it is intimated, that they would no longer live the time that might be allowed them on earth, conformably to the lust of men (i. e. the carnal), but to the will of God; see Rom. xii. 2, and 1 Thess. iv. 4, 5. Moreover, as the term ὀπλιζ., before used naturally suggests the idea of endurance, self-denial, and suffering, so, for their consolation, the Apostle throws in the additional consideration, ὁ παθὼν—ἁμαρτίας, namely, 'he that suffers adversity is [usually or naturally] freed from the dominion of sin,' the temptations of prosperity being withdrawn.

3. Here is adduced a further reason why they should live unto the will of God, by the same argument as that at Eph. ii. 1—3, the remembrance of past iniquity serving, by the feelings of shame called forth, to preserve future innocence.—ἀρκετὸς γὰρ ἡμῖν ὁ παρεληλυθὼς, &c., meaning, 'Let it suffice for the time past of our life to have practised the things to which the heathens are prone.' A similar argument is employed in Jos. Antt. ix. 12, 2, μόνον (I conj. πρῶτον) γὰρ ἀπόχη τὸ πρὸς αὐτὸν (scil. Θεόν) ἡμᾶς ἐξ-αμαρτεῖν, ἀλλὰ μὴ καινότερα τούτων ἀσθενήματα ὄρεσθαι, also in Jos. Antt. xix. 1, 12, we have ὁ παρεληλυθὼς χρόνος διεισδίδει τὸ ἐπιμέλλειν ἡμῶν ἐπὶ τοῖς οὐτα βουλευθείσι μετὰ εὐρείας. The ἡμῖν is cancelled by Lachm. and Tisch., from 7 MSS., the Syr. and Vulg. Versions;—an authority quite insufficient. For ἡμῖν a rather considerable number of MSS. have ὑμῖν. In those two readings I see no other than a certain course pursued by Critics who, not aware of the force and delicacy of the κοινωσις (a figure which we have had not unfrequently occasion to recognize in the brother Apostle of St. Peter, St. Paul) deemed it derogatory to the Apostle to apply what follows to himself, and accordingly some thought fit to remove the ἡμῖν, while others altered it to ὑμῖν.—τὸ θέλημα τῶν ἐθνῶν κατεργ., i. e. 'to practise all those depravities which were characteristic of the heathens,' τὸ θέλ. τ. ἐθν. being said by tacit opposition to θέλημα Θεοῦ, ver. 2. Comp. the use of κατεργ. at Rom. i. 27, κ. τὴν δόξησιν ἡμῶν: ii. 9. vii. 15, seqq., κατ. τὸ κακόν. And so it is occasionally used in the Class. writers. For κατεργ., the reading κατεργάσασθαι, adopted by Lachm. and Tisch. from a few MSS., is evidently a correction of style proceeding from the Critics, in consequence of the former being used by the best Greek writers, though they also, and more frequently, use κατεργάσασθαι.—πεπορευμένοι ἐν ἀσελγείαις, &c. These words (with which comp. Rom. xiii. 13) are explanatory of the foregoing. Πεπορευ- μένους depends upon ἡμᾶς, to be supplied at φλυγίαις, κώμοις, πότοις, καὶ ἀθεμίτοις εἰδωλολατρείαις· <sup>4</sup> ἐν ᾧ ξενίζονται μὴ συντρεχόντων ὑμῶν εἰς τὴν αὐτὴν τῆς ἀσωτίας ἀνάχυσιν, βλασφημοῦντες· <sup>5</sup> οἱ ἀποδώσουσι λόγον τῷ ἐτοίμῳ ἔχοντι κρίναι ζῶντας καὶ νεκρούς. <sup>6</sup> εἰς τοῦτο γὰρ καὶ νεκροὺς εὐηγγελίσθη, ἵνα κριθῶσι μὲν κατὰ ἀνθρώπους σαρκί, ζῶσι δὲ κατὰ Θεὸν πνεύματι.

7 Πάντων δὲ τὸ τέλος ἤγγικε· σωφρονήσατε οὖν, καὶ νήψατε

κατηργάσασθαι just before. The expression may be explained, 'habitually living.' Ἀσελγείαις and the subsequent terms seem meant to emphasize the vices just adverted to. By ἀσελγείαις and ἐπιθυμίαις are denoted 'fornication, adultery, and other sins of uncleanness;' by οἰνοφλυγίαις, κώμοις, and πότοις, 'intemperance in drinking, and the debauchery and revelling consequent thereupon;' see Rom. xiii. 3. With the expression πικροθυμίας ἐν ἀσελγείαις, ἐπιθυμίαις, comp. 2 Pet. ii. 18, ἐν ἐπιθυμίαις σαρκός, ἀσελγείαις, where see note. Hence it might have been expected that here ἐπιθ. should have come before ἀσελγ. But the MSS. present no variation; and the ancient Versions are so negligently formed as to be of no authority. Consequently, we may regard the phraseology as intended (by a sort of hendiadyas) to denote one complex notion, namely, of uncontrolled sensuality, producing acts of lasciviousness and profligacy the most flagitious; for such is the sense that ἀσελγ. bears here and at 2 Pet. ii. 18. Finally, as respects the term εἰδωλολατρείαις, this, considering that the Jews were not guilty of idolatry properly so called, is supposed to have reference only to the Gentile converts; or to be meant to denote vices as bad as idolatry, or rather the practices usually connected with idolatry, and the falling into idolatrous and heathen manners, customs, and opinions, by participation (as we may imagine) in the heathen feasts to the honour of their gods. 'Ἀθεμίτ.' is a highly suitable term to the occasion; which is strangely rendered by Wakef. 'extravagancies,' whereas its true sense is, 'nefarious,' 'nefarious,' denoting the various forms and ceremonies of idol-worship, as alike impious and abominable, the most exact version that our language admits of. Comp. Dion. Hal. i. 41, ξυνεκτονίαις ἀθεμίτοις χρωμένων.

4. ἐν ᾧ ξενίζονται μὴ συντρεχ. The construction here is very unusual, not to say unprecedented, for no other ex. is, I think, of a Genit. after ξενίζ. However, in συντρεχόντων ὑμῶν we have rather Genitives absolutes, denoting either time when (q. d. they are surprised when you are not running, &c.), or rather Genitives of cause why, as Thucyd. iv. 11, ὅρων τοῦ χερσὶν χαλαροῦντος τοῦτο τριηράρχου ἀποκινούντας, 'seeing the trierarchs boggling at the place, being so difficult of approach.' True it is that ἐν ᾧ may seem to run counter to this view, and to be meant to advert to the cause of the wonder. But in fact there is a blending of two causes, surprise at the thing and at the person. This sense of ξενίζεσθαι is found only in the later writers, as Polyb., Plut., and Joseph.; and is by Rosenm. derived from 'the admiration with which strangers view public buildings,' &c.—εἰς τὴν—ἀνάχυσιν, lit. 'into the same outpouring,' 'excess, of dissoluteness,' a metaphor taken from a river overflowing its banks, and inundating the neighbouring country.

5. οἱ ἀποδώσ. λόγον—νεκροῖς] The full sense is, 'Who (for all their actions) must render an account to Him who is ready to hold judgment on both quick and dead,' and, by implication, on both the just and the unjust.

6. εἰς τοῦτο γὰρ καὶ νεκροῖς—πνεύματι] In the interpretation of these obscure words it is espec. necessary to attend to the context. Now, according to this I see not how we can, with Whitby, Dodd., and others, assign to the term νεκροῖς the figurative sense 'spiritually dead,' namely, in trespasses and sins; as understood of the Gentiles: though, taking the expression in a physical sense, the perplexing question arises, how the Gospel can be said to be preached to the dead? a thing no where asserted in Scripture, and contradictory to what is there said. To obviate this difficulty several expedients have been resorted to, the least objectionable of which is that of Dr. Peile, who very ingeniously traces the connexion of εἰς τοῦτο γὰρ, by considering καὶ as the copula of connexion, thus, q. d. 'dead, I say, as well as quickened unto that newness of life, in which,' &c. He lays down the sense in paraphrase thus: 'Unto this end is it that there are good tidings (see John v. 25. Eph. v. 14. Heb. iv. 1) for spiritually dead persons (i. 3. 23. Luke ix. 60. John v. 25. Eph. ii. 1, 5. v. 14. Col. ii. 13) that their state of condemnation, and estrangement from God (John iii. 36. Rom. iii. 19. v. 12, 16, 20. Gal. iii. 22. Eph. ii. 3. iv. 18), may be so far—meaning, 'may affect them no farther than'—'as they are mortal men; but that they may have life after the similitude of God their Saviour under a spiritual, and no longer under a carnal, form of being.'

7, 8. From the consideration of the awful event just adverted to, the Apostle proceeds to exhort them to the performance of those duties calculated to prepare them for it, namely, sobriety and constant prayer; to which he then subjoins mutual love, hospitality, and a right use of the gifts of God, of whatever kind.

7. πάντων δὲ τὸ τέλος ἤγγικε] I am still of opinion, notwithstanding what Drs. Benson and Mackn. urge, that τέλος cannot, without great harshness, be explained of 'the destruction of Jerusalem and the Jewish state;' and that not so much because the persons addressed had little or no concern in those events, as because the sense is foreign to the following context, namely, σωφρονήσατε οὖν, καὶ νήψατε, &c. The Apostle inculcates sober-mindedness, vigilance, and prayerfulness, on the very ground that it is no time for levity and carelessness, or remissness in prayer, in a world fast sliding from us, and from—

h Prov. 10.
12.
1 Cor. 13. 7.
1 Rom. 12. 1.
18.
Phil. 3. 14.
Heb. 13. 2.
k Prov. 3. 28.

εἰς τὰς προσευχάς. <sup>8</sup> Ἡ Πρὸ πάντων δὲ τὴν εἰς ἑαυτοὺς ἀγάπην ἐκτενῆ ἔχοντες, ὅτι ἡ ἀγάπη † καλύψει πλῆθος ἁμαρτιῶν. <sup>9</sup> Ἡ φιλόξενοι εἰς ἀλλήλους, ἀνευ † γογγυσμῶν. <sup>10</sup> Ἡ ἑκάστος which we may soon be called upon to take our departure—espec. considering that the end of the world, and the end of our earthly life, is the same to each one amongst us, and we may and ought to prepare ourselves for the sound of the last trumpet, and to rouse ourselves from the torpor of spiritual insensibility. See more in Calv., Bulling., and Est. — νήψατε εἰς τὰς προσευχάς, meaning, 'and [in order thereto] be vigilantly attentive to your prayers'; equiv. to the exhortation, Col. iv. 2, τῇ προσευχῇ προσκαρτερεῖτε. Conf. Plut. adv. Stoic. § 19, νήψων πρός ἀρετὴν ὅδε ἐστὶ. The plural is used here (as at Acts ii. 42, προσκάρ. ταῖς προσευχαῖς. Rom. xv. 30. Eph. i. 16. 1 Thess. i. 2. 1 Tim. v. 5, et al.) by way of intimating the repetition of such prayers at all fit customary seasons. Lachm. and Tisch. have cancelled the τὰς before προσευχάς, from four MSS., but wrongly, the proof being quite invalid, espec. considering that no other instance is there in the N. T. of προσευχ. in the Plural without the Article.

<sup>8</sup> τὴν εἰς ἑαυτ. ἀγάπην ἐκτενῆ ἔχοντες] It is well observed by Dr. Peile, that τὴν εἰς ἑαυτ. ἀγ. ('your mutual love') is the logical subject, and ἐκτενῆ the predicate, of the sentence. On the force of ἐκτ. Expositors differ; most of them go wrong by too much limiting the sense, which, from what I have said in my Lex., seems to mean both 'continuous,' and also 'intense,' by a metaphor taken from a rope at full stretch, which never slackens. Thus the sense may be expressed, with Dr. Peile, freely, thus: 'Keeping your love one towards another in active (and continual) exercise.' Est. well remarks, that the Apostle prefaces this injunction with πρὸ πάντων, 'quia nec abstinencia, nec vigilia, nec orationes, nec alia, quæ putantur pietatis opera, sine caritate placeant, et ut placeant, a caritate habent.' See also the passage of Bp. Sherlock, cited in my former Editions.—ὅτι ἡ ἀγάπη καλύψει πλῆθος ἁμ. This is by most ancient, and many modern, Commentators understood to mean, that 'our charity to others will induce the mercy of God to pardon our sins, i. e. be the means of procuring the pardon of our sins from him.' Yet thus there arises a sense, even with all the qualifications introduced by Bp. Sherlock, Abp. Secker, and Dr. Dodd., at variance with the whole Gospel plan of salvation, according to which the only cover for our sins is the blood of Christ, working with repentance towards God, and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ; see Calv. and Melancth., and espec. Luther, who well remarks: 'No one can cover sin for thee but faith only. My love, however, covers the sins of my neighbour. And just as God with his love covers my sins if I believe, so must I also cover the sins of my neighbour (1 John iv. 19, seq. Eph. iv. 32. Col. iii. 13, and Matt. xviii. 23—33).' Thus, then, the sense appears to be, 'for charity will cover a multitude of offences;' meaning (according to the import of the passage of Prov. x. 12, from which the present is derived) 'this charitable disposition will lead us to throw a cloak over, and forgive, a multitude of offences in others against ourselves.' Though a deeper sense is intimated, namely, as Thos. Scott expresses, after Calv., thus, that 'as the love of God in Christ covereth the multitude of the sins of believers from his sight, so they ought to cast the mantle of love over the number of faults into which their brethren would fall in their conduct towards them, and thus hide them from their eyes, by forbearing and forgiving one another, as Christ had forgiven them.' It is possible that the Apostle had in his mind the words addressed to him by his Divine Master, Matt. xviii. 21, 22.—To advert to a question of reading. The ἡ before ἀγάπην is absent from about twenty MSS., and has been cancelled by Lachm. and Tisch., but wrongly, for, as ἀγάπην has the Article just before, where one might not have expected it, it cannot well be dispensed with here. The term is so used with the Article in Rom. xii. 9. Gal. 10. 1 Cor. viii. 1. xiii. 4 and 8. xvii. 13. Gal. v. 13. 1 Thess. iii. 12. Tit. ii. 2. 2 Pet. i. 7. 1 John iv. 10, and in all these cases as a noun in its most abstract sense. And, considering that St. Peter has himself so used it in his second Epistle, it is the more likely that he should so use it here. In the use just before, τὴν has the force of reference; and the words may be rendered, in a close version, thus: 'keeping the love [ye bear] to another intense (or fervent).'

<sup>9</sup> φιλόξενοι, &c.] See Rom. xii. 13. Heb. xiii. 2, and notes.—ἀνευ γογγυσμῶν. Lachm. and Tisch. read γογγυσμοῦ, from MSS. A. B. and 20 cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1182, 1183, Mus. 5116, 16, 184), and many Versions; and confirmed by internal evidence; for although γογγυσμῶν may derive support from Phil. ii. 14 (which passage may have been present to the mind of the Apostle here), where we have, χωρὶς γογγυσμῶν sine var. lect., yet the case is different here, and the singular, as denoting disposition (i. e. 'grudging,' 'unwillingness to bestow'), seems more suitable, and it is confirmed by the Peach. Syr. Nevertheless, Versions, in a case like this, have not their usual weight; and γογγυσμοῦ may have come from the Alexandrian Critics; hence I have not thought fit to disturb the t. rec.

<sup>10</sup>, <sup>11</sup>. The best Expositors, ancient and modern, are agreed that what is said in these verses has reference to the various spiritual gifts, by which persons were fitted to discharge various offices and duties in the Church, whether as ministers or deacons. And first there is laid down a general duty, which is then considered especially, as applied to gifts of Christian knowledge (as Rom. i. 11, and 1 Cor. i. 7); in advertising to which the Apostle may be supposed to espec. have in view Ministers; though certainly also intending to include Christians generally. As they regard the former, the expressions have relation to the distinct duties of preachers of the word, and of deacons. The preacher, it is said, 'is to speak as delivering the oracles of God,' and, consequently, what is the truth of the Gospel, and not more human notions; see note on καθὼς ἔλαβε χάρισμα, εἰς ἑαυτοὺς αὐτὸ διακονοῦντες, ὡς καλοὶ οἰκονόμοι ποικίλης χάριτος Θεοῦ. <sup>11</sup> Εἴ τις λαλεῖ, ὡς λόγια <sup>1 Rom. 12. 6-8.</sup> Θεοῦ εἰ τις διακονεῖ, ὡς ἐξ ἰσχύος ἧς χορηγεῖ ὁ Θεός· ἵνα ἐν πᾶσι δοξάζεται ὁ Θεὸς διὰ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, ᾧ ἐστὶν ἡ δόξα καὶ τὸ κράτος εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας τῶν αἰώνων. ἀμήν.

12 <sup>m</sup> Ἀγαπητοί, μὴ ξενίζεσθε τῇ ἐν ὑμῖν πυρώσει πρὸς πεν- <sup>m Isa. 48. 10. 1 Cor. 3. 12. ch. 1. 7.</sup>

1 Cor. xiv. 27. The diacon, having various laborious duties incumbent on him (as we may imagine to have been the case), is to discharge them with the full strength supplied by God for this effect. Such, too, is, I find, the view of the passage adopted by Steiger, who acutely remarks, that 'the command of the Apostle lies in the clause with διακονοῦντες; the manner of this serving is determined in that with καθὼς; but the quality of the persons, which as well capacitates and obliges thereto, as it must be proved through the service performed, with ὡς, &c.' Thus, then (continues he), this last clause declares their relation to the grace of God. Christians are householders of this, and must prove themselves to be good householders (1 Cor. iv. 2); but grace is manifold in its nature (ποικίλη); and this peculiarity the Apostle has here principally in view.' What results from this he then proceeds to state: 'The administration is also manifold; every Christian has his peculiar office in the divine household, and not that only, but also the gift to fulfil his office, the χάρισμα, the capacity to administer the grace of God as a good householder, which is itself a gift of grace.' Here, we may observe, the Apostle divides the spiritual activity required (comp. Rom. xii. 11) into two leading classes,—speaking and acting. As to the former he says, let him speak the word of God as indeed such (i. e. truly); consequently with conviction, and such a manner of expression as becomes the ἐρμηνεία of God; comp. 1 Cor. xii. 3. 2 Cor. ii. 17.—Thus far in my former Edd. I would now, in this ninth, offer some remarks in illustration of the important subject connected with the term χάρισμα. And first, the words ἕκαστος καθὼς ἔλαβε χάρισμα may best be rendered, 'As each one of you hath received a gift of grace.' As respects the reference, I would not, with most Expositors, confine it to the gift of the Spirit; still less, with others, restrict it to this world's goods, for which, however, we are undoubtedly stewards. We may best suppose the reference to be to both, though to temporal blessings, perhaps, primarily, as connected with the matter of the preceding verse,—yet also secondarily to the spiritual gifts adverted to in the next verse. This view is well stated in the annotations of Grot. and Est.; but the full sense of the passage has been most satisfactorily drawn forth by Bezer and Calv., to whose notes the reader is referred. It is well pointed out by Est., that the term χάρισμα is meant here to denote 'every facultas, endowment, whether of body or mind, or estate, whereby we are enabled to benefit others, the faculty or power having been bestowed for this purpose, and this purpose only, that it should be imparted.' And nothing is so calculated to correct a tendency to think it too much to communicate of our worldly substance, or exercise for the good of others those faculties of mind, or gifts of grace, with which we have been endowed, as the consideration that we hold them solely as stewards. It is worthy of observation that even the heathens regarded temporal blessings as the gifts of God, to be fully enjoyed, though with thankfulness to the Giver. So Alexis ap. Athen. p. 40, τοὺς εὐτυχοῦντας (i. e. 'persons of good fortune') ἐπιφανέας ('sumptuous') δεῖ ζῆν, φανερὰν τε τὴν δόξαν τὴν τοῦ Θεοῦ ποιεῖν. But it is also worthy of remark, that they did not hold that men were stewards of those gifts for the benefit of their fellow-creatures. The χάρις thus dealt out by God is termed ποικίλη as being 'manifold' in its nature, and 'diversified' in its application to the various exigencies of the Christian οἰκονομία. Comp. Rom. xii. 6—8. 1 Cor. xii. 4—12. In the words following, ἵνα ἐν πᾶσι δοξάζεται ὁ Θεὸς διὰ Ἰησοῦ Χρ., there is intimated (as Steiger observes) the final end of all that has been enjoined. 'And (he adds) the doxology then subjoined follows naturally after the precept to consider all spiritual thoughts and words, as also the power of discharging Christian services, as gifts from God, and to be used for his glory.'—ᾧ ἐστὶν, &c. The reference in ᾧ has been disputed. Most Commentators, ancient and modern, refer it to GOD; while others, as Grotius and Hottinger, suppose it to relate to CHRIST; as at 2 Thess. i. 12. Rev. i. 6. v. 12, and 2 Pet. iii. 18. The connection may, indeed, seem to favour the former; every thing in the preceding context being ascribed to God. But thus, as Steiger observes, the words διὰ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ will have too formal an air. 'Whereas (continues he) if we refer the doxology to CHRIST, then the expression in question will receive its proper emphasis, and the whole period conclude most impressively with a new thought; namely, that 'it is only through the mediation and help of Christ that God can be glorified in us and our actions; hence to him in reality belongs the glory which arises from these, and the power over us and all things throughout all ages.'

12—19. After the above doxology, the Apostle, abandoning the strict order, returns to recapitulate and complete the foregoing exhortations in regard to persecutions. (Steiger.) He exhorts them to patiently endure afflictions in the cause of Christ, from these several arguments: 1. that the heavier the trials are, which we have borne on earth, after the example of Christ, the greater will be our reward in heaven (ver. 13); 2. that afflictions, when suffered for conscience' sake, are no longer to be accounted such (ver. 14—fin.), since it was not, the Apostle hints, a strange or unusual thing for the people of God to be persecuted; 3. that though they suffered here, as Christ did, they should hereafter be glorified together with him; 4. that, besides the prospect of that future n 2 Cor. i.

10.
P. ill. 8. 10.
Col. i. 26.
2 Tim. 2. 10.
o Matt. 5.
10, 11.
ch. 2. 30.
& 2. 14.

p ch. 2. 30.

q Isa. 10. 12.
Jer. 35. 20.
& 40. 12.
Luke 22. 31.
& 10. 12.

ρασμὸν ὑμῖν γινομένην, ὡς ξένου ὑμῖν συμβαίνοντος· <sup>13</sup> ἢ ἀλλὰ, καθὼ κοινωνεῖτε τοῖς τοῦ Χριστοῦ παθήμασι, χαίρετε, ἵνα καὶ ἐν τῇ ἀποκαλύψει τῆς δόξης αὐτοῦ χαρίητε ἀγαλλιώνμενοι. <sup>14</sup> Εἰ ὀνειδίζεσθε ἐν ὀνόματι Χριστοῦ, μακάριοι! ὅτι τὸ τῆς δόξης καὶ τοῦ Θεοῦ Πνεῦμα ἐφ' ὑμᾶς ἀναπαύεται· κατὰ μὲν αὐτοὺς βλασφημεῖται, κατὰ δὲ ὑμᾶς δοξάζεται. <sup>15</sup> Μὴ γάρ τις ὑμῶν πασχέτω ὡς φονεὺς, ἢ κλέπτης, ἢ κακοποιός, ἢ ὡς ἄλλοτριωσπίσκοπος· <sup>16</sup> εἰ δὲ ὡς Χριστιανός, μὴ αἰσχυνέσθω, δοξαζέτω δὲ τὸν Θεὸν ἐν τῷ μέρει τούτῳ. <sup>17</sup> ὅτι ὁ καιρὸς τοῦ ἄρξασθαι glory, they had, at present, the Spirit of God for their comfort and support; 5. that it was an honour for any one of them to suffer,—not as a malefactor,—but as a Christian; 6. that though afflictions *dega*s with the faithful, yet the weight of the storm would fall on the unbelievers.

12. μὴ ξενίζεσθε—συμβαίν. meaning: 'Be not surprised [and therefore troubled] by, or through, the fire for trial (i. e. the severe persecution permitted for your trial) which ye now suffer;' see note on Luke xii. 49, and Calv. here. The construction here, somewhat perplexed (and as such mistaken by Translators and Expositors) is best laid down by the following: μὴ ξενίζ. τῇ ἐν ὑμῖν (scil. ὁσῃ) πυρώσει γινομένη ὑμῖν πρὸς πειρασμὸν (scil. ὑμῶν), 'Be not surprised and dismayed at the fiery trial of you' [a test of your fortitude and endurance, James i. 12]. In the term πυρ., which is explained by Hesych. Lex. δοκιμασία, there is an allusion to the questio or torture by fire. Comp. Isocr. ad Demon. p. 7, τὸ χρυσίον ἐν τῷ πυρὶ δοκιμάζομαι, and so Prov. xxvii. 21, δοκιμὸν ἀργυρίου καὶ χρυσὸν πυρώσει. Comp. Prov. lvi. 10. Zech. xiii. 9, and 1 Cor. iii. 13. Simil. in Origen, t. iii. p. 575, we have πίπτοντας εἰς τὸ πῦρ τῶν πυρώσεων. Of this torture by fire the Commentators adduce no example, but one is supplied by a passage which I have noted Jos. Bell. iii. 7, 33, ληφθεὶν τι, πρὸς πᾶσαν αἰκλὴν βαθάνων ἀντίσχε, καὶ μηδὲν, διὰ πυρὸς ἐξερυανῶσι τοῖς πολέμοις, περὶ τῶν ἰδῶν αἰπῶν, ἀνισταυρῶν τοῦ θανάτου καταμειδιῶν.

13. ἀλλὰ, καθὼ—ἀγαλλ.] By this participation in the sufferings of Christ it is implied that the cause is the same, that of true religion; compare 2 Cor. i. 7. Phil. iii. 10. 2 Tim. ii. 11. Heb. x. 34.

14. εἰ ὀνειδίζεσθε, &c.] See note supra iii. 13. —ὅτι τὸ τῆς δόξης—ἀναπαύεται, 'for the glorious Spirit of God resteth on, and abideth in, you [for your support and consolation],' a use of ἀναπ. found in Isa. xi. 2. xiii. 21. xxxii. 16. Prov. xxi. 16. Comp. also 2 Kings ii. 16. 'Here, then, we have (as Steiger observes) shown the ground on which Christians are blessed amidst the reproaches they suffer in the cause of Christ,—because the Spirit of God rests upon them, who strengthens and glorifies them the more as he is reviled by unbelievers.—κατὰ μὲν αὐτοὺς βλασφημεῖται, &c., meaning, that while he is blasphemed and denied by the ungodly, in them he is glorified; proving himself glorious in his effects, by which he is indeed evinced to be the Spirit of God himself. So Calvin observes, that 'it cannot obstruct the happiness of the righteous, if they should have to endure reproach in the cause of Christ, because they retain before God the entire possession of glory, being an habitation of God through the Spirit (Eph. ii. 22), with whom glory is inseparably conjoined.' The above words indeed are absent from 22 MSS. (to which I add Lamb. 1182, 1184), besides the Syr., Vulg., and other Versions, and have been cancelled by Lachm. and Tisch., but without sufficient reason. The external authority against them is not very strong, and internal evidence is in their favour; for, while it would be difficult to see why they should have been inserted, why they should have been omitted may easily be accounted for in several ways. The general sense intended is: 'although the Spirit of God be hated by heathens, and calumniated in those who profess the name of Christ, yet He is glorified among you by your patient suffering for his sake;' intimating that in hating them they in reality hate the Spirit of God which worketh in them. See John xv. 23 & 24. Thus the words declare what is perfectly apostolical, and of which the truth is verified by the experience of every age.

15. μὴ γάρ τις ὑμῶν πασχέτω ὡς φονεὺς, &c.] The connexion is: '[I speak not of suffering in a bad cause:] for let none of you so act as to suffer,' &c.—ἀλλοτριωσπίσκοπος. Of this expression (which has been variously explained) the most natural and probable sense is the one commonly assigned, 'a busybody,' 'one who intermeddles in business which does not belong to him:' a sense illustrated by Steiger from Cyprian, Epist. iv. 6, alienas curas agens. It is not improbable that by this term were denoted those otherwise called λογόποιοι, or inventors and circulators of false political reports; and as it can be proved that there were laws enacted against such, so it is not unlikely that there were laws also in force against persons convicted of busily prying into other people's affairs, exaggerating what might be true, and inventing what was false. To this hateful vice of slander, naturally connected with the idea of a busy, intermeddling spirit, St. Paul seems to allude, 1 Tim. v. 13, in the words περίεργος, λαλοῦσαι τὰ μὴ διοῦντα, whence it appears that the two terms περίεργος and ἀλλοτριωσπίσκοπος are, as nearly as may be, of the same import; the former signifying malè sedulus, 'one frivolously busy, occupying himself with unnecessary matters;' the latter, an intermeddler in other people's affairs. The affinity of the two terms is well illustrated by a passage of Philostr. Epist. Apoll. 59, where it is said, εἰ μὴ περίεργος ἦς, οὐκ ἦν ἐν τοῖς ἀλλοτρίοις πράγμασι δίκαιος, 'you would not have been a judge in other men's business.'

16. ἐν τῷ μέρει τούτῳ.] Lachm. and Tisch.

τὸ κρίμα ἀπὸ τοῦ οἴκου τοῦ Θεοῦ. Εἰ δὲ πρῶτον ἀφ' ἡμῶν, τί τὸ τέλος τῶν ἀπειθούντων τῷ τοῦ Θεοῦ εὐαγγελίῳ; <sup>18</sup> καὶ <sup>1 Prov. 11. 31.</sup> εἰ ὁ δίκαιος μόλις σώζεται, ὁ ἀσεβὴς καὶ ἁμαρτωλὸς ποῦ φανεῖται; <sup>19</sup> "Ὡστε καὶ οἱ πάσχοντες κατὰ τὸ θέλημα <sup>2 Ps. 31. 6. Luke 22. 32.</sup> τοῦ Θεοῦ, ὡς πιστῷ κτιστῇ παρατιθέσθωσαν τὰς ψυχὰς † ἑαυτῶν ἐν † ἀγαθοποιᾷ.

read, from 14 MSS. and some Versions, ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι τούτῳ, but wrongly. The ε rec. is confirmed by 2 Cor. iii. 10, οὐδὲ δαδῶσται—ἐν τούτῳ τῷ μίρῳ, 'in this particular' (in hac parte),—a very rare idiom, of which I have noted only one ex. elsewh. in Jos. Antt. xv. 10, οὐδ' αὐτὸν ἀμείλειν τούτου τοῦ μίρου, 'this particular point.' As to the reading ὀνόματι, it is evidently a gloss proceeding from some whose purpose it was to explain this force of μῆρις by the more usual term ὄνομα, since ἐν ὀνόματι τινος, like the Latin hoc nomine, sometimes signifies 'on account of, on the score of.'

17, 18. Here, as Hottinger and Steiger observe, there is explained at once the reason why, and the grounds on which, the Apostle has given the foregoing exhortations; 'it being meant (as Calvin explains) that this necessity awaits the whole Church of God, that it be not only subject to the common evils of men, but also, in an eminent and peculiar way, be chastened by the hand of God. Therefore must persecutions for Christ be borne so much the more patiently.' We have here an obscure intimation of the fiery trials which were about to come upon that part of the world where the persons whom the Apostle is addressing resided: to which is then subjoined the assurance, 'that though the judgment, or affliction, in question would, according to the manner of God's dealings of old, begin with his faithful servants, it would be far from ending with them.'—To advert to a matter of philology. I agree with Mr. Green, Gr. N. T. Dial., p. 175, that the ἐστιν here left to be supplied, should be brought in, not before ὁ καιρὸς (and that for the reason which he gives), but before ἀπὸ τοῦ οἴκου τοῦ Θεοῦ, and that the rendering should be: 'for the proper [rather, "suitable"] commencement of judgment is from the house of God;' said in allusion to Ezek. ix. 6, ἀπὸ τῶν ἀγίων μου ἀρξάσθαι, and 'begin at my sanctuary' [holy of holies, as the word is often used in the Épître to the Hebrews], meaning 'the persons stationed there.' Schoettg. and Wettst. adduce many passages of the Rabbinical writers, containing the sentiment that 'national punishments, occasioned by the abounding of wicked and ungodly persons in society, never commence but with the just and godly.' The next words, τί τὸ τέλος τῶν ἀπειθῶν. (in which there is a mixture of interrogation and exclamation) advert to the end of this severely punitive justice and wholesome correction, as of children, mentioned in Acts xii. 6, with which comp. 1 Cor. xi. 37. The answer, left to be mentally supplied, may be best expressed in the words of St. Paul, Phil. iii. 19, ὡς τὸ τέλος ἀπώλειαι, meaning, as the result of the judgment in that day when the retributive power of God shall be manifested. The argument implied in εἰ δὲ πρῶτον and τί τὸ τέλος is like that at Luke xxiii. 31, εἰ ἐν τῷ ὄργῳ ζύλω ταῦτα ποιοῖσιν, ἐν τῷ ξηρῷ τί γίνηται; From the manifest allusion to the passage of Ezekiel one can scarcely fail to see an intimation from on High, that the second and utter destruction of the temple and city by the Romans was also intended to be foreshown by the spirit of prophecy, as well as the first destruction by the Chaldeans.

18. εἰ ὁ δίκαιος μόλις σώζεται, &c.] Here many eminent Commentators, supposing the application to be the same as at ver. 17, explain the term σώζεται of temporal deliverance, i. e. 'is to be saved.' But while the words admit of being applied to the temporal judgments in question, they have reference chiefly to the great day of final judgment, or at least as regards the preparation for it in our earthly trials: a view in no small degree confirmed by the expression μόλις, of which the import is (as Steiger well expresses it), that 'it costs believers much to remain steadfast in their endurance of trials, and to glorify God. Many a struggle must be sustained, and much trouble gone through, in order to final perseverance.'

19. ἔστι καὶ οἱ πάσχοντες, &c.] With these words the Apostle closes his exhortation, recommending those who thus suffer, according to the will of God, to commit their lives and souls unto Him, as unto a faithful and merciful Creator and Preserver; and withal to continue steadfast and persevering in well-doing.—To advert to some matters connected with variety of readings. At ὡς πιστῷ Lachm. and Tisch. cancel ὡς, from 4 MSS. (to which I can add nothing) and the Vulg.; but injudiciously, since the external authority for this is next to nothing, and internal evidence is opposed to it, from the greater probability of the words being put out than put in. The Particle, indeed, is oft. omitted by the scribes, e. g. John vii. 46. James v. 5. Rev. iv. 6. See also Rev. iv. 7. xiv. 3. In these passages Tisch., I find, has not sanctioned the omission, except, indeed, in one of the above, James v. 5, ὡς ἐν ἡμέρᾳ σφάγης, where he ought in his 2nd Ed. to have recalled ὡς, as he has done in the present instance in his 2nd Ed. Finally, that the ὡς is to be retained may be urged from the circumstance of its being no less than indispensable to point the argument. For ἐαυτῶν 40 MSS., with Theophyl. and Œcumen., have αὐτῶν, which has been received by Lachm. and Tisch., perhaps rightly; though ἐαυτῶν is occasionally used for αὐτῶν. For ἀγαθοποιᾷ, Lachm. and Tisch. read ἀγαθοποιῆσαι, from 14 MSS., the Syr. and Arab. Versions, and Jerome. But the plural form no where else occurs: for Clemens Alex. p. 626 and 770, cited in Steph. Thes., seems to have had reference to this passage. I suspect that the ς arose from the π following at πρὸς, and π and ς are very similar in some ancient MSS. The plural form is not needed by the sense, since ἀγαθοποιᾷ may signify 'being zealous in the performance of good a Luke 34.

b Rom. 8. 17,

18.

c Acts 20.

d 1 Tim. 3. 2.

Tit. 1. 7.

e 1 Cor. 3. 5.

f Cor. 1. 34.

g Phil. 3. 17.

h Thess. 3. 9.

i 1 Tim. 4. 12.

Tit. 2. 7.

j 1sa. 40. 11.

k Ezek. 34. 22.

l John 10. 11.

m 1 Cor. 9. 26.

n 2 Tim. 4. 5.

o Heb. 12. 20.

V. 1 <sup>a</sup> Προσβυτέρους τοὺς ἐν ὑμῖν παρακαλῶ, ὁ συμπρεσβύτερος καὶ μάρτυς τῶν τοῦ Χριστοῦ παθημάτων, ὁ καὶ τῆς μελλούσης ἀποκαλύπτεσθαι δόξης κοινωνός <sup>2 b</sup> ποιμάνετε τὸ ἐν ὑμῖν ποιμνιον τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἐπισκοποῦντες μὴ ἀναγκαστῶς, ἀλλ' ἐκούσιως· μὴδὲ αἰσχροκερδῶς, ἀλλὰ προθύμως <sup>3 c</sup> μὴδ' ὡς κατακυριεύοντες τῶν κλήρων, ἀλλὰ τύποι γινόμενοι τοῦ ποιμνίου <sup>4 d</sup> καὶ, φανερωθέντες τοῦ ἀρχιποίμενος, κομμίσθε τὸν ἀμαράντινον τῆς δόξης στέφανον.

James 1. 12. ch. 1. 4. &amp; 2. 26.

works; and, while the plural form could only denote 'good works', the singular taken generically will denote 'good work.' On maturer consideration, however, of the point, I am of opinion that dy-as may be the true reading; and I find it in Lamb. 1183, 1 m., Mus. 16, 184, and Cov. 2, omitted by Mill. It is also confirmed by the Pesch. Syr. Version, and by the similar idiom at 2 Pet. iii. 11, ἐν ἀγλαῖς ἀναστροφαῖς καὶ ἐυσείλαις.

V. The Apostle now enters upon a new series of exhortations, as to certain external distinctions in the Church; and as much depended on the conduct of the rulers of the Church in times so critical, he now gives particular injunctions to presbyters (namely, bishops and pastors) and teachers; exhorting the former to feed the flock of Christ committed to their charge; the latter, to obey the admonitions of their spiritual pastors and masters.

1. ὁ συμπρεσβύτερος] Here St Peter, we observe, though one of the chief Apostles, yet modestly styles himself simply 'a co-presbyter.'—μάρτυς τῶν τοῦ Χριστοῦ παθημάτων, meaning, 'an eye-witness of the sufferings and of the resurrection of Christ from the dead.'—ὁ καὶ τῆς μελλούσης ἀποκαλύπτεσθαι δόξης κοινωνός, 'and who am also a partaker of the glory which shall be revealed,'—namely, at the resurrection. See Phil. iii. 21.

2. ποιμάνετε τὸ ἐν ὑμῖν ποιμνιον τοῦ Θεοῦ] meaning (by a pastoral metaphor frequent in Scripture,—see John x. 10,—and found also in the Class. writers), that they should nourish with sound doctrine, and carefully superintend the morals of those committed to their charge.—ἐπισκοποῦντες, 'discharging the episcopal office,'—namely, the office of overlooking and taking care of the flock of Christ. In the general sense of overlooking and care-taking the word occurs in Eurip. Hec. 491, Τύχην (fortune) δὲ πάντα τῶν βροτοῖς ἐπισκοπεῖν, also in the sense 'to hold the office of superintendent, or bishop,' in Athanas. i. p. 173, and there, I believe, alone; consequently that writer must have had in mind the present passage,—a circumstance which tends not a little to confirm the genuineness of the word, which has been rashly cancelled by Tisch. (alone of all the Editors), on the authority of only three MSS.; though its place in the text was at least as early as the forming of the Pesch. Syr. Version.—μὴ ἀναγκαστῶς, alluding, we may suppose, to some who served, indeed, the office without pay, but with no zeal. In the words following, μηδὲ αἰσχροκερδῶς, there is a reference to those who served it rather from the motive of gain, than from any cordial alacrity.

3. The Apostle here adverts to the fault of another class of persons,—namely, that of certain presbyters, who, though not deficient in zeal or diligence, yet gave way to a too domineering spirit (comp. 3 John 9, ὁ φιλοπρωτεύων Διοτρά.), or by seeking dominion over the consciences of their people.—κατακυρ. τῶν κλήρων, scil. τοῦ Θεοῦ, 'holding tyrannous rule over.' So Pa. x. 10, κατακυρ. τῶν πεινῶν, and ch. xviii. 13.—Of the term κλήρων the sense has been variously explained. By some it is understood to denote 'the possessions of the Church'; a view sufficiently supported by the signif. of the word, but, as regards the thing itself, little borne out by probability; and from the very expression κατακυριεύοντες κλ. being such a term as rather suggests the idea of persons, we may suppose the sense to be (as the best Commentators are agreed) 'Christian churches,' or 'congregations,' here called κλήροι (scil. Θεοῦ), in allusion to the division of Canaan by κλήροι, 'lots,' which formed so many separate heritages. See note on Acts i. 16.

4. κομμίσθε τὸν ἀμαράντινον τῆς δόξης στέφ.]. Here the Translators and Expositors render am. by unfading, as if ἀμαράντινος were formed from the Adj. ἀμαράντος. But such a derivative would have been superfluous. It comes from the Substantive ἀμάραντος, the name of the flower so called, just as amaracanthus is formed from amaratus, the flower unfaded-marjoram. Thus the sense (as H. Stephens well shows), is amaranthine, formed of amaranth, and therefore unfading, perennial, eternal. The term itself is well adapted to suggest this idea, since, as we find from Columella, x. 175, the epithet immortal was applied to the amaranth. That Clem. Alex. so took the word, is plain from his words in Pædag. iii. 8, 78, ὁ καλεῖται τοῦ ἀμαράντου στέφανος ἐπόκειται τοῖς καλῶς πολιτευμένοις. This amaranth is with great propriety placed by Milton, Par. Lost, iii. 354, 'fast by the Tree of Life,' since this amaranthine crown of glory there is called in James i. 42 (which passage Milton must also have had in mind) the crown of life. The term ἀμαράντινος is so rare as not to be found elsewhere (as far as I know) except in Philostr. Heroic., c. x., στίφαιος άμαρ. On this topic (the future reward annexed to a faithful discharge of the office in question) the Apostles frequently touch, from the office itself being, at that period, one which carried with it much difficulty, nay, even danger, and accordingly required all the encouragement supplied by the consideration of an ample future recompense.

5<sup>a</sup> Ὁμοίως, νεώτεροι ὑποτάγητε πρεσβυτέροις πάντες δὲ ἀλλήλοις ὑποτασσόμενοι, τὴν ταπεινοφροσύνην ἐγκομβώσασθε ὅτι ὁ Θεὸς ὑπερῷανους ἀντιτάσσεται, ταπεινοῖς δὲ δίδωσι χάριν. 6<sup>a</sup> Ταπεινώθητε οὖν ὑπὸ τὴν κραταιὰν χεῖρα τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἵνα ὑμᾶς ὑψώσῃ ἐν καιρῷ 7<sup>a</sup> πᾶσαν τὴν μέριμναν ὑμῶν ἐπιρρίψαντες ἐπ' αὐτὸν, ὅτι αὐτῷ μέλει περὶ ὑμῶν.

8<sup>b</sup> Νήψατε, γρηγορήσατε, [ὅτι] ὁ ἀντίδικος ὑμῶν, Διάβολος, Prov. 3. 24.
Rom. 12. 12.
16.
Eph. 5. 21.
Phil. 2. 3.
James 4. 6.
Job 22. 29.
Prov. 30. 23.
Matt. 23. 12.
Luke 1. 52.
14. 11.
15. 16.
James 4. 10.
1<sup>a</sup> Pt. 5. 7.
5. 22.
5. 23.
Matt. 6. 26.
26.
1<sup>a</sup> Thess. 5. 6.
ch. 1. 12. & 4. 7.

Luke 12. 22. Phil. 4. 6. 1 Tim. 6. 8. Heb. 12. 5. h Job 1. 7. Luke 21. 16. & 23. 51. 1 Thess. 5. 6. ch. 1. 12. & 4. 7.

5. νεώτεροι] This, being opposed to πρεσβ., which term is admitted to be one of office, must denote other persons inferior to them (as being under their superintendence), and bound to pay deference to them.—πάντες δὲ ἀλλ. ὑποτ., i. e. 'Be obedient, each according to your different ranks and stations.' Lachm. and Tisch. indeed, cancel ὑποτασσ., from 7 MSS. and the Syr. and Vulg. Versions; but wrongly, since the external authority for this is insufficient, and internal evidence adverse. It was, I doubt not, removed by certain Critics who thought it involved a tautology and overloaded the wording; though in reality it does not, since the words ἀλλήλοις ὑποτασσ. have only to be kept apart in construction from ἐγκομβ. That St. Peter did not mean to have ἀλλήλοις referred to ταπεινοφροσύνην ἐγκομβώσασθε, is highly probable from this, that he seems to have formed the phrase on the Pauline one (Col. iii. 12), ἐνδύσασθε ταπεινοφροσύνην. As respects the expression ἐγκομβ. τὴν ταπεινοφ., it was probably formed on that of St. Paul, ἐνδύσασθαι ταπειν.; and hence there is no need, with some, to seek any peculiar force in this out-of-the-way, though not, what some have accounted it, barbarous term; for that it was not such is plain from its being used by Epiphanius and Apollod. Caryet., though it was prob. known to St. Peter only from some provincial, prob. Alexandrian, use, since the noun ἐγκομβημα is used by Aquila to denote 'a girdle;' and by Pollux and others to denote 'an apron tied on with strings.' Notwithstanding that the garment was one worn only by persons of humble condition, the term in question may be meant to communicate a certain intensity to the sense of ταπεινοφ., and to intimate that the Christian is to imitate his Divine Master, who said, 'Learn of me, for I am meek and lowly of heart,' and thus to 'walk with all lowliness and meekness,' Eph. iv. 2. Perhaps, too, it is a stronger term than ἐνδύσασθαι, intimating that the Christian professor is to gird on and hold tight about him this Christian virtue, knowing that thus alone shall he be exalted (Luke i. 52. Matt. xxii. 12) and find favour with the Lord, as is intimated in the passage then adduced, Prov. iii. 34; the truth of which sentiment the experience of all ages, and the history of the world so plainly confirms, that even the great heathen writers acknowledged it; though, as might be expected, they profited little by their knowledge of the abstract truth.

6, 7. The Apostle here exhorts them at once to humble submission to whatever the hand of God may lay upon them, and pious trust in that gracious Providence ever watchful for their good.—ταπεινώθητε οὖν, &c. As respects the connexion here (far from obvious), I would now

(with Steiger) make the verse commence a new section, forming a reiterated admonition adverting to our whole life of humiliation on earth, primarily grounded on the injunction given at ver. 5, and made general towards the close, so that the οὖν should be understood to imply a further conclusion, with which compare James iv. 7, ὑποτάγητε οὖν τῷ Θεῷ.

7. ἐπιρρίψαντες ἐπ' αὐτόν.] We have here a significatio pragmatia, i. e. 'casting off all anxious cares, and reposing them on,' &c. The expression πᾶσαν τὴν μέριμναν—αὐτῶν is formed on Ps. lv. 22, and in the words ὅτι αὐτῷ μέλει περὶ ὑμῶν there is implied, what is expressed by the Psalmist there, q. d. 'He careth for you, and therefore will sustain you.'

8, 9. ὅτι ὁ ἀντίδικος ὑμῶν, &c.] Here, as an especial reason for watchfulness and circumspection, the Apostle reminds them of the attempts of that spiritual Adversary who is ever on the watch for their destruction; warning them by their vigilance to defeat, and by their steadfastness to resist, the temptations with which he is constantly assailing the faithful, espec. the temptation to apostatize, and abandon their Christian profession. It is true, the ὅτι argumentative is removed by Matth., Griesb., Scholz, and Tisch., on the authority of very many MSS. And, considering that internal evidence is against the word, I have placed it within brackets. The asyndeton here communicates a certain force, and is not unsuitable to the conclusion of an epistle. The words, as Steiger points out, afford a ground for the admonitions in this verse, νήψατε, γρηγορήσατε, connected with which is the more special one at ver. 9. As respects the words themselves, they are quite graphic, and their main purport points to the threat for prey, and the insiduousness with which that prey is sought by him who goeth about, like a lion in quest of prey, seeking whom he may devour. By ἐρυόμενος is denoted, not the roar or yell of the lion in his den, but the peculiar note, between a growling and a roaring sound, which is emitted by the lion when, pinched by hunger, he goes forth in quest of prey, and which he utters to drive the inferior beasts out of their lurking holes through fear. Even the term καταπίν is not without its graphic force, as adverting to the insatiable voracity of the lion, as bolting down his prey bodily, and so as to leave scarcely a bone to pick for his morning meal; a peculiarity in the habits of the animal to which we have an allusion in Zeph. iii. 8. 'Her princes are roaring wolves; they gnaw no bones in the morning,' as Dr. Henderson there renders, a version preferable to the commonly received one; though still better might the sense be expressed, 'they leave not [aught] for the morrow.' The Sept. Version of that passage

1 Eph. 4. 27.
 & 6. 11, 12.
 James 4. 7.

ὡς λέων ὠρυόμενος περιπατεῖ ζητῶν τίνα † καταπή. <sup>9</sup> ἢ ἀντί-στήτε στερεοὶ τῇ πίστει, εἰδότες τὰ αὐτὰ τῶν παθημάτων τῇ ἐν κόσμῳ ὑμῶν ἀδελφότητι ἐπιτελεῖσθαι.

1 Cor. 4. 17.
 Heb. 10. 37.
 & 12. 31.
 ch. 1. 6.

10 κ' Ὁ δὲ Θεὸς πάσης χάριτος, ὁ καλέσας * ὑμᾶς εἰς τὴν αἰώ-νιον αὐτοῦ δόξαν ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ, ὀλίγον παθόντας, αὐτὸς † καταρτίσει ὑμᾶς, † στηρίξει, † σθενεύσει, † θεμελιώσει. <sup>11</sup> αὐτῷ ἢ δόξα, καὶ τὸ κράτος εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας τῶν αἰώνων! ἀμήν.

1 Heb. 12. 22.

12 <sup>1</sup> Διὰ Σιλουανοῦ ὑμῖν, τοῦ πιστοῦ ἀδελφοῦ, ὡς λογιζομαι,

(which was doubtless present to the mind of the Apostle here) is: οἱ ἀρχόντες αὐτῆς (Jerusalem) ἐν αὐτῇ, ὡς λέοντες ὠρυόμενοι—οὐχ ὑπελείποντό τι ('did not leave aught for their use') εἰς τὸ πρῶν.

9. σπεροὶ τῇ πίστει]. This adverts to the means whereby Satan is to be resisted; and σπερ. stands for σπεριὸς ὄντας, equiv. to σπεριούμηναι, Particip. of σπερ. Comp. Acts xvi. 5, ἐσπεριούντο τῇ πίστει. In the next words, εἰδότες τὰ αὐτὰ, &c., the argument is the same, only more strongly expressed, as in 1 Cor. x. 13, being simply this, that their sufferings are not peculiar to themselves, but are borne, and surmounted, by others, and are therefore not, as pusillanimity might suggest, insupportable; q. d. 'your brethren in the world (a world of unbelief and persecution of the truth) suffer, as you do, from a sense of duty; and on you lies the same obligation to suffer.' Thus irrelevant, if not irrelevant, is the remark of Pott, that what is here said amounts to the commonly proposed motive of consolation under suffering, 'solamen miseriae socios habuisse malorum.' Again, I must observe, the same Expositor (like others of his class) unwarrantably lowers the import of the term ἐπιτελεῖσθαι in assigning to it the sense semper evenire, a sense which has no support from correct philology, and which is quite against all sound theology. The same objection also applies to the sense fieri, accidere, &c. However, I can by no means coincide in the view of the term taken by Calv. and Est., who in ἐπιτελεῖσθαι, perfici, impleri, recognize a reference to a certain Divine decree, whereby it is the will of God that his elect should not come to glory without suffering; for the purpose of the Apostle here seems to be to suggest something in the way of practical, rather than theoretical, truth; in short, something adapted to common apprehension and common experience. Agreeably to which view, we may best assign to ἐπιτελ. the sense are gone through, incurrere, nearly equiv. to 'endured as a matter of duty.' In fact, the literal sense of ἐπιτελεῖσθαι is no other than this, 'to be paid,' = 'rendered as a matter of duty;' and in the present application of the term, 'to be endured as in duty bound.' Precisely such is its use in Xen. Mem. viii. 8, 8, where Socrates is made to say, εἰ δὲ βιώσωμαι πλείω χρόνον, ἴσως ἀναγκαῖον ἵσται τὰ τοῦ γήρατος (sub. παθήματα) ἐπιτελεῖσθαι, 'to go through with as a matter of duty.' Finally, the true sense and full import of the term is, I apprehend, best of all illustrated by two qualifying expressions which the Apostle has elsewhere in this same Epistle interposed on the subject of those distresses and afflictions calculated to try the faith of believers. Thus at i. 6, setting the Christian's ground of rejoicing against his reason for leavingness, he says, ὀλίγον ἔσται (εἰ δὲ ὅσον ἔσται) λυπηθῆναι ἐν ποικίλοις πειρασμοῖς, 'though now for a season, if need be, ye are, &c., and again, iii. 17, κρείττον γὰρ ἀγαθοποιούστας, εἰ θέλει τὸ θέλημα τοῦ Θεοῦ, πάσχειν, &c., 'it is better, if the will of God be so, that ye suffer for well-doing,' &c.

10. <sup>1</sup> Ὁ δὲ Θεὸς πάσης χάριτος, &c.] Thus praying, not that they should be exempt from trials, but that the God of all grace [see note on Heb. x. 28] who had called them to the hope and sure earnest of eternal glory, by Christ, would, after they had suffered awhile [for the increase of their faith], make them mature and complete in holiness, establish them in the peace and hope of the Gospel, strengthen them to resist all temptations, endure all sufferings, and perform all duties; settling them immovably, as a compact building on a sure foundation, which would redound to his praise to whom glory and dominion ought to be ascribed for ever. (Scott.) The full sense is, 'May he perfect you more and more in the knowledge and practice of true religion, "that ye may be complete, in nothing wanting" (James i. 4); may he confirm you in all that regards faith and practice, that ye may be neither apostatizers nor backsliders; may he strengthen you in the performance of every good purpose; and may he settle you in the truth you profess.' As respects the disputed reading of this verse, after again weighing the conflicting evidence of MSS., Versions, &c., I am now induced to follow Origen, Matthæi, Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch., in adopting the future ind. forms καταρτίσει, &c., reading also ὑμᾶς for the ὑμᾶς after καλέσας, and placing within brackets what has been cancelled by Lachm. and Tisch.,—namely, the ὑμᾶς after καταρτίσει. This text has the recommendation that from it the other texts here existing may without difficulty be accounted for. Though I admit that καταρτίσει, for which there exists considerable authority, confirmed by Heb. xiii. 21, may be the genuine reading. In the other verbs the future is called for by a decided preponderance of external authority. And the Apostle may have intended a transition from the language of pious wish and prayer to that of consolatory assurance from firm persuasion, such as we find in 1 Cor. i. 8, and Phil. i. 6, where see notes. The αὐτὸς is emphatic, as supra, ii. 24, and Phil. i. 6, and the doxology expresses adoring gratitude for the promised grace; q. d. 'It is God alone who can do this; and my sincere wish is that he may do it! my full persuasion is that he will do it, to whom be,' &c.

12. The Apostle here intends to briefly recaδι' ὀλίγων ἔγραψα, παρακαλῶν καὶ ἐπιμαρτυρῶν ταύτην εἶναι ἀληθῆ χάριν τοῦ Θεοῦ εἰς ἣν ἐστήκατε. <sup>13 m</sup> Ἀσπάζεταιται ὑμᾶς ἡ ἐν Βαβυλῶνι συνεκλεκτὴ, καὶ Μάρκος ὁ υἱὸς μου. <sup>14 a</sup> ἀσπασασθε ἀλλήλους ἐν φιλήματι ἀγάπης. Εἰρήνη ὑμῖν πᾶσι τοῖς ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ. ἀμήν.

m Acts 12.
12, 26.
n Rom. 16.
16.
1 Cor. 16. 20.
2 Cor. 13. 12.
1 Thess. 5.
20.

pitulate the substance of the Epistle, adverting to its main purpose,—admonition and exhortation.—ταύτην εἶναι ἀληθῆ χάριν, &c. By χάριν τοῦ Θεοῦ is meant the Christian religion; so called, as promulgating, in the Gospel, salvation by grace, in opposition to that by works in the Law. Thus far in my former Edd. I now add, that from what I have already said on these words, and from what I have remarked in my note on Rom. v. 2, it plainly appears that here, as there, χάριν must mean a state of grace: and so strong is the resemblance between the two passages, that I doubt not St. Peter had that of St. Paul in mind. It is observable that the verb there ἐστήκατε confirms the ἐστήκατε here; though for this two uncial and fifteen cursive MSS. have στήκατε, which was caught up by Lachm. and (in his 1st ed.) by Tisch., though in his 2nd ed. Tisch. has restored ἐστήκατε. However, the imperat. would here be so irrelevant that I suspect the Alexandrian Critics, stumbling at the use of the preterite (the force of which I have already set forth) wrote ἐστήκατε or ἐν ᾧ ἐστήκατε. The full force of χάριν I have pointed out in the above notes; and I have only to offer the following admirable remark of Bede: 'Peter began his Epistle at grace; he finishes it in grace; he has besprinkled the middle of it with grace; so that in every part of what he says he might condemn the Pelagian heresy, and might teach that the Church of Christ cannot be saved, but by grace.' The Apostle solemnly attests that the present announcement of grace in the Gospel (see 2 Pet. i. 12) is the true grace formerly promised by the mouth of the Prophets, and consequently that no other is to be expected. By ἐστήκατε is meant standing steadfast in its profession and practice. So at 1 Cor. xv. 58 we have ἰδραῖοι γίνεσθε, and xv. 1, ἐν ᾧ (scil. εὐαγγελίῳ) ἐστήκατε. Of course the means of standing is by faith in Christ. So 2 Cor. i. 24, τῇ γὰρ πίστει ἐστήκατε.

13. ἐν Βαβυλῶνι.] On the city here intended no little diversity of opinion exists. Some suppose Babylon in Egypt: an opinion, however, highly improbable in itself, and which has been completely overturned by Lardner. Others suppose, that by Babylon is here figuratively denoted Rome. Yet for this no stronger testimony exists than a bare tradition derived from Papias; and as it rests on no sufficient authority, so neither is it borne out by probability, for no tolerable reason has ever been alleged why the Apostle should here call Rome by the name Babylon, and withhold its true name. We may, indeed, justly regard it as a mere notation, first originating in error, and afterwards caught up by the Romanists, for the purpose of supporting their assertion that Peter was the first Bishop of Rome. In fact, Calv. has almost proved to a demonstration that it cannot mean the Church in Rome, arguing from Euseb., and others, who affirm it, saying what is contradictory, and does not hang together, as involving a gross anachronism; whence Calv. is warranted in arguing, that since Peter had, when he wrote this Epistle, Mark then with him, as a companion, it is, a priori, highly probable that he wrote the Epistle from Babylon, and hence well designated that Church as 'your sister Church at Babylon.' The best founded opinion is, I apprehend, that of Erasmus, Calv., Beza, Lightf., Cave, Scaliger, Salmas., Le Clerc, Wetst., Bengel, Benson, Rosenm., A. Clarke, Steiger, Dr. Peilo, Wieseler, and Dr. Davidson, that it means Babylon in Assyria; though they are not agreed whether we are to understand Seleucia, i. e. New Babylon, or Old Babylon. We may rather suppose the latter; for there is no satisfactory proof that Seleucia (though it gradually stepped into the place of Old Babylon, and was, indeed, chiefly built from its ruins) ever received the name of Babylon; certainly not so early as the time of St. Peter, whatever might be the case afterwards. Though fallen from its ancient grandeur, Babylon had probably still a tolerably large population, though by no means in proportion to its size. Plutarch, in his life of Crassus, c. 17, and in his comparison of Crassus and Nicias, testifies to the existence of Babylon as a city, and speaks of Babylon and Seleucia as distinct: and so also does Strabo. Indeed it were little probable that Babylon should have come to utter desertion so soon after the founding of Seleucia; espec. since, as we learn from Pausanias, Seleucus took no decided steps to people his new city at the expense of the old one. In short, there is every reason to think, that Babylon was a sort of metropolis of the Eastern Dispersion of the Jews, where a great number of them had gone to settle, in addition to those who were the posterity of those that remained in Babylon, and did not return. This is strongly confirmed by a passage of Jos. Ant. xv. 2, 2, where, speaking of Hyrcanus, he says, that on being carried into captivity by the Parthians, the king permitted him to take his abode ἐν Βαβυλῶνι, ἔνθα καὶ πλῆθος ἦν Ἰουδαίων, where by Βαβυλῶν is meant (as I shall further show on some future occasion) the country of Babylonia, as in Philo, 587, πᾶσα γὰρ, ἡκτὸς μίρου βραχίως, Βαβυλῶν, καὶ τῶν ἄλλων σατραπιῶν, αἱ ἀμειψάσαντες ἐχουσι τὴν ἐν κύκλῳ γῆν Ἰουδαίους ἐχουσι οὐκ ἄποροι. From which, and other passages that might be adduced from Josephus, it appears that Babylonia was thickly peopled with Jewish colonists, and therefore the more likely was it that the Apostle of the Circumcision (see Gal. ii. 7—9) should go thither, by way of sojourn; as we cannot doubt he visited other partly thickly colonized by Jews; for, as Calv. remarks, 'cas precipue regiones lustrabat, in quibus major erat gentis eius frequentia.' And Dr. Davidson remarks, that 'there was, we know, considerable intercourse between the Babylonian and Palestinian Jews; and that, as Peter was principally the Apostle of the Jews, it was natural for him, in his travels for the propagation of the Gospel, to repair to Mesopotamia.

ΠΕΤΡΟΥ ΤΟΥ ΑΠΟΣΤΟΛΟΥ

ΕΠΙΣΤΟΛΗ ΚΑΘΟΛΙΚΗ ΔΕΥΤΕΡΑ.

Ι. <sup>1</sup> ΣΤΗΜΕΛΩΝ Πέτρος, δούλος καὶ ἀπόστολος Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, τοῖς ἱσότημον ἡμῶν λαχοῦσι πίστιν ἐν δικαιοσύνῃ τοῦ Θεοῦ

OF this second Epistle the authenticity was at first called in question, yet it is quoted or alluded to by some very early Fathers, and in the second century was received into the canon. Upon the whole, the external or historical evidence for its authenticity is strong, and the internal yet more so; for if not written by St. Peter, it would indeed be a most daring fabrication: and yet if a fabrication, it would be one of the most artfully contrived on record;—for there is not a single particular that betrays imposture, though it has been a subject of examination for above seventeen centuries. Moreover, it would be very difficult to conceive what motive could have induced any one to fabricate such a composition; for here we see no attempt to support any peculiar doctrine or practice, for which the pious fraud might be supposed to have been committed. Indeed such an air of unfeigned and deep piety breathes throughout the whole, that it is difficult to imagine how a person possessed of such a spirit could deliberately indite an imposture of that kind. As to the argument of some Critics against its authenticity, derived from the dissimilarity in character of the second Chapter with that of the first Epistle, it is very inconclusive; for though it be different from that Epistle, it is also different from the other two Chapters of this Epistle. In fact, there the subjects are different, and (as in the case of St. Paul's Epistle to the Hebrews) different subjects call for different styles. In the case of the first Epistle, and the first and third Chapters of the second, the whole is simply didactic; whereas in the second Chapter of the present Epistle, more of energy would be requisite, and consequently a higher degree of inspiration would be vouchsafed, even like that granted to the Prophets of the Old Testament. Besides, even waiving such a principle, and supposing St. Peter's style elsewhere to be as plain as those Critics please, yet they will hardly deny that the style of a writer is much influenced by the feelings with which he is affected. Thus, in the present instance, we may suppose that the Apostle's strong indignation at the heresies of the Gnostics quickened his feelings, and consequently somewhat altered the usual character of his style. The above may suffice to show that internal arguments against the authenticity of this Epistle are unfounded. Proceed we to advert to the internal evidence for the authenticity:—now, to pass over several arguments which are fully stated by Macknight and Horne, 1. There are the same characteristics (i. e. of gravity, dignity, energy, and authority, united with simplicity) observable in this second Epistle, as that which distinguishes the first. 2. There are several incidental allusions to circumstances which correspond to no other Apostle but St. Peter. 3. A truly apostolical spirit breathes through the whole. 4. The style is (with the exception of the second chap.) the same as the former Epistle, and there are repetitions of the same words and allusions to the same events. This Epistle is justly supposed to have been written very soon after the first Epistle, and shortly before the death of the Apostle. If the date assigned to the first Epistle, A. D. 63, be, as there is little reason to doubt, the true one; and if, as we can scarcely doubt, Peter was put to death in A. D. 64, this Epistle must have been written in the early part of 64. Dr. Davidson has shown that we are restricted in fixing its date to the end of A. D. 63, or the first half of 64; the latter of which is the more probable date. That it was indited from the same place, and addressed to the same persons, as the former one, is the general opinion; yet no good reason can be given why it should have been written from the same place. Nay, when we consider the great reason there is to think that the place at which the first Epistle was written was Babylon, and take in conjunction with that circumstance, the high probability that this Epistle was written but a very short time before the Apostle's death,—which we have the fullest evidence to show took place at Rome,—we seem authorized to conjecture that this second Epistle at least was written from Rome, whither it is probable St. Peter had been called,—as St. Paul was not long before,—to defend himself from the accusations of those who sought to implicate him as encouraging the rebellious spirit against the Roman government, which then pervaded the whole of Judæa and the neighbouring countries to the East.

The design of this Epistle is (with the excepἡμῶν καὶ Σωτήρος Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ <sup>2</sup> χάρις ὑμῖν καὶ εἰρήνη <sup>a</sup> John 17. 2.

 πληθυνθείη ἐν ἐπὶγνωσίᾳ τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ Ἰησοῦ τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν. <sup>b</sup> Rom. 1. 7.
<sup>3</sup> Ὡς πάντα ἡμῖν τῆς θείας δυνάμεως αὐτοῦ τὰ πρὸς ζωὴν <sup>c</sup> 1 Pet. 1. 2.
<sup>d</sup> Jude 2.

tion of ch. ii.) very similar to that of the former. In its character it is, like that, confirmatory, cautionary, and hortatory, to confirm the brethren in the faith, and to exhort to a life suitable thereto. The Apostle first applies himself to establish his readers in the truth and profession of the Gospel. 2ndly, He cautions them against false teachers (whose tenets and practices he graphically describes), and warns them of the mockers and scoffers, who would soon start up, and deride their expectation of Christ's coming: then, after confuting their false assertions, he tells them only the day of the Lord was deferred, and having described its circumstances and consequences (in which there is a strong coincidence with the account given by St. Paul) he subjoins suitable exhortations to prepare for that momentous period; after which he concludes with a truly apostolical commendation of them to the grace of God. Soon after writing it, the holy Apostle sealed his testimony to the truth of the Gospel by martyrdom, being crucified with his head downwards,—a mode of crucifixion uniting contemptibly with cruelty the most atrocious instances of which were not unfrequent in that age (savage in the extreme, notwithstanding a civilization perhaps never exceeded); insomuch that, as Josephus tells us, the Roman soldiers often crucified their victims in that way,—and likewise by nailing them one upon another, as he says, πρὸς χλυσίν; and also, prob., from want of wood for the crosses;—a fact which Joe. elsewhere records.

I. 1—4. These verses contain the introduction to the Epistle, in which, after asserting his apostolic character, and addressing the Epistle to the Gentile converts, St. Peter salutes them, and reminds them that their Christian privileges were owing to the favour of God in Christ, and in consequence of the miraculous effusion of the Holy Spirit. (Benson.)

1. Συνεὶς Πέτρος, δούλ. καὶ ἀπόστ. Ἰ. Χρ.] 'The Apostle, addressing both Jews and Gentiles, as forming one spiritual Israel, is thus careful to describe himself, and to introduce both his purely Jewish, and his better known Christian name (comp. John i. 42. Acts xv. 14), for the very purpose (we may suppose, if we comp. 2 Cor. xi. 13—15. 2 Thes. iii. 17) of guarding the infant Church against any such counterfeit Epistle, and any such false assumption of the office of an Apostle of Christ, as by some strange fatality this Epistle was for a time held to be.' (Peile.) —δούλος καὶ ἀπόστολος. A peculiar designation, on which see note at Tit. i. 1. Of τοῖς ἐσόμενοις ὑμῖν λαοῖς πίστιν, the literal sense is, 'to those who have shared with us,' i. e. 'have had allotted to them like share with us in the precious faith; for the compound ἐσόμεν. refers, not to the thing, ΠΑΙΣ, but to the person, Peter, spoken of as like partaker with them, and they with him, in the faith of Christ, which they held in common with him: so Tit. i. 4. St. Paul addresses Titus as his son, κατὰ τὴν κοινὴν πίστιν. Comp. John xiv. 1—3. Acts xv. 8, 9. xxvi. 18. Here, then, as says Wesley, 'the faith of those who have not seen is considered as equally precious with theirs who saw our Lord.' Precious, it is called, being precious as the means through which 'the power of God unto salvation' works that great and good end,—the salvation of man. Comp. 1 Pet. i. 5, τοὺς ἐν δυνάμει Θεοῦ φρουρουμένους διὰ πίστεως εἰς σωτηρίαν.—ἐν δικαιοσύνῃ τοῦ Θεοῦ, &c., 'in respect of the righteousness of our God and Saviour Jesus Christ;' (meaning the method of justification by faith in Jesus Christ, as opposed to the Law); for so I render, with Bp. Middl., since, according to the principles of Bp. Middleton's theory, further developed and greatly improved as it has been by Mr. Green, it appears that here, as at Tit. ii. 13, the omission of the second article was the effect of design and purpose, which purpose must necessarily be, as Mr. Green has pointed out, either that the words should be descriptive of a single person, or of two persons united in one joint agency, &c. But, in this passage and in that of Titus, the latter cannot be supposed the purpose, and therefore they must be meant of the same person who is designated as our God and Saviour;—a view supported by the authority of the Greek Fathers of the early period of the Church,—plainly evincing that the passage is to be understood as an assumption that Jesus Christ is our God and Saviour: see Dr. Pys Smith's Script. Test. vol. iii. p. 188. The term λαχ. has reference to salvation being considered as an inheritance, laid up in heaven for the righteous; see 2 Tim. iv. 8. Col. i. 5, 12. Eph. i. 11, 14, 18.

2. χάρις ὑμῖν—Θεοῦ] An earnest wish and prayer for every blessing upon them which can result from a right knowledge of our God and Saviour Jesus Christ.

3. ὡς πάντα ἡμῖν—ἀρετῆς] The construction is this, ὡς τῆς θείας δυνάμεως αὐτοῦ πάντα τὰ πρὸς ζωὴν καὶ εὐερίαν ἡμῖν διδωρημένη, διὰ—ἀρετῆς (δὲ ὤν—φθορᾶς) καὶ αὐτὸ τοῦτο, &c.; and the sense may be expressed thus:—'Inasmuch as his Divine power hath (freely) given to us, through being brought to the knowledge of Him who hath called us, through glory and goodness, all things pertaining to life and godliness.' The apodosis to ὡς, as I have pointed out, follows at v. 5; and may be expressed by 'forasmuch as—so do ye,—add to your faith,' &c. So Dr. Peile in his note, who entirely agrees with my view of the context: his sense, however, of διὰ δόξης καὶ ἀρετῆς is scarcely to be deduced from the words without violence. The meaning may rather be, 'by a glorious (display of) beneficence (in the gracious plan of salvation).' The reading, however, is disputed, since for the τ rer. A, C, and a few cursives (I add Lamb. 1182, 1184), with the Vulg. Version, have ἰδὲ δόξην καὶ ἀρετῆς, which reading has been received by Lachm. and Tisch. And certainly it yields a very suitable sense,—'propria gloria et virtute,' 'by his own glorious goodness and beneficence;' comp. χρηστότης καὶ φιλανθρωπία found in Tit. iii. 4. I say 'suitable,' since, as Calv. observes, 'quæcumque nobis a Deo promissa sunt proprio et merito virtutis ejus et gloriæ effectus censeri debent.' Yet to produce that sense we καὶ εὐσέβειαν δεδωρημένης, διὰ τῆς ἐπιγνώσεως τοῦ καλέσαντος ἡμᾶς διὰ δόξης καὶ ἀρετῆς * (ἡ δὲ ὧν τὰ μέγιστα ἡμῖν καὶ τίμια ἐπαγγέλματα δεδώρηται, ἵνα διὰ τούτων γένησθε θείας κοινωνοὶ φύσεως, ἀποφυγόντες τῆς ἐν κόσμῳ ἐν ἐπιθυμίᾳ φθορᾶς) ὅ καὶ αὐτὸ τοῦτο δέ, σπουδὴν πᾶσαν παρεισενέγκαντες, ἐπιχορηγήσατε ἐν τῇ πίστει ὑμῶν τὴν ἀρετὴν, ὅ ἐν δὲ τῇ ἀρετῇ

b Isa. 54. 5.
 John 1. 12.
 Rom. 8. 16.
 2 Cor. 13. 14.
 Eph. 4. 24.
 Heb. 12. 10.
 1 John 2. 2.

should require the Article τῇ before ἰδία, as used in various passages of the N. T., and so ἰδ. is always found with the Art., except in Acts iii. 12, ὡς ἰδία δυνάμει, though there it signifies, not propria, but privē, 'peculiar.' As to Calvin's recommendation of the reading, that it removes all ambiguity and perplexity, strange is it that it did not occur to him that the reading might possibly be one devised for this very effect. However, the ambiguity and perplexity may be said to be rather fancied than real; and considering that the sense yielded by either reading is alike good in itself and suitable to the context, hence, I think, external authority of MSS. ought to turn the scale in this case; and that is decidedly in favour of διὰ δόξης καὶ ἀρετῆς. I find my opinion confirmed by the suffrage of Dr. Peile.

4. δι' ὧν] The ὧν is by some referred to δόξης καὶ ἀρετῆς; by others to πάντας. Both references may be meant; i. e. 'by all which things.' By ἐπαγγ. are meant the Gospel promises of pardon and salvation through Christ.—διὰ τούτων—φύσεως, meaning, it would seem, 'in order that, being stirred up by these promises, you might strive to become partakers [by imitation] of a Divine nature or disposition; namely, by that purity and holiness, which may be said to be of a Divine nature, as bearing a certain similarity to the Divine attributes, and being produced by Divine influence (see Benson and Bp. Bull's Harm. Ap. p. 46). The same idea is found in the writings of the heathen philosophers generally, especially Plutarch. See Plut. de Ser. Num. Vind. p. 550, where see Wytenb. It is to be observed, however, that the sense is, 'of a divine (not the divine) nature.' And in illustration of the sentiment as explained by Dr. Benson and Bp. Bull, I would compare what Diod. Sic. l. i. 90, says of the Egyptian kings, that 'the people honoured them as if really gods, especially since they thought they could not have the power and the will to so highly benefit their subjects without 'partaking of a divine nature,' θείας μετέχον φύσεως, implying Divine aid and influence. There may be (Bp. Bull thinks there is) in θείας κοινωνοὶ φύσεως an allusion to the participation of the influence of Divine grace in baptism, especially considering that in the words following there is some allusion to the solemn renunciation of the covetous desires of the world and the carnal desires of the flesh in baptism: but the chief reference must be to the keeping up through the whole of after-life what has been begun in baptism; so that the new man may gradually be raised up to be a perfect man, 'to the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ.' This view of θείας and the general sense of the clause I find confirmed by Œcum., who (building on the ancient Greek Fathers) lays down the general sense thus: ὡς μυρία λαβόντες ἀγαθὰ διὰ τῆς ἐπιφανείας Χριστοῦ, δι' ὧν δυνάμει καὶ θείας φύσεως γινέσθαι κοινωνοὶ καὶ πρὸς ζῶναι καὶ εὐσέβειαν ἀναχθῆναι, ὀφειλομέναι πολιταύεσθαι οὕτως ὡς ἐπιχορηγούμεν τῇ πίστει, &c.—ἔλθωμεν. Θείας δὲ κοινωνοὶ φύσεως γεγόμενα διὰ τῆς τοῦ Κυρίου καὶ Θεοῦ ἐπιδημίας, ἀπαρχὴν τῆς ἡμετέρας φύσεως ἐν ἑαυτοῖς ὑποστήσαντες (having assumed) τὰ καὶ ἀγαθὰ αὐτοῦ τῇ προσλήψει: αὐτὴ δὲ ἡ ἀπαρχὴ ἀγία καὶ τὸ φέρον (Rom. xi. 16): φύραμα δὲ τῆς ἀπαρχῆς οὐκ ἄλλο ἢ οἱ ἐξ ὧν ἡ ἀπαρχή. This able and perhaps just view is confirmed by Heb. ii. 11, where see note. In the words following are pointed out the means whereby this assimilation and participation are to be attained; namely, ἀποφυγ. τῆς ἐν κόσμῳ ἐν ἐπ. φθ., by 'escaping the pollutions of this wicked world, arising from carnal appetites.' Comp. ii. 20, ἀποφ. τὰ μέμνη. τοῦ κόσμου, prob. a metaphor taken from escaping from death, or dangerous infectious disease. So in Plato de Rep. p. 329, Sophocles says that he has escaped τέφροδία, ὅστις λυττώσται τινα ἀποφυγών.

5—7. The Apostle here calls on his Christian brethren not to rest on their apparent conversion, or the reformation connected with it, or even in the beginning of a renewal to a 'divine nature;' but, depending on the promises of the Gospel, and pursuing the end for which they were given, to 'cleanse themselves from all' remaining 'filthiness of flesh and spirit,' perfecting holiness 'in the fear of God.' (Scott.) To the latter he especially adverts, as the condition on which depends the former; for, as Bp. Sanderson says, 'the promises of God are true, yet they are conditional, and such as must be ever understood with a clause of reservation or exception,—i. e. of obedience, as, in the case of his threatenings, of repentance.'

5. καὶ αὐτὸ τοῦτο] Here is the apodosis to v. 3; and the full sense (rather implied than expressed) is, 'So this very thing (which God hath given you the ability to perform) do ye;' q. d. 'Since God has granted all the means of holiness (vv. 3, 4), do your part;' thus suggesting what they are to render in return for God's mercy, as shown by his thus calling them to salvation, and (as is intimated by the words following, σπουδὴν πᾶσαν παρεισενέγκαντες) in co-operation with God's grace enabling them 'both to will and to do of his good pleasure;' Phil. ii. 12, 13; in other words, 'contributing all diligence [on your part] to the grace of God in his gifts,' mentioned at vv. 3, 4; and so concurring with God's gifts of grace by their utmost diligence; thus working out their salvation by doing what is requisite on their part; comp. Phil. ii. 12—ἐπιχορηγήσατε ἐν τῇ πίστει ὑμῶν τὴν ἀρετὴν. In order to rightly understand the sense of ἐπιχορ., it is proper to ascertain the nature of the figure, which is derived from the χορηγόν, or 'person who, in ancient times, used to furnish the expenses of the players, singers, and dancers, at the public festivals.' Indeed, such was the τὴν γνώσιν, ἐν δὲ τῇ γνῶσει τὴν ἐγκράτειαν, ἐν δὲ τῇ ἐγκρατείᾳ τὴν ὑπομονήν, ἐν δὲ τῇ ὑπομονῇ τὴν εὐσέβειαν, ἡ ἐν δὲ τῇ primitive sense of the word χορηγός, which afterwards came to denote generally, one who supplies any expense. So in a passage of Plut. it is said of Pericles, δαψιλὴν ἢ χορηγὸς ταῖς γυναῖξι. Hence in like manner the verb χορηγέω has often the sense simply 'to supply,' or 'furnish.' In ἐπιχορηγέσασθε ἐν τῇ πίστει ὑμῶν τὴν ἀρετὴν, 'furnish forth, supply, in order (ἐπ') [one after another], we have a metaphor perhaps taken from the act of furnishing forth in succession the various dishes in the courses which are required to form a complete entertainment. The ἐν has been variously, but never satisfactorily explained, or, at least, accounted for. It would seem to be used with allusion to the ἐν successive, implied, or for ἐν μίσῳ, 'amidst,' = 'together with,' as in Matt. ii. 6. xi. 21, et al. Thus the full sense is, 'furnish forth in addition to, and together with,' as the next link in the chain. In this enumeration of the various duties of faith and practice (forming what is well termed by Mr. Gresswell an ascending scale of improvement, or a series of steps to perfection) we may recognise that regular order and nice gradation also observable in similar enumerations of St. Paul (as Rom. v. 3, 4. 1 Tim. vi. 11. Gal. v. 22. Rom. viii. 29, 30. x. 14, 15), by which the Christian virtues are here represented as so many links in one beautiful chain, wherein FAITH constitutes the primary and leading, as CHARITY the final and completive, link; the former as that from which the various Christian virtues are suspended, and the latter as that in which all the others terminate. 'In this beautiful connexion (observes Bengel) each preceding grace leads to the following, and each following tempers and perfects the preceding; for though every grace bears a relation to every other, yet here they are so nicely ranged, that those which have the closest dependence on each other are placed together.' However, we are not (with some) to consider the Apostle as laying down what may be called a system of Christian virtues,—his purpose being mainly to specify, by way of example, the virtues essential to 'that participation of a divine nature' of which he has just been speaking. There is great truth in the remark of Dr. H. More, that 'there is more than a mere ENUMERATION of those divine graces; for there is also implied how naturally they rise one out of another,' as forming the several links of one common chain. See the able Exegesis of Œcumen. On the exact nature of the order, and arrangement in which these various virtues stand one in respect to the other, no Commentator has, on the whole, so ably treated as Bp. Warburton, in his Sermon on this text; notwithstanding that the learned Prelate has here, as on very many occasions, introduced needless, and indeed baseless refinement. One general remark may, however, be regarded as especially well founded. Every foregoing virtue gives stability to the following: moreover, 'commencing with faith, the Apostle, as "a wise master-builder" (1 Cor. iii. 10), chooses for his foundation that rock on which our Lord promised him to build the Church, as directed by the same Divine Spirit with St. Paul, who says, "other foundation can (or ought) no man to lay, than that is laid, which is JESUS CHRIST." But, in order to counteract the error (then too prevalent) which regarded faith as alone sufficient to make man acceptable to his Maker, and without good works, entitled him to the rewards of the Gospel covenant, the Apostle first enjoins us to add, or build, Virtue upon Faith. Here, it is true, very many Commentators (as Grot., Hamm., Zeger, Dr. H. More, Bengel, Whitby, Benson, Dodd., Wells, Wesley, A. Clarke, and Scott) take ἀρετὴ to signify 'courage and constancy' [in professing the faith]: a signification of the word frequent in the Class. writers, from Homer downwards. In justification of this Grot. urges, 1. the gradation observable in this passage; 2. the several virtues in particular then specified. Bp. Warburton, however, satisfactorily evinces, that the very beauty and correctness of that gradation depend upon ἀρετὴ being taken in the general sense, as in Phil. iv. 8, and elsewhere in Scripture. Indeed of ἀρετὴ in the sense courage, no ex. occurs either in the New Test. or the Sept. How peculiarly appropriate here is ἀρετὴ in the sense 'moral virtue,' has been shown by Bp. Warburton. 'For whereas (observes he) Faith, while single and solitary, remained dead,—from henceforth, being thus clothed upon by virtue, it becomes alive and vigorous, and productive of all the fruits of grace and immortality; and Virtue, thus erected, receives a reciprocal advantage from Faith. The weakness of unguided reason, and the violence of ill-balanced passions, had reduced MORAL VIRTUE, both in principle and practice, to so shadowy and precarious an existence, that the wisest in the Pagan world could not forbear lamenting its helpless condition, and owning that nothing but a revelation from heaven could realize and support it. They mistook the true foundation of Morality; some placing it in the native excellence of virtue, others in the exterior benefits of which it is productive. But it was the Dispensation of Faith which taught us that the true foundation of Morality was compliance to the will of our Creator and sovereign Lord. It was Faith which enabled us to surmount all the opposition of the appetites, by holding out to us an infinite reward, and which the assistance of the Holy Spirit hath placed within our reach. But though Virtue be enjoined here and elsewhere in Scripture, yet if we expect to find there any regular or methodical body of morality, we shall be much mistaken. With respect to this, the New Testament, all along, refers us to another guide; for God, having before revealed the whole doctrine of morality by the religion of nature, and none of God's dispensations contradicting one another, it was enough for the first teachers of Christianity, when they preached up Virtue, to refer their followers for particulars to what natural religion taught concerning it. This being so, and that the great Pandect of the Law of Nature is to be searched and studied, in order to attain a perfect knowledge of moral duty, there is need of much pains and exercise of mind to learn that Virtue which we are here enjoined to build upon Faith.' 'By the knowledge next enjoined, is (he adds) to be understood know-ὡσεβείᾳ τὴν φιλαδελφίαν, ἐν δὲ τῇ φιλαδελφίᾳ τὴν ἀγάπην.

• TH. 1. 14. 8 • Ταῦτα γὰρ ὑμῖν ὑπάρχοντα καὶ πλεονάζοντα, οὐκ ἀργούς οὐδὲ ledge as respects the virtue before mentioned,—namely, that wisdom which is the result of the study of the Law of Nature in the pursuit of truth.' 'To understand this matter truly (continues he), we must consider, that Virtue consists in acting agreeably to those relations in which we stand to our common humanity, our fellow-creatures, and our Creator: for as religion, in the fullest sense of the word, includes the duty we owe ourself and neighbour, so morality, in its larger sense of the word, includes the observance of that relation we stand in towards God; and when the practice respects man it is called virtue; when it respects God it is piety. These relations are commonly distinguished into the human, the social, and the Divine virtues; the end and design of all which is to perfect man's nature: 1. By restraining, regulating, and directing the private and selfish appetites, according to the dictates of reason. 2. By cultivating, improving, and enlarging the social passions and affections, and employing them in the service of our species, according to the dictates of charity. 3. By exercising our understandings in the contemplation of the first Cause, and by owing our relation to him in suitable acts of rational worship, in order to unite us to our supreme Good, according to the dictates of grace.' The learned Prelate then proceeds to show the reciprocal service which virtue does to knowledge. 'Knowledge (says he) is the perception and attainment of TRUTH, and useful knowledge the perception and attainment of those truths which tend to the perfecting of our nature; but the carnal passions, operating adversely to such truths, cloud and darken the understanding, so as to mislead us, even in those of the most easy discovery and of the highest importance. Again, to acquire a competent share of knowledge, we must give all diligence in the pursuit of truth, so as to trace her throughout her hidden recesses; but it is only a loss for the object which can heartily engage us in the pursuit, and this can arise from nothing but the beauty of it. Now while Vice usurps the heart, Truth, her mortal enemy, will be a neglected guest; but when Virtue has assumed her seat, the passion for Truth will revive. For Truth and Virtue are twin-born sisters, and, with only a name of distinction, participate of one common nature; Truth being speculative Virtue, and Virtue only practical Truth. And now the understanding makes a free progress in knowledge, as having no headstrong appetites to mislead it, nor earthly passions to damp its affections. From henceforth the only danger is from the opposite quarter; lest the mind's ardent love of truth should engage it in abstractions, and carry it beyond the limits of those truths which are given us for our contemplation here. Now this folly so mischievous, and proceeding from a want of due consciousness of the narrow limits of the human understanding, St. Peter, in his next precept, restrains. "Add (says he) to knowledge temperance," i. e. sobriety, moderation, continence, in the pursuit of truth. For as Virtue, without Knowledge, falls into all kind of fanaticism in practice; so Knowledge, without Temperance, leads to all kind of heresy in opinion. To render our Temperance complete, we are enjoined to add Patience, i. e. "long-suffering in bearing with the contradiction of others;" for having experienced in our own case how insensibly errors insinuate themselves into the mind; how plausibly they assume the air of truth, when called to account; how obstinately they maintain their ground, when new become suspected; and what labour is required to dispossess them, even after they are detected and exposed; having experienced, I say, all this, we shall be well inclined to bear with patience the contradiction of our erring brother. To Patience we are enjoined to add Godliness; and then, as St. James counsels us, we "let patience have her perfect work." For then by this means godliness cannot degenerate either into fanaticism or bigotry, but will remain sober and rational; and yet there is another danger to which it is obnoxious; for by long and intense exercise in holy offices, the joy and transport that elevate the mind, thus filled with its true and proper object, God, naturally dispose us to contemn all inferior things, and from despising the things, but too often, to despise the persons who delight in them; and, by making odious comparisons, like the Pharisee to the Publican, to forget our relation, our near relation, both by nature and grace, to the meanest of our species. Hence arises spiritual pride, the last and most fatal enemy to true godliness. Now for this, too, the Apostle provides a remedy. "Add (says he) to godliness brotherly kindness," with which commences the third and last order of this Christian building. Thus godliness placed between and supported, on each hand, by the human and the social virtues, becomes stable and permanent. And while it receives this united aid from both, it returns it back again to both. We have, then, shown the benefits temperance and patience receive from godliness; we are now to speak of that which brotherly kindness receives from it. The most beautiful and elevated branch of brotherly kindness is friendship; but friendship may be a confederacy in vice as well as a community of virtue. Hence it requires to be placed on godliness, whereby alone it stands secure from abuse, and brings forth all its genuine fruits of public beneficence. Brotherly kindness is now only liable to one disorder,—that being enjoined to be built on godliness, or religion, men are too apt (like the Pharisees of old) to confine brotherly kindness to their own sect or pale; but this narrow and partial benevolence the Apostle removes by enjoining them to add to brotherly kindness CHARITY, i. e. the universal love of all mankind. This regulates and perfects all the other virtues, and is itself in no want of a reformer. All the other virtues, as we have observed, degenerate both by defect and by excess: this is incapable of either. Its nature and essence secure it from defect, and its fruits and products from excess. This, then, is the crown, the keystone of this heavenly edifice, this triumphant arch of immortality; or, as the holy Apostle more emphatically calls it, the bond of perfection." Thus far the learned Prelate, to whose statement, as above detailed, it is impossible to deny the praise of great acumen, ἀκάρπους καθίστησιν εἰς τὴν τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ ἐπιγνώσιν. <sup>9</sup> ὃ γὰρ μὴ πάρεστι ταῦτα, τυφλὸς ἐστὶ, μυωπά. 1 Im. 50. 10.

Wisd. 1. 17.
1 John 2. 9.
11.

and consummate ability; yet it may be doubted whether certain particulars there be not too artificial, and little agreeable to the simplicity of the sacred writer. For instance, whether the term γνώσις can admit of the sense assigned by him may be doubted. It is by many eminent Expositors, from Calv. downwards, rendered rationem prudenter agendi, prudence,—namely, as Est. explains, ‘eam scientiam, quæ opera virtutum dirigat et ratione moderetur, ne quid in illis sit plus aut minus; ut hac parte virtus prudentiæ significata sit’; which interpretation he thinks confirmed by Rom. x. 2, ἧλας—ὁ κατ’ ἐπίγνωσις. However, he adduces as possibly true the interpretation of Oecumen., ‘eam sententiam quæ est mysterium fidei, ut hæc non tantum modo credatis, verum etiam aliquatenus intelligentiâ assuequimini.’ But that seems too far-fetched; and there is more simplicity, and perhaps truth, in supposing religious knowledge, deep and real, yet applied to practice (as at 1 Cor. viii. 7, 10. 2 Cor. xi. 6), so as to carry with it a holy experience in the things of God (as revealed in Scripture, and in his dealings with men). Now such will naturally produce what is here subjoined to knowledge,—namely, temperance, ἐγκράτεια, though not in that sense assigned to the word by Bp. Warburton, but rather in the usual acceptation of self-control, or holding the mastery over our appetites, passions, and affections. See 2 Cor. x. 5. ‘By this true knowledge and holy experience, we are taught how those passions and appetites have often deceived us, and hence arises a stronger resolution of controlling and keeping them under for the future.’ Moreover, as the sense assigned by Bp. Warburton to ἐγκράτεια must be rejected, so neither can his exposition of ὑπομονή be admitted. The term has here evidently the general sense of ‘a patient perseverance in faith and duty under suffering.’—a sense in which it frequently occurs in St. Paul’s Epistles, and a virtue with reason recommended to those groaning under Jewish and heathen persecution. Now such naturally produces godliness (εὐσέβεια) as consisting in all those holy affections which constitute the true spiritual worshipper of God; for, as Bengel truly observes, ‘omnia pietatis impedimenta removet ὑπομονή.’ Moreover ‘these three, ἐγκράτεια, ὑπομονή, and εὐσέβεια are,’ as Dr. H. More observes, ‘closely connected together: for we cannot keep close to the laws of temperance, but patient endurance will emerge therefrom, nor be kept in the spirit thereof without the invocation and acknowledgment of Divine assistance, which is a fruit of godliness properly so called.’ I must take exception to the connexion between ‘godliness’ and ‘brotherly kindness,’ as laid down by the learned Prelate, who seems not to be aware that φιλαδελφία here, as often in all other passages of the New Test. where it occurs, denotes ‘the mutual love of Christian brethren one to another;’ the next gradation to which is the love of all mankind; and the connexion between the two virtues is excellently pointed out by Dr. More, ubi supra. ‘Having (says he) gained such a victory through Divine grace over our lusts and passions, and being transported with a high sense of thankfulness to our Redeemer and Benefactor, who wants nothing of our retributions himself, the stream of our affections is naturally driven downwards to his saints that dwell on earth, and profess the same religion with ourselves; and St. Peter intimates that having ‘purified our souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit,’ the result thereof is the loving our brethren. However, the purified soul cannot stop here, but the quick flame of love mounts upwards, and is reflected again downwards, and vibrates every way, reaching at objects in heaven and on earth; and therefore, in her pure and ardent speculations of the Godhead in his unlimited goodness, and also her observations on the capacity of the whole creation of receiving good both from him and from one another, she overflows those narrow bounds of brotherly love, and spreads out into that ineffably ample and transcendently divine grace and virtue, UNIVERSAL LOVE, which is the highest accomplishment the soul of man is capable of either in this life or that which is to come, and thus at last becomes ‘perfect,’ as her Father which is in heaven is perfect;’ even in humble imitation of that God who is LOVE, 1 John iv. 8. Here, then, as the Apostle begins with faith, so he ends with love, those being the two leading virtues of the Christian, and hence so frequently associated. See 1 Thess. iii. 6. v. 8. 2 Thess. i. 5. 1 Tim. i. 5. 2 Tim. ii. 22.

8. ταῦτα γὰρ—ἐπιγνώσιν] The sense is, ‘For if those virtues reside in and abound (i.e. be on the increase) in you, they will show you to be those whose knowledge of the religion of Christ is not barren and unfruitful in good works [such as religious knowledge should produce].’ By ἐπάχρ. is meant such as abide in for constant exercise. Similarly it is said in Plato, a. lii. 99, ὃ δὲ ἐπάχρει ταῦτα πάντα (meaning the five constituents of happiness) οὕτως ἐστὶν εὐδαιμόν. The subjoined καὶ πλεονάζοντα signifies, ‘and continually increasing,’ being on the increase. The words following, καθίστησιν εἰς—ἐπίγνωσις, are not well rendered in our Authorized Version and that of Abp. Newc., ‘they make you that ye shall be,’ &c. Rather, ‘efficient, reddunt,’ equiv. to ‘efficient;’ ‘exhibebunt,’ ‘will show you to be;’ which is the sense that the word bears in Thucyd. ii. 42, and Soph. Antig. 657, ψευδὴ γ’ ἑμᾶντων οὐ καταστήσονται πόλει.

9. ὃ γὰρ μὴ πάρεστι—ἀμαρτιῶν] The full sense is, ‘He who is destitute of these moral virtues, and yet expects salvation by the Gospel, which imperatively enjoins them, is blind, or sees very little into the true nature of it, and forgets that he was cleansed from his former sins [only on condition of renouncing sin in future].’—τυφλὸς ἐστὶ. Supp. τὸν νοῦν, which is expressed in Soph. Œd. T. 371, meaning that he is wilfully blind, closing his eyes that he may not see. Comp. Matt. xiii. 6. Acts xviii. 17, also Marc. Anton. iv. 29, καταμύων τῷ νοῦν δμματι, ‘the intellectual eye.’ In μυωπάων, which is a stronger term than καταμύων, it is intimated ‘that he blinketh the light of truth which stares him in the face.’ Comp. Theodor. Stud. p. 366, ζων, λήθην λαβὼν τοῦ καθαρισμοῦ τῶν πάλαι αὐτοῦ ἁμαρτιῶν.

 10 <sup>o</sup> Διὸ μᾶλλον, ἀδελφοί, σπουδάσατε βεβαίαν ὑμῶν τὴν κλήσιν καὶ ἐκλογὴν ποιέεισθαι ταῦτα γὰρ ποιοῦντες οὐ μὴ πταίσητέ ποτε. 11 οὕτω γὰρ πλουσίως ἐπιχορηγηθήσεται ὑμῖν ἡ εἰσόδος εἰς τὴν αἰώνιον βασιλείαν τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν καὶ Σωτῆρος Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ.

12 Διὸ οὐκ ἀμελήσω αἰεὶ ὑμᾶς ὑπομνησκῶν περὶ τούτων, καίπερ εἰδόντας, καὶ ἐστηρυμένους ἐν τῇ παρουσίᾳ ἀληθείας.
 13 † Δίκαιον δὲ ἡγοῦμαι, ἐφ' ὅσον εἰμὶ ἐν τούτῳ τῷ σκηνώματι, οἷον τιμὴ λήμῃ τῇ τῆς σαρκὸς προστάθεια ('passionate attachment to') μνησάμενος. The phrase λήθην λαβὼν is so rare, that the only exx. I have noted of it elsewhere are in Jos. Antt. ii. 9, 1, and Ælian, V. H. iii. 18. Hist. An. iv. 35. But λήθην λαβὼν is a stronger expression than ἔχειν or λαβόμενος, since it implies 'a willing forgetfulness, a choosing to forget'; similarly as τυφλὸς just before, which signifies 'choosing to be blind'; which is the very case of those designated by Isaiah as 'the blind who have eyes [but will not use them]'.

 10. διὸ μᾶλλον—σπουδ.—ποιεῖσθαι] 'Here,' as Calv. says, 'the Apostle draws the conclusion, that this is the only way to prove ourselves elected of God and not called in vain, if we have, corresponding to the profession of faith, a good conscience and an upright conversation. And he infers that we ought the rather to give diligence thereto, because he had before said, that faith must not be barren and unfruitful.' Here, it is plain, the terms κλήσις and ἐκλογὴ are synonymous, simply denoting 'admission into the Christian covenant'; and this being conditional, there was (as Mr. Slade observes) no impropriety in the converts being enjoined to 'make their calling sure and effectual.' They were, at that time, in a state of election; but it was a state from which they might fall: they were elect only so long as they were careful to maintain faith and good works.—οὐ μὴ πταίσητέ ποτε. The full sense is, 'ye shall by no means ever fail of attaining salvation': an idea further unfolded in the words following, v. 11, οὕτω γὰρ πλουσίως—Χριστοῦ, where there is a resumption of the same metaphor, though only by way of allusion to the above ἐπιχορηγία; the sense of the words at vv. 10, 11, ταῦτα γὰρ ποιοῦντες—Βασιλείαν, being, 'for by so doing (i. e. by thus furnishing forth the various virtues and graces of the Christian character, and thus striving to make your calling and election sure) you shall by no means ever fail [of salvation]; for there shall be abundantly furnished forth to you the entrance into the everlasting kingdom';—namely, the kingdom which Christ, as God, will for ever possess in heaven, after having delivered up his mediatorial kingdom on earth unto the Father; see note on Eph. v. 5, and comp. 1 Cor. xv. 24. Dan. vii. 27. iv. 34. vi. 26. vii. 14. Ps. cxlv. 13. Rev. xiv. 6.

In vv. 12—15 the Apostle alludes to his Lord's prophecy respecting his martyrdom; see John xx. 18, 19. Moreover, from hence to iii. 13, he warns his readers against false teachers; promising a brief mention of the reasons for which he thought proper to again and again urge them to hold fast that part of pure doctrine, which was by the false teachers not only corrupted, but even derided.

12 διὸ οὐκ ἀμελήσω] Several MSS. and the Vulg. read διὸ μὲλλήσω, which is adopted by Lachm. and Tisch. But the external authority for this reading is slender, and internal evidence is against it. It has, indeed, not any character of genuineness. The Fut. μὲλλήσω is, as Est. observes, hardly in use in the Class. writers, and never in the Script. ones; whereas οὐκ ἀμελήσω is, as he says, highly suitable to the context, the sense being, that the Apostle will not be wanting in his duty of reminding, however they might be in theirs of attending to admonition. Yet because this might seem to imply distrust, the Apostle modestly softens it by a correction similar to that of St. Paul, Rom. xv. 14; q. d. (in the words of Calvin) 'you do indeed hold the truth of the Gospel with all sincerity and constancy, and I say not this as though I thought you wavering; but in so momentous a matter warnings are never superfluous; and therefore they ought never to be unrepeated.'—ὑμᾶς ὑπομνησκῶν περὶ τούτων. In this use of ὑπομνησκῶν, there is included, under the sense of reminding, that of suggesting and teaching, by a peculiarity found also in Xen. Æcon. xvi. 8, ἀρξομαι σε τῆς γαστριᾶς ὑπομνησκῶν; οἷα γὰρ εἰ ἐπιστάνῃ σοι πᾶν πολλὰ φράσω. In 2 Tim. ii. 14, and Tit. iii. 1, the tense of teaching by suggestion is also, as also in Xen. Cyrop. vi. 4, 5. In ἐστηρυμένους ἐν τῇ παρουσίᾳ ἀληθείας, there seems to be a metaphor taken from a nail fastened in a sure place: ἐστηρυμένοι ἐν τόπῳ πιστῷ, as it is said in Isa. xxii. 25. The words ἐν τῇ παρουσίᾳ ἀληθείας are capable of several senses. On reconsidering this somewhat difficult point, it seems to me that the Apostle does not intend any special truth, whether, as Dr. Burton supposes, the true doctrine now being preached, as opposed to impending heresy, but the truth of Christ generally, or his Gospel, 'veritatem' (as Calv. says) in cuius possessionem certa fide jam ingressi erant. Comp. Rom. viii. 18, 24, 25. 1 Cor. ii. 9. xiii. 9—12. Nevertheless, it should seem, that by the truth of the Gospel the Apostle espec. adverts to that representation of it, 'quoad genus,' which the Apostle had been summarily, but carefully, laying down supr. vv. 5—8. I find this view confirmed by the suffrage of Est., who explains ἐν τῇ παρουσίᾳ ἀληθείας, by 'in hoc genere doctrine' [Evangelii] de quo nunc scribo vobis: which seems a better account of the force of διεγείρειν ὑμᾶς ἐν ὑπομνήσει· <sup>14</sup> εἰδὼς ὅτι ταχινή ἐστιν ἡ ἀπόθεσις τοῦ σκηνώματός μου, καθὼς καὶ ὁ Κύριος ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς ἐδήλωσέ μοι. <sup>15</sup> Σπουδάσω δὲ καὶ ἐκάστοτε ἔχειν ὑμᾶς μετὰ τὴν ἐμὴν ἐξοδὸν τὴν τούτων μνήμην ποιείσθαι. <sup>16</sup> Οὐ γὰρ σεσοφισμένοις μύθοις ἐξακολουθήσαντες ἐγνωρίσαμεν ὑμῖν τὴν τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ δύναμιν καὶ παρουσίαν, ἀλλ' ἐπόπται γενηθέντες τῆς ἐκείνου μεγαλειότητος. <sup>17</sup> Λαβὼν γὰρ παρὰ Θεοῦ Πατρὸς τιμὴν καὶ δόξαν, φωνῆς ἐνεχθείσης αὐτῷ τοιάσδε ὑπὸ τῆς μεγαλοπρεποῦς δόξης· "Οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ Υἱός μου ὁ ἀγαπητός, εἰς ὃν ἐγὼ εὐδόκησα!"

John xi.
18, 19.
2 Tim. i. 4.

h. Matth. 17.

1-4.

John i. 14.

1 Cor. i. 17.

2. 2. 20, 4. 12.

2. 4. 14.

1 John i. 1.

2. 14.

1 Matt. 2. 17.

2. 17. 8.

Mark i. 11.

2. 9. 7.

Luke 3. 22.

2. 9. 20.

Col. 1. 12.

parousy than that of Calv. However, Peter seems not to have meant his words to be taken with any rigid exactitude.

13, 14. 'Hic clarius exprimit, quam utilis adeoque necessarius sit monitionum usus, quia fideles incitare convenit; alioqui enim obrepit a carne torpor.' (Calv.)

13. σκηνώματι.] See note on 2 Cor. v. 1. Of this word, as denoting the human body, an example occurs in Eurip. Heracl. 690, σμικρὸν τὸ εὖν σκίωμα.

14. εἰδὼς ὅτι, &c.] The full sense is, '[I am the more earnest herein,] as knowing,' &c. In the expression ἀπόθεσις τοῦ σκηνώματός μου there is a twofold allusion to the body, as a tabernacle, or temporary tent-house of the soul, to be some time abandoned, &c., and to the body as a garment to the soul, to be put off at death. The same twofold allusion is found at 2 Cor. v. 2, where see note. In the next words, καθὼς καὶ ὁ Κύριος—μοι, the Apostle alludes to the words of Christ, John xxi. 18, sq. But whether καθὼς will admit of the sense assigned to it by Benson, 'in the manner which,' may be doubted. It is plain that Christ foretold to Peter his martyrdom, as he also did to Paul (see 2 Tim. iv. 6); but the question is, whether these words of the Apostle were founded on any fresh revelation, as to the speedy approach of that event? This the ancients say was the case. It seems highly probable that he had another revelation; but it is very possible that he had not; and the words, it is evident, may be explained upon another supposition.

15. σπουδάσω δέ.] 'I will, I say, endeavour,' namely, by committing his admonitions (such as those which follow) to writing.

16. The Apostle now proceeds to exhort them to constancy in the faith, assuring them that it does not rest (as the infidels or false teachers asserted) on mere ingenious fable, but on solid truth, even the testimony of eye-witnesses.—οὐ γὰρ σεσοφισμένοις, &c. Render: 'For we did not follow cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you,' &c. The connexion, indeed, of these words with the preceding is not very obvious, and accordingly disputed. It seems to be chiefly with ver. 14, though partly with ver. 15. As to the former, it is not merely his death that he alludes to, but his martyrdom, according to the prophecy in John xxi. 18. The Apostle, therefore, meant to advert to the reason why he is so ready to encounter death, and so anxious to establish others in the faith; namely, from his thorough confidence in the truth and certainty of that which he preached; intending thus to hint that they may feel the same confidence as reposed on the basis of undoubted verity. In ἐξακολουθεῖν we have a stronger term than ἀκολουθεῖν; of which the sense is, 'to follow any person or thing to the abandonment or exclusion of all others.' So ἐξ. μύθοις in Joa. Antt. Proem. § 4. Σεσοφισμένοις here is equiv. to πτελασμένοις in Diod. Sic. vol. ii. 134, μύθοις ἡγοῦνται πτελασμένοι τὰς περὶ τῶν Ἀσυχουίδων ἀρχαιολογίας.—Δύναμιν καὶ παρουσίας is for παρουσίας δυνατήν, with reference to the second advent of our Lord to judgment.—ἀλλ' ἐπόπται γενηθένται, 'but [we make known to you that coming in power at the second advent to judgment], after having been eye-witnesses of his majesty,—if at least ἐπόπται is to be taken, as almost all Expositors think it should, for αὐτόπται. But some deeper sense seems intended; and, considering that those who were admitted to be eye-witnesses of the more secret mysteries of the pagan religion by the last initiation, were called ἐπόπται, as distinguished from the μυσταί, whether lower or higher,—so the sense here intended seems to be, 'admitted to the most intimate view and acquaintance with his glorious majesty;' alluding to the august scene of the transfiguration, Matt. xv. 5. Nor is this metaphorical sense without example. So, in Greg. de Theolog., it is said, τοῦτο εἰδότες ἐν οἱ ἡγγυτέρω Θεοῦ, καὶ τῶν ἀντιχειρῶν αὐτοῦ κριμάτων ἐπόπται καὶ θεωροί.

17. The scope of this verse is, as Aretius points out, that of illustration; and the γὰρ is, as often, put by way of explanation. In fact, as Calv. remarks, 'the Apostle here selects one pre-eminently memorable instance, in which Christ, clothed with a celestial glory, afforded the three disciples a conspicuous proof of his divine greatness.' At λαβὼν γὰρ we may supply ἢν, equiv. to ἔλαβεν,—at least as the framer of the Peach. Syr. Version took it, and as the Commentators explain it. Since, however, this involves something precarious and unsatisfactory, it is better to refer the anomaly to the head of anacoluthon, supposing the sentence to be left incomplete in consequence of the interposed words φωνῆς ἐνεχθείσης—εὐδόκησα, just as in Joa. Antt. v. 1, 5, the same is observable in the case of the participle φέροντες, and at ch. ii. 1, προσλαβείσα.—Φωνῆς ἐνεχθείσης—εὐδόκησεν. Render, 'such a voice from the exalted glory being pronounced over them, saying,' &c.; see note at Matt. xvii. 5 seqq. Comp. Plut. Vit. J. Cæs. 1, φωνῆς ἐνεχθείσης πρὸς Καίσαρα.

k Ps. 118.
106.
John 6. 25.
2 Cor. 4. 6.
Rev. 22. 10.

18 καὶ ταύτην τὴν φωνὴν ἡμεῖς ἠκούσαμεν ἐξ οὐρανοῦ ἐνεχθείσαν, σὺν αὐτῷ ὄντες ἐν τῷ ὄρει τῇ ἁγίῳ. 19 καὶ ἔχομεν βεβαίτερον, τὸν προφητικὸν, λόγον ὃ καλῶς ποιεῖτε προσέχοντες, ὡς

19, καὶ ἔχομεν βεβαίτερον, τὸν προφητικὸν, λόγον.] In this passage, not a little disputed as to the interpretation, the difficulty chiefly turns on the expression βεβαίτερον, concerning which it has been doubted whether the comparative has here a comparative force, or whether it denotes only a high degree of the positive. Again, the comparative force being retained, the question is, whether there is a comparison intended between the sure evidence afforded by Prophecy, and that supplied by the Transfiguration; or whether we are to suppose that the Apostle speaks of the evidence of prophecy being confirmed by the miraculous event in question. Some eminent Commentators, ancient and modern (as Grot., Wolf, Benson, Dodd., Wetst., Abp. Newcome, Bp. Middl., Mackn., A. Clarke, and others) adopt the latter opinion; according to which the sense is supposed to be: 'We have the prophecies of the Old Testament concerning the Messiah more confirmed by the event of his transfiguration; for if Jesus had not been the Messiah predicted in them, such a miracle would not have been wrought to verify his pretensions.' And so Dr. Henderson (Lect. on Insp.) explains the meaning to be, that 'now that the most important of the prophecies of old had received their fulfilment in the appearance, sufferings, and glorification of the Redeemer, their certainty was confirmed, and their authority heightened in the minds of believers.' Yet notwithstanding that the sense just stated is permitted by the words, and is not at variance with the context, we may rather give the preference to the former view of the sense, which has been adopted by the generality of Expositors, including Estius, Menoch., Calv., Beza, Grot., Salmas., Whitby, Scott, and Bp. Warburton, Sherlock, and Horsley; from whose able discussions it is clear that the sense in question is more agreeable to the scope of the whole Epistle, espec. this Chapter; the object of the context being not so much the personal character of Jesus, as the truth of the Gospel in general. 'The doctrine (says Bp. Sherlock) which the Apostle all along applies himself to prove is, that we have a far more sure word of prophecy, in evidence of the future coming of Christ in power. In order to this, he had just told them that he had been himself an eye-witness of Christ's majesty or glory. To this, indeed, it might be objected, that although his testimony showed that Christ himself had been glorified, it was no proof that he would ever again return in glory and power. Accordingly, the Apostle may be supposed to reply: 'It is true that all future events can be learned only from God. All other arguments can amount to no more than probabilities and presumptions; and a great presumption it is that Christ shall come in glory, inasmuch as we have already seen him glorified; and it is a further evidence of his power to deliver his servants, since God has openly declared him to be his well-beloved Son. But to assure us that he will indeed so come, and so use his power, "we have a more sure word of prophecy:" that is, we have the very word of God, speaking by his Prophets, to assure us of the certainty of this future event.

No comparison is here intended between miracles and prophecy, as arguments for the truth of the Gospel; for St. Peter speaks only of the coming of Christ in power. And by the "more sure word of prophecy" are to be understood, not merely the prophecies of the Old Testament, but probably also of the New.' The above is strongly confirmed by the researches of Bp. Horsley, in four masterly Sermons on vv. 20, 21. He understands 'the Prophetic word' of the entire volume of the prophetic writings, whether of the Old or New Test., then extant, or hereafter to be promulgated; i. e. the prophecies of the Christian Church, together with the prophetic writings of the Old Test. Dr. Henderson, however, in an elaborate examination of this whole passage, confines it exclusively to the Old Testament prophecies, the ancient prophetic oracles of the Jews, which, having been written by men under a prophetic impulse, came to be spoken of under the general designation of προφηταίαι, prophecies.

By pointing the words as above, much, I conceive, of the difficulty which attaches to the passage will be removed; the construction, I apprehend, being, καὶ ἔχομεν βεβαίτερον λόγον, τὸν προφητικὸν (λόγον). Thus the τὸν προφ. λόγος is in position with, and exetetical of, the former. By λόγος προφ. is meant the entire Volume of the prophetic writings, whether of the Old or the New Test. To this λόγος προφ. they are enjoined to take heed, ὡς λύχνῳ φαῖνεντι ἐν ἀσχηρῷ τόπῳ, prob. meaning, 'a discovery from heaven of the schemes of Providence, which, however imperfect, is yet sufficient for the comfort and support of good men, under all the discouragements of the present life.' With the somewhat rare expression λόγος βεβ. comp. λόγος ἰχυρὸς in Thucyd. iii. 83. l. By ἀσχη. is denoted not dark, but thoroughly; for, from the idea of 'drought,' ἀσχη. necessarily follows that of droughtiness, 'equality,' carrying with it the idea of darkness and dreariness. So in a passage of Aristot., cited by Wetst., τὸ στίλβον καὶ λαμπρὸν is opposed to τῷ ἀσχηρῷ καὶ δλαμπτῷ. There may, however, be included an under sense, by way of allusion to the world, as a dark and dreary abode, full of misery.—ὃ καλῶς ποιεῖτε προσέχοντες, ὡς λόγῳ, &c., 'unto which word ye do well to give heed (Heb. iv. 12. James i. 21) as unto a lamp.' 'To give heed to prophecy' is to carefully trace its real import, and, laying to heart in full faith its substance, so to ascertain its fulfilment in due time. Of these words (somewhat obscure from the boldness of the figurative imagery employed) the meaning, Dr. Henderson thinks, is that 'this prophetic word, though, when compared to the sun, it might be said to be only a lantern, the light of which but dimly discovers the objects upon which it shines, yet it would afford certainty to all who availed themselves of its aid.' Bp. Horsley, taking a more correct and enlarged view, explains 'the word of prophecy' to mean, 'a discovery from heaven of the schemes of Providence, which, however imperfect, is yet sufficient for the comfort and support of good men, under all the discouragements of the present life; as it furnishes λύχνῳ φαίνοντι ἐν αὐχμηρῷ τόπῳ, ἕως οὗ ἡμέρα διαυγάσῃ, καὶ φωσφόρος ἀνατείλῃ ἐν ταῖς καρδίαις ὑμῶν. <sup>20</sup> <sup>1</sup> τοῦτο πρῶτον <sup>1</sup> Rom. 12. 8.

 γινώσκοντες, ὅτι πᾶσα προφητεία γραφῆς, ἰδίᾳς ἐπιλύσεως οὐ

a demonstration,—not of equal evidence, indeed, with that which the final catastrophe will afford, but a certain demonstration,—a demonstration drawn from fact and experience, rising in evidence as the ages of the world roll on; and, in every stage of it sufficient for the passing generation of mankind, “that the Most High ruleth in the kingdoms of the earth,” “that there is a God who will judge the world in righteousness.”—ἕως οὗ ἡμέρα διαυγάσῃ, καὶ φωσφόρος ἀνατ., meaning, ‘until the day or time [of clearer knowledge] arise, even the day-star [of spiritual discernment] rise in your hearts;’ in other words, ‘till a long series of events, yet hid in futurity, shall arise, to give gradual testimony; until at length what before was obscure shall become clear and intelligible, and the whole evidence be developed in one unclouded blaze of conviction.’

20. πᾶσα προφητεία γραφῆς, ἰδίᾳς ἐπιλύσεως οὐ γίνεται. Of this verse the sense has been nearly as much disputed as that of the preceding. The various interpretations (as detailed by Dr. Henderson, Lect. on Div. Insp. p. 559) are as follows: 1. No prophecy is of arbitrary interpretation. 2. No prophecy is of separate or detached interpretation. 3. All prophecy is not to be literally interpreted. 4. No prophecy could be explained by the prophets themselves. 5. No prophecy can be interpreted by the unassisted powers of the reader. 6. No prophecy is of self-solution. 7. No prophecy can be rendered incautid. 8. No prophecy is the result of private or uninspired disclosure. Of these the second interpretation (by which the words are supposed to import that the sense of no prophecy is to be determined by an abstract consideration of the passage itself, but by taking it in conjunction with other portions of Scripture relating to the subject) while it is one admitted by the words themselves, and expresses what is perfectly true in itself, and presents a rule applicable to the prophetic writings beyond all other parts of Scripture, yet it is one little agreeable to the context. The only sense permitted by the general tenour of the whole passage is, I conceive, that adopted by Knapp and Fritzsch, and further developed by Bp. Horsley (in four able Sermons on this text), who supposes the Apostle to lay down as a leading principle (well representing the import of the words τοῦτο πρῶτον γινώσκοντες), that ‘not any prophecy of Scripture is of self-interpretation,’ i. e. its own interpreter; or (as Dr. Pye Smith expresses it) ‘it was essential to the scheme of prophecy that it should not be of self-solution, meaning, that it could not be explained from itself by any scrutiny of its own terms, till light should be cast upon it by the event; for the Scripture prophecies are not detached predictions of separate independent events, but are united in system, all terminating in one great object—the promulgation of the Gospel, and the complete establishment of the Messiah’s kingdom.’ And the reason is evident from the next verse, which (as Bp. Horsley shows) means ‘that the predictions of the prophets did not, like their own private thoughts and sentiments, originate in their own minds. The prophets, in the exercise of their office, were necessary agents, acting under the irresistible impulse of the omniscient Spirit, who made the faculties and the organs of those holy men his own instruments for conveying to mankind some portion of the treasures of his own knowledge. Futurity seems to have been delineated in some sort of emblematical picture presented by the Spirit of God to the prophet’s mind, which, preternaturally filled and heated with this scenery, in describing the images obtruded on the fantasy, gave pathetic utterance to wisdom not its own.’ In this view Dr. Peile entirely coincides; and, as an illustration of our text, and forming a summary of the train of thought which dictated and pervades our Apostle’s last solemn exhortation, he refers to the words of Hosea vi. 1–3, and then remarks thereon, ‘Have we not here a Scripture prophecy, which, sent forth as a lantern, to guide and shed a gleam of comfort on the desolation of God’s ancient people, was yet not such as to reveal its depth of spiritual meaning, until the Day of Christ had dawned upon the world, and that Light that should lighten the Gentiles also had so arisen in our hearts by faith, that now we see what Hosea and the righteous men of his day saw not:—the ulterior reference which this “prophetic utterance” had to those times of world-wide reconstitution of man’s lost estate (χρόνος ἀποκαταστάσεως πάντων: Acts iii. 21), in which while it is manifestly in the way to be, we cannot yet say it is fulfilled. To take heed then unto the word wherein He hath spoken to them, through whom alone cometh the moral and spiritual light of every man—this has been the wisdom and well-doing of God’s Israel from the beginning. And be his light, be his day of acceptance of grace, what it may, still must the Israelite indeed be forward to believe that “then shall he know, if he follow on to know the Lord.”’ The meaning of the verse may be best thus expressed freely, but faithfully, thus: ‘Having this (great Truth) fully known to us,—that no Scripture prophecy is (a matter) of private interpretation,’ or, as Dr. Peile explains, ‘hath the property of self-interpretation.’ That the true sense of ἐπιλ. is, not what Dr. Henderson (on Inspir.) supposes, information, but interpretation, is evident from the context; and that the word admits of this sense I have already shown by several exx. of the verb ἐπιλύω; to which I now add exx. of the verbal noun in Symm. Version of Hos. iii. 4, and Heliod. i. 19, ὀνειράτων ἐπιλ., and iv. 9, χρησθέντων ἐπιλ. I find this view of ἐπιλυσις, and that above laid down of the whole verse, confirmed by the suffrage of Mr. Green, Gr. N. T. Dial., p. 268, who expresses the general sense of vv. 20, 21, thus: ‘Since prophecy did not arise from man’s devising, but by the dictation of the Holy Spirit, it is not one of those kinds of writing which contain every necessary element of the interpretation of their own matter, but requires the aid of something extraneous, being not intelligible even to those who gave utterance to it.’—To advert to a matter of criticism and interpretation. At v. 21 Scholz and Lachm. cancel the οὐ before ἀγιοι (which I had before placed within brackets), and with some α 2 Sam. 22. γίνεταί. 21 οὐ γὰρ θελήματι ἀνθρώπου ἠνέχθη ποτὲ τροφή 1 Tim. 5. 10. τεῖα, ἀλλ' ὑπὸ Πνεύματος ἁγίου φερόμενοι ἐλάλησαν [οἱ] ἄγιοι 1 Pet. 1. 11. Θεοῦ ἄνθρωποι.

α Deut. 18. 1.
 Matt. 24. 11.
 Acts 26. 20.
 1 Cor. 11. 10.
 1 Tim. 4. 1.
 2 Tim. 3. 1, 5.
 Jude 4, 15.
 II. 1<sup>a</sup> Ἐγένοντο δὲ καὶ ψευδοπροφῆται ἐν τῷ λαῷ, ὡς καὶ ἐν ὑμῖν ἔσονται ψευδοδιδάσκαλοι, οἵτινες παρεισάξουσιν αἵρέσεις ἀπώλειαι, καὶ τὸν ἀγοράσαντα αὐτοὺς δεσπότην ἀρνού-μενοι, ἐπάγοντες ἑαυτοῖς ταχυνὴν ἀπώλειαν <sup>2</sup> (καὶ πολλοὶ ἐξ-reason, as will appear from what I have said in note on 1 Tim. vi. 11, where I have fully treated on this important expression, ἄγιοι τοῦ Θεοῦ, or Θεοῦ. To the strong authority for its removal supplied by A. C. G. and above 20 cursives, I add 2 Lamb. and 7 Mus. copies. Tisch. indeed, has edited ἀπὸ Θεοῦ ἄνθρωποι from MS. B and 4 cursives; to which I add Lamb. 1182, very insufficient authority; and opposed by internal evidence; it being a mere critical alteration to get rid of tautology, though the expression no where occurs in the N. Test. or the Sept. As to the term φερόμενοι, this use of φέρωμαι of 'being Divinely inspired' is very rare; the only ex. which I can adduce is Job xvii. 1, Sept., πνεύματι φερόμενος, with which comp. Rev. xvii. 3, and xxi. 10, add Joe. Bell. vi. 5, 2, ὅταν ἡμεῖς τὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ λάβῃ πνεῦμα, and espec. Jos. Ant. iv. 6, 5, ὅταν ἡμεῖς Θεοῦ λάβῃ πνεῦμα, φωνᾷ δὲ βούλεται καὶ λόγους, οὐδὲν ἡμῶν εἰδότες, ἀφίησιν, which passage has a remarkable bearing on what is here said as to the origin and nature of prophecy.

II. From the mention of true and Divinely inspired prophets, the Apostle takes occasion to advert to false prophets; and, intimating that there had been such among the Jews, forewarns his readers that there will be at least false teachers among Christians; men of corrupt lives, promulgating false doctrines to support evil living, and ingratiating themselves with the people, in order to make a greater gain by preaching the Gospel. The end of those men he contrasts with that of the pious and virtuous,—and after showing that, as in the case of the wicked before the Flood, destruction would as surely befall the one, as preservation be extended to the other; he, in order the more effectually and forcibly to forewarn them of the persons in question, enters, as it were, more Prophetica, into a beautifully graphic description of the false teachers, and thus proclaims the hopeless condition of those who should be deluded by them. There is something very peculiar in the character and style of this Chapter, as compared with those of the preceding and following Chapters; on which discrepancy, and its probable cause, Dr. Peile makes the following able remarks: 'Like the stern and appalling denunciation of his country's Rulers, into which St. James is suddenly transported in ch. v. 1—6, it is plainly to be distinguished from its context by "something of prophetic strain;" and, together with the kindred chapter written by St. Jude, and parts of the second and fourth chapters of St. John's First Epistle, may be traced to that very remarkable Discourse which our Lord held with his "Apostles of the Circumcision," as detailed in Matt. xxiv. 1—25. Mark xiii. 1—23, and as connected with which comp. the promise given in John xiv. 25, 26.'

1. Ἐγένοντο δὲ — ἀπώλειαν] The sense is, 'There were, however, also false prophets among the [Israelitish] people; and thus, too, will there be among you false teachers, who shall introduce pernicious heresies, even denying the Lord that purchased them [with his own blood]; bringing thereby on themselves speedy destruction.' On the persons here meant by these false teachers, much difference of opinion exists. Some suppose them to have been the Gnostics, or Nicolaïans; others, Judaizers, holding opinions similar to those of the Montanists of the second and third centuries. I am myself at present inclined to agree with Dr. Peile, in holding, with Calv., 'non unum notari a Petro tempus; quam dicit erant falsi doctores, sed omnes potius etates comprehendi: Christianos enim cum veteri Populo confert. Hanc igitur doctrinam ad tempus nostrum accommodare docet, ne hæc tentatio nos frangat, quum insurgere videmus falsos doctores, ut Dei veritatem oppugnent. Ceterum illos nos admonet Spiritus Dei ad intenti animus ad cavendum; atque huc spectat tota descriptio quam mox subjiciet.'—By the very strong expression αἵρέσεις ἀπώλειαι is meant such dogmas as produce or occasion destruction to those who receive them. The next words are explanatory of the nature of the ruinous heresies in question; and by those which follow it is suggested that the persons originating them bring upon themselves the very destruction which they occasion to others, and that a swift destruction. Comp. Lysias c. Erat. 96, ταχύνει παρ' αὐτοῦ τὴν τιμωρίαν κομίσθαι. See note on Matt. xxiv. 6. Dr. Peile is of opinion, with Calv., 'that these heresies are less doctrinal, than sectarian and schismatical;' and Calv. would suggest sectarianism as an apt translation of αἵρεσις, in the abstract, on which Dr. Peile has some instructive remarks. By the term πωσιδᾶς is denoted the surreptitious craft with which the doctrines and practices in question were introduced. A more definite charge is couched in the next words, καὶ τὸν ἀγοράσαντα ἀρνούμενοι, of which the sense depends upon the reference supposed in δεσπότης, whether to God or to Christ. The latter seems the more correct view; for, as to the passages of the Old Test. cited in proof of the former interpretation, they are not quite to the point, and the latter is almost demanded by ἀγοράσαντα. Thus δεσπ. will, as often, be for Κύριον. We are not, however, to understand that they denied Jesus to be the Messiah; for otherwise they could not have been Christians at all. We may suppose the meaning to be, that 'they denied him who purchased them (i.e. their Redeemer) to be their Lord.' ακολουθήσουσιν αὐτῶν ταῖς *ἀσελγείαις, δι' οὗς ἡ ὁδὸς τῆς ἀληθείας βλασφημηθήσεται.)<sup>3 b</sup> καὶ ἐν πλεονεξίᾳ πλαστοῖς λόγοις ὑμᾶς ἐμπορεύονται· οὗς τὸ κρίμα ἐκπαλαί οὐκ ἀργεῖ, καὶ ἡ ἀπώλεια αὐτῶν οὐ νυστάζει. * Εἰ γὰρ ὁ Θεὸς ἀγγέλων ἁμαρ-τησάντων οὐκ ἐφέλσατο, ἀλλὰ σειραῖς ζόφου, ταρταρώσας, παρὁ Deut. 32.

 1 Tim. 6. 2.
 Tit. 1. 11.
 Jude 4.
 Job 4. 18.
 Luke 8. 31.
 John 8. 44.
 1 John 8. 2.
 Jude 6.
 Rev. 20. 2.

2. καὶ π. ἱξακολ.—τ. ἀσελγείαις] To fix the interpretation, the reading must first be ascertained. Now, for the t. rec. ἀσελγείαις, most of the MSS. have ἀσελγ. (which I find in almost all the Lamb. and Mus. copies), adopted by all the Critical Editors, from Bengel to Tisch., whom I have followed, since it is supported by both external and internal evidence. Mackn., indeed, defends the t. rec.; but on grounds very insecure. The word was not a well-known one, at least in its present sense, to the Transcribers, nor even to the Revisers; who, stumbling at the term, brought in ἀπελγείας, as furnishing a sense which they could understand. The sense intended, as appears from the context, is not so much 'disolute practices' as licentious ways of handling the doctrines of the Gospel, so as to occasion the simple truth as it is in Jesus, —the pure Gospel,—to be disparaged as superstitious and fanatical, or, at any rate, not sufficiently intellectual, and enlightened, to suit the votaries of a Gospel of men, not of God and Christ. That ἀσελγ. is quite susceptible of this sense will appear from what I have said in my Lex. in v. I find this view of the sense confirmed by Est., who explains ἀσελγ. of 'impure doctrines'; though he thinks the sense perditiones, ἀπελγείας, is meant to be conjoined, as pointing at the destruction into which the followers of false doctrine will be hurried, equally with the teachers and disseminators thereof, referring to 2 Tim. iii. 13. But that seems a very erroneous view, which the learned Expositor would not have fallen into, had he understood the true force of ἀσελγ. The foregoing interpretation is exceedingly confirmed by a quite parallel passage of St. Jude (formed on that of St. Peter), v. 4, τὴν τοῦ Θεοῦ χάριν μετατίθεται εἰς ἀσελγείαν, where the preceding and following context requires the term ἀσελγ. to be taken of doctrine especially. As exx. of a similar use of ἱξακολουθ. comp. Isa. lvi. 11, πάντες ταῖς ὁδοῖς αὐτῶν ἐξηκολούθησαν, and espec. Test. xii. P. p. 628, ἐξακολουθήσουσι τοῖς ποιητοῖς διαβουλοῖς, and further Amos ii. 4, οἱς (ε. κατὰ τοὺς) ἐξηκολούθησαν οἱ πατέρες αὐτῶν, meaning, τὰ ματαία of idolatry and practical infidelity. The expression ὁδὸς τ. ἀλθθ., as said of the true Gospel, is illustrated by reference to Lucian, Hermot. 46, μίαν ἵλτοτο ἐξ ἀπασῶν ὁδῶν, ἀληθῆ τε δοκιμάσας καὶ πειρὰς παθόν, ἀπὸ μόνῃ ἀγνὶ εὐθὺ τῇ εὐδομῳνίᾳ. But there is no allusion either here, or at Acts ix. 2, to a sect in Philosophy; though some, it seems, in ancient, as well as modern times, thought so. And to that I ascribe the strange reading in the Alex. MS., also in No. 9, and in the Æthiop. and Sahid. Versions,—δόξα, meaning, 'a tenet of Philosophy,' or 'a body of such, forming a system.'

3. καὶ ἐν πλεονεξίᾳ—ἐμπορεύονται] meaning, 'And through covetousness, they will make a mere gain of you (i. e. of teaching you) by words fashioned, made up to deceive.' Comp.

Isa. p. 70, λόγοις πτελασμένοις ἀξιώσει πιστεύειν ὑμᾶς: Jos. Bell. iv. 4, 3, ἐκ τῶν ἐπιπλαστών λόγων: Antt. iv. 6, 1, ἡγχεῖται ἡγῶν τοῖς λόγοις, where there exists an acknowledged corruption, the best mode of removing which is to suppose that before τοῖς four letters, namely πλσ., were eaten away by a worm, or otherwise effaced in some very ancient archetype. Now ἡγχεῖται πλσστοῖς supplies the very sense wanted, by πλσστοῖς being denoted what is fashioned, and made up for the nonce; a metaphor taken from dishonest traders who put off their bad wares, so making them up for sale as to appear good articles; comp. Goldsm., 'with doctrines fashioned to the varying hour.' With this use of ἡγχεῖται. comp. that in the phrase ἐμπορεύεσθαι φιλοσοφίαν in Philo, p. 943, and Themist. p. 298, 'to make gain of Philosophy.' Here there is, by an anomaly, a use of the person for the thing, as in Ezek. xxvi. 21, καμήλου καὶ κριοῦ ἐν οἷς ἐμπορεύονται σι, and Heliod. Æth. vi. 7, τὸν Κνήμονα ἐμπορεύεται ποικίλως ἱφιλκόμενον, where, although the accus. is referred by Loesn. solely to ἱφιλ., it seems meant as much for ἡγχεῖται. The sense is, that Nausicles is striving by every sort of attraction and inveiglement to make a gain of him, i. e. to gain him as a suitor for his daughter, and obtain him as a future son-in-law. At the words τὸ κρίμα—οὐκ ἀργεῖ,—νυστάζει, we have a singular mode of expression as respects the two verbs ἀργεῖ and νυστάζει, whereby predicates are ascribed to the things κρίμα and ἀπάλ., which properly belong to the persons exercising judgment and inflicting destruction. Certainly the phraseology is such as would be rather suitable to poetry, and that lyric, whereby what is properly applicable only to persons is ascribed to things; though the idiom sometimes occurs in the Class. prose writers; e. gr. Ælian ap. Suidam, p. 790, οὐ μὴν ἐκάθυεν ἡ τοῦ Θεοῦ πρόνοια. And so our great Poet has: 'Why sleeps the thunder in the upper sky?'

4—9. Of these verses the scope is to exemplify the method of God's judgment in such cases, and to verify what was before said, that God visits vice with punishment, and virtue with rewards.

4. εἰ γὰρ ὁ Θεὸς ἀγγέλων ἁμαρτησάντων, &c.] In ἁμαρτησάντων there is reference to the rebellion of the fallen angels. In the words σειραῖς ζόφου, ταρταρώσας (one of almost Æschylean boldness) the term ταρταρώσας is supposed to be derived from the Heathen, and σειραῖς ζόφου from the Jewish forms of speaking on this subject; Tartarus being a part of Hades, in which criminals were represented as confined till the day of judgment. Be that as it may, the fallen angels here are not spoken of as being in actual torments, but only adjudged to them, and meanwhile committed to the security of chains of darkness; i. e. to places where utter darkness holds them as it were enchained. So Wied. xvii.

d Gen. 7. 21.
1 Pet. 3. 10, 20.
Jude 14, 15.

e Gen. 19. 24.
Num. 36. 10.
Deut. 29. 23.
Isa. 13. 19.
Jer. 50. 40.
Ezek. 16. 40.
Hos. 11. 5.
Amos 4. 11.
Jude 7.
f Gen. 19.
7, 8, 16.
g Ps. 119.
159.
h Ezek. 9. 4.
i Ps. 34. 17, 19.
1 Cor. 10. 13.
j Jude 4, 7, 8, 10, 12.

ἔδωκεν εἰς κρίσιν * τηρουμένους<sup>5 d</sup> καὶ ἀρχαίου κόσμου οὐκ ἐφείσατο, ἀλλ' ὄγδοον Νῶε δικαιοσύνης κήρυκα ἐφύλαξε, κατακλυσμὸν κόσμῳ ἀσεβῶν ἐπάξας<sup>6 *</sup> καὶ πόλεις Σοδόμων καὶ Γομόρρας τεφρώσας καταστροφῇ κατέκρινεν, ὑπόδειγμα μελλόντων ἀσεβεῖν θεεικώς<sup>7 i</sup> καὶ δίκαιον Δὼτ, καταπονόμενον ὑπὸ τῆς τῶν ἀθέσμων ἐν ἀσελγείᾳ ἀναστροφῆς, ἐρρύσατο—8 * βλέμματι γὰρ καὶ ἀκοῇ ὁ δίκαιος, ἐγκατοικῶν ἐν αὐτοῖς, ἡμέραν ἐξ ἡμέρας ψυχὴν δικαίαν ἀνόμοις ἔργοις ἐβασάνιζεν<sup>9 h</sup> οἷδε Κύριος εὐσεβεῖς ἐκ πειρασμοῦ ῥύεσθαι, ἀδίκους δὲ εἰς ἡμέραν κρίσεως κολαζομένους τηρεῖν<sup>10 i</sup> μάλιστα δὲ τοὺς ὀπίσω σαρκὸς ἐν ἐπιθυμίᾳ μiasμοῦ πορευομένους, καὶ κυριότητος καταφρονούντας (ποληται, αὐθάδεις, δόξας οὐ τρέμουσι βλασφημοῦντες !)

17, of the wicked, ἀλύσαι σκότους ἰδίθησαν. Hdol. v. 77, where, in an Athenian inscription in the Acropolis, it is said of captives held in fetters, Δισμῶ ἐν ἀχλύσιντι σιδιρίῳ ὄβρεσαν ὕβριν. Here the persons are thrust down 'to chains of darkness, and the undying worm,' Milt. Par. L. vi. 739.

5. ὄγδοον Νῶε] meaning, by an idiom frequent in the best writers, 'Noah with seven others.'—Κήρυκα δικαιοσύνης, meaning, 'a herald to proclaim to the world tidings of the righteousness that is by faith,' and of which it is said, Heb. xi. 7, that he was himself an heir.—'Ἐφύλαξε, &c.' So in Ecclus. xlv. 17, he is represented as κατέλειμμα τῇ γῇ.

6. καταστροφῇ κατέκρινεν] i. e. 'executed punishment upon them by utter destruction.' See note on Rom. viii. 3.—'ὑπόδειγμα—ταπεικώς,' having made them a type and example of the future punishment of the wicked.' See Ecclus. xlv. 16.

7. καταπονόμενον—ἀναστροφῆς] 'wearied out (comp. Ps. xciv. 10, Sept.) by the profligate behaviour of men who trampled on all laws.'

8. βλέμματι γὰρ καὶ ἀκοῇ] These words denote the mode in which he was daily annoyed with witnessing their wicked conduct. Render, 'at sight and report [of their dissolute course of life],' just before spoken of. There is something γραφικόν in the mode of expression βλ. καὶ ἀκ.: and in the words καταπονόμενον ὑπὸ τῆς τῶν ἀθέσμων ἐν ἀσελγείᾳ ἀναστροφῆς, there seems to be especial reference to the abominable conduct spoken of in Gen. xix. 4—10.—ψυχὴν δικαίαν—ἐβασάνιζεν. A remarkable permutation of construction, for ἐβασάνιζτο [κατὰ] ψυχὴν δικαίαν ἀνομ. ἔργοις, scil. αὐτῶν. The expression well corresponds to καταπονόμενον just before, and was probably formed on 2 Mac. viii. 2. τὸν ὑπὸ πάντων καταπονόμενον. The Apostle may also be supposed to have had in mind Isa. xliii. 2, espec. in the Versions of Aquila, Symm., and Theodot.

9. οἷδε Κύριος εὐσεβεῖς—τηρεῖν] 'In the two members, of which this sentence is composed, we have (as Calvin observes) a twofold answer returned, to quell the uneasy misgivings of the oppressed righteous, when they see the ungodly in such prosperity, 'flourishing like a green bay-tree,' while themselves seem abandoned to hopeless adversity. To which purpose is a passage of Ps.

lxxiii., where the same process of stumbling is described, occasioned by beholding the prosperity of the wicked and the distressful state of the righteous; where the suggestions of frail nature are finely depicted, and then are introduced, in opposition thereto, the considerations of Divine grace, by a reference, 1. to the examples of the saints; 2. to the difficulty of judging concerning God's dispensations; and, 3. (as here) to the final issue of things at the day of judgment. Here, then, the Apostle means to say, that 'if God punished formerly the wicked, and preserved the good, he surely, in the exercise of his own wise providence, will καίτοις ἡμῶν, in all future times, to punish the one and preserve the other, either by relieving them out of trial (for such is the import of πειρασμοῦ), or preserving them under it. Thus Lot's trial was, that 'his righteous soul was vexed with witnessing the deeds of the ungodly around him;' and from that trial he was delivered by their being removed out of the way in the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, just as the righteous will, at the day of judgment, be delivered from this, as well as all other trials and tribulations (see Rev. xxi. 4), by the evil being for ever separated from the good. See Matt. xiii. 49. At εἰς ἡμέραν κρίσεως κολαζομένους τηρ., comp. 4 Mac. xii. 12 and Jude 7; the former of which passages was prob. in Peter's mind. On the force of πειρασμοῦ see note on 2 Cor. xii. 17.

10. Here what has been before said is now more directly applied to the persons in question, who are most graphically characterized.—τοὺς ὀπίσω σαρκὸς—πορευομένους. Render, 'who live conformably to the flesh, in the lust of pollution,' i. e. in carnal and polluting practices. Then is represented their insubordination and rebellion against any such lawful authority as might check their vicious practices; and while (as at ver. 13) setting forth the greatness of their guilt, the Apostle breaks out into a parenthetical exclamation at their wickedness—'Audacious and self-willed are they! they scruple not to speak evil even of rulers in high stations.' Αὐθάδεις means lit. self-pleasers (for αὐτοαδίας), 'self-willed persons,' to whom nothing approves itself but their own conceits, and who will have their own way in every thing, and say and do what they please: of which character a spirited sketch is given by Theophrast., Char. Eth. xv.

11 ἡ ὅπου ἄγγελοι, ἰσχύϊ καὶ δυνάμει μέζοντες ὄντες, οὐ φέρουσι Jude 9.
κατ' αὐτῶν παρὰ Κυρίῳ βλάσφημον κρίσιν. 19<sup>1</sup> Οὗτοι δέ, (ὡς <sup>1</sup> Jer. 12. 2. <sup>2</sup> Jude 10. ἄλογα ζῶα, φυσικὰ, γεγενημένα εἰς ἄλωσιν καὶ φθοράν,) ἐν οἷς ἄγνοοῦσι βλασφημοῦντες, ἐν τῇ φθορᾷ αὐτῶν † καταφθαρήσκονται, 13<sup>m</sup> κομιούμενοι μισθὸν ἀδικίας· ἡδονὴν ἡγοούμενοι τὴν <sup>m</sup> Jude 12.
ἐν ἡμέρᾳ τρυφῆν, (σπίλοι καὶ μῶμοι!) ἐντρυφῶντες ἐν ταῖς † ἀπάταις αὐτῶν, συνευωχούμενοι ὑμῖν 14 ὀφθαλμοὺς ἔχοντες μεστοὺς μοιχαλίδος καὶ ἀκαταπαύστους ἁμαρτίας δαλεάζοντες ψυχὰς ἀστηρίκτους, καρδίαν γεγυμνασμένην * πλεονεξίας ἔχον-

11. οὐ φέρουσι κατ' αὐτῶν, &c.] The reference in κατ' αὐτῶν is disputed. Some suppose it to be to δέξας just before; others, to τολμηταί, αὐθάδεις. It is, however, better, with Benson and Abp. Newcome, to refer it to ἀγγέλων ἀμαρτ. at ver. 4; unless we read καθ' αὐτῶν (from some MSS. and the Vulgate Version), meaning those of their own body, i.e. the bad angels; which seems placed beyond doubt by the parallel passage of Jude 9. The argument is, that 'the persons in question calumniate those of high reputation and dignity, their brethren, while the angels, exalted as they are above them in power, do not speak calumniously, or with viluperation, of their fellow angels,' even though the very reverse of εὐδοξοῖ.

12-16. Here the change is brought home, and the persons in question described, under various characters; 1. as, like the animals, devoid of reason, and guided solely by their animal senses and instincts (as if created only to be taken and destroyed), and thereby speaking evil of things which they do not understand, viz. the laws and measures of their rulers. 'These (it is added) shall utterly and justly perish by their own corrupt practices,' or, as the parallel passage of Jude 10 (on which see note) seems to call for, 'by the corruption, the abuse, of the things, or doctrines, which they, through ignorance, calumniate.' However, the exact sense depends on the reading, which is disputed, inasmuch as for καταφθαρ. MSS. A, B, C<sup>1</sup>, and 4 cursives, with some MSS. of the Vulg., and also some later Versions, have καὶ φθαρ., which is prob., though not certainly, the true reading, since internal evidence is in its favour, and καὶ is oft. confounded with κατὰ in composition by the scribes. If καὶ φθαρ. be the true reading, the sense is, that 'through their corruption (of the doctrines) will they (the corrupters) themselves perish.'

12. φυσικὰ is put, by an idiom of ordinary Greek, for ψυχικά (used in the parallel passage of Jude 19); denoting 'those who are governed by the animal passions of human nature, and consequently are not under the guidance of the spirit or soul.' For γεγενημένα Lachm. and Tisch. edit γεγεν., from several MSS.; a manifest alteration proceeding from certain Critics, who did not perceive that the sense, quite satisfactory, of γεγενημένα is 'brought into being.'

13, 14. Here are introduced more special charges,—those of gross sensuality, nay, profligacy.

13. ἡδονὴν ἡγοούμενοι] Here ἡδονὴν is emphatic, the full sense being, 'regarding this rather as a matter of gratification, and priding themselves in their shame,'—for sensual gratification in the day-time was, in ancient times, ever regarded as a matter of utter silliness; see 1 Thess. v. 7, and note; an allusion to which occurs in Eurip. Melag. frag. 22, τὸ φῶς δ' ἀνάγκη προστίθῃσι σωφρονεῖν.—'Εντρυφῶντες ἐν ταῖς ἀπάταις, &c. These words seem intended to further unfold the idea at ἡδονὴν—τρυφήν preceding, and the full sense may be as follows: 'who, by means of their deccita, contrive to live luxuriously; constant attendants at your feasts.' This mode of taking the passage yields an excellent sense, and involves no harshness; for ἐν may very well be taken for by, and ἐντρυφῶντες for ἐν τρυφῇ διάγοντες; since of ἐντρυφῆς in the sense luxuriari exx. are not rare.—To advert to a matter of various reading. For ἀπάταις, the reading of only two MSS. and some Versions, ἀγάταις was preferred by Erasmus and Grot., and has been received into the text by Lachm. and Tisch. (1st edit.), but not on good grounds, since internal evidence is as much against it as external authority. It might possibly arise from an error on the part of the scribes; but it may most probably be ascribed to alteration by Critics, suggested by the words of Jude, ver. 12, οὗτοί εἰσι ἐν ταῖς ἀγάταις ὑμῶν σπιλάδες, proceeding from sciolists who were at a loss to see how ἀπάταις could comport with ἐντρυφ. Yet the two passages are any thing but parallel. The expressions employed in the above were indeed used with a view to the present of St. Peter, though only so far employed as that the idea implied in σπιλοὶ and μῶμοι, ἐντρυφῶντες and συνευωχούμενοι here is there more fully evolved. Tisch. has in his 2nd ed. prudently recalled ἀπάταις.

14. ὀφθ. μιστ. μοιχ.] i.e. 'by their looks they show the lasciviousness of their hearts.' Comp. Eurip. Hippol. 525, 'Ἐρως, ἔρως δ' κατ' ὀφθαλμῶν Στάζειν πόθον. The eyes are here spoken of as the especial inlets and outlets of adulterous passion; and, as giving entrance to sin, they are, in the words following ἀκαταπαύστους ἁμαρτίας, by a peculiar mode of expression, whereby that is attributed to things which properly belongs to persons, represented as committing that to which they thus give entrance. However, for ἀκαταπαύστους, many MSS. and some Versions have ἀκαταπαύστου, and two MSS. have ἀκαταπάστου, which has been edited by Lachm. But neither is admissible, and the latter is wholly undeserving of attention, as being a word no where found, and which, if it ever existed, would yield a sense here wholly unsuitable,—namely, unembroidered. For πλεονεξίας, almost all the MSS., at least of any note (I add most of the Lamb. and all the Mus. copies), have πλεονεξίας, which has

h Num. 22.
7, 31.
Jude 11.

o Jude 13.
13

p Acts 2. 40.
Jude 16.
ch. 1. 4.

τες, κατάρας τέκνα! <sup>15</sup> Καταλιπόντες [τὴν] εὐθείαν ὁδόν, ἐπλανήθησαν, ἐξακολουθήσαντες τῇ ὁδῷ τοῦ Βαλαὰμ τοῦ Βοσὸρ, ὃς μισθὸν ἀδικίας ἠγάπησεν, <sup>16</sup> ἔλεγξιν δὲ ἔσχεν ἰδίας παρανομίας· ὑποζύγιον ἄφωνον ἐν ἀνθρώπου φωνῇ φθεγξάμενον ἐκώλυσε τὴν τοῦ προφήτου παραφρονίαν. <sup>17</sup> Οὗτοί εἰσι πτηγαὶ ἄνδρες, † νεφέλαι ὑπὸ λαίλαπος ἐλαννόμεναι, οἷς ὁ ζόφος τοῦ σκότους εἰς αἶωνα τετήρηται. <sup>18</sup> Ὑπέρρογκα γὰρ ματαιότητος φθεγγόμενοι δελεάζουσιν ἐν ἐπιθυμίαις σαρκὸς, ἀσελγείαις, τοῖς been received by Griesb., Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch. I have now admitted it, since it has internal evidence, no less than external authority, in its favour, being the mere difficult reading, though one quite correct in phraseology, since this construction of the genit. with participles and adjectives derived from verbs is found both in the best Class. writers and in the New Test., e. g. John vi. 45, διδάκτοι Θεοῦ. 1 Cor. ii. 13, ἐν διδακτοῖς Πνεύματος λόγους.

15. καταλιπόντες—ἐπλανήθησαν] meaning, that 'they have utterly forsaken "the right way" of scriptural truth and holy obedience, and quite gone astray; not merely from an erroneous judgment, but from the corruption of their hearts.' The force of the comparison, ἐξακολ., &c., rests on this, that 'as Balaam, for the gratification of his own inveterate covetousness, counselled the Moabites to entice the Israelites into illicit connexion with their women, and thus lead them into idolatry and draw on them the heavy punishment of God; so these false teachers, by giving Christians a licence to commit immorality, in like manner called forth the vengeance of God.'—μισθὸν ἀδικίας ἠγ. Of the moral character of Balaam we know nothing; but it is plainly implied in the Old Test. history, and confirmed by Philo, Josephus, and all the Jewish Interpreters, that covetousness tempted him to commit so base a violation of his duty as a Prophet;—just as in the case of these false teachers, avarice and sensuality tempted them to falsify the Gospel, that they might make it the more productive of gain, to expend on their own lusts. There is great force in the term ἠγάπησαν, with which I would comp. Soph. Antig. 1048 (of Tiresias), τῷ ἀδικίῳ φίλῳ.—Καταλιπόντες τὴν εὐθείαν ὁδόν. The τὴν is on strong authority (to which I add all the Lamb. and several Mus. copies) cancelled by Griesb., Matth., Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch.

16. ἔλεγξιν δὲ ἔσχεν ἰδίας παρανομ., &c.] Render: 'But he received reproof for his transgression: a dumb beast, speaking with man's voice, repressed the Prophet's madness.'

17. οὗτοί εἰσι—ἀνδρες.] A most lively comparison, to designate the persons in question as promising much, but constantly disappointing the expectations of those who seek the refreshment of Gospel truth;—specious, but deceiving, as wells destitute of water, and clouds that bring no rain; than which no disappointment can, in Eastern countries, be greater, and of which the former sometimes not merely disappoint, but lure travellers to destruction. By the highly figurative expression (formed on the image of Tartarus, adverted to supra v. 4) is designated a place and state of woe the most dismal, with which compare Matt. viii. 12. xlii. 13. xxv. 30.—νεφέλαι. Griesb., Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch. read ὀμίχλαι, from MSS. A, B, C, and many cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1184), and the Vulg., and with a certain support from internal evidence, as existing in the circumstance that νεφ. has every appearance of being a gloss or easier reading.

18. ὑπέρρογκα—φθεγγ., &c.] We have here the same sentiment as at ver. 17; the meaning being, that these persons were not only wicked themselves, but the cause of wickedness in others. At ὑπέρρογκα supply ῥήματα, 'swelling words of empty boasting.' So Aristoph. Ran. 971, speaks of certain diction as οἰδοῦσαν ὑπὲρ κομπασμάτων καὶ ῥημάτων ἱταχθῶν. Thus in ματαιότη. there is an allusion to that folly (κατ' ἔξοχον), boasting. See 2 Cor. xii. 11.—τοὺς ὄντως ἀποφυγόντας, &c., 'those who had really disengaged themselves from,' &c. Such is the sense, if the t. rec. be genuine. But there is a variety of reading. Some of the most ancient MSS., with nearly all the ancient Versions, and some Greek and Latin Fathers, have ὀλίγως, others ὀλίγον, which latter has been adopted by almost all the recent Editors, and with reason. No instance have I noted of ὄντως (equiv. to ἀληθῶς) joined with any participle except ὡς, ὅσως, ὅν. Moreover, the sense assigned to ὄντως is harsh and jejune, and such as cannot be elicited from the words without considerable violence. Estius, after an able discussion of the reading and construction, satisfactorily shows that the words τοὺς ἀναστρέφ. must be governed of the participle preceding, τοὺς ἀποφυγόντας; and he lays down the full sense of this obscurely worded passage thus: 'Verbis tamantibus, id est, grandibus, superbis ac fastu plenis, vanissimis tamen, inescant seductores illi per concupiscentias carnis ad lasciviam prone, cui permittunt, quidquid libet eos; qui paululum, id est, imperfecte, nec satis firma fide (vel potius paululum, id est, non multo antea, sed nuper admodum conversi ad Christum) effigurant ac recesserunt ab eis, qui in errore conversantur, scilicet infidelitatis et vitæ carnalis; cujusmodi conversatio erat in ethnicismo ac Judaismo.' The above presents a fair representation of the sense; but the learned Commentator, while he evidently rejects the reading ὄντως, does not make out a good case for either of the two other readings. There is something most feeble in thus understanding paululum to denote imperfectly; far preferable is the sense non multo antea. But that is a sense not to be elicited from paululum any more than from ὀλίγως, which word is indeed so rare, that only three examples of it have been adduced even in Steph. Thes. (ed. Paris), and those only

† ὄντως ἀποφυγόντας τοὺς ἐν πλάνῃ ἀναστρεφόμενους· <sup>19</sup> ἔλευ- <sup>q John 8. 24.</sup> θερῖαν αὐτοῖς ἐπαγγελλλόμενοι, αὐτοὶ δοῦλοι ὑπάρχοντες τῆς <sup>Bom. 4. 10.</sup> φθορᾶς ᾧ γάρ τις ἡττηται, τούτῳ καὶ δεδούλωται. <sup>Gal. 3. 12.</sup> <sup>1 Pet. 2. 16.</sup> <sup>Jude 4.</sup> <sup>1 Matt. 12.</sup> ἀποφυγόντες τὰ μιάσματα τοῦ κόσμου ἐν ἐπινώσει τοῦ Κυρίου <sup>45. 50.</sup> καὶ Σωτῆρος Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, τοὺτοις δὲ πάλιν ἐμπλακέντες <sup>Heb. 6. 4.</sup> ἡττώνται, γέγονεν αὐτοῖς τὰ ὄσχατα χείρονα τῶν πρώτων. <sup>20</sup> <sup>21</sup> <sup>22</sup> <sup>23</sup> <sup>24</sup> <sup>25</sup> <sup>26</sup> <sup>27</sup> <sup>28</sup> <sup>29</sup> <sup>30</sup> <sup>31</sup> <sup>32</sup> <sup>33</sup> <sup>34</sup> <sup>35</sup> <sup>36</sup> <sup>37</sup> <sup>38</sup> <sup>39</sup> <sup>40</sup> <sup>41</sup> <sup>42</sup> <sup>43</sup> <sup>44</sup> <sup>45</sup> <sup>46</sup> <sup>47</sup> <sup>48</sup> <sup>49</sup> <sup>50</sup> <sup>51</sup> <sup>52</sup> <sup>53</sup> <sup>54</sup> <sup>55</sup> <sup>56</sup> <sup>57</sup> <sup>58</sup> <sup>59</sup> <sup>60</sup> <sup>61</sup> <sup>62</sup> <sup>63</sup> <sup>64</sup> <sup>65</sup> <sup>66</sup> <sup>67</sup> <sup>68</sup> <sup>69</sup> <sup>70</sup> <sup>71</sup> <sup>72</sup> <sup>73</sup> <sup>74</sup> <sup>75</sup> <sup>76</sup> <sup>77</sup> <sup>78</sup> <sup>79</sup> <sup>80</sup> <sup>81</sup> <sup>82</sup> <sup>83</sup> <sup>84</sup> <sup>85</sup> <sup>86</sup> <sup>87</sup> <sup>88</sup> <sup>89</sup> <sup>90</sup> <sup>91</sup> <sup>92</sup> <sup>93</sup> <sup>94</sup> <sup>95</sup> <sup>96</sup> <sup>97</sup> <sup>98</sup> <sup>99</sup> <sup>100</sup> <sup>101</sup> <sup>102</sup> <sup>103</sup> <sup>104</sup> <sup>105</sup> <sup>106</sup> <sup>107</sup> <sup>108</sup> <sup>109</sup> <sup>110</sup> <sup>111</sup> <sup>112</sup> <sup>113</sup> <sup>114</sup> <sup>115</sup> <sup>116</sup> <sup>117</sup> <sup>118</sup> <sup>119</sup> <sup>120</sup> <sup>121</sup> <sup>122</sup> <sup>123</sup> <sup>124</sup> <sup>125</sup> <sup>126</sup> <sup>127</sup> <sup>128</sup> <sup>129</sup> <sup>130</sup> <sup>131</sup> <sup>132</sup> <sup>133</sup> <sup>134</sup> <sup>135</sup> <sup>136</sup> <sup>137</sup> <sup>138</sup> <sup>139</sup> <sup>140</sup> <sup>141</sup> <sup>142</sup> <sup>143</sup> <sup>144</sup> <sup>145</sup> <sup>146</sup> <sup>147</sup> <sup>148</sup> <sup>149</sup> <sup>150</sup> <sup>151</sup> <sup>152</sup> <sup>153</sup> <sup>154</sup> <sup>155</sup> <sup>156</sup> <sup>157</sup> <sup>158</sup> <sup>159</sup> <sup>160</sup> <sup>161</sup> <sup>162</sup> <sup>163</sup> <sup>164</sup> <sup>165</sup> <sup>166</sup> <sup>167</sup> <sup>168</sup> <sup>169</sup> <sup>170</sup> <sup>171</sup> <sup>172</sup> <sup>173</sup> <sup>174</sup> <sup>175</sup> <sup>176</sup> <sup>177</sup> <sup>178</sup> <sup>179</sup> <sup>180</sup> <sup>181</sup> <sup>182</sup> <sup>183</sup> <sup>184</sup> <sup>185</sup> <sup>186</sup> <sup>187</sup> <sup>188</sup> <sup>189</sup> <sup>190</sup> <sup>191</sup> <sup>192</sup> <sup>193</sup> <sup>194</sup> <sup>195</sup> <sup>196</sup> <sup>197</sup> <sup>198</sup> <sup>199</sup> <sup>200</sup> <sup>201</sup> <sup>202</sup> <sup>203</sup> <sup>204</sup> <sup>205</sup> <sup>206</sup> <sup>207</sup> <sup>208</sup> <sup>209</sup> <sup>210</sup> <sup>211</sup> <sup>212</sup> <sup>213</sup> <sup>214</sup> <sup>215</sup> <sup>216</sup> <sup>217</sup> <sup>218</sup> <sup>219</sup> <sup>220</sup> <sup>221</sup> <sup>222</sup> <sup>223</sup> <sup>224</sup> <sup>225</sup> <sup>226</sup> <sup>227</sup> <sup>228</sup> <sup>229</sup> <sup>230</sup> <sup>231</sup> <sup>232</sup> <sup>233</sup> <sup>234</sup> <sup>235</sup> <sup>236</sup> <sup>237</sup> <sup>238</sup> <sup>239</sup> <sup>240</sup> <sup>241</sup> <sup>242</sup> <sup>243</sup> <sup>244</sup> <sup>245</sup> <sup>246</sup> <sup>247</sup> <sup>248</sup> <sup>249</sup> <sup>250</sup> <sup>251</sup> <sup>252</sup> <sup>253</sup> <sup>254</sup> <sup>255</sup> <sup>256</sup> <sup>257</sup> <sup>258</sup> <sup>259</sup> <sup>260</sup> <sup>261</sup> <sup>262</sup> <sup>263</sup> <sup>264</sup> <sup>265</sup> <sup>266</sup> <sup>267</sup> <sup>268</sup> <sup>269</sup> <sup>270</sup> <sup>271</sup> <sup>272</sup> <sup>273</sup> <sup>274</sup> <sup>275</sup> <sup>276</sup> <sup>277</sup> <sup>278</sup> <sup>279</sup> <sup>280</sup> <sup>281</sup> <sup>282</sup> <sup>283</sup> <sup>284</sup> <sup>285</sup> <sup>286</sup> <sup>287</sup> <sup>288</sup> <sup>289</sup> <sup>290</sup> <sup>291</sup> <sup>292</sup> <sup>293</sup> <sup>294</sup> <sup>295</sup> <sup>296</sup> <sup>297</sup> <sup>298</sup> <sup>299</sup> <sup>300</sup> <sup>301</sup> <sup>302</sup> <sup>303</sup> <sup>304</sup> <sup>305</sup> <sup>306</sup> <sup>307</sup> <sup>308</sup> <sup>309</sup> <sup>310</sup> <sup>311</sup> <sup>312</sup> <sup>313</sup> <sup>314</sup> <sup>315</sup> <sup>316</sup> <sup>317</sup> <sup>318</sup> <sup>319</sup> <sup>320</sup> <sup>321</sup> <sup>322</sup> <sup>323</sup> <sup>324</sup> <sup>325</sup> <sup>326</sup> <sup>327</sup> <sup>328</sup> <sup>329</sup> <sup>330</sup> <sup>331</sup> <sup>332</sup> <sup>333</sup> <sup>334</sup> <sup>335</sup> <sup>336</sup> <sup>337</sup> <sup>338</sup> <sup>339</sup> <sup>340</sup> <sup>341</sup> <sup>342</sup> <sup>343</sup> <sup>344</sup> <sup>345</sup> <sup>346</sup> <sup>347</sup> <sup>348</sup> <sup>349</sup> <sup>350</sup> <sup>351</sup> <sup>352</sup> <sup>353</sup> <sup>354</sup> <sup>355</sup> <sup>356</sup> <sup>357</sup> <sup>358</sup> <sup>359</sup> <sup>360</sup> <sup>361</sup> <sup>362</sup> <sup>363</sup> <sup>364</sup> <sup>365</sup> <sup>366</sup> <sup>367</sup> <sup>368</sup> <sup>369</sup> <sup>370</sup> <sup>371</sup> <sup>372</sup> <sup>373</sup> <sup>374</sup> <sup>375</sup> <sup>376</sup> <sup>377</sup> <sup>378</sup> <sup>379</sup> <sup>380</sup> <sup>381</sup> <sup>382</sup> <sup>383</sup> <sup>384</sup> <sup>385</sup> <sup>386</sup> <sup>387</sup> <sup>388</sup> <sup>389</sup> <sup>390</sup> <sup>391</sup> <sup>392</sup> <sup>393</sup> <sup>394</sup> <sup>395</sup> <sup>396</sup> <sup>397</sup> <sup>398</sup> <sup>399</sup> <sup>400</sup> <sup>401</sup> <sup>402</sup> <sup>403</sup> <sup>404</sup> <sup>405</sup> <sup>406</sup> <sup>407</sup> <sup>408</sup> <sup>409</sup> <sup>410</sup> <sup>411</sup> <sup>412</sup> <sup>413</sup> <sup>414</sup> <sup>415</sup> <sup>416</sup> <sup>417</sup> <sup>418</sup> <sup>419</sup> <sup>420</sup> <sup>421</sup> <sup>422</sup> <sup>423</sup> <sup>424</sup> <sup>425</sup> <sup>426</sup> <sup>427</sup> <sup>428</sup> <sup>429</sup> <sup>430</sup> <sup>431</sup> <sup>432</sup> <sup>433</sup> <sup>434</sup> <sup>435</sup> <sup>436</sup> <sup>437</sup> <sup>438</sup> <sup>439</sup> <sup>440</sup> <sup>441</sup> <sup>442</sup> <sup>443</sup> <sup>444</sup> <sup>445</sup> <sup>446</sup> <sup>447</sup> <sup>448</sup> <sup>449</sup> <sup>450</sup> <sup>451</sup> <sup>452</sup> <sup>453</sup> <sup>454</sup> <sup>455</sup> <sup>456</sup> <sup>457</sup> <sup>458</sup> <sup>459</sup> <sup>460</sup> <sup>461</sup> <sup>462</sup> <sup>463</sup> <sup>464</sup> <sup>465</sup> <sup>466</sup> <sup>467</sup> <sup>468</sup> <sup>469</sup> <sup>470</sup> <sup>471</sup> <sup>472</sup> <sup>473</sup> <sup>474</sup> <sup>475</sup> <sup>476</sup> <sup>477</sup> <sup>478</sup> <sup>479</sup> <sup>480</sup> <sup>481</sup> <sup>482</sup> <sup>483</sup> <sup>484</sup> <sup>485</sup> <sup>486</sup> <sup>487</sup> <sup>488</sup> <sup>489</sup> <sup>490</sup> <sup>491</sup> <sup>492</sup> <sup>493</sup> <sup>494</sup> <sup>495</sup> <sup>496</sup> <sup>497</sup> <sup>498</sup> <sup>499</sup> <sup>500</sup> <sup>501</sup> <sup>502</sup> <sup>503</sup> <sup>504</sup> <sup>505</sup> <sup>506</sup> <sup>507</sup> <sup>508</sup> <sup>509</sup> <sup>510</sup> <sup>511</sup> <sup>512</sup> <sup>513</sup> <sup>514</sup> <sup>515</sup> <sup>516</sup> <sup>517</sup> <sup>518</sup> <sup>519</sup> <sup>520</sup> <sup>521</sup> <sup>522</sup> <sup>523</sup> <sup>524</sup> <sup>525</sup> <sup>526</sup> <sup>527</sup> <sup>528</sup> <sup>529</sup> <sup>530</sup> <sup>531</sup> <sup>532</sup> <sup>533</sup> <sup>534</sup> <sup>535</sup> <sup>536</sup> <sup>537</sup> <sup>538</sup> <sup>539</sup> <sup>540</sup> <sup>541</sup> <sup>542</sup> <sup>543</sup> <sup>544</sup> <sup>545</sup> <sup>546</sup> <sup>547</sup> <sup>548</sup> <sup>549</sup> <sup>550</sup> <sup>551</sup> <sup>552</sup> <sup>553</sup> <sup>554</sup> <sup>555</sup> <sup>556</sup> <sup>557</sup> <sup>558</sup> <sup>559</sup> <sup>560</sup> <sup>561</sup> <sup>562</sup> <sup>563</sup> <sup>564</sup> <sup>565</sup> <sup>566</sup> <sup>567</sup> <sup>568</sup> <sup>569</sup> <sup>570</sup> <sup>571</sup> <sup>572</sup> <sup>573</sup> <sup>574</sup> <sup>575</sup> <sup>576</sup> <sup>577</sup> <sup>578</sup> <sup>579</sup> <sup>580</sup> <sup>581</sup> <sup>582</sup> <sup>583</sup> <sup>584</sup> <sup>585</sup> <sup>586</sup> <sup>587</sup> <sup>588</sup> <sup>589</sup> <sup>590</sup> <sup>591</sup> <sup>592</sup> <sup>593</sup> <sup>594</sup> <sup>595</sup> <sup>596</sup> <sup>597</sup> <sup>598</sup> <sup>599</sup> <sup>600</sup> <sup>601</sup> <sup>602</sup> <sup>603</sup> <sup>604</sup> <sup>605</sup> <sup>606</sup> <sup>607</sup> <sup>608</sup> <sup>609</sup> <sup>610</sup> <sup>611</sup> <sup>612</sup> <sup>613</sup> <sup>614</sup> <sup>615</sup> <sup>616</sup> <sup>617</sup> <sup>618</sup> <sup>619</sup> <sup>620</sup> <sup>621</sup> <sup>622</sup> <sup>623</sup> <sup>624</sup> <sup>625</sup> <sup>626</sup> <sup>627</sup> <sup>628</sup> <sup>629</sup> <sup>630</sup> <sup>631</sup> <sup>632</sup> <sup>633</sup> <sup>634</sup> <sup>635</sup> <sup>636</sup> <sup>637</sup> <sup>638</sup> <sup>639</sup> <sup>640</sup> <sup>641</sup> <sup>642</sup> <sup>643</sup> <sup>644</sup> <sup>645</sup> <sup>646</sup> <sup>647</sup> <sup>648</sup> <sup>649</sup> <sup>650</sup> <sup>651</sup> <sup>652</sup> <sup>653</sup> <sup>654</sup> <sup>655</sup> <sup>656</sup> <sup>657</sup> <sup>658</sup> <sup>659</sup> <sup>660</sup> <sup>661</sup> <sup>662</sup> <sup>663</sup> <sup>664</sup> <sup>665</sup> <sup>666</sup> <sup>667</sup> <sup>668</sup> <sup>669</sup> <sup>670</sup> <sup>671</sup> <sup>672</sup> <sup>673</sup> <sup>674</sup> <sup>675</sup> <sup>676</sup> <sup>677</sup> <sup>678</sup> <sup>679</sup> <sup>680</sup> <sup>681</sup> <sup>682</sup> <sup>683</sup> <sup>684</sup> <sup>685</sup> <sup>686</sup> <sup>687</sup> <sup>688</sup> <sup>689</sup> <sup>690</sup> <sup>691</sup> <sup>692</sup> <sup>693</sup> <sup>694</sup> <sup>695</sup> <sup>696</sup> <sup>697</sup> <sup>698</sup> <sup>699</sup> <sup>700</sup> <sup>701</sup> <sup>702</sup> <sup>703</sup> <sup>704</sup> <sup>705</sup> <sup>706</sup> <sup>707</sup> <sup>708</sup> <sup>709</sup> <sup>710</sup> <sup>711</sup> <sup>712</sup> <sup>713</sup> <sup>714</sup> <sup>715</sup> <sup>716</sup> <sup>717</sup> <sup>718</sup> <sup>719</sup> <sup>720</sup> <sup>721</sup> <sup>722</sup> <sup>723</sup> <sup>724</sup> <sup>725</sup> <sup>726</sup> <sup>727</sup> <sup>728</sup> <sup>729</sup> <sup>730</sup> <sup>731</sup> <sup>732</sup> <sup>733</sup> <sup>734</sup> <sup>735</sup> <sup>736</sup> <sup>737</sup> <sup>738</sup> <sup>739</sup> <sup>740</sup> <sup>741</sup> <sup>742</sup> <sup>743</sup> <sup>744</sup> <sup>745</sup> <sup>746</sup> <sup>747</sup> <sup>748</sup> <sup>749</sup> <sup>750</sup> <sup>751</sup> <sup>752</sup> <sup>753</sup> <sup>754</sup> <sup>755</sup> <sup>756</sup> <sup>757</sup> <sup>758</sup> <sup>759</sup> <sup>760</sup> <sup>761</sup> <sup>762</sup> <sup>763</sup> <sup>764</sup> <sup>765</sup> <sup>766</sup> <sup>767</sup> <sup>768</sup> <sup>769</sup> <sup>770</sup> <sup>771</sup> <sup>772</sup> <sup>773</sup> <sup>774</sup> <sup>775</sup> <sup>776</sup> <sup>777</sup> <sup>778</sup> <sup>779</sup> <sup>780</sup> <sup>781</sup> <sup>782</sup> <sup>783</sup> <sup>784</sup> <sup>785</sup> <sup>786</sup> <sup>787</sup> <sup>788</sup> <sup>789</sup> <sup>790</sup> <sup>791</sup> <sup>792</sup> <sup>793</sup> <sup>794</sup> <sup>795</sup> <sup>796</sup> <sup>797</sup> <sup>798</sup> <sup>799</sup> <sup>800</sup> <sup>801</sup> <sup>802</sup> <sup>803</sup> <sup>804</sup> <sup>805</sup> <sup>806</sup> <sup>807</sup> <sup>808</sup> <sup>809</sup> <sup>810</sup> <sup>811</sup> <sup>812</sup> <sup>813</sup> <sup>814</sup> <sup>815</sup> <sup>816</sup> <sup>817</sup> <sup>818</sup> <sup>819</sup> <sup>820</sup> <sup>821</sup> <sup>822</sup> <sup>823</sup> <sup>824</sup> <sup>825</sup> <sup>826</sup> <sup>827</sup> <sup>828</sup> <sup>829</sup> <sup>830</sup> <sup>831</sup> <sup>832</sup> <sup>833</sup> <sup>834</sup> <sup>835</sup> <sup>836</sup> <sup>837</sup> <sup>838</sup> <sup>839</sup> <sup>840</sup> <sup>841</sup> <sup>842</sup> <sup>843</sup> <sup>844</sup> <sup>845</sup> <sup>846</sup> <sup>847</sup> <sup>848</sup> <sup>849</sup> <sup>850</sup> <sup>851</sup> <sup>852</sup> <sup>853</sup> <sup>854</sup> <sup>855</sup> <sup>856</sup> <sup>857</sup> <sup>858</sup> <sup>859</sup> <sup>860</sup> <sup>861</sup> <sup>862</sup> <sup>863</sup> <sup>864</sup> <sup>865</sup> <sup>866</sup> <sup>867</sup> <sup>868</sup> <sup>869</sup> <sup>870</sup> <sup>871</sup> <sup>872</sup> <sup>873</sup> <sup>874</sup> <sup>875</sup> <sup>876</sup> <sup>877</sup> <sup>878</sup> <sup>879</sup> <sup>880</sup> <sup>881</sup> <sup>882</sup> <sup>883</sup> <sup>884</sup> <sup>885</sup> <sup>886</sup> <sup>887</sup> <sup>888</sup> <sup>889</sup> <sup>890</sup> <sup>891</sup> <sup>892</sup> <sup>893</sup> <sup>894</sup> <sup>895</sup> <sup>896</sup> <sup>897</sup> <sup>898</sup> <sup>899</sup> <sup>900</sup> <sup>901</sup> <sup>902</sup> <sup>903</sup> <sup>904</sup> <sup>905</sup> <sup>906</sup> <sup>907</sup> <sup>908</sup> <sup>909</sup> <sup>910</sup> <sup>911</sup> <sup>912</sup> <sup>913</sup> <sup>914</sup> <sup>915</sup> <sup>916</sup> <sup>917</sup> <sup>918</sup> <sup>919</sup> <sup>920</sup> <sup>921</sup> <sup>922</sup> <sup>923</sup> <sup>924</sup> <sup>925</sup> <sup>926</sup> <sup>927</sup> <sup>928</sup> <sup>929</sup> <sup>930</sup> <sup>931</sup> <sup>932</sup> <sup>933</sup> <sup>934</sup> <sup>935</sup> <sup>936</sup> <sup>937</sup> <sup>938</sup> <sup>939</sup> <sup>940</sup> <sup>941</sup> <sup>942</sup> <sup>943</sup> <sup>944</sup> <sup>945</sup> <sup>946</sup> <sup>947</sup> <sup>948</sup> <sup>949</sup> <sup>950</sup> <sup>951</sup> <sup>952</sup> <sup>953</sup> <sup>954</sup> <sup>955</sup> <sup>956</sup> <sup>957</sup> <sup>958</sup> <sup>959</sup> <sup>960</sup> <sup>961</sup> <sup>962</sup> <sup>963</sup> <sup>964</sup> <sup>965</sup> <sup>966</sup> <sup>967</sup> <sup>968</sup> <sup>969</sup> <sup>970</sup> <sup>971</sup> <sup>972</sup> <sup>973</sup> <sup>974</sup> <sup>975</sup> <sup>976</sup> <sup>977</sup> <sup>978</sup> <sup>979</sup> <sup>980</sup> <sup>981</sup> <sup>982</sup> <sup>983</sup> <sup>984</sup> <sup>985</sup> <sup>986</sup> <sup>987</sup> <sup>988</sup> <sup>989</sup> <sup>990</sup> <sup>991</sup> <sup>992</sup> <sup>993</sup> <sup>994</sup> <sup>995</sup> <sup>996</sup> <sup>997</sup> <sup>998</sup> <sup>999</sup> <sup>1000</sup> <sup>1001</sup> <sup>1002</sup> <sup>1003</sup> <sup>1004</sup> <sup>1005</sup> <sup>1006</sup> <sup>1007</sup> <sup>1008</sup> <sup>1009</sup> <sup>1010</sup> <sup>1011</sup> <sup>1012</sup> <sup>1013</sup> <sup>1014</sup> <sup>1015</sup> <sup>1016</sup> <sup>1017</sup> <sup>1018</sup> <sup>1019</sup> <sup>1020</sup> <sup>1021</sup> <sup>1022</sup> <sup>1023</sup> <sup>1024</sup> <sup>1025</sup> <sup>1026</sup> <sup>1027</sup> <sup>1028</sup> <sup>1029</sup> <sup>1030</sup> <sup>1031</sup> <sup>1032</sup> <sup>1033</sup> <sup>1034</sup> <sup>1035</sup> <sup>1036</sup> <sup>1037</sup> <sup>1038</sup> <sup>1039</sup> <sup>1040</sup> <sup>1041</sup> <sup>1042</sup> <sup>1043</sup> <sup>1044</sup> <sup>1045</sup> <sup>1046</sup> <sup>1047</sup> <sup>1048</sup> <sup>1049</sup> <sup>1050</sup> <sup>1051</sup> <sup>1052</sup> <sup>1053</sup> <sup>1054</sup> <sup>1055</sup> <sup>1056</sup> <sup>1057</sup> <sup>1058</sup> <sup>1059</sup> <sup>1060</sup> <sup>1061</sup> <sup>1062</sup> <sup>1063</sup> <sup>1064</sup> <sup>1065</sup> <sup>1066</sup> <sup>1067</sup> <sup>1068</sup> <sup>1069</sup> <sup>1070</sup> <sup>1071</sup> <sup>1072</sup> <sup>1073</sup> <sup>1074</sup> <sup>1075</sup> <sup>1076</sup> <sup>1077</sup> <sup>1078</sup> <sup>1079</sup> <sup>1080</sup> <sup>1081</sup> <sup>1082</sup> <sup>1083</sup> <sup>1084</sup> <sup>1085</sup> <sup>1086</sup> <sup>1087</sup> <sup>1088</sup> <sup>1089</sup> <sup>1090</sup> <sup>1091</sup> <sup>1092</sup> <sup>1093</sup> <sup>1094</sup> <sup>1095</sup> <sup>1096</sup> <sup>1097</sup> <sup>1098</sup> <sup>1099</sup> <sup>1100</sup> <sup>1101</sup> <sup>1102</sup> <sup>1103</sup> <sup>1104</sup> <sup>1105</sup> <sup>1106</sup> <sup>1107</sup> <sup>1108</sup> <sup>1109</sup> <sup>1110</sup> <sup>1111</sup> <sup>1112</sup> <sup>1113</sup> <sup>1114</sup> <sup>1115</sup> <sup>1116</sup> <sup>1117</sup> <sup>1118</sup> <sup>1119</sup> <sup>1120</sup> <sup>1121</sup> <sup>1122</sup> <sup>1123</sup> <sup>1124</sup> <sup>1125</sup> <sup>1126</sup> <sup>1127</sup> <sup>1128</sup> <sup>1129</sup> <sup>1130</sup> <sup>1131</sup> <sup>1132</sup> <sup>1133</sup> <sup>1134</sup> <sup>1135</sup> <sup>1136</sup> <sup>1137</sup> <sup>1138</sup> <sup>1139</sup> <sup>1140</sup> <sup>1141</sup> <sup>1142</sup> <sup>1143</sup> <sup>1144</sup> <sup>1145</sup> <sup>1146</sup> <sup>1147</sup> <sup>1148</sup> <sup>1149</sup> <sup>1150</sup> <sup>1151</sup> <sup>1152</sup> <sup>1153</sup> <sup>1154</sup> <sup>1155</sup> <sup>1156</sup> <sup>1157</sup> <sup>1158</sup> <sup>1159</sup> <sup>1160</sup> <sup>1161</sup> <sup>1162</sup> <sup>1163</sup> <sup>1164</sup> <sup>1165</sup> <sup>1166</sup> <sup>1167</sup> <sup>1168</sup> <sup>1169</sup> <sup>1170</sup> <sup>1171</sup> <sup>1172</sup> <sup>1173</sup> <sup>1174</sup> <sup>1175</sup> <sup>1176</sup> <sup>1177</sup> <sup>1178</sup> <sup>1179</sup> <sup>1180</sup> <sup>1181</sup> <sup>1182</sup> <sup>1183</sup> <sup>1184</sup> <sup>1185</sup> <sup>1186</sup> <sup>1187</sup> <sup>1188</sup> <sup>1189</sup> <sup>1190</sup> <sup>1191</sup> <sup>1192</sup> <sup>1193</sup> <sup>1194</sup> <sup>1195</sup> <sup>1196</sup> <sup>1197</sup> <sup>1198</sup> <sup>1199</sup> <sup>1200</sup> <sup>1201</sup> <sup>1202</sup> <sup>1203</sup> <sup>1204</sup> <sup>1205</sup> <sup>1206</sup> <sup>1207</sup> <sup>1208</sup> <sup>1209</sup> <sup>1210</sup> <sup>1211</sup> <sup>1212</sup> <sup>1213</sup> <sup>1214</sup> <sup>1215</sup> <sup>1216</sup> <sup>1217</sup> <sup>1218</sup> <sup>1219</sup> <sup>1220</sup> <sup>1221</sup> <sup>1222</sup> <sup>1223</sup> <sup>1224</sup> <sup>1225</sup> <sup>1226</sup> <sup>1227</sup> <sup>1228</sup> <sup>1229</sup> <sup>1230</sup> <sup>1231</sup> <sup>1232</sup> <sup>1233</sup> <sup>1234</sup> <sup>1235</sup> <sup>1236</sup> <sup>1237</sup> <sup>1238</sup> <sup>1239</sup> <sup>1240</sup> <sup>1241</sup> <sup>1242</sup> <sup>1243</sup> <sup>1244</sup> <sup>1245</sup> <sup>1246</sup> <sup>1247</sup> <sup>1248</sup> <sup>1249</sup> <sup>1250</sup> <sup>1251</sup> <sup>1252</sup> <sup>1253</sup> <sup>1254</sup> <sup>1255</sup> <sup>1256</sup> <sup>1257</sup> <sup>1258</sup> <sup>1259</sup> <sup>1260</sup> <sup>1261</sup> <sup>1262</sup> <sup>1263</sup> <sup>1264</sup> <sup>1265</sup> <sup>1266</sup> <sup>1267</sup> <sup>1268</sup> <sup>1269</sup> <sup>1270</sup> <sup>1271</sup> <sup>1272</sup> <sup>1273</sup> <sup>1274</sup> <sup>1275</sup> <sup>1276</sup> <sup>1277</sup> <sup>1278</sup> <sup>1279</sup> <sup>1280</sup> <sup>1281</sup> <sup>1282</sup> <sup>1283</sup> <sup>1284</sup> <sup>1285</sup> <sup>1286</sup> <sup>1287</sup> <sup>1288</sup> <sup>1289</sup> <sup>1290</sup> <sup>1291</sup> <sup>1292</sup> <sup>1293</sup> <sup>1294</sup> <sup>1295</sup> <sup>1296</sup> <sup>1297</sup> <sup>1298</sup> <sup>1299</sup> <sup>1300</sup> <sup>1301</sup> <sup>1302</sup> <sup>1303</sup> <sup>1304</sup> <sup>1305</sup> <sup>1306</sup> <sup>1307</sup> <sup>1308</sup> <sup>1309</sup> <sup>1310</sup> <sup>1311</sup> <sup>1312</sup> <sup>1313</sup> <sup>1314</sup> <sup>1315</sup> <sup>1316</sup> <sup>1317</sup> στολήν, ἐν αἷς διεγείρω ὑμῶν ἐν ὑπομνήσει τὴν εἰλικρινὴ διάνοιαν, <sup>2</sup> μνησθῆναι τῶν προειρημένων ῥημάτων ὑπὸ τῶν ἁγίων προφητῶν, καὶ τῆς τῶν ἀποστόλων ἡμῶν ἐντολῆς, τοῦ Κυρίου καὶ Σωτῆρος· <sup>3</sup> <sup>b</sup> τοῦτο πρῶτον γινώσκοντες, ὅτι ἐλεύσονται ἐπ' ἐσχάτου τῶν ἡμερῶν ἐμπαίκεται, κατὰ τὰς ἰδίας αὐτῶν ἐπιθυ-μίας πορευόμενοι, <sup>4</sup> <sup>c</sup> καὶ λέγοντες· “Ποῦ ἔστω ἡ ἐπαγγελία τῆς παρουσίας αὐτοῦ; ἀφ’ ἧς γὰρ οἱ πατέρες ἐκοιμήθησαν, πάντα b 1 Tim. 4. 1.

2 Tim. 2. 1.
Jude 18.

c Isa. 6. 10.
Jer. 17. 15.
Ezek. 12. 25.

earth for the righteous. Thus it highly behoved them to prepare for that awful consummation by holiness and steadfastness in the faith. (Benson.)

1. ταύτην δὴ, — ἐπιστολήν.] Render: ‘This second Epistle, beloved, now write I unto you;’ meaning that this which he is now writing is the second of two Epistles. — διεγείρω ἐν ὑπομν. ‘I stir, by way of remembrance, your pure and well-disposed disposition.’ So Plato, εἰλικρινεῖ τῇ διανοίᾳ χροῖμενοι. Comp. supr. i. 13, and note. By εἰλικρινὴ is meant ‘pure of, free from, all leaven of prejudice against the truth;’ implying the being fully disposed to embrace it and act upon it; for it is not, as some Commentators have supposed, the mind, or intellectual faculty, that is denoted by διάνοιαν, but the disposition, or affections of the mind, as directed by the will. Comp. Eph. ii. 3, ποιοῦντες τὰ θελήματα — τῶν δεινομένων, and see note.

2. μνησθῆναι τῶν προειρ. — Σωτῆρος.] The general sense is, ‘So as to be (constantly) mindful of the things before announced by the holy Prophets, and of the injunction of our Lord and Saviour [at the hands of] us his Apostles.’ It is true that this version depends upon a disputed point of reading. For ἡμῶν very many MSS. (to which I can add Lamb. 1183, 1184, 1196, and 2 ancient Mus. copies) have ὑμῶν, which has been adopted by Matth., Lachm., and Tisch., but not on good grounds. External authority has no great weight in the case of words so much alike, and constantly confounded by the scribes, as ἡμῶν and ὑμῶν: and internal evidence is quite in favour of ἡμῶν, from ὑμῶν involving no little harshness, and being liable to objection, which has been ably stated by Est., who gives up the Vulg. and its reading ὑμῶν as indefensible, also pointing out (with his characteristic acuteness) the origin of the false reading as far as concerns the Vulg. Strange is it that such perplexity should have been occasioned to the Commentators by what is so common in the best Greek writers, espec. Thucyd., and not rare even in Jos. and Philo, namely, a slight transposition of the words from the natural and more usual order, and what, when only duly adjusted, will stand thus: καὶ τῆς ἐντολῆς ἡμῶν τῶν ἀποστόλων τοῦ Κυρίου καὶ Σωτ. That Jude must have had ἡμῶν in his copy (as also had the Pesch. Syr. Translator), is plain from the 17th verse of his Epistle, written with this mind.

3. τοῦτο πρῶτον γινώσκοντες, &c.] By πρῶτον is to be understood not so much what was to happen first, as a premise, espec. to be attended to, from which, to conclude they ought to remember the predictions of the Prophets, and the injunctions of the Apostles; see Benson, and the note on i. 20, and comp. John xiii. 19. At ἐπ’ ἐσχάτου τ. ἡμ. supply μέρους, hereafter; the expression not denoting any precise time, but either a remote or soon approaching period, as best suits the context. The sense, however, partly depends on the reading, which varies. Thus, for ἐπ’ ἐσχάτου τῶν ἡμερῶν, Lachm. and Tisch. read, from A, B, C, and about 12 cursives (I add Lamb. 1182), ἐσχάτως; but without reason, since external authority for that reading is insufficient, and internal evidence against it, inasmuch as ἐσχάτου is the more difficult reading, and defended by Heb. i. 2, ἐπ’ ἐσχάτου τῶν ἡμερῶν, and 1 Pet. i. 20, ἐπ’ ἐσχάτου τῶν χρόνων, as Tisch. himself there reads, thus incurring the charge of inconsistency here. Moreover, the reading ἐσχάτου here is confirmed both by the Pesch. Syr. Vera. and Jude, ver. 18. Before ἐμπαίκεται the words ἐπ’ ἐμπαίγεσθαι are found in several ancient MSS. (I add Lamb. 1184) and some Versions, as also some Fathers (as Chrys. and Cyrill.), and have been admitted into the text by Griesb., Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch. External authority is, indeed, such as is scarcely sufficient to warrant their being brought in; yet in aid of this comes internal evidence, which is somewhat in its favour, considering that the words could not have proceeded from the Catenists or the Scholiasts, since there is no vestige of them there, and the words would have been more likely to be put out than put in. They derive strong support from the Pesch. Syr. and Vulg. Versions, Chrys., and Cyrill., as also Augustin. de Civ. Dei, xx. i. 18, where it is said: ‘venient in novissimis dierum illusiones illudentes,’ and Jerome adv. Jov. i. 25, and lastly by Antioch. Ptol., a Greek Father of the fifth century. They may be supposed to have been omitted, from the similarity of the initial syllables ἐμπαυ. Not a few such expressions are to be met with in the Old Test., and some in the New, when, by a similar association of a word with another co-derivative of some verb, an intensity of sense is conveyed, however difficult it may be to express that sense in one term.

4. λέγοντες· “Ποῦ ἔστω, &c.] By αὐτοῦ is plainly meant Christ. From the character of the persons, this cannot import any inquiry into the promises of Christ’s coming in Scripture; nor is it to be thought (with some) that they expected his second coming, and thought it long. It is merely to be regarded as a popular form of expression, in which was implied a disbelief that he would come at all, and an insinuation that there was no hope of an event so long delayed. By his coming is meant his coming to judgment, as appears from the answer to those scoffers, vv. 5—13. — ἀφ’ ἧς γὰρ — κτίσταις, meaning, ‘Our fathers have successively died, nor has any one come to life; and as from the creation of the world all things are carried on by an alternate course of living and of dying, so does the order of nature remain the same. Thus they will οὕτω διαμένει ἀπ' ἀρχῆς κτίσεως." <sup>5</sup> Ἄνθ' αὐτοὺς τοῦτο θέλοντας, ὅτι οὐρανοὶ ἦσαν ἐκπαλαι, καὶ γῆ ἐξ ὕδατος καὶ δι' ὕδατος συνεστῶσα, τῷ τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγῳ, <sup>6</sup> δι' ὧν ὁ τότε κόσμος ὕδατι κατακλυσθεὶς ἀπώλετο. <sup>7</sup> Οἱ δὲ νῦν οὐρανοὶ καὶ ἡ γῆ τῷ αὐτοῦ λόγῳ τεθησαυρισμένοι εἰσὶ, πυρὶ τηρούμενοι εἰς ἡμέραν κρίσεως καὶ ἀπωλείας τῶν ἀσεβῶν ἀν-θρώπων. <sup>8</sup> Ἐν δὲ τούτῳ μὴ λανθανέτω ὑμᾶς, ἀγαπητοί, ὅτι μία ἡμέρα παρὰ Κυρίου ὡς χίλια ἔτη, καὶ χίλια ἔτη ὡς ἡμέρα μία. <sup>9</sup> Οὐ βραδύνει ὁ Κύριος τῆς ἐπαγγελίας, ὡς τινὲς βραδυτῆτα ἡγοῦνται· ἀλλὰ μακροθυμεῖ εἰς ἡμᾶς, μὴ βουλόμενος fancy that what has been so long deferred will never come to pass.' 'It is (observes Bp. Shuttleworth) too early yet in the history of mankind for infidelity to derive an argument against Revelation from this circumstance; but we can readily imagine that should the continuance of the present order of the universe be still maintained through a vast succession of ages yet to come, the time may arrive when the misgiving here alluded to may begin seriously to shake the firmness of the conviction of the most sincere believers. Under such a supposition, then, there appears to be much mercy in the arrangements of Providence, which have thus anticipated a formidable objection of Infidelity, and suggested a satisfactory argument, from which every humble Christian may, to the latest possible duration of time, derive increased faith and consolation under that procrastinated hope which makes the heart sick.'

5—7. To this objection of the scoffers, that all things remained the same from the beginning of the creation, and therefore would continue so, St. Peter answers, that this is not the fact; for the world had been once destroyed by water, and would be again by fire.—λανθάνει αὐτοὺς τ. θέλ. This is commonly supposed to import a wilful ignorance of what they might have known, but cared not to know. The sense, however, rather seems to be, 'it escapes the notice of those who opine (or give it as their opinion) that,' &c. And so Hdian., v. 3, 11, εἰκόνα ἤλιον ἀνέργαστον εἶναι θέλουσι. By οὐρανοὶ we are to understand, not 'the ethereal,' but 'the aërial heavens.' Of the words following, καὶ γῆ ἐξ ὕδατος καὶ δι' ὕδατος συνεστῶσα, the most prob. sense appears to be that assigned by Capel., Kypke, Elsner, Roennn., and Pott, 'the earth, with its atmosphere (i.e. the aerial heaven), being formed out of water, and consisting by means of water; συνιστ. being for συστασιν ἔχουσα. So Thales said that πάντα ἐξ ὕδατος συνεστάναι; as also did other philosophers. So, too, Philo de Plant. Noë, p. 215, says, ἐκ γῆς ἀπέστη καὶ παντὸς ὕδατος, καὶ αἶρος, καὶ πυρὸς—συνίστη δὲ ὁ κόσμος, and Max. Tyr. Diss. xxv. p. 253, τῷ Διὶ νύματι γῆ συνίστη, &c. The Apostle thus means to confute those deriders, by proving that things had not continued as they were from the creation; and that such an assertion supposes utter ignorance on their part of what they might have known, both from the book of Revelation, and, indeed, the book of Nature;—ignorance of the natural constitution of the earth, which, he proceeds to say, is physically ordained to bring on its own destruction by fire at some future period, as it did formerly by water.

6, 7. On these verses see, for illustration, Jos. Antt. i. 1, 1, and 2, 3, where he says that Adam foretold, that ἔσθαι ἀφανισμόν τῶν ὅλων, τὸν μὴ κατ' ἰσχύον πυρὸς, τὸν ἑτερον δὲ κατὰ βίαν καὶ πλήθον ὑδάτων.

7. οἱ δὲ νῦν οὐρανοὶ—ἀνθρώπων]. 'From the circumstantial manner in which the final conflagration of the heavens and the earth is contrasted with the destruction of the old world, it is plain that the Apostle has given, not a figurative, but a real representation of what will hereafter take place.' See Abp. Sharp, in D'Oyly and Mant.

8, 9. The Apostle here proceeds to show why the Lord defers the last judgment; namely, out of his long-suffering, and that the sinner may come to repentance; and this he prefaces with a saying found in Pa. xc. 4, and oft. occurring in the Rabbinical writers.

9. οὐ βραδύνει—ἡγοῦνται] meaning, 'The Lord does not procrastinate respecting his promises, as some account what he doth to be dilatoriness.'—οὐ βραδύνει—τῆς ἐπαγγελίας. At τ. ἐπαγγ. there is a Genit. of reference, quod attinet ad, 'as to his promise,' i.e. in performing it. And of this use of the Genit. after verbs exx. occur in the Class. writers (see Matth. Gr. Gr. § 357), yet only in the instance of some verbs, and under certain restrictions, not comprehending βραδύνω. However, this does not amount to a solecism, since βραδύνω is used in the very same sense, at least with the dative case, in Sept. Deut. vii. 10, οὐχὶ βραδύνει τοῖς μισοῦσιν [αὐτόν] and often in Jos. In short, all the irregularity consists in βραδύνει being used where βραδύς ἴσθι would have been more classically correct, since Adjectives are not unfrequently so used by the best writers. By promise is meant fulfilment of promise; namely, that he would return to judgment. The scoffers had prob. said, that either God had really made no such engagement to judge all men according to their works; or that, if he had, he had not leisure to fulfil it. The argument is, that the delay of the catastrophe in question does not proceed from God's dilatoriness in making his assurance good (by coming to judgment and putting a final end to this mundane system); espec. if we consider that the measure of time with the Deity and with men is quite different; time being as nothing to Him in whose sight all is eternity; but that He delays from long-suffering, in order that all may have the opportunity of repentance.

1 Ps. 102. 17. τινὰς ἀπολέσθαι, ἀλλὰ πάντας εἰς μετάνοιαν χωρήσαι. 10<sup>1</sup> Ἦξει Isa. 51. 9. Matt. 24. 35. 43. 44.
 1 Thess. 5. 2. Rev. 2. 8. 4. 16. 8. 20. 11. & 21. 1. δὲ [ἡ] ἡμέρα Κυρίου ὡς κλέπτῃς [ἐν νυκτὶ]· ἐν ᾗ οἱ οὐρανοὶ ροιζήδον παρελεύσονται, στοιχεῖα δὲ καυσούμενα λυθήσονται, καὶ γῆ καὶ τὰ ἐν αὐτῇ ἔργα κατακαήσεται. 11 Τούτων οὖν πάντων λυομένων, ποταποὺς δεῖ ὑπάρχειν ὑμᾶς ἐν ἀγlais ἀνα-k Ps. 80. 3. 2 Thess. 1. 8.
 1 Isa. 66. 17. & 68. 1. Rev. 21. 1. στροφαῖς καὶ εὐσεβείαις, 12<sup>k</sup> προσδοκῶντας καὶ σπειδόντας τὴν παρουσίαν τῆς τοῦ Θεοῦ ἡμέρας, δι' ἣν οὐρανοὶ πυρούμενοι λυθήσονται, καὶ στοιχεῖα καυσούμενα τήκεται. 13<sup>1</sup> Καινοῦς δὲ

10. Ἦξει δὲ ἡ ἡμέρα Κυρίου] That is, 'the day of judgment'; see 1 Thess. v. 2; and comp. Rev. iii. 3. Lachm. and Tisch. cancel the ἡ before ἡμ., from B, C, and 2 cursives, and Cyrill. The Article is, indeed, used at 1 Cor. v. 5, and 2 Thess. ii. 2. But there it is called for by the one before Κυρίου. At 1 Thess. v. 2, indeed, the Article is used, notwithstanding that Κυρ. has it not, at least in the t. rec.; though there several of the best MSS. and some early Editions are without the Article, which propriety would certainly reject, and which is unnecessary with Κυρίου; for that adjunct so evidently adverts to one day alone that, from the very notoriety of it, the Article is needless; and prob. St. Paul did not employ it there. And, considering that St. Peter evidently transufes what St. Paul there says to this passage of his Epistle, the reading here may well follow the reading there. The words ἐν νυκτὶ are absent from several MSS., Versions, and Fathers, and have been cancelled by Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch. They may have been an interpolation from Eph. v. 2, and probably were, since they could not well be omitted by accident in so many MSS. Throughout this passage St. Peter had in view Judith xvi. 1, with which comp. Lucret. v. 93, seqq.—οἱ οὐρανοὶ ροιζήδον παρελεύσονται, 'with a mighty crash': ἡχητικόν, as Hesych. explains. So in Hero ap. Museum, 359, we have ροιζήδον προκρήρυτοι δι' ἡλιβάτων τίνας πύργους. By this we may understand that the world will pass away only as to the purpose it had served; for, as Benson observes, 'it is not necessary to suppose, with some, that the world will be annihilated, or removed, with its atmosphere, from its present orbit to another.' The full sense of παρελεύσονται is finely expressed by Shakesp. in the words, 'shall dissolve, And, like the base fabric of a vision, Leave not a wreck behind!'—στοιχεῖα δὲ καυσ.—κατακ. Many think that στοιχ. cannot denote the elements properly so called, but the heavenly bodies. But the usual signification of the word may be retained; see Benson. It denotes the component parts, those on which the Creator (as it were) went in the work of creation. In the καυσούμενα κατακαήσεται there is something quite graphic. That the world is to be destroyed by fire was the opinion of many eminent ancient Philosophers. And, considering the antiquity, and almost universality, of the opinion, Dr. Burnet, Theor. Tellur. vol. ii. p. 30, forcibly observes, 'We have heard, as it were, the cry of "Fire!" through all antiquity, and among all the people of the earth. Let us examine what attestation the Prophets and Apostles give to this ancient doctrine of the conflagration of the world. The Prophets saw the world on fire at a distance, and more imperfectly, as a brightness in the heavens, rather than as a burning flame. But Peter describes it as if he had been standing by, and seen and heard the crackling flames.'

11. τούτων οὖν π. λυομ., ποτ. δεῖ ὑμᾶς:] 'Doctrinam superiorem de mundi per ignem transmutatione Apostolicè convertit (Petrus) ad exhortationem. Ceterum exhortatio ratiocinatione constat hujusmodi: Mundus, qui nostri causâ conditus est, incendio solvetur, purgabitur, innovabitur, ut nostrum, id est, electorum atque iustorum fiat receptaculum; quantum igitur nos ipse, ut in habitaculum illud recipiamur, puros et sanctos esse convenit!' (Ret.) The interpretation, however, depends on the reading, which is disputed. For οὖν, MSS. B, C, and 9 cursives (to which I can only add Lamb. 1182), have οὕτως, which is edited by Tisch. But external authority is insufficient, and internal evidence is against the reading, for the οὖν is almost indispensable to the argumentation, by way of inference, and to the scope; to which οὕτως would be inapposite, and present a sense feeble and jejune. I suspect that οὖν (confirmed by the Peach. Syr. and Vulg. Versions) was first omitted in some very ancient copies through the carelessness of scribes (who oft. pass over that and other Particles), and that then οὕτως was brought in by Critics, who, justly deeming a Particle of some kind necessary, to point the inference, supplied οὕτως, which appeared to them as applicable here as at v. 4, with διαμαίει. Other Critics, however, supplied δι, or γάρ, while the Leicester MS. (I find from Jacks.) has τούτων οὖν πάντων λυομένων, which plainly shows that the οὕτως originated in a marginal Scholium.—ποταποὺς δεῖ ὑπάρχειν, &c. We should here have expected first an interrogation, and then an answer to it. The question and answer, however, are intermingled, and the interrogation here, as often, partakes of the nature of exclamation.—ἐν ἀγlais ἀναστροφαῖς καὶ εὐσεβείαις. Εὐσεβ. is explanatory of ἀγ. ἀναστ. The use of the word in the plural is so rare, that not even the last Edition of Steph. Thea. contains any ex. I have, however, met with one in Jos. Ant. xviii. 5, 3, οὐδὲν ἀφελὸν καὶ πλεονέκτην, οὐδ' ἄλλῃ ἀλλ' ὅτι τῶν ἐπιτηδευμάτων, διὰ τῶν πρὸς τὸ θεῖον εὐσεβειῶν, 'acts of piety'; so the Vulg. 'pietatis'; where the plural is used with reference to a collective body of people.

12. σπειδόντας] properantes, 'hastening on in anticipation,' 'furthering as far as earnest wishes and prayers can do it.' Comp. Isa. xvi. 5, σπειδόμενοι δικαιοσύνην.

13. καινοῦ δὲ οὐρ.—προσδοκ., &c.] 'Occurrit huic objectioni, "Si cœlum transibit, &c.

οὐρανούς καὶ γῆν καινὴν κατὰ τὸ ἐπάγγελμα αὐτοῦ προσδοκῶμεν, ἐν οἷς δικαιοσύνη κατοικεῖ. <sup>14</sup> Διὸ, ἀγαπητοί, ταῦτα προσ- m 1 Cor. 1. 8.
Phil. 1. 10.
1 Thess. 2.
12. & 5. 23.
n Rom. 2. 4.
ver. 8.
 δοκῶντες, σπουδάσατε ἄσπιλοι καὶ ἀμώμητοι αὐτῷ εὐρεθῆναι ἐν εἰρήνῃ <sup>15</sup> καὶ τὴν τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν μακροθυμίαν σωτηρίαν o Rom. 8. 19.
1 Cor. 15. 24.
1 Thess. 4.
15. ἡγείσθε. Καθὼς καὶ ὁ ἀγαπητὸς ἡμῶν ἀδελφὸς Παῦλος κατὰ τὴν αὐτῷ δοθείσαν σοφίαν ἔγραψεν ὑμῖν, <sup>16</sup> ὡς καὶ ἐν πάσαις ταῖς ἐπιστολαῖς, λαλῶν ἐν αὐταῖς περὶ τούτων. Ἐν οἷς ἐστὶ

Nullumne amplius erit cœlum? Nulla terra?" Respondet, "Erunt quidem, sed nova," &c. Sed cœlos novos ac terras novam (i. e. Novum Universum); nam id Hebræi nominibus cœli et terræ solent exprimeret. Gen. ii. 1. Pa. xxxiii. 6. xxiv. 8. cxlvi. 6. Acta xiv. 15. xvii. 24. Apoc. xxi. 1. (Gerhard and Grot.) It is well observed by Dr. Burton, that 'this need not signify that there will be another heaven and earth similar to the present, but a different [and yet, mutatis mutandis (1 Cor. xv. 44—50), a strictly analogous] state of things.'—κατὰ τὸ ἐπάγγελμα. Lachm. edits from MS. A. and some copies of the Vulg. and Ital. Versions, καὶ τὰ ἀγγέλλετε: but external authority is far too weak (I find it in all the Lamb. MSS.); and internal evidence is against it, since it yields a very forced and frigid sense. The reading, I doubt not, arose from the blunder of an ancient scribe, for καὶ and κατὰ are continually confounded; and the Plural τὰ may have arisen from the α of the next word; or it may have originated with a Critic, who thought the Plural here required by the Plural, supr. i. 4. But the Singular is required by supr. v. 9. and justified by Isa. lxxv. 17. 'Behold I create new heavens and a new earth,' and by the very nature of what is promised,—the resurrection of the body unto eternal life, 1 Tim. ii. 8, ἐπαγγελίαν ἔχον ζωῆς, where only a very few MSS. have ἐπαγγελίας. So also Heb. vi. 17. Yet the Plural is supported by 2 Cor. vii. 1. Heb. viii. 6. xi. 33, 39, and in some copies Rom. ix. 4. But there is no sufficient evidence for the Plural here. As to the καὶ τὰ, that reading is equally weak, and quite indefensible, for the reasons I have given; whereas the sense in κατὰ τὸ, or τὰ, is excellent, and found also in Acts xiii. 23, κατ' ἐπαγγελίαν. Gal. iii. 29, κατ' ἐπαγγελίαν κληρονομίαν (since v. 1.). Polyb. ix. 38, 2, κατὰ τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν.

14, 15. διὸ, ἀγαπ.—ἡγείσθε] The full sense is, 'Wherefore, seeing that you expect such things [as some time to happen], earnestly strive, by being unspotted and blameless, acquitted of blame in His sight, to be found of Him in peace; and reckon [as you justly may], that this long-extended forbearance of the Lord is meant to be our salvation; i. e. to promote it, by giving us an opportunity for working it out.'—ταῦτα, not 'the promises,' but 'the new heavens and earth, the advent of Christ to judgment,' &c.; or, rather, all the things mentioned in the context.—To advert to some particulars of interpretation. Σπoudῶ, is here used (as at 2 Tim. ii. 15. Heb. iv. 11, and 2 Pet. i. 10) of 'working out our salvation' (Phil. ii. 12), and making our calling and election sure, supr. i. 10.—Ἀντὶ is by the Commentators construed with ἐμειθῆναι, or taken as standing for παρ' αὐτοῦ; but its true construction seems to be with ἀσπιλοι καὶ ἀμώμητοι, as is plain from the parallel passages in Col. i. 22, ἀμώμονι καὶ ἀνγκλήτῳ κατανώπιον αὐτοῦ, scil. τοῦ Θεοῦ, and Jude 24. Heb. ix. 14, ἀμώμον τῷ Θεῷ. Thus, in the present case, αὐτῷ stands for ἐνώπιον αὐτοῦ, and at ἐμμεθ. may be supplied, from αὐτῷ preceding, παρ' αὐτοῦ. I have pointed accordingly.—'Ἐν εἰρήνῃ means 'in peace with their great JUDGE,' that 'peace which passeth all understanding.' See note on Rom. ii. 10.

15. καθὼς καὶ ὁ ἀγαπητός, &c.] We may suppose the Apostle to here refer generally to those Epistles of St. Paul which were written to the Asiatic Churches; for though addressed to particular Churches or persons, they were intended for general circulation, and in all of them he has written of the things mentioned, vv. 14, 15; as, for instance, Eph. ii. 3—5. Col. i. 21. 1 Tim. ii. 4.

16. πάσαις ταῖς ἐπιστολαῖς] Lachm. and Tisch. cancel ταῖς, on the authority of only 6 MSS. But that would be against grammatical propriety, considering that the Article, when put for the Possessive Pronoun (which here the context absolutely requires), cannot be left understood.—ἐν οἷς ἐστὶ διανοήτα τ.—ἀπώλειαν. Here some difference of opinion exists as to the sense, which mainly depends upon the reading. Instead of the t. rec. οἷς, MSS. A, B, and 16 cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1182), and some Fathers have αἷς, 'the Epistles'; which is preferred by Beza, Mill, Beusson, and Bp. Malby, in a Sermon on this text, who thinks that 'it agrees far better with the context; though (for reasons which will readily occur to the minds of Critics) the other might, at an early period, usurp its place.' Accordingly it is edited by Lachm. Yet the weight of authority is, we see, decidedly in favour of οἷς, which is retained by all the Editors, except Lachm.; and with reason; since internal evidence is quite in its favour, the other having arisen from a misunderstanding of the reference in οἷς, 'the antecedent to which,' as observes Dr. Peile, 'is to be sought in the words καθὼς—ἔγραψεν ὑμῖν'. The Apostle, he continues, 'meant to say, that, in what Paul has advanced to combat that great trial of the faith of the Hebrew Christians, the persecution which they had drawn upon themselves by deserting that imposing ritual, and that Ecclesiastical Polity, from which the God of their fathers had given no indication of having withdrawn His Presence, there are [as Heb. x. 32—37. xii. 1—13. xiii. 8—14, 20, 21. Rom. ix. 22, 23. Gal. iii. 1—5. iv. 9—11, 28—31. v. 1—12. 1 Thess. ii. 14. 2 Thess. i. 4—10. 1 Tim. i. 16; comp. under this view, with 1 Pet. i. 6, 7. iv. 12—19. v. 9, 10. 2 Pet. ii. 9. iii. 17, 18] some things hard to be understood.' By the term ἀμώμους is to be understood, not so much unblemished, as un-δυσνόητά τινα, ἃ οἱ ἀμαθεῖς καὶ ἀστήρικτοι στρεβλοῦσιν, ὥς καὶ τὰς λοιπὰς γραφάς, πρὸς τὴν ἰδίαν αὐτῶν ἀπώλειαν. p Mark 12. 17 ῥ' Ὑμεῖς οὖν, ἀγαπητοὶ, προγινώσκοντες φυλάσσεσθε, ἵνα μὴ τῇ τῶν ἀθέσμων πλάνῃ συναπαχθέντες, ἐκπέσητε τοῦ ἰδίου στηριγμοῦ. 18 αὐξάνετε δὲ ἐν χάριτι καὶ γνώσει τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν καὶ Σωτῆρος Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ. αὐτῷ ἡ δόξα καὶ νῦν καὶ εἰς ἡμέραν αἰῶνος! ἀμήν.

quainted with the subjects there discussed, and the manner of discussing them; including, of course, the style.—Ἀστήρικτοι, i. e. 'having no fixed principles of Christian doctrine to guide them'; or, as Dr. Peile interprets, 'having no root, no preparation of the heart, to keep them steady;' which may be included in the other as the principal sense, and confirmed and illustrated by James i. 8, ἀνὴρ διψ. ἀκατάστατος ἐν πάσαις ταῖς ὁδοῖς. Comp. supr. ii. 14, ψυχὰς ἀστήρικτους, and Gen. xlix. 4. By τὰς λοιπὰς γραφάς we must understand all the Scriptures of the New Test. then extant, including, Dr. Burton thinks, the Scriptures mentioned at 2 Thess. ii. 1—3, 15, as well as of the Old Test. —πρὸς τὴν ἰδίαν αὐτῶν ἀπώλειαν. Render, 'in suam perniciem' (so supra ii. 1, we have αἰρέσεις ἀπωλείας, 'highly pernicious heresies'), 'to their great spiritual injury,' and consequently tending to the perdition of their souls.

17. προγιν. φυλάσσεσθε] The full sense is, 'by taking forewarning, be on your guard, lest, being hurried away with the error of the lawless and disobedient (= ἀνόμοιοι καὶ ἀνυποτάκτοι, 1 Tim. ii. 9).—ἐκπίσ. τοῦ ἰδίου στηρ., 'ye fall from your own fixed steadfastness;' said in tacit opposition to the 'unfixedness' of the ἀστήρικτοι mentioned supr. 16; which would be the case if they were hurried away with them into the erroneous notions of licentious and lawless persons,—the false teachers, who perverted the Scriptures, and corrupted the doctrines of the Gospel, whereby those who were carried away with them would fall from their stability in the faith, and obedience of the Gospel. There is the same metaphor in Luke xxii. 52. Rom. i. 11. xvi. 25. 1 Pet. v. 10. supr. i. 12, ισταριγμίστου ἐν τῇ ἀληθείᾳ. But I would not refer it, with Dr. Benson, to a high tower, from which they might fall; but to a pillar, or column, so firmly fixed on its foundation and pedestal, that it cannot incline from the perpendicular, and fall; as the Apostle may have had in mind St. Paul's similar phrase, 1 Cor. xv. 58, ἰδρωταὶ γίνεσθε, ἀμειτακίνητοι, where see my note. On the force of the expression ἐκπίπτειν see note at Gal. v. 4.

18. αὐξάνετε] Here, as in other verbs, there is implied a notion of endeavour, i. e. 'strive to be continually growing:' an injunction, as is truly observed by Bp. Bull, Exam. p. 82, which has no bounds short of the high perfection attainable by the grace of Christ; so that we are held bound 'to be ever increasing' in virtue, εἰς μέτρον ἡλικίας τελείας, as Clem. Alex. says. Whence it is plain that the Romish doctrine of works of supererogation is utterly excluded.

ΙΩΑΝΝΟΥ ΤΟΥ ΑΠΟΣΤΟΛΟΥ

ΕΠΙΣΤΟΛΗ ΚΑΘΟΛΙΚΗ ΠΡΩΤΗ.

Ι. 1. Ὁ ἦν ἀπ' ἀρχῆς, ὃ ἀκηκόαμεν, ὃ ἑώρακαμεν τοῖς ὀφθαλμοῖς ἡμῶν, ὃ ἔθεασάμεθα, καὶ αἱ χεῖρες ἡμῶν ἐψηλά- 2 Luke 24.
30.
John 1. 1, 14.
& 20. 27.
3 Pet. 1. 16.

Of this Epistle the authenticity has been almost universally admitted, except by Marcion and the other early heretics. That it is from St. John is plain, though the writer's name is neither prefixed nor subjoined; its authenticity being attested at once by external testimony and internal evidence; the former on the testimony of Polyc., Papias, Irenæus, Clem. Alex., and others, down to Origen and Euseb. As the present composition has none of the characteristics of an Epistle (being without inscription, salutation, &c.), it has by some (as Michaelis) been thought more proper to denominate it a treatise: an opinion, however, ably refuted by Lücke, who well observes that Michaelis, measuring these Epistles by a Pauline standard, does not bear in mind the peculiar manner of St. John; and judges of the form of apostolical literature according to the form of the moderns. We may best steer a middle course, regarding this composition as a didactic address, with the internal character, though not the external form, of an Epistle. The time, however, when it was written, is exceedingly uncertain. Some assign to it as early a date as A.D. 68; others, as late a one as the end of the first century. The arguments for an early date seem to preponderate; yet there is no sufficient reason, with the generality of Critics, to suppose it written so early as even the year 68. We may rather adopt the opinion of those who think it was written at least after the destruction of Jerusalem, and before the writer's exile to Patmos. Beyond that period we seem forbidden to carry it, for certain reasons strongly stated by Benson, Hales, and others. Moreover, the same reasons of probability, which exist for an early, rather than a late date to St. John's Gospel serve to establish an early date for this Epistle. However, whether these reasons for the early date of St. John's Gospel be so valid as I have heretofore supposed, I now incline to doubt. That the Epistle was written after the Gospel, I regard as nearly certain; for though references to the Gospel in the Epistle have been traced, yet the allegations have not been proved. All we can safely say is, that the Apostle supposes his readers to be not only hearers of his preaching, but familiar with the substance of his written Gospel, cannot be doubted, for the strong reasons given by Dr. Davidson; and that it was written shortly after his Gospel, would appear from somewhat strong internal evidence. The fact of the Epistle being, as has been shown, a kind of Supplement to the Gospel, containing a forcible and pointed application of its doctrines, strongly confirms this view. I should, however, be induced to embrace the view of Dr. Lardner, who assigns an intermediate date to the Gospel and Epistle, — namely, about A.D. 80, were it not for the Epistle bearing on its face such strong marks of a date as late as the close of the first century. With this, Dr. Davidson observes, agrees the tone of it, which is characteristic of old age. Upon the whole I am inclined to agree with him, that 'the Gospel was sent forth to the Christian world at large (though communicated in substance long before in the East) about A.D. 97, and the Epistle soon after.' Whether, however, there intervened, as Dr. Davidson thinks, three years between the Gospel and the Epistle, is more than can safely be asserted. However, there is nothing to forbid as early a date as A.D. 90 for the Gospel, and about A.D. 92 for the Epistle; which dates may after all approximate nearly to the truth. As to the place where it was written, — if the Gospel, as there is no reason to doubt, was written at Ephesus, so must the Epistle; and on this point the opinion of antiquity is as weighty as it is decisive. The great purpose of St. John in this Epistle was, as Dr. Lücke says, to exhort his readers to constancy and firmness in the faith, to draw their attention to the chief defects in the Christianity commonly professed, but espec. to impress on their minds the commandments to sanctification and brotherly love, and thus preserve them from the seductions of Antichrist; but, united therewith, is a subordinate, but yet highly important one, of preserving them from doctrinal error; on the precise nature of which, and the character of the seducers and antichrists, much difference of opinion exists. From the profound investigations ἡ John 1. 1, 2.

 Rom. 16. 26.
 Col. 1. 26.
 2 Tim. 1. 10.
 Tit. 1. 2.
 1 John 17.
 1 Cor. 1. 9.
 φησαν, περὶ τοῦ Λόγου τῆς ζωῆς· <sup>2</sup> (καὶ ἡ ζωὴ ἐφανερώθη, καὶ ἐωράκαμεν, καὶ μαρτυροῦμεν, καὶ ἀπαγγέλλομεν ὑμῖν τὴν ζωὴν τὴν αἰώνιον, ἥτις ἦν πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα, καὶ ἐφανερώθη ἡμῖν) <sup>3</sup> δ' ἐωράκαμεν καὶ ἀκηκόαμεν, ἀπαγγέλλομεν ὑμῖν, ἵνα of Dr. Lücke, it appears to have been the intent of St. John, in this Epistle, to encounter both the Docetic heresy as to the humanity of Jesus Christ, and the Antinomian heresy of those who, grossly misinterpreting the language of St. Paul as to the νόμος, or revealed Law of God, perverted the Christian liberty into an antichristian libertinism,—confounding all moral distinctions, and deciding as to what was or was not sin, not according to the revealed Law of God, but according to an indefinite so called Christian feeling of their own. To guard against this antichristian error, seems to have been one of the immediate occasions of writing the Epistle, though such may not have been its main purpose. As to the contents of the Epistle, it is best divisible into three Parts, and an Introduction,—namely, i. 5—ii. 28, 29—iv. 6, 7—21; the Introduction being at i. 1—4; of which Parts see Dr. Davidson's summary view, or Dr. Peile's Analysis. The connexion is not so loose and disjointed as some suppose (though it requires no little care and skill to trace it), there being, as Dr. Davidson observes, 'sufficient connexion between the several Parts to give it unity and comprehensiveness.' As to the disputed question respecting the persons to whom it was addressed, there is reason to coincide in the opinion of those who think that it was intended as a kind of circular letter, or general address to the Christians, espec. Gentile Christians, of all the Churches, espec. in Asia Minor. The style of this Epistle is, like that of the Gospel, simple and unadorned, without any pretension to rhetorical art or logical method, and in which the sense is quite as much to be traced from the context, as deduced from the words themselves,—of which the brevity in certain cases occasions no little obscurity,—where, in short, the words in themselves are plain, but the exact import, as to the course of thought, difficult to be determined; or, again, where the sentences, considered separately, are plain, but the connexion between them is by no means clear. So that although, upon the whole, the general sense is sufficiently clear and adequate, yet as strict precision is not found, it is occasionally more difficult there to determine the exact sense than in the Epistles of St. Paul. As to the character of the Epistle, it is distinguished by an artless but dignified simplicity, and unaffected mildness and benevolence, united with a paternal authority, by which it has something in it exceedingly impressive,—such, in short, as we may emphatically style 'speaking the truth in love.' It is, indeed, in all respects worthy of 'the disciple whom Jesus loved.'

1—4. These verses form a sort of proems to the Epistle, in which the Apostle commences with adopting the same declaratory style as in his Gospel, entering at once upon the great subject of his present discourse,—namely, 'that uncreate and self-existent Excellency (the Λόγος τῆς ζωῆς) which had been from the beginning, as co-equal and co-eternal with the Father, and had at length become incarnate for the salvation of men.' Thus the Apostle, as observes Bp. Horsley, opens with the fundamental topics of God's perfections, man's corruption, and Christ's proposition.

1. δ' ἦν ἐπ' ἀρχῆς, &c.] Of this passage the construction is much cleared by throwing ver. 2 into a parenthesis, according to the punctuation which I have adopted. As to its interpretation, it has been not a little disputed whether by δ' ἦν ἐπ' ἀρχῆς, and τοῦ Λόγου τῆς ζωῆς, be meant a thing (i.e. the word of eternal life in the Gospel), or a person,—namely, the Redeemer, as God manifest in the flesh. That there is a reference to the Gospel is unquestionable; and quite manifest, too, is it that there is a reference to the Logos, otherwise, as says Dr. Pye Smith, the plain parallelism with the first verse in the Gospel of St. John will be lost; and indeed this is required by the whole context: though (as the same learned writer observes) it would still remain clear that Christ is personally intended under the epithet (ver. 2) ἡ ζωή, 'the life,' 'the eternal life,' and 'that which was from the beginning'; for the predicates to these agents can only be affirmed of a personal agent. Under these circumstances, the best mode of solving the difficulty will be to suppose, with Dr. Lücke, that there is here a twofold reference,—first, to the doctrine of the Gospel, and secondly, to the Logos. Thus τοῦ Λόγου τῆς ζωῆς is put for Λόγος ζωοποιῶντος (compare John i. 4), meaning, 'the life-giving Logos.' The several expressions, ἀκηκόαμεν, ἐωράκαμεν, ἰδυσάμεθα, and ἠψαλάφησαν, are meant to denote, by climax, information and knowledge of the most complete kind; ἰδυσάμεθα expressing the ideas of closer contemplation and more intimate familiarity than ἐωράκαμεν. In εἰ χεῖρες ἡμῶν ἠψαλάφησαν we have a figurative mode of expressing any thing being ascertained to be true by the most minute examination. Comp. Acts xvii. 27, εἰ ἄρα γε ψηλαφήσεις αὐτὸν καὶ εὐρεῖς. From the χεῖρες being here expressed, there may be supposed to be an allusion to what is related in Luke xxiv. 39, and John xx. 27; prob. meant to indirectly refute the notion of some heretics, that Jesus had not a substantial body.

2. ἡ ζωὴ] for ὁ Λόγος τῆς ζωῆς just before. Render: 'And this life (meaning Author of life, and Giver of life, the Word) was manifested [among us], and we Apostles have seen it, and do witness and declare unto you [the message of] that eternal Life, or Word, which was with the Father (see John i. 1, 2), and was manifested unto us [in the flesh].' See iii. 5. John i. 14. 1 Tim. iii. 16.

3. δ' ἐωράκαμεν καὶ ἀκηκ., &c.] 'that [I say] which we have seen and heard, announce we unto you;' as the Apostle had already done in his Gospel.—ἵνα—κοινωνίαν ἔχητε μεθ' ἡμῶν, &c. The expression κοινωνίαν ἔχειν here simply denotes participation in the blessings and privileges of the Gospel; but in the words just after, ἡ κοινωνία δὲ ἡ μετὰ τοῦ Πατρὸς καὶ μετὰ καὶ ὑμεῖς κοινωνίαν ἔχῃτε μεθ' ἡμῶν καὶ ἡ κοινωνία δὲ ἡ ἡμέτέρα μετὰ τοῦ Πατρὸς καὶ μετὰ τοῦ Υἱοῦ αὐτοῦ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ. <sup>4</sup> καὶ ταῦτα γράφομεν ὑμῖν, ἵνα ἡ χαρὰ ὑμῶν ᾗ πεπλη-ρωμένη. <sup>5</sup> Καὶ αὕτη ἐστὶν ἡ *ἀγγελία, ἣν ἀκηκόαμεν ἀπ' αὐτοῦ καὶ ἀναγγέλλομεν ὑμῖν, ὅτι ὁ Θεὸς φῶς ἐστὶ, καὶ σκοτία ἐν αὐτῷ οὐκ ἔστιν οὐδεμία. <sup>6</sup> Ἐὰν εἴπωμεν ὅτι κοινωνίαν ἔχομεν μετ' αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐν τῷ σκότει περιπατῶμεν, ψευδόμεθα, καὶ οὐ ποιοῦμεν τὴν ἀλήθειαν. <sup>7</sup> Ἐὰν δὲ ἐν τῷ φωτὶ περιπατῶμεν, ὡς αὐτὸς ἐστὶν ἐν τῷ φωτὶ, κοινωνίαν ἔχομεν μετ' ἀλλήλων, καὶ τὸ αἷμα Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ τοῦ Υἱοῦ αὐτοῦ καθαρίζει ἡμᾶς ἀπὸ πάσης ἁμαρτίας. <sup>8</sup> Ἐὰν εἴπωμεν ὅτι ἁμαρτίαν οὐκ ἔχομεν,

43 John 12.

e John 1. 20.

e 8. 12.

e 8. 12.

e 12. 25, 30.

1 Tim. 6. 16.

James 1. 17.

f Heb. 9. 14.

1 Pet. 1. 19.

Rev. 1. 6.

e 1 Kings 8.

e 2 Chron. 8.

e 2 Chron. 8.

e Job 9. 2.

Prov. 20. 9.

e 1 Cor. 7. 30.

James 2. 2.

τοῦ Υἱοῦ, &c., and at ver. 7, κοινωνίαν ἔχομεν μετ' ἀλλήλων, are inculcated the doctrines, (1) of the communion of believers with the Father and the Son, by participation of those blessings, which God the Father hath promised to those that are in covenant with Him, and (2) of that communion which the saints have one with another, by love. 'In order (says Lücke) to guard against the misconception, that the mutual communion of the disciples of Jesus with each other, and with him, is only a human and arbitrary institution, St. John, by way of explanation, adds, that the Apostolical Christian communion has its root, and is grounded on the communion with the Father and the Son.'

4. This verse serves to more precisely indicate the object of the present Epistle.—Καὶ ταῦτα γράφομεν ὑμῖν, ἵνα, &c., 'and [accordingly] these things write we unto you, that your spiritual joy (that joy in the Lord spoken of in Phil. iii. 1. iv. 4), [which you have from that communion] may be complete.' This joy, it is shown further on, would alone be attained by faith, as evinced in a life agreeable to the precepts of the Gospel.

5. καὶ αὕτη ἐστίν, &c.] Here, and in the verses following, St. John more fully opens the nature of that message, which the Apostles had heard from Jesus Christ, and were to deliver to the world.—For αὕτη ἐστίν, Tisch. edits ἐστὶν αὕτη, from a vast majority of the MSS.; while Lachm. (mirabile dictu!) retains the t. rec., and very properly; for it is quite in the manner of the Apostle's writing, while the other may be characterized as a more classic position, and as such brought in by the Reviser of the Alex. MS. I am now of opinion that the t. rec. ἐπαγγελία is an error of the scribes for ἀπαγγελία, which was a gloss on ἀγγελ., adopted by me, with all the Critical Editors; and which I find in Lamb. 1184. The sense here seems to include the notions of message and declaration. To show the true nature of the doctrine contained in this ἀγγελία, the Apostle lays down, in the words following, a fundamental and unquestionable position, that 'God is the great Fountain of light and purity, unclouded by any shadow of darkness or pollution whatever.'

6. On this verse comp. 2 Cor. vi. 14. 'To have fellowship, or communion, with Christ,' is a periphrasis (characteristic of St. John) to denote 'being a Christian,' at least by profession. Περιπατεῖν ἐν τῷ σκότει is a very forcible mode of expression to denote 'the habitual commission of sin in the course of a sinful life.' In the words ψευδόμεθα, καὶ οὐ ποιοῦμεν τὴν ἀλήθειαν we have another forcible expression, alike characteristic of St. John, at least as regards ποιεῖν τὴν ἀλήθ., which is found in his Gospel, iii. 21. Though, indeed, it is not so peculiar to him, but that it is occasionally (however rarely) found in the Sept., e. g. 2 Chron. xxxi. 21, ἐποίησε—τὸ ἀληθές. The expression corresponds to that of St. Paul, Eph. iv. 15, ἀληθεύειν.

7. Here are strongly contrasted the blessed effects of the opposite conduct.—ἐὰν δὲ ἐν τῷ φωτὶ περιπατῶμεν, &c., meaning to say (as Lücke expresses it) that 'only he who is in deed and in truth in communion with God, and accordingly like God himself, is in the light, and likewise removes from himself all darkness, and walks in the Divine light (ἐν τῷ φωτὶ), i. e. strives to become like unto God,—only such an one is a true Christian,—only such an one really belongs to the holy fraternal community of Christians,—only such an one can become conscious of Christ's redeeming power, and experience its effect on himself.' The expression κοινωνίαν μετ' ἀλλήλων must, from the context (see ver. 6), denote the holding mutual communion with God, and He with us; implying that communion of the saints elsewhere spoken of.—καὶ τὸ αἷμα Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, &c. In these words (forming the counterpoint to the preceding) we have pointed out the blessed effects of that communion, and consequent imitation of the Divine perfections. Render: 'And [then] the blood (i. e. sacrifice) of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all [repented and forsaken] sin'; i. e. by ratifying the covenant of pardon to the truly penitent. See infra ii. 2, and Bp. Bull's Harm. p. 56.

8—10. While the Apostle strenuously insists on the necessity of an habitual holy walk, as the effect and evidence of the knowledge of God in Christ Jesus, and of communion with him; he guards with as much care against self-righteous pride, as against an antinomian perversion of the Gospel. (Scott.)

8. ἐὰν εἴπωμεν ὅτι ἁμαρτίαν οὐκ ἔχομεν, &c.] For those are said to deny that they have sinned, who deny that they have incurred guilt by sin, and so either excuse or palliate what they have done, and dissemble the fault.—ἐαυτοὺς πλανῶμεν, καὶ ἡ ἀλήθεια οὐκ ἐστὶν ἐν ἡμῖν, meaning, that 'they who so speak or think only h Ps. 37. 5.

Prov. 23. 13.

ἐαυτοὺς πλανῶμεν, καὶ ἡ ἀλήθεια οὐκ ἔστιν ἐν ἡμῖν. <sup>9</sup> Ἐὰν ὁμολογῶμεν τὰς ἁμαρτίας ἡμῶν, πιστός ἐστι καὶ δίκαιος, ἵνα ἀφῇ ἡμῖν τὰς ἁμαρτίας, καὶ καθάρσιν ἡμᾶς ἀπὸ πάσης ἀδικίας.

<sup>10</sup> Ἐὰν εἴπωμεν ὅτι οὐχ ἡμαρτήκαμεν, ψεύστην ποιούμεν αὐτὸν, καὶ ὁ λόγος αὐτοῦ οὐκ ἔστιν ἐν ἡμῖν.

a Rom. 8. 34.
1 Tim. 2. 5.
Heb. 7. 24.
25. & 9. 24.
b John 4. 42.
Rom. 8. 26.
3 Cor. 5. 18.
Col. 1. 20.
ch. 4. 10, 14.

II. <sup>1</sup> Τεκνία μου, ταῦτα γράφω ὑμῖν, ἵνα μὴ ἁμαρτήτε· καὶ ἂν τις ἁμάρτη, παράκλητον ἔχομεν πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα, Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν, Δίκαιον, <sup>2</sup> καὶ αὐτὸς ἰλασμός ἐστι περὶ τῶν ἁμαρτιῶν ἡμῶν οὐ περὶ τῶν ἡμετέρων δὲ μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ περὶ ὅλου τοῦ deceive themselves, and truth and holiness have no place in their hearts' (see Bp. Bull's Harm. p. 56). This assertion is repeated at ver. 10, with the additional declaration, that by thus denying the consciousness of sin in ourselves, we do not only deceive ourselves, but make God a liar, i. e. (by a form of expression occurring also at Job xxiv. 25) we contradict what he has himself declared, that 'all have sinned and come short of the glory of God' (Rom. iii. 20, 23), and in short renounce his word (ὁ λόγος αὐτοῦ οὐκ ἔστιν ἐν ἡμῖν); his word (i. e. his revelation in the Gospel, see John v. 38) has no place in or about our hearts. See James i. 21.

9. ἰὰν ὁμολ.—ἀδικίας] To those who are convinced of, and acknowledge, sin (ἰὰν ὁμολογῶμεν τὰς ἁμαρτίας), humbly casting themselves on the mercy of God for repented and forsaken sin,—to these, it is shown, 'God is faithful to forgive them their sins,' &c.; i. e. he is so faithful to his promises, and just to his covenant engagements [to Christ their surety], as to forgive them their sins, and purify them from all unrighteousness. 'This revelation of God's righteousness, or method of bringing man back to be as was again with his Maker, St. Paul has represented under this one view: 'God is just, and yet, without any compromise of his justice, ready to acquit the transgressor whose plea for mercy is faith in Jesus: Rom. iii. 26.' (Peile.) 'God (as Lücke observes) is faithful to his promises because He is righteous; his righteousness makes him keep what He has promised and revealed as the law of the New Covenant, that the repentant and reforming sinner shall receive from him free pardon of former offences, and a new power of life.' 'The Apostle (observes Dr. Peile) interweaves the words καὶ δίκαιος, καὶ δὲ Divina justitia: "He is so faithful at once, and just, as to forgive us our sins, and hold us clear of all imputation of unrighteousness." Comp. Ps. xxxii. 5. Prov. xxviii. 13. Ezek. xviii. 30—32. Heb. viii. 10—12. x. 15—23.'

II. 1—11. The same argument is here continued; and to promote that holiness, which it is the great business of the Apostle to recommend in this Epistle, he urges the propitiation and intercession of Christ, and the necessity of showing our love to God by Christian love and charity, and by overcoming that immoderate love of the world so inconsistent with the love of God.

1. ταῦτα γράφω ὑμῖν, ἵνα, &c.] meaning to say, that 'his great purpose in writing what he is now writing, is to warn them against sin, that they may not fall into it,' &c. wilfully and habitually.—καὶ ἰὰν τις ἁμάρτη, παράκλητον ἔχομεν, &c., meaning, that 'if, indeed, any one (through human frailty) do sin, he need not despair; for in that case we have an advocate or intercessor with the Father:' i. e. One who, standing at the right hand of God, intercedes for us with God, or, as it is said in Heb. vii. 25. ix. 24, prays for us as the eternal High Priest; see note on John xiv. 16. So in Philo we have the terms παρακαλεῖν and παράκλητος frequently used of the Jewish High Priest interceding with God for the sins of the people. From the absence of the Article at Δίκαιον Bp. Middl. thinks that we are forbidden to take it (as is commonly done) for τὸν Δίκαιον. And while, on the one hand, he is not for the disjunction of Δίκ. from the proper name, and uniting it (as is done by Benson, Wakef., and most recent Commentators) with παρακλ., he, on the other hand, thinks the version 'Jesus Christ the Righteous,' beyond the original. He would, therefore, render, 'Jesus Christ, a righteous person.' Yet to assign so frigid a sense merely because such seems required by the canons of the Greek Article, is surely to defend the Greek of the Apostle at the expense of something of far more consequence; and to rest thus much on a minute propriety, in a writer so little exact as St. John, is any thing but judicious. Moreover, the rendering of our common Version, 'the Righteous,' is demanded by the context, from which it plainly appears that Δίκαιος is to be referred not to παράκλητον, which precedes, but to ἰλασμός, which follows. So Lücke well remarks that the words καὶ αὐτὸς, ver. 2, are not casual, but explicative, equivalent to idemque ille, and standing, indeed, by a use frequent in St. John, for the relative he; it being here the purpose of the Apostle to show that the office of Christ as Intercessor with God is founded on this, that he himself [the Righteous] became the ἰλασμός (answering to ἱλαστής in Levit. vi. 6, and often in the Septuagint) for our sins. Certainly there was a propriety in here styling Jesus Christ the Righteous or Just one (as Acts iii. 14. vii. 52. xii. 14), with allusion to that suffering of 'the just for the unjust' (1 Pet. iii. 18), whereby he made atonement for our sins. In short, the title was here introduced (as Mackn. observes) to make us sensible of the dignity of our Advocate, and of the efficacy of his Intercession on our behalf, founded on the merit of his death.

2. περὶ ὅλου τοῦ κόσμου] meaning, all mankind, the whole community of mankind, comprehending men of every description, good and bad, believers and unbelievers (see the Conserra-κόσμου. <sup>3</sup> Καὶ ἐν τούτῳ γινώσκουμεν, ὅτι ἐγνώκαμεν αὐτὸν, ἔάν τὰς ἐντολὰς αὐτοῦ τηρῶμεν. <sup>4</sup> ὁ λέγων "Ἐγνώκα αὐτόν," <sup>c ch. 1. 6 & 4. 20.</sup> καὶ τὰς ἐντολὰς αὐτοῦ μὴ τηρῶν, ψεύστης ἐστὶ, καὶ ἐν τούτῳ ἡ ἀλήθεια οὐκ ἐστίν. <sup>5</sup> ὁ δὲ ἂν τηρῇ αὐτοῦ τὸν λόγον, ἀληθῶς ἐν τούτῳ ἡ ἀγάπη τοῦ Θεοῦ τετελειώται. <sup>d John 12. 25. & 14. 31, 32. ch. 4. 12, 13.</sup> Ἐν τούτῳ γινώσκουμεν, ὅτι ἐν αὐτῷ ἐσμέν. <sup>e John 15. 4, 5.</sup> Ὁ λέγων ἐν αὐτῷ μένειν, ὀφείλει, καθὼς ἐκεῖνος περιεπάτησε, καὶ αὐτὸς οὕτως περιπατεῖν. <sup>f ch. 2. 11. & John 6. 1 Pet. 2. 21.</sup> Ἄδελφοί, οὐκ ἐντολὴν καινὴν γράφω ὑμῖν, ἀλλ' ἐντολὴν παtion Prayer in our Communion Service); the 'whole world,' as Dr. Barrow well remarks, 'being here, as often in St. John, said in contradistinction from all Christians, to denote all such as had not embraced Christianity.' So at 1 Tim. iv. 10, it is affirmed that God 'is the Saviour of all men, especially of them that believe;' and at John iv. 42, and infra iv. 14, Christ is said to be 'the Saviour of the world.' 'Hence,' as observes Bp. Beveridge, 'all particular persons comprehended under that general designation are capable of receiving the benefit of Christ's sufferings, if they will but apply them rightly to themselves.' So speaking, then, 'the Apostle (as Lücke observes) refers to the distinction between Christians and non-Christians generally; and that, we may suppose, in order to check the self-complacent pride of Christian particularism and spiritual pride against the world that lay in error and sin; by directing the attention of believers to God's universal grace.'

3—6. Here, by way of further unfolding what was said supra i. 5, 6, the Apostle shows the necessity of true and heartfelt repentance and reformation; evincing that a mere outward profession, unaccompanied by holiness of life, is vain and fruitless; also that the only sure test of a saving knowledge of Christianity is an habitual obedience to God's commandments. 'Postquam doctrinam illam de gratuita peccatorum remissione tractavit, iterum ad exhortationes redit illi annexas, et quæ ab ea dependent. Ac primo quidem admonet non otiosam esse Dei notitiam, quæ ex Evangelio concipitur, sed parere ex se obedientiam' (Calv.); q. d. 'accordingly (καί), by this practical test, may we ascertain whether we know him (God in Christ), if we are keeping his commandments; obedience being represented as the only test of true knowledge.—'Ἐγνώκαμεν has here,' observes Lücke, 'a practical sense;' namely, as far as the knowledge of God leads men to obedience to God's commandments. That this passage has nothing to do with the doctrine of Assurance has been fully evinced by Cudworth, in an admirable Discourse on this text,—who well observes, that 'the best assurance that any one can have of his interest in God is the conformity of his soul to God.'

4. ὁ λέγων "Ἐγνώκα, &c." Here there is a probatio e contrario, and the sentiment is the same with, or very similar to, that further on, ver. 9; the test in either case being deficient, and consequently the pretence being evinced to be false. See more in Calv.

5. ὁ δὲ ἂν τηρῇ, &c.] Meaning, that 'he who keepeth God's commandments is he alone who truly loves God; since in him love produces its proper effect, and is carried to its due height;' see

2 Cor. xii. 9. From the context it fully appears that here ἡ ἀγάπη τοῦ Θεοῦ cannot mean (as many Commentators explain) the love of God to us (as at iv. 9), but our love to God; as infra v. 15. iii. 16. v. 3, and often in the Gospel of St. John; namely, as Dr. Peile explains, 'that surpassing Love' (John iii. 16. xv. 9. 11. Rom. v. 8. viii. 31—35. Eph. iii. 19. 1 Thess. i. 13, et al.) which gave the Word, or Son of God to be, in Man reconsecrated 'that engrafted newness of life, which shall be a sanctifying leaven within us, to fill up the measure of the fullness of God, and of the CHRIST.' By the strong term τῆς αἰ is meant, as Calv. and Peile point out (referring to iv. 12. 17. 18. John xvii. 23. Phil. ii. 12. Heb. v. 9. vii. 28), 'is fully developed,' hath attained its purposed end.' See more in my Lex. in v. In the next words we have the same sentiment as supra v. 5, with the substitution of the synonymous phrase ἐν αὐτῷ εἶναι. This and other phrases occurring in St. John's writings, denoting communion with God, are meant to denote moral assimilation to God, which can only be attained by the profession and practice of the religion he enjoins. To this claim, when made, of abiding in God (on which and the consequences of the contrary, see John xv. 2), is, at ver. 6, applied the same test to prove its reality as at i. 5, 7, on communion with God; namely, whether the conduct be habitually conformed to the example of God, as consistent disciples imitate their master; with reference to the example of Jesus Christ, 'the Righteous,' who, while on earth, always did that which was well-pleasing to the Father (John viii. 29), keeping his commandments, and abiding in his love (John xv. 10).

7. 'A new paragraph commences here, extending over 5 vv., and suggested to the Apostle by the words of his Divine Master, John xiii. 34, 35, and xv. 12' (Peile). Thus, we may render, 'Brethren, it is not a new commandment that I am writing unto you, but an old commandment, which ye had from the beginning (of the Gospel), Mark i. 1. Acts v. 42. That old commandment is the word (or Gospel message) which ye have been hearing from the beginning, Luke i. 2 (v. 8). Again, however, it is a new commandment that I write unto you, and this is a real verity, both as in Him and in you, for the darkness [of imperfect revelation] is passing away, and the true Light [of God in Christ] is now shining,' John i. 8, 9. Such is, I apprehend, the general sense; though as to the exact interpretation a difference of opinion exists, espec. as to the particular commandment here meant. Some suppose it to be the injunction to the love of God and obedience to him contained in the immediately preceding verses, 3—6; while others λαίαν, ἣν εἵχετε ἀπ' ἀρχῆς· ἡ ἐντολὴ ἡ παλαιά, ἔστιν ὁ λόγος ὃν ἠκούσατε ἀπ' ἀρχῆς. <sup>8</sup> πάλιν ἐντολὴν καὶ νῦν γράφω ὑμῖν, ὃ ἔστιν ἀληθὲς ἐν αὐτῷ καὶ ἐν ὑμῖν ὅτι ἡ σκοτία παράγεται, καὶ τὸ φῶς τὸ ἀληθινὸν ἤδη φαίνει. <sup>9</sup> ὁ λέγων ἐν τῷ φωτὶ εἶναι, καὶ τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ μισῶν, ἐν τῇ σκοτίᾳ ἐστὶν ἔως ἄρτι. <sup>10</sup> Ὁ ἀγαπῶν τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ, ἐν τῷ φωτὶ μένει καὶ σκάνδαλον ἐν αὐτῷ οὐκ ἔστιν. <sup>11</sup> ὁ δὲ μισῶν τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ ἐν τῇ σκοτίᾳ ἐστὶ, καὶ ἐν τῇ σκοτίᾳ περιπατεῖ, καὶ οὐκ οἶδε ποῦ ὑπάγει, ὅτι ἡ σκοτία ἐτύφλωσε τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς αὐτοῦ.

<sup>12</sup> Γράφω ὑμῖν, τεκνία, ὅτι ἀφένονται ὑμῖν αἱ ἁμαρτίαι διὰ τὸ g John 1. 9.

 & S. 12.
 & S. 34.
 & S. 12.
 Rom. 13. 13.
 1 Thess. 5.
 h 1 Cor. 13. 2.
 3 Pet. 1. 19.
 ch. 2. 14, 15.
 1 John 13. 23.
 3 Pet. 1. 19.
 k ch. 2. 14.

1 Luke 34.
 47.
 Acts 4. 13.
 & S. 38.

understand him to allude to the commandment in the following verses, to 'love one another as Christ had loved them.' Now, this precept might be called old, as having been inculcated from the beginning of the Gospel by Christ himself, and recorded in the Apostle's Gospel, xiii. 34, 35, to which passage he probably alludes. And yet, though an old commandment, it might, on the other hand (πάλιν, as in Matt. iv. 7), be called new, either as being Christ's new commandment,—that first enjoined by him so as to be made the badge of distinction to the true professors of his religion,—or because urged from new and superior motives and obligations, and enforced by a new and perfect example:—new also, if we consider the standard to which the duty was raised, καθὼς ἠγάπησα ὑμᾶς, and thus to be performed in a new manner, and made a peculiar characteristic of the Christian religion. In fact, the precept, if not absolutely new, as being a part of the law of nature, and a precept of the Jewish religion, was yet new as regarded the persons to whom it was promulgated, considering the sentiments and practice of the age, when selfishness had almost eaten out all practical religion. Thus considered, it might be regarded as new, both with respect to Christ and to themselves; for such seems to be the import of the words ὃ ἔστιν ἀληθὲς ἐν αὐτῷ καὶ ἐν ὑμῖν, which I have thrown into a parenthesis; whereby will be removed the great difficulty of making the words ὅτι ἡ σκοτία παράγεται—φαίνει connect with the preceding. They refer to what was just before said, πάλιν ἐντολὴν καὶ νῦν γράφω ὑμῖν, and may either be understood, as some suppose them (see Whitby and Bp. Horsley), to assign a reason for calling the precept of brotherly love a new commandment, namely, as receiving additional authority from the light of the Gospel; or, as meant to suggest why this new precept should be observed in a new and far more perfect manner; namely, since the comparative darkness of Judaism is fast passing away, and the true light of Gospel truth is shining among them in full splendour; and they may therefore well be expected to evince the works of light, inasmuch as Christians might be expected to be more exact in their obedience to God, and more abounding in love to one another and to all men, than ever believers had been under the darker dispensation of the Law. Specious, however, as is this latter view, it involves so much harshness, and so disturbs the natural connexion of this whole portion of the chapter, that it cannot safely be adopted. The former one is therefore to be preferred, as involving far less difficulty than the other,—espec. according to the mode of explanation adopted by Dr. Lücke, who lays down the following statement of the context: 'St. John having said of the imitation of Christ, ver. 6, and of the walking in the light, that this is for his readers an old, long known, yet never an obsolete, but ever a new, commandment, he adds, with reference to this contrast, that this ἐντολὴ is certainly true and established (ἀληθὲς), and that its truth and certainty is grounded, partly on the example of Christ, who thus walked in the light, ver. 6, partly on the experience of his readers. For, as to the latter point, he means to say, that among them (inasmuch as they do now walk in the light) the darkness of error and sin (in which they lived ere they became Christians) is already vanishing (παράγεται), and that the true light of the true knowledge and love of God is now shining forth among them.' According to the above connexion, he adds, vv. 9, 10 will connect well with vv. 6—8. Now, the chief virtue of the Christian life, of the life in the light, and the chief injunction of Christ is, according to St. John, brotherly love: love is also, according to St. Paul, the fulfilment of the law, the bond of perfection, Gal. v. 14. Col. iii. 14. With reference to this principle, and proceeding from that which is general to that which is more special, St. John says, ver. 9, ὁ λέγων ἐν τῷ φωτὶ εἶναι, 'whoever thinks that he is a true Christian, and yet hates his brother, he still is (ἐστὶ ἀρτι) in the darkness of non-Christianity.'

9—11. Here we have the foregoing sentiment further developed. 'He alone, it is said, who loveth his brother is he who really abideth in light; nor is there any thing in him likely to occasion his falling into offence or sin (with allusion to Ps. cxix. 165); whereas he who hateth his brother is habitually and continually in darkness, not knowing whether he is going (see Job xi. 9) and as men walking in the dark know not the course they are pursuing, nor at what they stumble, so such an one, not aware of the dangers that beset his path, is therefore likely to meet with many σκάνδαλα or stumbling-blocks in the way.' Thus, then, it is meant, that he who loveth not his brother is in utter ignorance of vital religion, and, as far as he is a professor of Christianity, and aims at salvation, he entirely wanders, both in conception and action, from the object he seeks. See Calv. and Mackn.

12—15. In this portion we may best suppose, with Carpzov. and Rosenm., that the thesis, or main proposition of the argument, rests in the δνομα αὐτοῦ. <sup>13</sup> Γράφω ὑμῖν, πατέρες, ὅτι ἐγνώκατε τὸν ἀπ' ἀρχῆς· γράφω ὑμῖν, νεανίσκοι, ὅτι νενικήκατε τὸν πονηρὸν. γράφω ὑμῖν, παῖδια, ὅτι ἐγνώκατε τὸν Πατέρα. <sup>14</sup> Ἐγραψα ὑμῖν, πατέρες, ὅτι ἐγνώκατε τὸν ἀπ' ἀρχῆς· ἔγραψα ὑμῖν, νεανίσκοι, ὅτι ἰσχυροὶ ἐστε, καὶ ὁ λόγος τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐν ὑμῖν μένει, καὶ νενικήκατε τὸν πονηρὸν. <sup>15</sup> Μὴ ἀγαπᾶτε τὸν κόσμον μηδὲ τὰ ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ. ἑάν τις ἀγαπᾷ τὸν κόσμον, οὐκ ἔστιν ἡ

m E. h. d.
10—13.

m Matt. d. 24.
Rom. 12. 2.
Gal. 1. 10.
James 4. 4.

words at ver. 15, μὴ ἀγαπᾶτε τὸν κόσμον μηδὲ τὰ ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ. And here, having first, at v. 12, addressed himself to Christians in general, by the endearing appellation τακτρία, the use of that word seems to have suggested to the Apostle the idea of addressing himself to the several classes of Christians, as distributed according to their age.

13, 14. γράφω ὑμῖν, &c.] In this word γράφω there seems to be, as at ch. v. 13, a signif. præsens, the full sense being, 'I tell, or remind you of this, that alone through faith in Him, and by virtue of His atonement, are ye,' &c.—To advert to a disputed reading. For γράφω, before παῖδια, Lachm. and Tisch. edit ἔγραψα, from 4 uncial, and very many cursive, MSS.; and, considering that internal evidence is in its favour, it may be the true reading. I find it in Lamb. 1182, 1 m., and in Mus. 11,836. There is a repetition in inverse order of the two terms; and in the repetition ἔγραψα is substituted, 1st, he says, I write [to tell you this], and, 2ndly, I have written [what I have, that ye may know].—ἐγνώκατε τὸν ἀπ' ἀρχῆς, meaning, 'Ye have known that exalted Person Who was from the beginning,' or Who has existed from eternity. Thus, as Bp. Middl. observes, by the expression elsewhere, ὁ ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς, is denoted 'He who is in heaven.' 'That τὸν ἀπ' ἀρχῆς' (continues he) must mean Jesus Christ, is to be inferred not only from the context, but from the circumstance that there was no occasion to assert the eternity of the Father, who is expressly mentioned in this very verse.' This text, therefore, in common with others, affirms the eternal pre-existence of Christ, and it harmonizes exactly with the language of the same writer in the exordium of the Gospel. 'In the beginning was the Word.' It is to be observed that at ver. 14 we have a repetition, with somewhat of amplification, of what was said at ver. 13, γράφω ὑμῖν, νεανίσκοι, ὅτι νενικήκατε τὸν πονηρὸν: for as to the last clause of ver. 13, γράφω ὑμῖν, παῖδια, ὅτι ἐγνώκατε τὸν Πατέρα, that, I agree with Lücke, forms a part of the gradation, the classification being only into 'fathers' (masters of families), and 'young men.' Why 'children,' in the literal sense, should here be likewise addressed, and espec. as 'having known the Father,' I see not. We may, I think, with Lücke, suppose the words γράφω ὑμῖν, παῖδια, as parallel to γράφω ὑμῖν, τακτρία, at ver. 12, and (as in the case of γράφω ὑμῖν, πατέρες) containing an emphatic repetition, with amplification. In his address to the young (meaning generally persons in the flower of life) the Apostle, by the words νενικήκατε τὸν πονηρὸν (which intimate what is to be done by what is supposed to have been done, or to be doing) alludes to those fiery temptations ('darts tempered in hell') which the Evil One levels especially against persons of that time of life. In the repeated address to them at ver. 14, there is an amplification of the proposition,—the full sense being, 'for you [I presume] are strong [in the Lord]; and the word [i. e. revelation] of God abideth in you, and [I trust that] you have exerted your strength, and conquered the Evil One.'

15—17. Now follows the weighty admonition, suspended on the preceding verses, and at length introduced in reference to all the three classes of persons just mentioned. The passage is ably treated on by Bp. Jebb, Sacr. Lit., p. 269, as follows: 'The subject is laid down in a twofold form: 1. Love not the world; 2. neither love the things of the world. The former injunction is first taken up: "If any one love the world," &c.; the latter is then enforced: "For all that is in the world," &c.; and then the reasons of both injunctions are severally condensed: "For the world passeth away, and the desire thereof;" after which the moral of the whole is most powerfully brought home by the strong antithetical assurance, that "he who doeth the will of God abideth for ever." From the disjunctive form (continues the Bishop) of the commencing words, it is unquestionable that the Apostle intended to draw a marked distinction between "the world" and "the things in the world;" but what is the distinct meaning of each? Probably the world here signifies that entire system of bad pursuits and false enjoyments which fallen man has manufactured for himself; and "the things in the world," the wrong dispositions and propensities which engage men in such pursuits, and plunge them into such enjoyments. He who loves the former must clearly want an abiding principle of love to God; for that system is antagonistically opposed to the word and the will of God: he who loves the latter, loves dispositions proceeding not from God, but from that world opposed to God, which fosters them, and to which they are subservient. These dispositions the Apostle describes by "the desire of the flesh, the desire of the eyes, and the pride of life;" i. e. sensuality, avarice, and ambition. These, and that system to which they minister, are alike transient,—they pass away:" but "he who doeth the will of God," he who maketh himself a denizen of God's world, "abideth for ever;" eternity is stamped on his enjoyments and pursuits, an eternity which inherently belongs to his own character, formed, as it is, by the grace of God, and by that grace preserved from sin.' Whether, however, the above distinction between the world and the things of the world be as well founded as it is ingeniously supported, may, I think, be doubted. For my own part, I apprehend, no marked distinction is to be supposed in this disjunctive form, μὴ—μηδέ; since it frequently happens in such cases, o Eccles. 5.

11.

p Ps. 90. 10.
Isa. 40. 6.

1 Cor. 7. 31.
James I. 10.

8 & 14.
1 Pet. I. 24.

9 Matt. 24.
9, 24.

Acts 20. 26.
2 Thess. 2. 2.

3 John 7.

that the things thus violently disjoined are in effect closely connected, one as resulting from the other: in which case, where the clauses are, as here, very short, they ought not to be separated by a comma (ex. gr. Mark xiii. 11, μὴ περιμενεῖν τί λαλήσῃτε, μὴδὲ μελετᾶτε); and in all these instances we may best render by neither—nor. Here the words suspended on the μὴδὲ seem added by way of developing the sense intended by κόσμοι preceding,—namely, the world and the things that are in it; a sense more plainly expressed at ver. 16 by πάν τὸ ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ. Why, then, it may be asked, did not the Apostle here at once write πάν τὸ ἐν κόσμῳ? I answer, because the opposition between this love and the love of the Father rather required κόσμος, which is, indeed, in some degree, personified, as in a similar passage of St. James, iv. 4, where it is declared that friendship with the world is enmity with God.

16. ὅτι πᾶν τὸ ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ—ἐστὶ] These words contain the reason for the foregoing injunction, and the argument itself proceeds on the presumption that the true Christian must be influenced solely by the love of God, and reject whatsoever interferes with it. The words ἡ ἐπιθυμία τῆς σαρκὸς—βίον are paranetical; being an enumeration of the constituent parts of τὸ πᾶν. By ἡ ἐπιθυμία τῆς σαρκὸς is meant 'sensuality of every kind'; 'the living after the flesh, and not after the Spirit.' See Gal. v. 16, seq. By ἡ ἐπιθυμία τῶν ὀφθαλμῶν is commonly supposed to be denoted the vice of covetousness. But I would still, as heretofore, understand it of 'the desire of the carnal mind after whatever so captivates the eye, that the heart is set upon it; which view of the subject may throw light on an obscure passage of Job xxxi. 7, 'If my step hath turned out of the way; if mine heart hath walked after mine eyes.' So (observes Lücke) as the flesh is the source of all sensual desires in man, so the eyes are the inlets of that sensual lust, whose object is the external world (comp. 2 Pet. ii. 14, and note). The eye awakens a desire of the things it sees; and thus in the eyes are reflected greediness, voluptuousness, and every other lust of the flesh.' Comp. what is said by Epicurus (as cited by Grot. on Rom. xiii. 14), who, adverting to the various inlets to sin through the senses, mentions those διὰ μορφῆς, meaning 'the impressions made by, and through the eyes, of the various forms which float around us, and espec. the forms of personal beauty.' By ἡ ἀλαζονεία τοῦ βίου seems meant 'an inordinate desire after the external vanities, the ostentatious luxuries, in short, the pomps and vanities of this world,—that ambition of and attachment to show, well expressed by our old English word braverie, which means an ostentatious splendour.' So in Polyb. Hist. xi. 8, 4, we have ἡ κατὰ τοὺς βίους ἀλαζονεία καὶ πολυτέλεια.

ἀγάπη τοῦ Πατρὸς ἐν αὐτῷ 16 *ὅτι * πᾶν τὸ ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ, ἡ ἐπιθυμία τῆς σαρκὸς καὶ ἡ ἐπιθυμία τῶν ὀφθαλμῶν καὶ ἡ ἀλαζονεία τοῦ βίου,—οὐκ ἔστιν ἐκ τοῦ Πατρὸς, ἀλλ' ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου ἐστὶ.* 17 Καὶ ὁ κόσμος παράγεται, καὶ ἡ ἐπιθυμία αὐτοῦ ὁ δὲ ποιῶν τὸ θέλημα τοῦ Θεοῦ, μένει εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα. 18 Παῖδια, ἐσχάτη ὥσα ἐστὶ καὶ, καθὼς ἠκούσατε ὅτι ὁ ἀντίχριστος ἔρ-

17. ὁ κόσμος παράγεται] So 1 Cor. vii. 31, παράγει τὸ σχῆμα τοῦ κόσμου τούτου: James iv. 14, and see notes.—ὁ δὲ ποιῶν τὸ θέλημα, &c. 'By this description of the man, who, making himself (as Bp. Jebb expresses it) a denizen of God's world, abideth for ever, St. John expresses the same thing as St. Paul, Rom. vi. 22, where he describes those who, being emancipated from sin, are now servants unto God, having their fruit unto holiness, even an increasing sanctification.' (Peile.) In ὁ ποιῶν τ. θέλ. τ. Θεοῦ, the Present tense denotes habit of action; q. d. 'he who is doing, carrying out into practical effect, God's gracious purpose towards him' (as Dr. Peile explains the next words), μένει εἰς αἰῶνα; where μένει is in antithesis to παράγεται in the former clause, intimating the perpetuity of bliss, springing from his 'being accepted in the Beloved,' and by his close communion with the Son, 'who abideth for ever.' Rom. viii. 35. Comp. John xiv. 19, ὅτι ἐγὼ ζῶ, καὶ ὑμεῖς ζήσεθε. In fact, the best comment on the whole chapter is our Lord's address to his disciples in the xivth chapter of St. John's Gospel.

18—28. 'A doctrinā morali, quæ decuit diligendos fratres, et a dilectione mundi revocavit, transitum nunc facit ad exhortationem, quā fideles monuit adversus hereses et sectas, quæ non paucæ jam tum subortæ erant.' (Est.) The Apostle earnestly cautions them against the arts of deceivers and seducers, then very numerous, who were propagating various pernicious heresies. He at the same time points out to them, vv. 20, 21, 27, the many advantages which they had for knowing the truth, and, vv. 26, 29, the many obligations which they were under to adhere to and practise it.

18. ἡ ἐσχάτη ὥσα ἐστὶ] From the perishableness of the world the Apostle is led to advert to the end of it,—namely, at the day of judgment, as seems denoted by the expression ἐσχάτη ὥσα; comp. Rom. xiii. 11, seq. 1 Thess. v. 1, seq. 2 Pet. iii. 1, seq. Some, indeed, understand the period here spoken of to be the last period of the Jewish economy, when many false Christs were to appear.—ὁ δὲ ἀντίχρ. On the precise import of this expression no little diversity of opinion exists. One thing is clear, that the Antichrist, as spoken of by St. Paul, 2 Thess. ii. 4, under the terms 'the Man of Sin,' 'Antichrist,' was yet to come; while the persons called antichrists had already appeared, or were then in existence. Now these antichrists cannot have been (as some suppose) the false Christs predicted by our Lord, Matt. xxiv. 23—25; for δὲ ἀντίχρ. will not here bear such a sense; nor do the characters of the persons in question, as given at iv. 7, and 2 John 7, correspond. Those plainly designate the persons, not as apostates, but opponents of Christ; though it would seem (as Thos. Scott supposes) that the direct and avowed opposers of Christianity, wheχεται, καὶ νῦν ἀντίχριστοι πολλοὶ γεγόνασιν ὅθεν γινώσκομεν ὅτι ἐσχάτη ὥρα ἐστίν. <sup>19</sup> Ἐξ ἡμῶν ἐξῆλθον, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἦσαν <sup>r Ps. 41. 10.</sup> ἐξ ἡμῶν εἰ γὰρ ἦσαν ἐξ ἡμῶν, μεμενέκεισαν ἂν μεθ' ἡμῶν. <sup>Acts 20. 30.</sup> ἀλλ' ἵνα φανερωθῶσιν, ὅτι οὐκ εἰσὶ πάντες ἐξ ἡμῶν. <sup>1 Cor. 11. 19.</sup> <sup>20</sup> Καὶ <sup>s Ps. 45. 3.</sup>

 ὑμῖς χρίσμα ἔχετε ἀπὸ τοῦ Ἁγίου, καὶ οἴδατε πάντα. <sup>& 128. 2.</sup> <sup>21</sup> Οὐκ <sup>John 14. 26.</sup> ἔγραψα ὑμῖν ὅτι οὐκ οἴδατε τὴν ἀλήθειαν, ἀλλ' ὅτι οἴδατε αὐτήν, <sup>10. 15.</sup> καὶ ὅτι πᾶν ψεῦδος ἐκ τῆς ἀληθείας οὐκ ἔστι. <sup>Heb. 1. 2.</sup> <sup>22</sup> Τίς ἐστὶν <sup>ch. 4. 2.</sup> <sup>John 7.</sup>

ther Jewish or Heathen, cannot be meant in this place. St. John has rather in view that apostasy from the true faith, by heresy, which St. Paul foretold (1 Tim. iv. 1) would take place in the latter times. An antichrist in this sense may be defined in the words of Thos. Scott (after Beza), as being 'one who opposes Christ, whether he oppose the doctrine of his Deity, or his humanity; or whether he set himself against him, in respect of his priestly office, by substituting other methods of atoning for sin, and finding acceptance with God; his kingly office, by claiming authority to exact laws, in his Church, contrary to his laws, or to dispense with his commandments; or his prophetical office, by claiming authority to add to, alter, or take away from the revelation which he has given in his holy word.' This agrees well with the Apostle's definition of antichrist at ver. 22, ὁ ἀρνούμενος τὸν Πατέρα καὶ τὸν Υἱόν, and iv. 3. 2 John 7. Perhaps, however, it will be better not to confine it to apostasy or heresy, but extend it also to negotiousness, and the virtual denial of Christ in works. After all, indeed, the expression may be only, as Lücke supposes, a name for an idea, and meant to express 'the principles of falsehood and heresy,' resisting the truth of the Gospel within Christ's Church, by an internal and spiritual enmity; as in like manner by the expression ὁ ἀρνούμενος at 2 Thess. ii. 3, is denoted the external and general enmity of non-Christians against Christianity. And so Kütt., whose note see in Peile.—To advert to a matter of philology. The καὶ following is not to be taken with καθεύς, but is in correspondence with καὶ in the next clause, there being an ellipsis of οὐτως. Render: 'And as—so now.' In the same manner καὶ occurs in Luke vi. 31, καὶ, καθὼς θέλετε ἴνα—καὶ ὑμεῖς ποιεῖτε αὐτοῖς ὁμοίους.

19. Ἐξ ἡμῶν ἐξῆλθον, &c.] The full sense is, 'They [originally] proceeded from us, but they were never really of us,' i.e. were not true Christians at heart; 'for if they had been really of us, they would have remained with us, and kept our doctrine; but they did not so, and the result was, that they were proved not to have been of us,' i.e. not true Christians.

20. καὶ ὑμῖς χρίσμα, &c.] In this verse we have a contrast to the last, and consequently the καὶ is adversative; the purpose of the words being that of consolation and assurance to true believers. (Lücke.) Render: 'And yet an unction have ye from the Holy One; and (accordingly) know all things [which it hath pleased God to reveal to us by the Spirit];' John xiv. 26. xvi. 13. 1 Cor. ii. 10—16; implying, what is expressed at the resumption of this at 21. 27, καὶ ὁ χρίσμα ἔχετε ἵνα τις ('any man') ἐκδύσῃ ὑμᾶς. The term χρίσμα, occurring here and at ver. 27, has that metaphorical sense by which the verb χρίω is used of 'communicating the gifts and graces of the Spirit;' with allusion to the solemn inauguration of Priests and Kings with oil. Thus it might denote that inauguration of the Holy Spirit which accompanies the use of the Christian sacraments; and that, indeed, is all that many suppose to be here meant. But it seems rather to designate generally, the imparting of the Holy Spirit promised by Christ to all true believers, to lead them into all truth (John xiv. 26. xvi. 13); and that whether by the communication of the supernatural Gifts, or the ordinary Graces of the Spirit for sanctification, imparted through the preaching of the word, the administration of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, and other means of grace. Certain it is that oil is often in Scripture represented as typical both of the gifts and of the graces of the Spirit. So in the Parable of the Virgins, Matt. xxv. 4, the oil, enjoined to be taken in the lamps, is evidently the oil of grace to the heart, to keep alive the vigilance and perseverance of professing Christians. See Bp. Sanderson, Sermon. p. 365; and see note on Mark vi. 13. By the expression τοῦ Ἁγίου the best Expositors are agreed is meant Christ; see Mark i. 24. John x. 36. xvii. 9. Acts iii. 14. Rev. iii. 7.

21. οὐκ ἔγραψα ὑμῖν ὅτι—οὐκ ἔστι] 'The Apostle's argument here, mutatis mutandis, closely resembles that of Paul in Rom. iii. 3. "What, if some have separated themselves from the doctrine and the discipline of the Apostolic Church, shall their secession, or shall their secularity, invalidate the stability and the spirituality of that holy fellowship which we have with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ? Far be it that I should assert this." (Peile.) Who further observes (very truly) that 'this is the argument used in the Twenty-sixth Article of our Church.' The full sense is: 'I have written [as I have] to you, not because ye know not the truth, but because ye know it (competently) [accordingly the word of remembrance may suffice], and (are well aware) that no lie (or false representation of the truth in Jesus) is of the truth as respects the Gospel.' This turn of expression has the appearance of being a mode of address intended to conciliate and to make that capable of yielding profitable instruction which is little acceptable to flesh and blood. See my note on Thucyd. iv. 17. 3. Its purpose may have been to obviate the objection, that there could be no necessity to teach those who had been enlightened by the Holy Spirit, q. d. I have written thus to you, not because you are ignorant of the truth, but to put you in mind of what you already know. In short, the passage is very like that of 2 Pet. i. 12, where we have ὑπομνήσκειν ὑμᾶς, καὶ ἵνα εἰδῶτα.

22. τίς ἐστὶν—ὁ Χριστός:] The Apostle ὁ ψεύστης, εἰ μὴ ὁ ἀρνούμενος ὅτι Ἰησοῦς οὐκ ἔστιν ὁ Χριστός ; οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ ἀντίχριστος, ὁ ἀρνούμενος τὸν Πατέρα καὶ τὸν Υἱόν. 23 ἡ Πᾶς ὁ ἀρνούμενος τὸν Υἱόν, οὐδὲ τὸν Πατέρα ἔχει u Luke 12. 8.

John 15. 23.
1 Tim. 5. 12.
ch. 4. 15.

ὁ ὁμολογῶν τὸν Υἱόν, καὶ Πατέρα ἔχει. 24 Ὅτι μὲν οὖν δ' ἠκούσατε ἀπ' ἀρχῆς, ἐν ὑμῖν μενέτω. Ἐὰν ἐν ὑμῖν μείνῃ δ' ἀπ' ἀρχῆς, ἠκούσατε, καὶ ὑμεῖς ἐν τῷ Υἱῷ καὶ ἐν τῷ Πατρὶ μενεῖτε. 25 Καὶ αὕτη ἐστὶν ἡ ἐπαγγελία ἣν αὐτὸς ἐπηγγείλατο ἡμῖν, τὴν ζωὴν τὴν αἰώνιον. 26 Ταῦτα ἔγραψα ὑμῖν περὶ τῶν πλανούντων ὑμᾶς.

x Jer. 31. 33.
34.
John 14. 23.
24. 13.
Heb. 8. 10.
11.

27 ἡ Καὶ ὑμεῖς τὸ χρίσμα δ' ἐλάβετε ἀπ' αὐτοῦ, ἐν ὑμῖν μένει, καὶ οὐ χρεῖαν ἔχετε ἵνα τις διδάσκῃ ὑμᾶς ἄλλ', ὥς τὸ αὐτὸ χρίσμα διδάσκει ὑμᾶς περὶ πάντων, καὶ ἀληθές ἐστι, καὶ οὐκ ἔστι ψεύδος, καὶ καθὼς ἐδίδαξεν ὑμᾶς, μενεῖτε ἐν αὐτῷ. 28 ἡ Καὶ νῦν, τέκνιά, μένετε ἐν αὐτῷ ἵνα ὅταν φανερωθῇ, ἔχωμεν παρρηy Mark 8.

36.
ch. 2. 2.

means to say, that this general self-evident proposition [πᾶς ψεύδης—οὐκ ἔστι] is not more certain, than the particular application of it to the delusions of the seducers; whose false doctrines could not proceed from the same source with the truth of God. (Scott.) These words are to be understood comparatē; 'alios omnes supere, q. d. nisi hoc censeatur mendacium, aliud nullum haberi posse' (Calv.). 'Who is a deceiver or antichrist (i. e. apostate) if he be not, who denies that Jesus is the Messiah?' See note supra v. 18. Of course, the expressions δ' ψεύστης and ὁ ἀντίχρ. are to be taken, respectively, in a generic sense, to denote the class of persons each individually such. The Apostle means, we may suppose, to thus designate the false teachers, or heretical persons, as ψεύσται and ἀντίχριστοι, and to show why they may be esteemed such; namely, 1. as denying the Messiahship of Jesus, by which we are to understand denying his full Messiahship as it is described in the Scriptures. Such an one is, then, said, by implication, to be an antichrist; and under this description (the Apostle adds) comes 'he that denieth the Father and the Son,' ὁ ἀρνούμενος τὸν Πατέρα καὶ τὸν Υἱόν, where the καὶ is very significant. This antichristian spirit is pronounced to be the denying the mysterious connexion between the Father and the Son, according to the relations in which they are represented to us in the Gospel, separating the Son from the Father, and consequently degrading him from his high dignity. On this whole passage see Bp. Bull's Judic. Cathol. Eccl., pp. 16, 14, and 84. The words following, v. 23, πᾶς ὁ ἀρνούμενος—ἔχει, serve to further develop the sense, and intimate that this separation is a virtual denial not only of the Son, but of both Father and Son. 'For he (observes Whitty) that denieth the Son cannot retain the true knowledge of the Father, because he can be known only through the Son; John i. 18. iv. 23, 24. viii. 19, 55. xiv. 6, 7. xvi. 3. Matt. xi. 27.' The words following contain an assertion of the contrary truth. They are, indeed, not found in the t. rec., but they are contained in most of the MSS. (to which I add 2 Lamb. and 2 Mus. copies); almost all the Versions, and very many Fathers; and have been received into the text by Bengel, Griesb., Matth., Scholz, and Tisch. (not Lachm.). They have, in fact, every evidence of genuineness; for they not only seem to be required by the sense, but are in the manner of St. John. Their omission may far better be imputed to homotelenon than their addition can have arisen from a marginal scholium. The words may be rendered, with Dr. Peile, thus,—'He who acknowledgeth the Son is he that hath the Father.' The words, he adds, serve to elucidate the connexion which had been just expressed by οὐδὲ καὶ οὖν.

24—26. Here the Apostle first gives, at v. 24, an exhortation to steadfastness in adhering to the form of faith, which they have been taught at the beginning of their profession of the Gospel; thus intimating (as Lücke observes) that 'sincere faith in the apostolic Gospel is the best safeguard against heretical error.' Then at ver. 25, as an inducement to hold it fast, he points out the blessed effect of such steadfastness, in the communion enjoyed with the Son, and with the Father through him. Finally, for their encouragement and confirmation he, at ver. 26, reminds them of the promise given by God to all true believers; namely, that of eternal life. It is truly observed by Dr. Peile, that 'the Apostle, as in numerous instances, would seem to have caught the very manner of his Divine Master, as seen, for example, Matt. xxiv. 24, 25. John xiv. 24, 29. xv. 11. xvi. 4.'—To advert to a matter of reading. The οὖν, at v. 24, has been cancelled by Lachm. and Tisch., from three uncial, and sixteen cursive, MSS. (to which I can only add Lamb. 1182), and some late Versions. But it seems more likely to have been omitted accidentally by the ancient scribes, than that St. John would omit a particle which seems essential to the sense; for the anagelaton is here hardly to be thought of.

28. Here the Apostle returns to the subject of ver. 18, and concludes the argument of this Chap. of the Epistle with an exhortation in reference to the τεχέτη ὅρα there spoken of.—καὶ νῦν, τέκνιά, μένετε, &c., meaning to say, 'And, now, my children, [to my hope and trust let me add my exhortation]: abide [I say] in him, that when he shall appear, we (i. e. not only ye, but myself) may have confidence (i. e. have no cause to be confounded) at his presence, when he cometh.' In the change of persons we may observe great delicacy; the rejection and disgrace σίαν, καὶ μὴ αἰσχυνθῶμεν ἀπ' αὐτοῦ ἐν τῇ παρουσίᾳ αὐτοῦ.

29 'Εὰν εἰδῇτε ὅτι δίκαιός ἐστι, γινώσκετε ὅτι πᾶς ὁ ποιῶν <sup>1 ch. 2. 7. 10.</sup> τὴν δικαιοσύνην ἐξ αὐτοῦ γεγέννηται. III. <sup>1 a</sup> Ἴδετε, ποταπὴν <sup>a John 1. 12. & 10. 2. & 17. 25.</sup> ἀγάπην δέδωκεν ἡμῖν ὁ Πατήρ, ἵνα τέκνα Θεοῦ κληθῶμεν! διὰ <sup>b Isa. 54. 5. John 1. 12. Rom. 8. 16. 18, 29. 1 Cor. 12. 12. Gal. 2. 20. Phil. 2. 5. Col. 2. 4.</sup> τοῦτο ὁ κόσμος οὐ γινώσκει ἡμᾶς, ὅτι οὐκ ἔγνω αὐτόν. <sup>2 b</sup> Ἀγαπῆτοί, νῦν τέκνα Θεοῦ ἐσμεν καὶ οὐπω ἐφανερῶθη τί ἐσόμεθα. οἶδαμεν δὲ ὅτι ἐὰν φανερωθῇ, ὅμοιοι αὐτῷ ἐσόμεθα ὅτι ὁφόμεθα αὐτὸν καθὼς ἐστι. <sup>3</sup> Καὶ πᾶς ὁ ἔχων τὴν ἐλπίδα ταύτην ἐπ' of the disciple tending to the discredit of the teacher. So 2 Cor. ix. 4.—μὴ αἰσχυνθῶμεν ἀπ' αὐτοῦ. Mr. Green, Gr. N. T. Dial., p. 280, is of opinion that these words may be rendered; 'that we may not shrink from him with shame at his coming;' though they may still contain merely a pure Hebraism. See Isa. i. 29. Jer. xii. 13. The view, however, which I have laid down (adopted by Dr. Peile), seems preferable; for, as verbs implying 'fear,' 'caution,' &c., are followed by ἀπὸ τινος, so may verbs implying 'shame,' or 'confusion of face,' which is nearly allied to 'fear.' Accordingly, in Hom. Od. vii. 305, we have ἄλλ' ἰγὼ οὐκ ἴθαλον δαίτας αἰσχυρόμενός τε Μήνηας, &c.

29. ἰὰν εἰδῇτε, &c. The full sense is, 'If ye know [as ye must] that he (i. e. God) is righteous, ye [cannot but] know that every one who (habitually and heartily) practises righteousness hath been received into the relation of a son of God, being born anew of Christ by the regeneration of his Spirit.' Comp. iii. 1. ii. 2, 9. iv. 7. v. 1. iv. 18.

III. 1. 'The Apostle now enlarges upon that practical conclusion to which he had just conducted his readers—that if our faith be based upon the accepted Righteousness of God our Saviour, our life must needs be no more our own, but His who died for us, and hath been raised in a ransomed and regenerated Human Nature. John v. 21, 26. xiv. 19. 1 Cor. vi. 20. Gal. ii. 20. 1 Pet. iv. 2. 2 Pet. i. 4. And first of all (vv. 1—9) he takes up the ideas suggested by the words ἐξ αὐτοῦ γεγέννηται, with which the preceding Chapter closed.' (Peile.) In doing this he forthwith breaks out into admiration of the love of God, in making those who were, by natural generation, sons of fallen Adam, sons of God by adoption and grace. See Eph. i. 5, and Rom. viii. 15.—ἰδετε, ποταπὴν ἀγάπην. 'See how vast a token of His love hath the Father bestowed upon us, that we should be called God's children!'—διὰ τοῦτο. This is to be referred to εἶτι following; the meaning being, 'The world, therefore, recognises us not as sons of God, nor comprehends the glory and nature of this filiation, because it doth not acknowledge Him [as God].' This is, as Est. remarks, thrown in by way of a tacit consolation to the faithful; q. d. 'Non mirum, si mundo non simus filii Dei, sed contra contemptibiles atque exosi; nam idem mundus non novit nos nec diligit, quia Deum, ejus filii sumus, nec novit, nec diligit. Non debet autem molestum nobis esse si non diligamur ab iis, qui nec Deum diligunt.' Comp. John xv. 18, 19, where the argument is of the same kind.

2 ἀγαπ., νῦν τ. Θεοῦ—ἴσμεν] 'Spectat hoc quoque cum sequentibus ad consolationem et exhortationem fidelium, ne succumbant in adversariis. Quamvis inquit, mundo despecti et viles habiti, tamen etiam nunc, in hoc sæculo, atque inter pressuras et opprobria, revera filii Dei sumus, utique per gratiam adoptionis.' (Est.) Here we have a solemn repetition of the same assertion as at the first clause of v. 1, with a weighty truth engrafted thereupon, with respect to our dignity in the future world. The general sense is as follows: '[As to our present state], now [I repeat] we are already sons of God by adoption; and [as to our future one], though it doth not yet appear [even to Christians, much less to the world] what we shall be. However, this we do know, that when he shall appear (or, 'when our state shall be disclosed'), we shall be like unto him, for we shall see him as he is; q. d. as Lücke expresses it, 'In spite of the world's disowning, we still really are God's children (how great is that dignity!); and as yet it is not even made manifest (καὶ οὐπω ἐφανερῶθη) what we are to be (in what glory we are to have a share hereafter). But this much we do know with certainty, that when this is manifested (when the glory of the children of God is manifested), we shall then be like unto him [of whom we are born]; for we shall see him as he is; i. e. we shall know him indeed, and be in his presence; see Rom. viii. 16, seq. Col. iii. 3, 4. This sense of ἐφανερῶθη is also assigned by Dr. Peile, who observes that this interpretation makes ἰδέν = the Class. εἶδν, on which as distinguishing from εἶδαν, he refers to his note on Æschyl. Agam. 12. But this idiom needs proof. By being like unto him is denoted likeness in holiness and happiness; and by seeing him as he is is meant, seeing him no longer, as now, 'through a glass, darkly, but face to face.' (1 Cor. xiii. 12).—To advert to a matter of reading. At οἶδαμεν δὲ Lachm. and Tisch. cancel the δὲ, on the authority of MSS. A, B, C, and 2 cursives, the Vulg. and a few Fathers;—an authority, however, insufficient to justify the removal of any word, espec. when, as here, it is called for by the context, and demanded by the ratiocination, as is clear from the statement of the full sense which I have laid down.

3. This verse is connected with ii. 29, and develops the train of ideas there commenced. (Lücke).—καὶ πᾶς ὁ ἔχων—ἴσμεν, meaning, that 'where there is a true hope of being made like unto him, at his appearance, the person will meanwhile strive to imitate his purity, in order to participate in his glory and blessedness; see Bp. Bull's Harm. App. p. 44, and South's Sermon, vol. vi. p. 441, seqq. on this text, where, after considering how a man may be shown to purify himself even as Christ is pure, he says, i. what is implied in that purifying, i. e. by carefully ridding himself of the dominion of sin (comp. 1 Tim. vi. 14); 2. how the hope of heaven purifies a man; first, as a special grace, and, secondly, upon a moral account, by suggesting to him arguments for purification.

ο ch. 5. 17. αὐτῷ ἀγγίζει ἑαυτὸν, καθὼς ἐκεῖνος ἀγνός ἐστι. <sup>4</sup> c Πᾶς ὁ ποιῶν τὴν ἁμαρτίαν, καὶ τὴν ἀνομίαν ποιεῖ· καὶ ἡ ἁμαρτία ἐστὶν ἡ ἀνομία. <sup>5</sup> d καὶ οἴδατε ὅτι ἐκεῖνος ἐφανερώθη, ἵνα τὰς ἁμαρτίας ἡμῶν ἄρῃ· καὶ ἁμαρτία ἐν αὐτῷ οὐκ ἔστι. <sup>6</sup> e Πᾶς ὁ ἐν αὐτῷ μένων, οὐχ ἁμαρτάνει· πᾶς ὁ ἁμαρτάνων, οὐχ ἐώρακεν αὐτὸν, οὐδὲ ἔγνωκεν αὐτόν. <sup>7</sup> f Τεκνία, μηδεὶς πλανάτω ὑμᾶς· ὁ ποιῶν τὴν δικαιοσύνην δικαίος ἐστὶ, καθὼς ἐκεῖνος δικαίος ἐστίν. <sup>8</sup> e' O ποιῶν τὴν ἁμαρτίαν, ἐκ τοῦ Διαβόλου ἐστίν. ὅτι ἀπ' ἀρχῆς ὁ Διάβολος ἁμαρτάνει. Εἰς τοῦτο ἐφανερώθη ὁ Τίος τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἵνα λύσῃ τὰ ἔργα τοῦ Διαβόλου. <sup>9</sup> h Πᾶς ὁ γεγεννημένος ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἁμαρτίαν οὐ ποιεῖ, ὅτι σπέρμα αὐτοῦ ἐν αὐτῷ μένει

4. What is here said is founded on the formal difference and the essential identity of the expressions ἁμαρτία and ἀνομία, and directed against the error of those who, misunderstanding the doctrine of Christian liberty, denied and disowned the positive character of the moral law, and the immediate relation of sin thereto, as to a divine prohibition. (Lücke.)—πᾶς ὁ ποιῶν τὴν ἁμαρτίαν, &c., meaning to say, that 'every fault, every moral stain is a transgression of the Divine law, since God's commandment demands the most perfect righteousness and the most exalted purity.' (Lücke.) But this does not draw forth the full force of ποιεῖ, which, as used of habit, may best be rendered practices, as far as regards ἁμαρτίαν, but not as respects ἀνομίαν, where it only means 'commits'; i. e. as Dr. Peile explains, 'is chargeable with'; and ἀνομία, may, with him, be rendered 'non-conformity (rather, 'un-conformity') to law'—a state of moral disobedience' (lawlessness). The Apostle's meaning, as Mackn. observes, is, 'that no one should think lightly of his sin, because every sin (even the least) being a violation of the law of God, will most certainly be punished if not repented of. The Nicolaitans, and other heretics in the first age, fancying that knowledge sanctified the worst actions, affirmed that no man possessed of knowledge will be punished for any action whatever. In opposition to this pernicious doctrine the Apostle declares that, as the offence of sin lies in its being a transgression of the Law of God, the Moral Governor of the world will certainly punish every wilful sinner.'

5, 6. καὶ οἴδατε ὅτι ἐκεῖνος, &c.] meaning to say, as an acknowledged truth, that 'the end of redemption, as well as the effective example of the guiltless Saviour, prohibits every one, who lives in communion with the Redeemer, to sin.' Every sin that the Christian commits is an elusion of Christ's scheme of redemption, of which the end is the annihilation of sin; it interrupts the progressive communion with the Redeemer, and is a proof of His not having been recognised in His purity and holiness. Only by means of a progressive sanctification can the Christian realise in himself that redemption which, by his faith, he has only ideally appropriated. (Lücke.) By οὐχ ἁμαρτάνει, all the best Expositors are agreed, is meant, sinneth not habitually, wilfully, and presumptuously, but only from frailty. Of this peculiar sense the only example I have noted out of Scripture is in Jos. Antt. xvi. 2, 4, μελέτην τοῦτων—ὁ δὲ οὐχ ἁμαρτησάμεθα, 'whereby we shall avoid running into sin.' Whosoever doth so sin (it is added) hath no true knowledge of Him, or conception of his doctrine.

7. μηδεὶς πλανάτω ὑμᾶς, &c.] A solemn warning (like that at 1 Cor. vi. 9—11. Gal. vi. 6—10. Eph. v. 5—7. James i. 22—25. 2 Pet. i. 8, 9) not to let any man deceive them by plausible pretences (founded on the loose ethics of half-Christianity, which would make the love of the world consistent with the love of God) into an opinion that they might live in habitual sin, and yet be true Christians. (Scott and Lücke.)—ὁ ποιῶν τὴν δικαιοσύνην, &c., meaning, 'be alone who is habitually righteous, in imitation of his Saviour, is truly righteous'; see Simon's Hor. Homil. vol. vi. p. 327, who truly says, that the whole scope of the context from ver. 3 sanctions, and, indeed, requires this interpretation.

8. ὁ ποιῶν—ἐστίν] Here again, as before, ποιεῖ must be understood of habit; the general sense being, 'He who practices sin [must not say he is a son of God; no] he is [a son] of the Devil [and this sonship is established by strong similitude]; for the Devil has been habitually and perpetually sinning.' At αἱ τοῦτε—Διαβόλος supply καὶ τιν, 'and yet.' The omission of such ratiocinative Particles is one of the peculiarities of St. John's style. The sentiment corresponds to that at ver. 5.

9. πᾶς ὁ γεγεννημένος—οὐ ποιεῖ] The sentiment is nearly allied to that at ver. 6 (πᾶς ὁ ἐν αὐτῷ μένων, οὐχ ἁμαρτάνει), sonship and intimate union being cognate ideas. In both passages, then, it is plain that the phrase ἁμαρτίας ποιεῖ must be taken, like ἁμαρτάνει, of deliberate and habitual sin. Moreover, to understand this passage fully, ὁ γεγεννημένος ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ must be understood as at ii. 29, where see note. Now of such an one it may be said, in a popular sense, that he cannot sin; since there is effectual grace afforded to him that he shall not; οὐ δύναται being used here as at Heb. vi. 4, ἀδύνατον ἐστὶ—ἀνυκαταλίσθαι εἰς μεταβολήν. By the expression σπέρμα αὐτοῦ we may understand, with Augustine, of the ancients, and of the moderns, Grot., Benson, Rosenm., and most recent Comκαὶ οὐ δύναται ἁμαρτάνειν, ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ γεγέννηται. <sup>10</sup> <sup>1</sup> Ἐν τούτῳ φανερά ἐστι τὰ τέκνα τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ τὰ τέκνα τοῦ Διαβόλου. Πᾶς ὁ μὴ ποιῶν δικαιοσύνην, οὐκ ἔστιν ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ ὁ μὴ ἀγαπῶν τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ. <sup>11</sup> <sup>2</sup> ὅτι αὕτη ἐστὶν ἡ ἀγγελία ἣν ἠκούσατε ἀπ' ἀρχῆς, ἵνα ἀγαπῶμεν ἀλλήλους. <sup>12</sup> <sup>3</sup> οὐ καθὼς Κάιν ἐκ τοῦ πονηροῦ ἦν, καὶ ἔσφαξε τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ. Καὶ χάριν τίνος ἔσφαξεν αὐτόν; ὅτι τὰ ἔργα αὐτοῦ πονηρὰ ἦν, τὰ δὲ τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ αὐτοῦ δίκαια. <sup>13</sup> <sup>4</sup> Μὴ θαυμάζετε, ἀδελφοί μου, εἰ μισεῖ ὑμᾶς ὁ κόσμος. <sup>14</sup> <sup>5</sup> ἡμεῖς οἶδαμεν ὅτι μεταβεβήκαμεν ἐκ τοῦ θανάτου εἰς τὴν ζωὴν, ὅτι ἀγαπῶμεν τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς. ὁ μὴ ἀγαπῶν τὸν ἀδελφὸν μένει ἐν τῷ θανάτῳ. <sup>15</sup> <sup>6</sup> Πᾶς ὁ μισῶν τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ ἀνθρωποκτόνος ἐστί· καὶ

10 <sup>1</sup> <sup>1</sup> ch. 4. 2.

<sup>11</sup> <sup>2</sup> <sup>1</sup> John 12. 34. & 15. 12. ch. 1. 8. & 2. 7. ver. 26. 1 Gen. 4. 2. Heb. 11. 4.

<sup>13</sup> <sup>4</sup> <sup>1</sup> John 18. 18. 19. & 17. 14. n Lev. 19. 17. ch. 2. 9—11.

<sup>15</sup> <sup>6</sup> <sup>1</sup> Matt. 5. 21. 22. Gal. 5. 21.

mentators, the revealed word of God (see 1 Pet. i. 23). But I would rather suppose it to denote, as Carpius and others explain, the vital principle of the spiritual seed committed to our hearts, like a seedling to the ground; and consisting not in the word of God only, but in the Divine grace by which that word is made effectual; in short, the sanctification of the Spirit spoken of at Gal. v. 22. Nearly the same view is taken by Dr. Peile, who explains it 'the seminal principle of an imperishable life,' ζωὴ καὶ ἀφθαρσία, 2 Tim. i. 10. Eph. iv. 18; q. d. 'It is not only in him, but abiding in him, as the means whereby (as he is now a compound of "flesh and spirit") he shall ever more and more consecrate himself to God's service: Rom. vi. 22. vii. 25. viii. 11. 2 Cor. iv. 10, 11. vii. 1. 1 Thess. v. 23. 2 Pet. i. 4; and so he cannot sin, because he is a BORN OF GOD.' On this difficult point Calv. has the following able note: 'Johannes non de uno actu (ut vocant) hic loquitur, sed de continuo vite tempore. Fanatici quidam alternam nescio quod asmen in electis somniant, quod secum afferant ex matris utero; sed hæc plusquam ineptissimè torquent Joannis verba; neque enim de eternâ electione disputat, sed initium a Regeneratione facit. Atqui constat sic inchoari in nobis Regenerationem, ut ad mortem usque Veteris Hominis reliquias maneant. Quodsi nondum plena est, ac solida Regeneratio, nonnisi pro modo suo a Peccati servitute nos eximit.'

10. Because the profane world neither knows nor appreciates the difference between those who are the children of God and those who are not, the Apostle here subjoins an emphatic repetition of the sentiment, that 'every one who does not practise righteousness is not of God;' and that with the assurance that this is the only test of men being in a state of salvation. On this general position is then engrafted a particular one, respecting that most important branch of our duty to men, which consists in love and kindness to our brethren,—meaning, not only brother-Christians, but brother-men. See 2 Pet. i. 7. Gal. v. 14. Col. iii. 14.

11. From hence to the end of the Chapter the Apostle urges the foregoing exhortation by various arguments; and first, he reminds them that the injunction to love one another was coeval with the Christian religion itself; originating with its Author, and made the distinguishing evidence of being his disciples. Those, therefore (it is implied), who are destitute of this grace, are no true Christians, but can only be ranked with him who, though professing to be a worshipper of God, showed himself to be not of the family of God, but of the Evil One, by envying, hating, and murdering his brother.

12. ὅς καθὼς Κάιν, &c. This may be considered as a brief mode of speaking, for what, more fully expressed, would be: 'And not as Cain, who was a son of the Devil, and murdered his brother [so let us do, by fostering those feelings of hatred, which may tend to murder].' Then, by way of caution, the Apostle in the next words, καὶ χάριν τίνος—δίκαια, suggests the cause of this hatred,—namely, envy at his brother's superior goodness and favour with God.

13. μὴ θαυμάζετε—ὁ κόσμος In other words, 'Wonder not if the world hate you: it was ever so in the world; the wicked have ever hated and persecuted the good, as Cain did Abel.' Compare ver. 1. John xv. 18, and xvi. 1, seqq. (Lücke.)

14. ἡμεῖς οἶδαμεν, &c. This suggests, by way of consolation, how it should be so; the meaning being, that 'the enmity of the ungodly against them, as the children of God, was the most unequivocal proof that they had passed from death (from a state of spiritual condemnation) to life,' or a state of acceptance with God; and the proof of their being in such a state was that they loved the brethren.—ἡμεῖς οἶδαμεν. I am inclined to agree with Mr. Green, Gr. N. T., that the Pronoun is here, as very oft. (I had almost said generally) in St. John, emphatic; q. d. 'We know [though the world which hates us does not] that,' &c. Comp. John xiv. 20. This emphatic force may, then, briefly be expressed thus: 'We, for our part, know.' The words τὸν ἀδελφόν, not found in a few ancient MSS. and several Fathers, have been cancelled by Lachm. and Tisch. But, although internal evidence is somewhat against the words, there exists no sufficient authority to warrant their being cancelled.

15. In addition to the assurance that he who hateth his brother is, as it were, under the ban of God, the Apostle adds, that such an one is even a sort of CAIN, of whom he has just spoken; that his disposition and principles are such as tend to murder, and may, as in the case of Cain, lead to actual murder. Compare John viii. 44.

οἶδατε ὅτι πᾶς ἀνθρωποκτόνος οὐκ ἔχει ζωὴν αἰώνιον ἐν αὐτῷ μένουσαν. <sup>16</sup> Ὁ ἔν τούτῳ ἐγνώκαμεν τὴν ἀγάπην, ὅτι ἐκεῖνος ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ ἔθηκε καὶ ἡμεῖς ὀφειλομεν ὑπὲρ τῶν ἀδελφῶν τὰς ψυχὰς τιθέναι. <sup>17</sup> Ὁς δ' ἂν ἔχη τὸν βίον τοῦ κόσμου, καὶ θεωρῇ τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ χρεῖαν ἔχοντα, καὶ κλείσῃ τὰ σπλάγχνα αὐτοῦ ἀπ' αὐτοῦ, πῶς ἡ ἀγάπη τοῦ Θεοῦ μένει ἐν αὐτῷ; <sup>18</sup> Τεκνία μου, μὴ ἀγαπῶμεν λόγῳ μὴδὲ τῇ γλώσσῃ, ἀλλ' ἐν ἔργῳ καὶ ἀληθείᾳ. <sup>19</sup> Καὶ ἐν τούτῳ γινώσκουμεν ὅτι ἐκ τῆς ἀληθείας ἐσμέν. καὶ ἔμπροσθεν αὐτοῦ πείσομεν τὰς καρδίας ἡμῶν, <sup>20</sup> ὅτι ἐὰν καταγινώσκῃ ἡμῶν ἡ καρδιά, [ὅτι]

p John 3. 16.
a 16. 13.
Rom. 8. 3.
Eph. 5. 2, 25.
ch. 4. 9.
q Deut. 15. 7.
Luke 3. 11.
James 2. 15.
ch. 4. 20.
a 5. 1.

r Ezech. 33.
31.
1 Pet. 1. 22.
James 2. 18.

How short, as Lücke observes, is the step from hatred to murder, experience fully evinces. Moreover (as he adds) 'it is not the mere external action, but the internal disposition of the heart, that is inquired into and judged by the great Searcher of hearts; while man is apt to think lightly of evil thoughts only, and only shudders at grossly criminal acts. As, then, murder is utterly inconsistent with a state of salvation, so also must those dispositions, which are the seed of it, prevent any one from being a child of God. Thus even a heathen writer (Virgil, Æn. vi. 607) places in his Tartarus those 'quibus insensi fratres, dum vita manebat.'

<sup>16</sup> ἐν τούτῳ ἐγνώκαμεν—ἔθηκε] 'Hortaturus fideles ad caritatis erga fratres officia, Christi Domini proponit exemplum, qui summam erga nos caritatem ostendit, animam suam ponens pro nobis. Quo suo exemplo ipse Dominus discipulos hortatus est, dicens, Hoc est præceptum meum, ut diligatis invicem, sicut dilexi vos. Joan. xv.' Calv. The full sense is, 'Herein have we learned, and do know, Love (i. e. the principle of Love, what Love is), in that He (the Son of God) hath laid down his life for us.' The principle of Love is considered as exemplified in Christ. At the next clause, καὶ ἡμεῖς ὀφείλομεν, there is a tacit inference, deduced from the acknowledged and bounden duty of Christians to follow the example of their Lord. Thus we may render, 'Thus also as he did, ought we, following his example, to do likewise,' and also in obedience to his injunction at John xiii. 15, ὑποδείγμα—καὶ ὑμεῖς ποιήσατε.

<sup>17</sup> ὅς δ' ἂν ἔχη—ἐν αὐτῷ;] meaning to say, 'But if it be the duty of the Christian to love the brethren, how unlike a Christian, then, does he act, who, being in possession of earthly goods (compare Luke xv. 12, 30. xxi. 4), seeth his brother in distress, and shutteth up his heart to him, how can the love of God, which only by brotherly love can be demonstrated and perfected (compare infra iv. 12, 20) abide in such an one?' (Lücke.) See Luke iii. 11. 2 Cor. viii. 14, compared with Rom. xii. 9. In κλείειν τὰ σπλάγχνα ἀπὸ τινος we have a figurative mode of expression, to denote the, as it were, 'barring the heart against compassion, and forbidding it to flow.'—τὸν βίον τοῦ κόσμου. Render: 'this world's goods, or substance;' a use of βίος found in Luke xv. 12, διέβην αὐτοῖς τὸν βίον. So, too, Jos. Antt. i. 20, 1, γυναῖκάς τε καὶ παῖδας ἐπαγόμενοι μετὰ τὸν πορισθέντα βίον. So Xen. Eph. v. 9, p. 104, Locell. κοινωνήσαι αὐτῷ τοῦ βίου.

<sup>18</sup> μὴ ἀγαπ. λόγῳ—καὶ ἀληθείᾳ] 'Exhortatio necessaria propter eos, qui dilectionem fraternam verbo obtinentes, opere non præstant; quales introducit Jacobus in Epistolâ suâ, cap. ii. dicentes, Ite in pace, calefacimini et saturatemini. Non solum (inquit Joannes) verbo et lingua diligamus fratres, ut faciunt, qui blande et speciose loquuntur, interum nihil dantes, unde juventur egeni; sed dilectionem opere et effectu monstremsus.' (Est.) Comp. Theognis, 973, καὶ μοι ἀνὴρ εἴη γλώσσῃ φίλος, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἔργῳ, and Soph. Antig. 539, λόγον δ' ἔγω φιλοῦσα οὐ στήθεσσι φίλην.—Τεκνία μου. The μου is called by Lachm. and Tisch., from 3 uncial and 12 cursive MSS., to which I add Lamb. 1182. But it seems called for by the deep feeling inherent in the address, like that in Gal. iv. 19, τεκνία μου, οὐκ ἔτι ἐν ὄντι.

<sup>19</sup> The Apostle now adds, in conclusion, a serious exhortation to that 'love unfeigned' inculcated by St. Paul, Rom. xii. 9.—καὶ ἐν τούτῳ γινώσκουμεν, &c. He also here applies the test of the reality of this love, by a comparison with that of Christ; q. d. 'And by this we know whether we be of the truth [in this respect, namely, of love to others].' Similar to ἐκ τῆς ἀληθείας εἶναι we have ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ εἶναι elsewhere. By τῇ ἀληθείᾳ we may understand true religion, the truth as it is in Jesus, as a principle of action. The words καὶ ἔμπροσθεν αὐτοῦ πείσομεν τὰς καρδίας ἡμῶν, are to be referred to the preceding context, and the connexion (with Est.) traced thus: 'Ex hoc; quod non solum verbo et lingua, sed opere et veritate fratres diligimus, sincero videlicet atque ex animo illis beneficientes, cognoscimus, nos esse ex veritate; et proinde, si id faciamus, conscientiam nostram coram Deo tranquillam atque pacatam reddemus, quod cum vero diligamus, certâ conceptâ fiduciâ, quod damnationem in judicio Dei situs evasuri; ut inferius hoc et sequenti capite explicatur.'—The words καὶ—πείσομεν may be rendered, 'and shall (or 'may') assure our hearts;' thus quieting and tranquillizing our accusing conscience.'

<sup>20</sup> 21. Some obscurity here exists, arising from extreme brevity: to remove which some, as Benson and Rosenm., supply a clause from the preceding verse, as follows: 'For if our heart condemn us, as deficient in brotherly love, 'God is greater than our heart, and knoweth all things, [and consequently our hearts, instead of being assured before him, will condemn us; on the other hand,] if our heart condemn us not, then have we confidence toward μελῶν ἐστὶν ὁ Θεὸς τῆς καρδίας ἡμῶν, καὶ γινώσκει πάντα.

21 Ἀγαπητοὶ, ἐὰν ἡ καρδία ἡμῶν μὴ καταγινώσκη ἡμῶν, * παρρησίαν ἔχομεν πρὸς τὸν Θεόν. 22 * καὶ ὁ ἐὰν αἰτῶμεν, λαμβά-νομεν παρ' αὐτοῦ ὅτι τὰς ἐντολάς αὐτοῦ τηροῦμεν, καὶ τὰ ἄρεστὰ ἐνώπιον αὐτοῦ ποιοῦμεν. 23 Ἐκ αὐτῆς ἐστὶν ἡ ἐντολὴ αὐτοῦ, ἵνα πιστεύσωμεν τῷ ὀνόματι τοῦ Υἱοῦ αὐτοῦ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, καὶ ἀγαπῶμεν ἀλλήλους, καθὼς ἔδωκεν ἐντολὴν ἡμῖν.

24 Ἐκ τῶν ἐντολῶν αὐτοῦ, ἐν αὐτῷ μένει, καὶ αὐτὸς ἐν αὐτῷ. καὶ ἐν τούτῳ γινώσκουμεν ὅτι μένει ἐν ἡμῖν, ἐκ τοῦ Πνεύματος οὗ ἡμῖν ἔδωκεν.

IV. 1 Ἀγαπητοὶ, μὴ παντὶ πνεύματι πιστεύετε, ἀλλὰ δοκιμάζετε τὰ πνεύματα, εἰ ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐστὶν ὅτι πολλοὶ ψευδοπροφῆται ἐξεληλύθασιν εἰς τὸν κόσμον. 2 Ἐν τούτῳ γινώσκετε τὸ πνεῦμα τοῦ Θεοῦ πᾶν πνεῦμα ὃ ὁμολογῇ Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν

1 Cor. 14. 29. Eph. 5. 6. Col. 2. 12. 1 Thess. 5. 21. 2 Pet. 2. 1. 3 John 7. Rev. 2. 2. b 1 Cor. 12. 3. ch. 2. 22. & 5. 1. 3 John 7.

But there is thus something too forced and artificial to suit the Apostle's style. There is more of simplicity, and perhaps truth, in the mode adopted by Dr. Peile in the following paraphrastic Version: ' (And this we have great need to do;) because, if our heart condemn us, God is incomparably greater than our heart, yea, is cognizant of all we say, think, or do; John ii. 25. 1 Cor. iv. 4, 5. Beloved, it is if our heart condemn us not, that we have boldness towards God, to speak freely as sons (see Heb. iii. 6. iv. 16. 1 Thess. ii. 2). yea, that, whatsoever we ask, we receive from Him, because we are keeping his commandments, and doing what is pleasing in his sight.' Comp. John xv. 7.—10. xvi. 23, 24. See Calvin's able note.

23. καὶ αὕτη ἐστὶν—ἡμῖν] Render: 'And his commandment (the sum of all) is, that we should believe in the Divine mission of his Son Jesus Christ, and love each other, according to the injunction he gave us.' See 1 Tim. i. 5. Gal. v. 6. John iii. 16. vi. 28, 29, and Calvin's note.

24. καὶ ὁ τηρῶν—αὐτοῦ] The full sense is, 'He, then, who keepeth [habitually] God's precepts, is the person who abideth in him, and he in him;' implying love, favour, and blessing from God. In the next sentence is given a test of the having this 'abiding of God' in them,—namely, by his imparting to them the Holy Spirit, and its gifts, whether ordinary or extraordinary,—since, in either case, is implied the approbation and favour of God; and, from the presence or absence of which, we may infer our spiritual state; for, as it is well observed by Dr. Gloucester Ridley, 'the way of the Spirit is not to be traced: the working of God is not to be perceived. The Divine Author and his operations are hidden from us, but his work is manifest; and though we cannot see God at any time, or feel the motion of the Spirit in our hearts, yet is there a certain evidence whether we are wrought on by Him or not; namely, according to this infallible rule given us by St. John, whereby we may know that God by his Spirit dwelleth in us, if we keep his commandments.'

IV. The particular subject of this and the next s Ps. 10. 17.

& 24. 17.

& 145. 18.

Prov. 15. 28.

Jer. 20. 12.

Matt. 7. 5.

& 31. 22.

Mark 11. 24.

Luke 11. 9.

John 9. 31.

& 14. 15.

& 15. 7.

& 16. 22.

James 1. 5.

& 5. 16.

ch. 5. 14.

& Lev. 19. 18.

Matt. 22. 39.

John 6. 29.

& 13. 34.

& 15. 12.

& 17. 3.

1 Thess. 4. 9.

1 Pet. 3. 1.

ch. 4. 12.

& 5. 11.

u John 14.

& 15. 10.

Rom. 8. 9.

ch. 4. 12.

& Jer. 29. 2.

Matt. 7. 16.

14. & 24. 4.

& 24.

Chapter is the Incarnation, in which the doctrine of the Atonement is, if rightly understood, included. It is therefore with reason that St. John sets forth this as the cardinal doctrine of Christianity; inasmuch that he speaks of the belief of this article as the accomplishment of our Christian warfare; the attainment, at least, of that faith which overcometh the world, inspiring the Christian with fortitude to surmount its temptations, in whatever shape they may assail him. On the other hand, the denial of this great truth, so animating to the believer's hopes, he represents as the beginning of that apostasy, which is to come to its height in the latter times; in fact, as one of the characteristics of Antichrist. In the present Chapter the Apostle follows up what he has just said, as to the gift of the Spirit being the sign of God's presence and favour, by warning Christians against those who falsely pretended to the Spirit; and he gives certain rules for discriminating true from false spiritual gifts: after which he proceeds again to enjoin brotherly love and charity as the bond of perfectness.

1. παντὶ πνεύματι meaning, 'every one who claims to have a spiritual gift, or lays claim to inspiration; implying, as appears from the context, without ground. So at 2 Thess. ii. 2, and 1 Tim. iv. 4, the term is used directly of those who falsely make the claim. It must be by implication so understood here; for, as Dr. Burton observes, 'As in the preceding verse the Apostle had said, the presence of the Spirit is the test of a man's having God dwelling in him, so in this he guards against false pretensions to the Spirit, alluding to the ψευδοπρ., 'pretenders to the Spirit.'

2. The Apostle now applies an infallible touchstone to prove the validity of such claims.—Ἐν τούτῳ γινώσκετε τὸ πνεῦμα, &c. 'By this ye know and discern the Spirit in every person claiming to possess it.' The test is adduced in the next words, 'every person, claiming to have the Spirit, who openly and fearlessly professes that Jesus Christ was made very man [for our redemption], is from God; i. e. his pretensions are valid. See 1 Cor. xii. 3. Considering the known opinions of the heretics of that age, which consisted not in a denial of the divinity, but of ο 2 Thess. 2. 7. 1. 18, 22. ἐν σαρκὶ ἐληλυθότα, ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐστι. <sup>3</sup> καὶ πᾶν πνεῦμα δὲ μὴ ὁμολογεῖ [τὸν] Ἰησοῦν [Χριστὸν] ἐν σαρκὶ ἐληλυθότα, ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ οὐκ ἔστι· καὶ τοῦτό ἐστι τὸ τοῦ ἀντιχρίστου, δ' ἀκηκόατε ὅτι ἔρχεται, καὶ νῦν ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ ἐστὶν ἡδη. <sup>4</sup> ὅτι οἱ μὲν ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐστε, τέκνία, καὶ νενικήκατε αὐτούς· ὅτι μείζων ἐστὶν ὁ ἐν ὑμῖν, ἢ ὁ ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ. <sup>5</sup> αὐτοὶ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου εἰσὶ διὰ τοῦτο ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου λαλοῦσι, καὶ ὁ κόσμος αὐτῶν ἀκούει. ο 2 John 8. 17. & 10. 27. <sup>6</sup> ἡμεῖς ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐσμεν ὁ γνωσκὼν τὸν Θεόν, ἀκούει ἡμῶν ὅς οὐκ ἔστιν ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ, οὐκ ἀκούει ἡμῶν. Ἐκ τούτου γνωσκόμεν τὸ πνεῦμα τῆς ἀληθείας καὶ τὸ πνεῦμα τῆς πλάνης. 7 Ἀγαπητοὶ, ἀγαπῶμεν ἀλλήλους· ὅτι ἡ ἀγάπη ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐστὶ, καὶ πᾶς ὁ ἀγαπῶν, ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ γεγέννηται, καὶ γινώσκει τὸν Θεόν. <sup>8</sup> ὁ μὴ ἀγαπῶν, οὐκ ἔγνω τὸν Θεόν, ὅτι ὁ Θεὸς

the humanity of Christ, the best Expositors are agreed that there is reference to the tenets of the Docetæ and others, who held Jesus Christ to have been a mere φάντασμα, destitute of a real body. See Bp. Bull, Jud. Eccl. Cath., p. 17, and Lücke's Introd. Now the Apostle maintains that he came really [clothed] in the flesh, i. e. in a human body.

3. The first clause of this verse contains the converse proposition to that in the last clause of the preceding. The second clause seems meant to advert to the principle which dictated the latter of the two confessions, or professions, and is represented as a sort of φανέρωμα, or manifestation thereof: or we may, with our Common Version, suppose πνεῦμα understood; and, according to this view, the words may be rendered and interpreted as by Est. thus: 'Hic spiritus, qui non confitetur Jesum Christum in carne venisse, sed solvit Jesum, spiritus est illius Antichristi, i. e. hæc doctrina cum suo doctore præcurrit satellitio Antichristum, cujus omne studium atque conatus in hoc erit, ut solvat ac destruat Jesum Christum et regnum ejus.' The interpretation of the next words, δ' ἀκηκ.—κόσμος, depends on that assigned to the preceding; but they will apply either to Antichrist, or to the spirit of Antichrist; and, indeed, it comes to the same thing. Perhaps the spirit of Antichrist is represented as about to come, in order to pave the way for the appearance, or person, of Antichrist.

4. ὅτι οἱ μὲν ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐστε—ενεκ' αὐτούς] The Apostle's purpose here, observes Calvin, is 'fidelibus addere animos, ut fortiter et intrepide impostoribus (ψευδοδοκτρ.) resistent.' By ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ is meant, 'Ye are born of God; his children, as being in his image.' So at ver. 7, ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐστὶ is interchanged with ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ γεγέννηται. Of καὶ νενικη. αὐτούς, the sense is, 'ye have frustrated all the attempts of the Antichristian impostors to pervert you from the purity of the Gospel.' The next words show how this triumph is obtained; namely, 'because superior is He (i. e. the Spirit of God) who is in, and influences you, to him (the evil Spirit) who is in the world, and influences it.' Calvin's view of the general scope of the words is confirmed by the opinion of Lücke, who remarks that 'those who are sure of the victory, having it, indeed, already in their hands, fight more courageously, and more readily obtain the final victory.'

5, 6. What is here said is, as before, founded on the ἀποκρίσις κρίσις between infidel Christianity and genuine Christianity. (Lücke.)

5. αὐτοὶ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου, &c.] meaning, 'They (i. e. the teachers in question) are [not of God, but] of the world,' actuated by a worldly spirit. 'In that spirit they speak, and therefore the world hearkens to them; hence their success.'

6. ἡμεῖς] meaning the Apostles and divinely inspired teachers.—ὁ γνωσκὼν τὸν Θ., 'he who knoweth God aright,' namely, by regeneration and faith.—ἐκ τούτου γιν., 'by this test (i. e. the receiving or the rejecting this doctrine) we may know how to distinguish the spirit of truth from that of error.'

7, 8. After the above digression concerning the δοκιμασία τῶν πνευμάτων, the Apostle resumes the exhortation commenced at iii. 23 to those who adhered to the true doctrine of Christ, that they should cultivate the most endeared affection towards one another; for this holy, spiritual, and self-denying love 'is of God.' 'God is love, or essential goodness and benevolence. It is, as it were, his very nature to be kind, to communicate life, and impart felicity, and to provide for the happiness of his creatures, in all cases and methods which consist with his infinite wisdom, justice, truth, and holiness; for love must ever be exercised in entire consistency with these attributes by the perfect Source of all excellence.' (Scott.)

7. ἀγαπητοὶ, ἀγαπῶμεν, &c.] meaning, 'Let us love one another, as those who truly are of God, and rightly know him; for love (brotherly love) is not ἐκ κόσμου, but ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ (it belongs to that life which is of God), it is an essential criterion of a filial relation to God, and of right knowledge of him.' (Lücke.)

8. ὅτι ὁ Θεὸς ἀγάπη ἐστίν] 'for God is love,' i. e. entirely love, love itself. Comp. v. 16. Here the Apostle puts the attributions of love as God's essence (in a similar manner as in the Gospel, iv. 24, it is said, πνεῦμα ὁ Θεός), because God, in the redemption through Christ, is more specially and most perfectly recognised and felt to be love essentially. (Lücke.) Well is it said of God that 'He is love; for God can as well

ἀγάπη ἐστίν. <sup>9</sup> <sup>5</sup> Ἐν τούτῳ ἐφανερώθη ἡ ἀγάπη τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐν ἡμῖν, ὅτι τὸν Υἱὸν αὐτοῦ τὸν μονογενῆ ἀπέσταλκεν ὁ Θεὸς εἰς τὸν κόσμον, ἵνα ζήσωμεν δι' αὐτοῦ. <sup>10</sup> <sup>h</sup> Ἐν τούτῳ ἐστίν ἡ ἀγάπη, οὐχ ὅτι ἡμεῖς ἠγαπήσαμεν τὸν Θεόν, ἀλλ' ὅτι αὐτὸς ἠγάπησεν ἡμᾶς, καὶ ἀπέστειλε τὸν Υἱὸν αὐτοῦ ἰλασμόν περὶ τῶν ἁμαρτιῶν ἡμῶν. <sup>11</sup> <sup>1</sup> Ἀγαπητοί, εἰ οὕτως ὁ Θεὸς ἠγάπησεν ἡμᾶς, καὶ ἡμεῖς ὀφείλομεν ἀλλήλους ἀγαπᾶν. <sup>12</sup> <sup>k</sup> Θεὸν οὐδεὶς πώποτε τεθέαται· ἐὰν ἀγαπῶμεν ἀλλήλους, ὁ Θεὸς ἐν ἡμῖν μένει, καὶ ἡ ἀγάπη αὐτοῦ τετελειωμένη ἐστίν ἐν ἡμῖν. <sup>13</sup> <sup>1</sup> Ἐν τούτῳ γνωσκόμεν, ὅτι ἐν αὐτῷ μένομεν, καὶ αὐτὸς ἐν ἡμῖν, ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ Πνεύματος αὐτοῦ δέδωκεν ἡμῖν.

<sup>14</sup> <sup>m</sup> Καὶ ἡμεῖς τεθεάμεθα καὶ μαρτυροῦμεν, ὅτι ὁ Πατὴρ ἀπέσταλκε τὸν Υἱὸν σωτήρα τοῦ κόσμου. <sup>15</sup> <sup>n</sup> Ὃς ἂν ὁμολογήσῃ ὅτι Ἰησοῦς ἐστίν ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ, ὁ Θεὸς ἐν αὐτῷ μένει, καὶ αὐτὸς ἐν τῷ Θεῷ. <sup>16</sup> <sup>n</sup> Καὶ ἡμεῖς ἐγνώκαμεν καὶ πεπιστεύκαμεν cease to be as cease to love. If He should deny that, he would deny himself; and that He will not do, because he cannot, and He cannot do it because He will not. It is impossible for him to whom 'all things are possible' to deny himself. (Bp. Sanderson.)

9, 10. Here we have the same sentiment as at John iii. 16 and supra iii. 16, where see notes.

9. ἐν τούτῳ ἐφανερώθη, &c.] Thus showing that God can be recognised by us as love, because in this was manifested the love of God, &c. (Lücke.) The meaning, and logical connexion, of this verse will best appear by rendering freely thus: 'Herein is manifestation of the truth of God's love being set on us, and so of the truth, that God, as made known to us in Jesus Christ, is LOVE,' &c. Herein is Love, in the fact, 'not that we loved God, but that while we were yet sinners (Rom. v. 8), He loved us.'—Τὸν μονογενῆ is here added to τὸν Υἱὸν αὐτοῦ, 'in order (as Macknight suggests) to lighten our idea of God's love to us, in giving a Person of such supreme dignity, and so beloved of God, to die for us.'

10. οὐχ ὅτι ἡμεῖς ἠγαπήσαμεν, &c.] The Apostle here lays a stress on God's loving us first, since men are more disposed to love those by whom they are first loved. On the term ἰλασμόν see note supra ii. 1, 2, and my Lex.

11. Here is drawn the inference from the foregoing position of the free love of God to us; q. d. 'Since God hath so greatly loved us, we also must, in imitation of that love, love one another as brethren in Christ.'

12. Θεὸν οὐδεὶς—ἑώρακεν] The first clause contains the same words as John i. 18, where see note; but the sense there, is here further carried out. Render, 'God no man hath (corporeally, with his bodily eyes) ever yet seen [in which it is implied], and therefore we cannot have such visible converse and sensible communion with Him, as we may have one with another; but if we have love one to another, God is remaining with us (is in union with us; comp. ii. 5, note), and His love is perfected in us; i. e. is fully accomplished in us, by our love of the brethren.'

Such is prob. the sense of this obscure passage; and it is confirmed by the suffrage of Est., and nearly of Lücke in the following paraphrase: 'Man cannot immediately return to the invisible God that love which he hath shown to us] for no man hath ever seen God (can ever see him); but when we love one another (love the brethren, who are visible), then God remains in us, he is present to us with his favour, and thus the love to God, who is invisible, yet spiritually present (comp. vv. 19—21), is accomplished in us through our love to the brethren.'

13. The connexion and sense is this: 'The love of God is founded on a mutual communion with him, but that communion depends on our consciousness of the Holy Ghost, which we have received from God, operating within us (compare iii. 24), through whose power, and in the faith in the Son of God, as Redeemer of the world, we are God's children.' (Lücke.)

14. καὶ ἡμεῖς τὸ καὶ μαρτυροῦμεν, &c.] 'Nunc alteram notitiam Dei partem, quam attigimus, exponit, quod scilicet in Filio se nobis communicat, ac fruendam offert: unde sequitur, fide a nobis percipi.' (Calv.) The full sense is well laid down by Est. thus: 'Et ut amplius intelligatur, Deum in nobis esse, nos Apostoli, quorum magisterio fidem Christianam suscepimus, videmus oculis nostris, et manibus contrectavimus (hæc enim dicuntur primo Capite) Eum, in quem credidistis; et sicut vidimus, ita testificati sumus, et adhuc testificamur signis cooperantibus, quod Deus Pater misit Filium suum, ut esset mundi Salvator, i. e. ut homines toto orbe in se credentes a peccatis et morte salvos faceret.'

15. 'Repetit Apostolus illud axioma, nos Deo uniri per Christum, nec posse Christo esse conjunctos, quin Deus in nobis maneat.' (Est.) Render, 'whosoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God (the Saviour sent for our salvation. See John iii. 17), he is really united with God [in mutual love]'. The Apostle takes for granted, not only that the profession is sincere, by being founded in Faith, but productive of a suitable conduct.

16. The connexion may be traced thus: 'And τὴν ἀγάπην, ἣν ἔχει ὁ Θεὸς ἐν ἡμῖν. ὁ Θεὸς ἀγάπη ἐστὶ, καὶ ὁ μένων ἐν τῇ ἀγάπῃ ἐν τῷ Θεῷ μένει, καὶ ὁ Θεὸς ἐν αὐτῷ.

o James 3.
12.
1 Pet. 1. 15.
ch. 2. 2, 19, 21.

17 Ὁ ἔν τούτῳ τετελεσται ἡ ἀγάπη μεθ' ἡμῶν, ἵνα παρρησίαν ἔχωμεν ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τῆς κρίσεως, ὅτι καθὼς ἐκεῖνός ἐστι, καὶ ἡμεῖς ἐσμεν ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ τούτῳ. 18 Φόβος οὐκ ἐστὶν ἐν τῇ ἀγάπῃ, ἀλλ' ἡ τελεία ἀγάπη ἔξω βάλλει τὸν φόβον, ὅτι ὁ φόβος κόλασιν ἔχει· ὁ δὲ φοβούμενος οὐ τετελεσται ἐν τῇ ἀγάπῃ. 19 Ἡμεῖς ἀγαπῶμεν αὐτὸν, ὅτι αὐτὸς πρῶτος ἠγάπησεν ἡμᾶς.

p ch. 2. 4.
et 2. 17.
q Lev. 19.
12.
Matt. 22. 30.
Job 12. 24.
Eph. 5. 2.
1 Thess. 4. 9.
1 Pet. 4. 8.
ch. 2. 11, 22.
a John 1. 12.
12.
ch. 2. 22, 23.
et 4. 2, 13.

20 Ἐάν τις εἴπῃ, Ὅτι ἀγαπῶ τὸν Θεόν, καὶ τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ μισῇ, ψεύστης ἐστίν· ὁ γὰρ μὴ ἀγαπῶν τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ, ὃν ἑώρακε, τὸν Θεόν, ὃν οὐχ ἑώρακε, πῶς δύναται ἀγαπᾶν; 21 καὶ ταύτην τὴν ἐντολὴν ἔχομεν ἀπ' αὐτοῦ, ἵνα ὁ ἀγαπῶν τὸν Θεόν, ἀγαπᾷ καὶ τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ.

V. 1 Ἡ Πᾶς ὁ πιστεύων, ὅτι Ἰησοῦς ἐστὶν ὁ Χριστὸς, ἐκ τοῦ

[to induce men to hold their faith] we do fully know, and firmly believe, the love that God hath towards us." "Hinc intelligimus," says Calv., 'quantum a fide abest suspensa vel dubia opinio.' The ἡμεῖς is rightly referred by the best Expositors to St. John, and those whom he addresses; thus speaking, says Est., 'in personā populi fidelis; ut sensus sit: Itaque nos per Apostolorum predicationem, perque Spiritus sancti testimonia cognovimus ac fide complexi sumus caritatem illam immensam, quam Deus habet erga nos, ut pro quibus vivificandis et salvandis Filium suum miserit in mundum.' So, too, Lücke, who observes that 'the conclusion of v. 16, having a reference to vv. 7, 8, contains a concise result of what is before stated.'—ἐν ἡμῖν is for αἱ ἡμεῖς.

17. 'Duo hujus v. sunt membra: nos Divinam adoptionis tunc esse compotes, quum Deum referimus, ut filii patrem: deinde hanc fiduciam incomparabile esse bonum, quia sine ea simus miserrimi.' (Est.) The general sense may be traced thus, 'By this [abiding in love to our brethren] we may know that our love is complete and perfect, so that we may have confidence [of our acceptance] in the day of judgment; namely, for this reason, that as God is [thus disposed towards us men], so also are we in this world [disposed] towards others; namely, because we imitate the examples of love, &c. set us by our heavenly Father, and therefore may hope for acceptance, through the mercy of God and the mediation of Christ. So Lücke explains the passage as expressive of the power of brotherly love to give perfect confidence in the day of judgment to those who exercise it according to Christ's example.

18. φόβος οὐκ ἐστίν, &c.] 'Quæ toto hoc versu de timore dicuntur; eo spectant, ut probetur, quod dictum est, eos, qui caritatem exercent, habere fiduciam in die Judicii. Nam ablegato per caritatem timore, jam locus est fiducie, cui timor adversabatur. Ut hæc sit probatio a remotione contrarii.' So Est., who lays down the sense thus: 'Timor ille, quo quis sibi male conscius timet condemnari in judicio Divino, non consistit cum caritate, sive non est in eo, qui caritatem habet Dei et proximi, veram scilicet atque sinceram;' q. d. 'Slavish fear exists not in this love, but perfect love [such as this] casts aside fear; for [such] fear implies terror, [which is incompatible with love to God; since] he who so feareth the judgment and punishment is not perfected in love, does not love perfectly and sincerely. 'True love and terror,' observes Lücke, 'mutually exclude each other, because love and cheerful confidence are inseparable, for (στῶ) the terror (of God in judgment) is grounded on consciousness of merited punishment, but (δὲ) fear of punishment annihilates the perfect and cheerful love, which is full of confidence.'

19. ἡμεῖς ἀγαπῶμεν—ἡμᾶς.] Many eminent Commentators, from Grot and Est. downwards, take ἐν in the Subjunctive, 'Let us love;' which is supported by the authority of the Vulg. and Pesch. Syr. Versions; while most recent Expositors take it for the Indicative, which I still prefer, not only for other reasons urged in its favour, but because it yields the more suitable sense. But the arguments urged by Est. for the Subjunctive are so strong, as almost to constrain one's assent. Upon the whole, the matter may be considered an open question.

20. 'There is a seeming want of connexion here, which we may supply from v. 11, and v. 1, by supposing it to have been present to the Apostle's mind to say, "But if the love of God be in our hearts, we cannot help loving our Christian brethren also; or, if we do not, we practically give the lie to our professed belief that in Christ we are sons, whom God, not imputing our trespasses unto us, has called (and by the unspeakable greatness of His love constrained) to walk before Him in holiness and love" (Peile), whose view of the connexion and course of argument, though resting on somewhat precarious grounds, I prefer to that laid down by Bp. Warburton (heretofore adduced by me), which, however, marked by his usual ability, rests on a very insecure basis, and savours too much of the sophist and rhetorical disputant.

21. The Apostle here concludes with the irrefragable argument, that 'it is Christ's distinct commandment, or rather God's through Christ (comp. iii. 23), that whosoever loveth God must love his brother also.' See John xiii. 34.

V. The indissoluble connexion between the law of God and of our brother is now placed in another point of view, and illustrated by new motives; since none who is not born of God can believe that Jesus is the Christ (compare supra iv. 5, 6. John viii. 43), it follows that whosoever hath this faith is born of God. (Lücke.)

Θεοῦ γεγέννηται· καὶ πᾶς ὁ ἀγαπῶν τὸν γεννήσαντα, ἀγαπᾷ καὶ τὸν γεγεννημένον ἐξ αὐτοῦ. <sup>2</sup> Ἐν τούτῳ γινώσκουμεν ὅτι ἀγαπῶμεν τὰ τέκνα τοῦ Θεοῦ, ὅταν τὸν Θεὸν ἀγαπῶμεν καὶ τὰς ἐντολὰς αὐτοῦ τηρῶμεν. <sup>3</sup> Ἡ γὰρ ἐστὶν ἡ ἀγάπη τοῦ Θεοῦ, <sup>b</sup> ἵνα τὰς ἐντολὰς αὐτοῦ τηρῶμεν καὶ αἱ ἐντολαὶ αὐτοῦ βαρεῖαι οὐκ εἰσὶν. <sup>4</sup> ὅτι πᾶν τὸ γεγεννημένον ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ νικᾷ τὸν κόσμον, καὶ αὕτη ἐστὶν ἡ νίκη ἡ νικήσασα τὸν κόσμον, ἡ πίστις ἡμῶν. <sup>5</sup> <sup>d</sup> Τίς ἐστὶν ὁ νικῶν τὸν κόσμον, εἰ μὴ ὁ πιστεύων ὅτι Ἰησοῦς ἐστὶν ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ;

<sup>6</sup> Οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ ἐλθὼν δι' ὕδατος καὶ αἵματος, Ἰησοῦς ὁ Χριστὸς, οὐκ ἐν τῷ ὕδατι μόνον, ἀλλ' ἐν τῷ ὕδατι καὶ τῷ αἵματι· καὶ τὸ Πνεῦμά ἐστι τὸ μαρτυροῦν ὅτι τὸ Πνεῦμά ἐστιν

1. καὶ πᾶς ὁ ἀγαπῶν, &c.] 'Moreover, every one who truly loveth him,' &c. The sentiment has the air of an adage; q. d. 'He who loves the parent will naturally love the child.' The full sense is well opened out by Dr. Peile, from whose able tracing of the argument we may safely conclude that 'both the love of God, and, next to that, the love of our brethren in Christ, do necessarily spring out of a lively faith in the now realized promise of a time of REGENERATION, when "the Son of Man should be seated on the throne of his glory." Matt. xix. 28. Eph. i. 19—23. Phil. ii. 9. Heb. i. 3. James ii. 1. 1 Pet. i. 21.

2. ἐν τούτῳ γινώσκουμεν—τηρῶμεν] The Apostle here argues à generali ad speciale. Since what was said at ver. 1 was universally true, so it holds good particularly of the love of God. The sense is, 'By this may we know that we do love the children of God aright, when we love God, and keep his commandments.'—To advert to a matter of various reading. For τηρῶμεν Lachm. and Tisch. edit. ποιῶμεν, from several ancient MSS. (to which I add Lamb. 1182), and internal evidence is in its favour, from this use of ποιῶν being quite characteristic of the Apostle. Nevertheless, τηρῶν is also so used by St. John in this very Epistle, supra, ch. ii. 3—5. iii. 22, 24, as also in the next verse, and v. 18. So that ποιῶμεν may have been introduced for the purpose of removing a tautology.

3. Of this verse the scope is to state more precisely the connexion between loving God and keeping his commandments.—αὕτη γὰρ ἐστὶν ἡ ἀγάπη, &c., meaning, 'this is the proof and evidence of our love to God, that we keep his commandments.' The next words, καὶ αἱ ἐντολαὶ—islae, seem meant to indirectly contrast (as an encouragement to obedience) the comparatively light injunctions of the Gospel with the heavy burdens of the Law. In proof of which, the Apostle proceeds to show how they are easy,—adverting to those points in which the Gospel is espec. superior to the Law,—namely, the love of God, as opposed to the fear of him, and that renewal of the heart by the communication of Divine grace, which the Law did not, and could not, provide.

4. ὅτι πᾶν τὸ γεγεννημένον—τὸν κόσμον] q. d. 'Now, as a proof of this, whatsoever is born of God overcometh [the temptations of] the world.' Then is suggested the grand principle by which the victory is obtained, in the words καὶ αὕτη—πίστις ἡμῶν, where, at νίκη, there is a metonymy of the effect for the efficient. The neuter, πᾶν τὸ γιν., is here, as at John vi. 39. xvii. 2, put for πᾶς ὁ γιν., not, as Lücke says, 'to express totality more forcibly,' but in order to advert to the victory being obtained not so much by the man himself, as by the new nature infused into him by regeneration, 1 Cor. i. 30. vi. 17. 2 Cor. v. 17, and other passages referred to by Dr. Peile, who has well seen the true view.

5. Instead of further demonstrating this proposition, St. John, addressing himself to the conscience and Christian experience of his readers, exclaims, by an interrogative affirmative, 'But who, except he that hath faith in Christ, is capable of overcoming the world? Who but he,' &c. Comp. 2 Cor. i. 24, where it is said, τῇ γὰρ πίστει ἰσχυράμεθα.—Τίς ἐστὶν ὁ νικῶν, &c. Here (as at ii. 22) the interrogation is strongly affirmative. Of course, to believe Jesus to be the Son of God is to believe that he is God incarnate. The belief, too, must be a vital one, evincing its truth by its fruits, otherwise it will not, cannot conquer.

6. By the water and the blood here spoken of we may, with Wells and Carpov, suppose the Apostle to advert to the sacraments; meaning by water the 'laver of regeneration,' and by blood the Lord's Supper, in which the wine is poured out as a symbol of the blood of the New Covenant—the former as being that by which we are regenerated, and become sons of God; the latter as that whereby we are united with God, and obtain a victory over the world (vv. 4, 5). The connexion and sense of the passage is well stated by Lücke as follows: 'Who can doubt that Jesus is really the Christ, the Son of God? For, as he was to appear in the quality of Messiah, so he has appeared; and what he was to bring, as a purifying and atoning Saviour to the world, that he has brought.'—οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ ἐλθὼν—αἵματος. The words are to be resolved thus: οὗτός (ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ, ver. 5) ἐστὶν Ἰησοῦς ὁ Χριστός, ὁ ἐλθὼν δι' ὕδατος καὶ αἵματος.

f Matt. 23.
19.
John 1. 1.
1 Cor. 12. 4
—6.
Rev. 19. 13.

g John 5. 37.
3 & 17, 18.

h John 3. 19, 23.
Rom. 8. 16,
Gal. 4. 6.

ἡ ἀλήθεια. 7 ὅτι τρεῖς εἰσιν οἱ μαρτυροῦντες [ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ, ὁ Πατὴρ, ὁ Λόγος, καὶ τὸ ἅγιον Πνεῦμα. καὶ οὗτοι οἱ τρεῖς ἓν εἰσιν. 8 καὶ τρεῖς εἰσιν οἱ μαρτυροῦντες ἐν τῇ γῇ,] τὸ πνεῦμα, καὶ τὸ ὕδωρ, καὶ τὸ αἷμα· καὶ οἱ τρεῖς εἰς τὸ ἓν εἰσιν. 9 Εἰ τὴν μαρτυρίαν τῶν ἀνθρώπων λαμβάνομεν, ἡ μαρτυρία τοῦ Θεοῦ μείζων ἐστίν· ὅτι αὕτη ἐστίν ἡ μαρτυρία τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἣν μεμαρτύρηκε περὶ τοῦ Υἱοῦ αὐτοῦ. 10 ὁ πιστεύων εἰς τὸν Υἱὸν τοῦ

7, 8. ὅτι τρεῖς εἰσιν—οἱ τρεῖς εἰς τὸ ἓν εἰσιν.] On a passage like the present, on which volumes have been written by some of the most eminent scholars, it would be presumptuous to attempt, within the compass of a NOTE, even the briefest sketch of the state of a question so extensive in its bearings as that which relates to the authenticity and sense of the disputed passage placed within brackets. Nor can this be necessary, since, I presume, nearly all my readers possess Mr. Horne's valuable Introduction, which contains an able condensed statement of the arguments on both sides of the question. Those, however, who desire to obtain complete information on the subject are referred, FOR the authenticity, to the disquisitions of Bengel and Ernesti, Bps. Horsley and Middl., Prof. Knittel, Drs. Nulan and Hales, and Bp. Burgess; AGAINST it, to those of Prof. Porson, Bp. Marsh, and Crito Cantabrigiensis [Bp. Turton]. I must content myself with laying before the reader two close paraphrases of the whole passage,—one with and the other without the disputed portion; leaving it to him to decide which way he thinks best. On the supposition that the words are genuine, the meaning may be expressed, in the words of Bp. Burgess, thus: 'This is he that was manifested by his baptism to be the Son of God; and by his death to be the Son of God come in the flesh; manifested not by his baptism only, with which he commenced his ministry on earth, but by his death, with which he finished it; and it is the Spirit that beareth witness that Jesus is the Son of God. Now the Spirit is truth,—a true witness. For he is not alone; there are three that bear record in heaven that Jesus is the Son of God,—namely, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Spirit; and these three are one in the Divine nature. And there are three that bear witness in earth that the Son of God is come in the flesh,—namely, his last breath on the cross, and the blood and water that issued from his side. And these three are one in the Person of Jesus Christ, one united proof of his human nature from the phenomena of his death. By the Jewish Law, the testimony of two or three men is true. If, then, we receive the witness of men, the witness of God is greater; for this is the witness of God, that he hath testified of his Son.'—On the supposition that the words are spurious, we may express the sense according to the paraphrase of Sir Isaac Newton as follows: 'This is he that, after the Jews had long expected him, came, first in a mortal body, by baptism of water, and then in an immortal one, by shedding his blood upon the cross, and rising again from the dead; not by water only, but by water and blood; being the Son of God, as well by his resurrection from the dead (Acts xiii. 33) as by his supernatural birth of the Virgin (Luke i. 35). And it is the Spirit also that, together with the water and blood, beareth witness of the truth of his coming; because the Spirit is truth, and so a fit and unexceptionable witness. For there are three that bear record of his coming; the Spirit, which he promised to send, and which was since sent forth upon us in the form of cloven tongues and of various gifts; the baptism of water, wherein God testified "This is my beloved Son;" and the shedding of his blood, accompanied with his resurrection, whereby he became the most faithful martyr or witness of this truth. And these three, the Spirit, the baptism, and passion of Christ, agree in witnessing one and the same thing, [namely, that the Son of God is come]; and therefore their evidence is strong; for the law requires but two consenting witnesses, and here we have three; and if we receive the witness of men, the three-fold witness of God, which he bore of his Son, by declaring at his baptism, "This is my beloved Son," by raising him from the dead, and by pouring out his Spirit on us, is greater, and therefore ought to be more readily received.' See also the paraphrase of Dr. Peile. I have only to add, that, after a fresh examination of the whole question for this ninth Edition, I see less reason than ever to receive the words as genuine. As far as regards external evidence, the words must be considered as interpolated; and internal evidence is, in the main, confirmative of external. In short, the words cannot, with any due regard to those Canons of Criticism acted upon in all other cases throughout the writings of the New Testament, be regarded otherwise than as spurious. I find not a vestige of them in any one of the numerous Lamb. and Mus. MSS. which I have collated.

9. εἰ τὴν μαρτυρίαν, &c.] Here we have an elliptical syllogism, a minor ad majorem, to be thus resolved: 'If we receive the testimony of men [meaning the declaration of two or three witnesses], how much more must we then receive [the triple and concordant] testimony of God, it being greater, i. e. more probative than any testimony of man? But if we receive God's testimony, we must believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; for this the testimony of God avers.' (Lücke.)

10. ὁ πιστεύων, &c.] q. d. '[Accordingly] he who believeth in the Son of God hath the testimony of God [just spoken] in himself,' i. e. he holdeth it with entire assent, and firmly retains it. See John v. 38. Heb. x. 34.—ἔχει τὴν μαρτυρίαν ἐν ᾧ. Here the Alex. MS. and ten others add after μαρτ. the words τοῦ Θεοῦ, which have been introduced into the text by Lachm., but most uncritically, since internal evidence is quite against them, they being derived from a marginal scholium, of which the writer thought fit to supply the words to which the reference in τὴν μαρτ. is made, such being the true reference; for the general sense is, '[Accordingly], he who believes in the Son of God hath and holds in himself, for firm belief, the testimony of God.' See John v. 38, compared with Heb. x. 34. That this is the true sense has been ably shown by Est., and is plain from the antithesis, the substance of which is well laid down by Lücke thus: 'But whosoever does not believe God in what concerns his Son, he has even by that,—by not believing the testimony of God in favour of his Son,—made him a liar; as if it were possible that God could attest what was false.' This is confirmed by the words of Est., 'ut eum (sc. Deum Patrem) dicat mendacem,—tanquam qui falso sit testatus de Jesu; perinde, inquam, faciat, ac si diertis verbis diceret, Deum Patrem esse fallacem, dum non vult credere ejus testimonio.' The above view receives a still further confirmation from the same use of τὴν μαρτυρίαν in Rev. vi. 9, διὰ τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ διὰ τὴν μαρτυρίαν ἣν εἶχον, where see note.

Θεοῦ, ἔχει τὴν μαρτυρίαν ἐν ἑαυτῷ· ὁ μὴ πιστεύων τῷ Θεῷ, ψεύστην πεποίηκεν αὐτόν, ὅτι οὐ πεπίστευκεν εἰς τὴν μαρτυρίαν, ἣν μεμαρτύρηκεν ὁ Θεὸς περὶ τοῦ Υἱοῦ αὐτοῦ. <sup>11</sup> <sup>1</sup> Καὶ αὕτη <sup>1</sup> John 1. 4. ἐστὶν ἡ μαρτυρία, ὅτι ζῶν αἰώνιον ἔδωκεν ἡμῖν ὁ Θεός, καὶ αὕτη ἡ ζωὴ ἐν τῷ Υἱῷ αὐτοῦ ἐστίν. <sup>12</sup> <sup>k</sup> ὁ ἔχων τὸν Υἱόν, ἔχει τὴν <sup>k</sup> John 3. 36. & 5. 24. ζωὴν· ὁ μὴ ἔχων τὸν Υἱόν τοῦ Θεοῦ, τὴν ζωὴν οὐκ ἔχει.

<sup>13</sup> <sup>1</sup> Ταῦτα ἔγραψα ὑμῖν [τοῖς πιστεύουσιν εἰς τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ <sup>1</sup> John 20. 31. Υἱοῦ τοῦ Θεοῦ,] ἵνα εἰδῆτε ὅτι ζῶν αἰώνιον ἔχετε, καὶ ἵνα πιστεύητε εἰς τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ Υἱοῦ τοῦ Θεοῦ. <sup>14</sup> <sup>m</sup> Καὶ αὕτη ἐστὶν <sup>m</sup> Jer. 20. 12. Matk. 7. 8. & 21. 22. ἡ παρῥησία ἣν ἔχομεν πρὸς αὐτόν, ὅτι ἐάν τι αἰτώμεθα κατὰ <sup>Mark 11. 24. Luke 11. 9. John 14. 13. & 15. 7. & 16. 24. James 1. 5. ch. 5. 22.</sup> τὸ θέλημα αὐτοῦ, ἀκούει ἡμῶν. <sup>15</sup> καὶ ἐὰν οἶδαμεν ὅτι ἀκούει ἡμῶν, ὃ ἂν αἰτώμεθα, οἶδαμεν ὅτι ἔχομεν τὰ αἰτήματα ἃ ᾔτη-

11. καὶ αὕτη ἐστὶν ἡ μαρτυρία, &c.] meaning to say, that 'the essential practical substance of this "witness of God" may be divided into two parts; declaring, 1. that God really has given to us eternal life; and, 2. that this eternal life is granted to us in his Son, i. e. through belief in him, as the ἀρχὴ τῆς ζωῆς.' (Lücke.)

12. This verse again is connected with ver. 5, and is a colophon to all that precedes; and the general sense is well expressed by Dr. Peile thus: 'He that holdeth and hath part in THE SON, holdeth and hath part in the Life: he that hath no hold upon nor assured part IN THE SON OF GOD, hath no hold upon nor assured part in the Life.'

13. In this verse there is a sort of vinculum to connect the preceding and following context; since (as Lücke observes) though referring especially to the immediately preceding passage (vv. 6—12), yet it forms the transition to the subsequent section, vv. 14—21.—ταῦτα ἔγραψα—Θεοῦ. To remove what might seem tautology, we must take πιστ. in the last clause emphatically, i. e. as denoting reality and heartfelt constancy of profession, as opposed to a cold historical belief.

14, 15. To enforce the foregoing exhortation to constancy in faith, the Apostle points out the high privilege of true believers,—in having a confidence of approach unto God in prayer, with full assurance of his readiness to answer their supplications, if the requests be made according to his will; i. e. after the prescribed manner, in such a way as may tend to his glory and their own spiritual good,—and with the persuasion that, in some sense, the petitions they put up would be granted in the best manner, though it might be not in the exact manner they expected. Here there is an evident allusion to the promise made by our Lord to the Apostles, John xiv. 12—14, xvi. 23.

14. καὶ αὕτη ἐστὶν ἡ παρῥησία.] Render: 'And on this (namely, that we know we may expect future salvation) rests our sure confidence in God.'

15. καὶ ἐὰν οἶδαμεν, &c.] These words, variously expounded, are best taken in their natural and obvious sense, as follows: 'And if we know (as we do) that he heareth us (in whatever petitions we may prefer), we know (are convinced) that we have (i. e. are sure of receiving) from him the petitions we thus (i. e. according to his will) petitioned from him.' The difficulty, which has perplexed Commentators, may be removed by supposing (with Dodd.) that κατὰ τὸ θέλημα is to be understood, by implication, from the preceding verse; or at any rate the petitions must be supposed to be κατὰ τὸ θέλημα (in the sense that has been just explained); for otherwise the Apostle's own words teach us, that they will not be heard, much less granted. The words, καὶ ἐὰν οἶδ.—αὐτοῦ, are not, as may seem, a superfluous repetition, but, as Calv. remarks, 'quod in genere de orationum successu pronuntiaverat Apostolus nunc specialiter affirmat,' and consequently, as Est. says, cum augmento; which was well seen by Bede, who remarks, 'repetitio est et inculcatio (gravis) superiorum dictorum, ut nos ad orandum vivacius excitet.'—δ' ἂν αἰτώμεθα should be rendered, 'Whatsoever we may petition for ourselves.' The words, οἶδαμεν ὅτι ἔχομεν, mean, 'we know that we are sure to have them;' a popular mode of expression, but which I find in a very pure Greek writer, Plato Comic, Ζεὺς κακοῦμ. frag. vi., ἐκ τῶν λόγων δ' ἔστ' αὐτὸς ἐπιθυμῆς, ἔχεις, 'Whatsoever things you yourself wish, you are sure to have.'

καμεν παρ' αὐτοῦ. 16 <sup>n</sup> Ἐάν τις ἴδῃ τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ ἁμαρ-τάνοντα ἁμαρτίαν μὴ πρὸς θάνατον, αἰτήσῃ, καὶ δώσει αὐτῷ ζωὴν, τοῖς ἁμαρτάνουσι μὴ πρὸς θάνατον. ἔστιν ἁμαρτία πρὸς θάνατον οὐ περὶ ἐκείνης λέγω ἵνα ἐρωτήσῃ 17 <sup>o</sup> πᾶσα ἀδικία ἁμαρτία ἐστὶ, καὶ ἔστιν ἁμαρτία οὐ πρὸς θάνατον. 18 <sup>p</sup> Οἶδαμεν ὅτι πᾶς ὁ γεγεννημένος ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ, οὐχ ἁμαρτάνει· ἀλλ' ὁ γεννηθεὶς ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ τηρεῖ ἑαυτὸν, καὶ ὁ ποιητὴς οὐχ ἅπτεται αὐτοῦ. 19 οἶδαμεν ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐσμεν, καὶ ὁ κόσμος ὅλος

16, 17. Of this passage the sense will best appear by considering the connexion, which is well traced by Lücke as follows: 'St. John passes from Christian prayer in general to Christian intercession in particular,—espec. for sinful brethren; and as he has shown, vv. 14, 15, that it is only prayer full of confidence, and according to God's will, which is fulfilled, so he here intimates, that the Christian should intercede with God only for that which is capable of being accomplished; and accordingly not περὶ ἁμαρτίας πρὸς θάνατον, but only περὶ ἁμαρτίας οὐ πρὸς θάνατον. 'In order (continues he) to determine the force of which expressions, we must lay down the following data: 1. that by "sin unto death" is to be understood no single sin in particular, but a course of sinning. See note on Matt. xii. 31; 2. that ἴαν τις ἴδῃ τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ shows that here must be meant a species of sins which can occur only among Christians, and not among those who are not Christians; 3. that the difference between "mortal sin" and "sin not unto death" must be externally perceptible, and not unknown to the persons addressed. otherwise the precept would be without an object, nay, dangerous; not to mention that, had that been the case, the difference would have been stated more precisely; 4. that as here only moral relations are spoken of, and as, according to the usus loquendi and the fundamental ideas of the Epistle, by ζωή can be meant only spiritual life, ζωὴ αἰώνιος (compare iv. 9); the expression πρὸς θάνατον, too, cannot have a reference to bodily, but, as supr. iii. 14, only to spiritual death. Finally, it is plain that St. John, by πρὸς θάνατον, can have meant, in general, only such sins of which spiritual death is the inevitable consequence, i. e. sins by which, according to the laws of the βασιλεία τοῦ Θεοῦ, or of the κοινωνία μετὰ τοῦ Πατρὸς καὶ μετὰ τοῦ Υἱοῦ αὐτοῦ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, the capability for the Christian ζωή is necessarily abolished, and the Christian state of salvation lost. As, according to St. John, the Christian life is acquired, or the passing from death to life effected by faith in Jesus Christ, and entirely accomplished by perfect and genuine brotherly love (which is the root of Christian life), so also by infidelity, worldliness, and Cain-like want of love, the Christian life is again lost, and man repasses, as it were, from life into death, ἐκ τῆς ζωῆς εἰς τὸν θάνατον. Compare supra ii. 17, 25. iii. 11—15. (Lücke.) In short, the full sense is, 'If any man see his brother sinning a sin not unto death (deadly), he shall ask, and shall give him (be the means of his having from God) life, (if the case respects) those sinning not unto death. There is (such a thing as) a sin unto death,—deadly sin; it is not for such a sin as that I am bidding (any one) to intercede.' I would add, that this often repeated use of πρὸς θάνατον, may indeed seem overcharged, yet it occurs also in John xi. 4; though εἰς θάνατον might have been interchanged with it, and is more agreeable to the Hellenistic idiom. As respects the expression itself, I have not met with it in the Class. writers, except in Lucian, t. i. 372, 47, πρὸς θάνατον ἀποδείλαι; though even that would not prove the Classical use of the phrase as here employed, since there the sense intended is not, 'are you frightened to death?' but 'are you frightened at death?' a construction of ἀποδείλ. found also in Polyb. xi. 16, 2, and Plut. vi. 72.

17. Here the Apostle goes on to show that, indeed, every ἀδικία (every action and every intention which is contrary to the divine law, every infringement on the δικαιοσύνη) is in its essence sin, but that still there exists a difference as to the degree of intensity and effect of sin, between the sin unto death and the sin not unto death. The true Christian can, as such, according to St. John, not sin unto death; he is subject to the sins not unto death, as long as he walketh in the flesh. Comp. ii. 1. St. John, therefore, adds this consolation, v. 18, 'But we [also] know that every one who is born of God does not sin (comp. iii. 9) [in this sense—ἁμαρτ. πρὸς θάνατον], but that (ὅτι being supplied) he who is born of God (being ever intent on sanctifying himself) keepeth himself from so sinning (τηρεῖ ἑαυτὸν, i. e. ἀγνὸν, ἀπὸ τοῦ ἁμαρτάνειν). (Comp. James i. 27. 1 Tim. v. 22. Wisd. x. 5), and thus is unassailable to the Evil One. (Lücke.) The full sense of the emphatic words καὶ ἔστιν ἁμαρτία οὐ πρὸς θάνατον may be thus expressed: 'There is also sin not unto death, inasmuch as it may be washed away by faith in the healing blood of Christ, and thus be not mortal.'

18. The next words point at the result of this self-preservation;—namely, that the Evil one οὐχ ἅπτεται αὐτοῦ, which must be taken with the qualification suggested by the preceding words, that 'he doth not so touch (not lay hold so as to keep hold) as to seriously harm him'; by an agonistic metaphor, and a peculiar expression, occurring also in the Sept., 1 Chron. xvi. 22, and Jer. iv. 10. Philo Jud. p. 629, and also in the Class. writers. On the theological point involved see Calv. and Eat.

19. οἶδαμεν ὅτι ἐκ τ. Θε. ἐσμεν, &c.] The scope of these words is mainly warning, as Calv. saw, who remarks, 'quod in commune pronuntiavit de omnibus Dei filiis, nunc ad eos, quibus scribit, accommodat, idque ut eos stimulet ad cavendum peccatum et ad repellendos Satanae insultus animet.' But the connexion is more

ΙΩΑΝΝΟΥ ΤΟΥ ΑΠΟΣΤΟΛΟΥ

ΕΠΙΣΤΟΛΗ ΚΑΘΟΛΙΚΗ ΔΕΥΤΕΡΑ.

1 Ὁ ΠΡΕΣΒΥΤΤΕΡΟΣ ἐκλεκτῇ κυρίᾳ καὶ τοῖς τέκνοις αὐτῆς, οὓς ἐγὼ ἀγαπῶ ἐν ἀληθείᾳ, (καὶ οὐκ ἐγὼ μόνος, ἀλλὰ καὶ πάντες

Of the authenticity of this, and the third Epistle of St. John, doubts were at first entertained; but, after due examination, they were, at an early period, received as Canonical, and accordingly are quoted as such by writers of the second century; and that they are such has recently been shown by the elaborate researches of Lücke. Indeed, their being at first kept out of the Canon arose, prob., not so much from any opinion of their being spurious, as from their brevity, and being addressed only to individuals, and on comparatively familiar subjects. That they are both from the same hand ('the beloved Apostle') is abundantly clear, both from the manner and style, and from the sentiments: the design is nearly the same in both. After commencing with affectionate salutations, they proceed to commendation, and admonition to steadfastness in the faith, and Christian love and charity; and then conclude with cordial valediction. On the place and date of this and the third Epistle nothing certain is known. That they followed the first Epistle, there is little reason to doubt; and their date depends on that assigned to the first; on which see the Introduction to that Epistle. 'In this short Epistle St. John warns some lady of eminence, one of his own converts, against the seductions of the Gnostic heretics, which had begun to prevail extensively in the Christian Church. The sentiments and arguments are nearly the same with those which are more copiously developed in the preceding Epistle.' (Bp. Shuttleworth.) Such being the case, it is probable that this Epistle at least was written very shortly after the first, and the third very soon after this.

1. ὁ πρεσβ.] As the word πρεσβ. properly denotes senior, and as St. John was then undoubtedly the senior Apostle, and prob. the senior Christian, we may suppose him to have been called ὁ πρεσβ. κατ' ἔξοχην, which would soon pass into a kind of appellative, perhaps, as Kütt. thinks, honorifice data. Comp. Philom. 9. But it may be put, as Dr. Peile thinks, 'as authority for John's having thus described himself, as one whom Christ had ordained to be with Him, and to send forth as His ambassador (Mark iii. 14), comp. 1 Pet. v. 1.' That the Apostle should use this, in preference to his own name, is probable, since he was accustomed, from modesty, to suppress it.—ἐκλεκτῇ κυρίᾳ. On the object of this address considerable difference of opinion exists. Of the various interpretations that have been proposed, the two following have alone any semblance of truth; 1. that which regards, which goes upon the supposition, that the proper name (prob. written upon the outside of the letter) is omitted, and assigns as the sense, 'to (the) excellent (lit. 'choice') Lady (or 'Matron'), and her children;' 2. either ἐκλεκτῇ, or κυρίᾳ, as a proper name. The latter is preferable; and that Kyria was used as a proper name, has been proved by Heumann and Lücke. This sense is ably supported by Lücke, and espec. by Dr. Davidson (in his Introduction), and is confirmed by the Pesch. Syr. Version; and in this view I must now acquiesce. Thus the true rendering will be, 'To Kyria, elect (in Christ Jesus), with reference to the Divine ἐλογῇ, or 'choice'; and this is confirmed by a similar case in 1 Pet. i. 1, ἐκλεκτοῖς παραισώμενοι. The only objection to this (for the use of κυρία at v. 5 for 'Lady' is really none) is, that the Article would thus be required at ἐκλεκτῇ, as at the similar ex. at 3 John i. Rom. xvi. 5, 8, 12, where the Article is prefixed. But there the Adject. is ἀγαπητῇ, which differs in its character from ἐκλεκτῇ. It is true, that at Rom. xvi. 13 we have τῶν ἐκλεκτῶν, but there there is added ἐν Κυρίῳ, which require the Article. Dr. Davidson is of opinion that 'we must suppose some negligence in the omission of the Article.' But that the omission is not unprecedented is certain from the ex. to which he has himself pointed, at 1 Pet. i. 1; and in both cases it can only amount to a brevity of expression, no where so observable, or likely to occur, as in the inscriptions of Epistles.—ἐγνωκότας τὴν ἀλήθειαν. The full sense is, 'those who have known and do know the truth,' 'have come to the full knowledge thereof,' implying also the making full profession of the Christian religion as their rule of faith and practice. The expression is, however, so rare, that I have not met with it elsewhere, except in Joa. Antt. xiii. 10, 5, ἐπεὶ ἤρξατο γινῶσκειν τὴν ἀλήθειαν, and its equiv. τὸ ἀληθὲς εἰδέναι, in an Epistle of the philosopher Pherecr. ap. Diog. Laert. L. i. 121. The next words, διὰ τὴν ἀλήθειαν, &c., connect with the preceding, ἀγαπῶ οἱ ἐγνωκότες τὴν ἀλήθειαν.) <sup>2</sup> διὰ τὴν ἀλήθειαν τὴν μένουσαν ἐν ἡμῖν, καὶ μεθ' ἡμῶν ἔσται εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα· <sup>3</sup> ἔσται μεθ' ὑμῶν χάρις, ἔλεος, εἰρήνη παρὰ Θεοῦ Πατρὸς, καὶ παρὰ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ τοῦ Υἱοῦ τοῦ Πατρὸς, ἐν ἀληθείᾳ καὶ ἀγάπῃ.

<sup>4</sup> Ἐχάρην λίαν, ὅτι εὗρηκα ἐκ τῶν τέκνων σου περιπατοῦντας ἐν ἀληθείᾳ, καθὼς ἐντολὴν ἐλάβομεν παρὰ τοῦ Πατρὸς. <sup>5</sup> <sup>a</sup> Καὶ νῦν ἐρωτῶ σε, κυρία, οὐχ ὡς ἐντολὴν γράφων σοι καυὴν, ἀλλὰ ἣν εἶχομεν ἀπ' ἀρχῆς, ἵνα ἀγαπῶμεν ἀλλήλους. <sup>6</sup> <sup>b</sup> Καὶ αὕτη ἐστὶν ἡ ἀγάπη, ἵνα περιπατῶμεν κατὰ τὰς ἐντολάς αὐτοῦ. Αὕτη ἐστὶν ἡ ἐντολή, καθὼς ἠκούσατε ἀπ' ἀρχῆς, ἵνα ἐν αὐτῇ περιπατήτε. <sup>7</sup> <sup>c</sup> Ὅτι πολλοὶ πλάνοι εἰσῆλθον εἰς τὸν κόσμον, <sup>a</sup> John 12, 24, & 18, 12.

<sup>b</sup> Eph. 4, 2.
<sup>c</sup> 1 Thess. 4, 1.
1 Pet. 4, 8.
1 John 2, 7.
8, & 3, 11.
22, & 4, 21.
b John 18, 10.
1 John 2, 24.
c Matt. 24, 5, 24.
1 Pet. 2, 1.
1 John 2, 18, 22, & 4, 1-2.

ἐν ἀληθ., and may be rendered, 'for the truth's sake; which (now) dwelleth in us, and shall (we trust) be with us for ever.' The best comment on which are the words of our Lord (prob. in the beloved Apostle's mind) at John xiv. 17, where, after mentioning the gift of the Paraclete, 'to remain with them for ever,' He adds, τὸ Πνεῦμα τῆς ἀληθείας—παρ' ὑμῖν μένει, καὶ ἐν ὑμῖν ἔσται.

3. ἔσται μεθ' ὑμῶν χάρις, &c.] Here we have the usual Apostolic greeting, couched in the words of devout invocation for the subsequent gifts and graces, which have been explained in similar appreciations in the Introductions to St. Paul's Epistles. The only point here to be settled is, the force of the concluding words, ἐν ἀληθείᾳ καὶ ἀγάπῃ, which must not be rendered, as Dr. Peile directs, 'truthfully and lovingly,' intimating the feelings of the writer; still less, as he thinks may be better, to take the expressions as a Dat. commodi, 'for a pledge of truth and love;' for the presence of the Proposition ἐν excludes the Dat. commodi. I still think that the sense intended by the words is, 'by,' or 'through the truth (its knowledge and reception into the heart), and mutual love and peace,' whereby the graces bestowed by God are preserved, and made available to his glory.

4. Ἐχάρην λίαν, &c.] Here there is opened out the main purpose of the Epistle;—namely, as Est. observes, 'to exhort this excellent Christian woman, and her faithful sons, to constantly remain in the true faith respecting Christ, and in true love and charity towards God and their neighbours.' Premittit autem huic exhortationi laudem eorum, ut qui hactenus in fide et Christianâ charitate persistissent. Verum hanc ipsam laudem non laudationis forma, sed suæ congratulationis, et tacite ad Deum gratiarum actionis specie proponit. Id quod piis et prudentibus faciendum est, dum alios laudant, ut neque tentationem superbis iis creent, neque Divina beneficia hominibus, Deo præterito, adscribant.' (Est.)—ἐν ἀληθείᾳ is not well rendered by Dr. Peile, 'truthfully,' as if it were a mere phrase for an adverb. The sense is well opened out by Est., who observes that by ἀληθ. here is denoted not only 'moral truth,' or that of life and morals, but also 'truth of faith' (see more in his note), thus denoting that they were not only Christians, but good Christians.—περιπατοῦντας denotes 'habit and practice.' Comp. Eph. v. 2, περιε. ἐν ἀγάπῃ. The best comment on καθὼς ἐντολὴν ἐλάβ. π. τ. II. is v. 6 infr. comp. with John x. 18. xii. 49, 50. 1 Tim. iii. 13, 14. 2 Pet. ii. 21. 1 John ii. 6. iii. 23.

5. καὶ νῦν ἐρωτῶ σε,—ἵνα ἀγαπῇ.] 'His verbis est cohortatio ad Christianam charitatem continuandam inter fideles mutuo, quum undique tot insurgerent adversarii et persecutores Christianismi. —Ερωτῶ. Sic loquitur, ut efficacius permoveat, dum is rogat, cuius erat hortari et monere. Simile fecit Paulus Apostolus 2 Cor. v. 20, ad Philen. 9, et alibi.' (Est.) By the same holy refinement of phrase, ἐρωτῶ, ἵνα ἀγαπῶμεν may justly be supposed to be a delicate mode of expression for ἐρωτῶ, ἵνα ἀγαπήτε. On the intermediate words, οὐχ ὡς ἐντολὴν—καυήν, the best comment is 1 John ii. 7, 8.

6. καὶ αὕτη ἐστὶν ἡ ἀγάπη—αὐτοῦ.] 'Videtur Apostolus sorite quodam suam adhortationem eo deducere, ut ad constantiam fidei initio Christianismi acceptæ fideles istos excitet; q. d. Si salvi esse cupimus, est omnibus nobis necessaria caritas in Deum et proximos; caritatem in Deum non habet, qui non obtemperat mandatis ejus; inter cætera autem ipsius mandata est hoc, ut permaneamus in illis fidei dogmatibus et morum præceptis, quæ per sanctos Apostolos Domini accepimus, quum facti sumus Christiani.' (Est.) As to the next sentence, αὕτη ἐστὶν ἡ ἐν.—ἵνα—περιε. This contains the same sentiment as 1 John ii. 24, where see note. The sense is well represented by Dr. Peile thus: 'This is the commandment, as ye have heard it from the beginning, for you to walk in it;' as much as to say, 'All you have to do, is to walk in it, without looking either to the right hand or to the left.'

7. ὅτι πολλοὶ πλάνοι—εἰς τὸν κόσμον.] The connexion is with the whole of the context, from v. 4 to v. 6 inclusive; q. d. 'It is not without reason that I am anxious you should walk in the truth, καθὼς ἐντολὴν ἐλάβετε, κατὰ τὰς ἐντολάς τοῦ Πατρὸς, καθὼς ἠκούσατε ἀπ' ἀρχῆς, because many deceivers have entered into the world, whose only study is to draw you from the right path in which you are walking; and who will not allow that Jesus Christ came in the flesh;' i. e. in the real human nature; 'who will not confess (the doctrine of) Christ's coming in the flesh.' Such, I agree with Dr. Peile, may have been the meaning intended by the Apostle; though we should have expected him to write ἤκουσα, or ἐληλυθότα; but whether by writing ἐρχόμενον he meant, as Dr. Peile supposes, to express what this early heresy denied; not simply οἱ μὴ ὁμολογούντες Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν ἐρχόμενον ἐν σαρκί· οὗτός 4 Gal. 1. 4 ἔστιν ὁ πλάνος καὶ ὁ ἀντίχριστος. <sup>8 d</sup> Βλέπετε ἑαυτοὺς, ἵνα μὴ ἀπολέσωμεν ἀ ἐργασάμεθα, ἀλλὰ μισθὸν πλήρη ἀπολάβωμεν.

 9 • Πᾶς ὁ παραβαίνων καὶ μὴ μένων ἐν τῇ διδαχῇ τοῦ Χριστοῦ Θεὸν οὐκ ἔχει· ὁ μένων ἐν τῇ διδαχῇ τοῦ Χριστοῦ, οὗτος καὶ τὸν Πατέρα καὶ τὸν Υἱὸν ἔχει. <sup>10</sup> <sup>1</sup> Εἴ τις ἔρχεται πρὸς ὑμᾶς, καὶ ταύτην τὴν διδαχὴν οὐ φέρει, μὴ λαμβάνετε αὐτὸν εἰς οἰκίαν, καὶ χαίρειν αὐτῷ μὴ λέγετε· <sup>11</sup> ὁ γὰρ λέγων αὐτῷ χαίρειν κοινωνεῖ τοῖς ἔργοις αὐτοῦ τοῖς ποιητοῖς.

f Rom. 16.

17.

1 Cor. 5. 11.

8. 10. 22.

(Gal. 1. 5. 9.

2 Tim. 2. 5.

Tit. 2. 10.

the accomplished fact, but the very possibility and abstract idea of—the Incarnation, or Advent of DEITY under a mortal form, I doubt.—οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ πλ., q. d. 'that kind of person, or every such person, is the deceiver I mean'; or, as Dr. Peile expresses, in paraphrase, 'Here have we, &c.—this is one form under which the faith of the Church is to be tried by the manifestation in it of—The Incarnation of Error and THE ANTI-CHRIST: comp. 2 Thesa. ii. 3. 1 John ii. 18. iv. 3, 6.'

8. βλῖπτει εἰ.] for φυλάσσει εἰ., 'take heed to yourselves': compare Mark xiii. 9.—ἵνα μὴ ἀπολέσωμεν & εργ., 'in order that we [your teachers] may not lose our reward.'—To advert to some variety of readings. For ἀπολέσωμεν, ἐργασάμεθα, and ἀπολάβωμεν, Lachm. and Tisch. read, from several ancient MSS. (to which I can only add Mus. 11,836), ἀπολήσμεθα, ἐργάσασθε, and ἀπολάβητε,—but without any sufficient reason, internal evidence being against the change, which seems to have been introduced by some ancient Critics, who perceived not the Apostle's intent,—which was, by employing the first Person Plural to intimate the consequences of their backsliding even unto apostasy, as a double loss of labour and sacrifices both to himself and to them, his desire being that both he and they might together receive a full reward. Lücke seems to have seen the matter in the same light, briefly observing, after rejecting the above reading, that St. John is distinguished by a frequent recurrence to the figure κοινωνεῖς, and not unlikely is it that βλῖπτει might occasion this alteration in the reading.—ἀλλὰ μισθὸν πλ. ἀπολάβ. The sense seems to be, 'that we may receive the ample reward which will accrue to us, if ye continue steadfast.'—πλήρη hints at some reward that the teacher would receive in the other case; which, indeed, were but just, since disciples may apostatize, and bring discredit on the master, without his being to blame.

9. The best comment on this verse is the parallel passage of 1 John ii. 23, 24, where see notes.—To advert to a matter of various reading. For παραβαίνων, Lachm. and Tisch. edit, from MSS. A, B, and one cursive, προάγων; but, though internal evidence may seem in its favour, it admits of no sense at all satisfactory; and yet παραβαίνων has every appearance of being a gloss. I doubt not that St. John wrote παράγων, which might easily be mistaken by the scribes for προάγων, since the two prepositions are, in some MSS., written by abbreviations very similar to each other, and occasionally confounded.

Certain it is that παράγων is capable of the very sense called for, namely, that of 'so passing by a thing, as to turn aside from, decline it.'—a use prob. provincial. That Jerome so read is evident from his version, procedit, found also in a copy of the Ital. Version. (Demid.) before Jerome. The procedit of other copies was an error of scribes, whence προάγει crept into the Greek. And that it might bear that sense here appears from the antithetic μὴ μένων. Indeed, in the use of this very term, παράγων, there is an implied opposition to μένω in 1 Cor. vii. 31, παράγει γὰρ τὸ σῆμα τοῦ κόσμου τούτου, where see note. Dr. Peile adds, in confirmation, that in this sense ὁ παράγων καὶ μὴ μένων, 'he that passeth away and abideth not,' would correspond with the character described in James i. 8, 24, and contrast with the description given ibid. 25: comp. also 1 John ii. 19. The words τοῦ Χριστοῦ in the second clause of the verse have been cancelled by Lachm. and Tisch. from seven MSS.,—an authority insufficient in any case to justify the cancelling of a word, espec. when internal evidence is adverse, as is the case here; for the words seem to have been cancelled for the purpose of removing a tautology. As respects the reading just after, τὸν Υἱὸν καὶ τὸν Πατέρα, adopted by Lachm. and Tisch. from only 2 uncials and 5 cursives (I add Lamb. 1183, 1 m.), it is to be rejected on similar grounds. It plainly arose from critical alteration; and indeed a good Classical writer would, in expressing the same sentiment, have been sure to place the τὸν Υἱὸν last. The sense of Θεὸν οὐκ ἔχει is prob. that assigned by Dr. Peile, 'hath no covenant hold upon, or part in, God.' Comp. 1 John i. 3 and ii. 23. v. 12, and see notes. This I find confirmed by Est. thus: 'Ei Deus neque per gratiam adoptionis secus veluti donat et conjungit in hac vita, neque per gloriam secus illi est daturus in future.'

10. χαίρειν αὐτῷ μὴ λέγετε] Χαίρειν λέγειν was indeed, of itself, a mere form of salutation, expressive of friendly feelings. But as the receiving any such teacher into one's house, and addressing such a salutation, could not but imply some degree of approbation and countenance to his doctrines, so it is forbidden by the Apostle; though by no means out of any uncharitable disposition towards such persons as individuals. See Lücke's note, who observes, that 'to refuse the friendly greeting, and hospitable reception, to heretics, was enjoined by the apostles, which, considering the increasing amalgamation of Christian and Antichristian elements, ever became more and more necessary,—and, according

12 « Πολλὰ ἔχων ὑμῶν γράφειν οὐκ ἡβουλήθην διὰ χάρτου <sup>John 17.</sup> καὶ μέλανος· ἀλλὰ ἐλπίζω ἐλθεῖν πρὸς ὑμᾶς, καὶ στόμα πρὸς <sup>1 John 1. 4</sup> στόμα λαλῆσαι, ἵνα ἡ χαρὰ ἡμῶν ᾗ πεπληρωμένη. <sup>John 12.</sup> 13 Ἀσπάζεται σε τὰ τέκνα τῆς ἀδελφῆς σου τῆς ἐκλεκτῆς. ἀμήν.

to which, no ἀγάπη, and no κοινωνία, could exist, unless it was based upon the common confession of unadulterated truth.

12 διὰ χάρτου καὶ μέλανος] A sort of proverbial phrase, as also may be στόμα πρὸς στόμα λαλῆσαι, but formed on Hebr. Comp. Num. xii. 8. Jer. xxxii. 4, 'coram loqui.'

ΙΩΑΝΝΟΥ ΤΟΥ ΑΠΟΣΤΟΛΟΥ

ΕΠΙΣΤΟΛΗ ΚΑΘΟΛΙΚΗ ΤΡΙΤΗ.

1 Ὁ ΠΡΕΣΒΥΤΤΕΡΟΣ Γαίῳ τῷ ἀγαπητῷ, ὃν ἐγὼ ἀγαπῶ ἐν ἀληθείᾳ. 2 Ἀγαπητέ, περὶ πάντων εὐχομαί σε εὐδοῦσθαι καὶ ὑγιαίνειν, καθὼς εὐδοῦνταί σου ἡ ψυχὴ. 3 Ἐχάρην γὰρ <sup>John 4.</sup> λίαν, ἐρχομένων ἀδελφῶν καὶ μαρτυρούντων σου τῇ ἀληθείᾳ, καθὼς σὺ ἐν ἀληθείᾳ περιπατεῖς. 4 Μειζότεραν τούτων οὐκ ἔχω χαρὰν, ἵνα ἀκούω τὰ ἐμὰ τέκνα ἐν ἀληθείᾳ περιπατοῦντα.
5 Ἀγαπητέ, πιστὸν ποιεῖς, ὃ ἐὰν ἐργάσῃ εἰς τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς καὶ

Or the Gaius to whom this Epistle is addressed we know nothing, except from this Epistle. The date was doubtless after the former, to Kyria; the place of each was prob. Ephesus. The design of it was to commend Gaius (prob. a person of some consequence) for his perseverance in the faith, and his hospitality to some Christian travellers, who had called upon him.

1. See note at 2 John 1.

2. περὶ πάντων—σου ἡ ψυχὴ] 'above all things I wish and pray that thou mayest be prospered, and enjoy health of body, even as thy soul is prospering.'—εὐχομαί σε, nearly equiv. to vellem te, as in Rom. ix. 3, and often in Sept. and later Class. writers. Montanus well renders, 'opto te prosperare agere.' Wherever the Present Indic. of εἶχ. occurs in this sense, the subsequent Infin., together with the Pronoun Personal, expressed or understood, denotes the object. See Jelf, Gr., § 664 and 665. The περὶ may be construed either with εὐχομαι, or with εὐδοῖς; but the former is the more natural mode, and more agreeable to Class. usage. How εὐδοῖς comes to have this sense see my Lex. in v.

3. ἐχάρην γὰρ λίαν—ἐν ἀληθ. περιπατεῖς] This passage is altogether akin to that at 2 John 4 (thus proving the two Epistles to have been written at nearly the same time), and the interpretation which I have shown called for there is quite as suitable here. Accordingly, one cannot but wonder that Est. and Dr. Peile should have laid down the sense quite diversely. Est. was right there, but certainly wrong here, in explaining ἀληθ. of 'Christian beneficence.' The words may be rendered, 'For I have been glad at brethren coming and bearing witness to thy truth, even as thou dost walk in the truth.' The Genitives absolute in construction are Genitives causal; and καθὼς is used to point at the correspondence between the testimony and the fact, the latter verifying the former. Of course ἀληθ. is here to be taken as in the parallel passage; and the phrase ἐν ἀληθ. περιπ. may be freely rendered, 'the truly Christian character of walk of life and conversation, as marking not only Christians, but good Christians.'

4. τούτων] for τούτου.—ἵνα for ἡ ἵνα. In μειζότεραν we have a provincial form for μείζονα.—Ἐν ἀληθείᾳ. Lachm. and Tisch. edit ἐν τῇ ἀλ., from MSS. A, B, C, and 1 cursive; and, indeed, internal evidence is in its favour, though the occurrence at v. 3 of ἐν ἀλ. with περιπατεῖς in all the copies forbids the reception of the Article here, for it cannot have any force of reference. Lachm., indeed, queries whether the MS. B has not the τῇ there. But see note on John xvii. 7. Consistency, indeed, would require it; but of that the Critical Emendators were, as we have seen, little studious. But we may expect that the Apostle should be consistent with himself. And as the Article is not found at John xvii. 19, nor at 2 John 4, so we can hardly doubt that it was not used here.

5. From commending Gaius' conduct in general, St. John adverts in particular to his Christian hospitality to the brethren. (Lücke.)—πιστὸν (sc. ἐργον, 'conduct') may be taken, Ecumen. says, for ἀξίον πιστοῦ ἀνδρός, 'conduct worthy of a Christian man;' or we may take πιστ. as put Adverb. for πιστῶς, Ps. ci. 6, Sept. Ecclus. i. 14. 1 Macc. iii. 13; but the former mode is preferable. The action is termed πιστὸν as 'done εἰς τοὺς ξένους, <sup>6</sup> οἱ ἐμαρτύρησάν σου τῇ ἀγάπῃ ἐνώπιον ἐκκλησίας· οὗς καλῶς ποιήσεις προπέμψας ἀξίως τοῦ Θεοῦ. <sup>7</sup> Ὅτι γὰρ τοῦ ὀνόματος ἐξῆλθον, μηδὲν λαμβάνοντες ἀπὸ τῶν ἐθνῶν. <sup>8</sup> Ἡμεῖς οὖν ὀφείλομεν *ὑπολαμβάνειν τοὺς τοιούτους, ἵνα συνεργοὶ γινώμεθα τῇ ἀληθείᾳ. <sup>9</sup> Ἐγραψα τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ· ἀλλ' ὁ φιλοπρωτεύων αὐτῶν Διοτρεφὴς οὐκ ἐπιδέχεται ἡμᾶς. <sup>10</sup> διὰ τοῦτο, ἐὰν ἔλθω, ὑπομνήσω αὐτοῦ τὰ ἔργα ἃ ποιεῖ, λόγοις πονη-

in faith.'—To advert to some variety of reading. Shu ἰργάζη, for ἰργάζω, edited by Lachm. from MS. A, is evidently an error of the scribe of this one copy; and the 'operariis' of the Vulg. was a careless rendering of Jerome, who did not perceive the exact propriety of ἰργάζω, 'shalt, mayest, be doing.'—To advert to another variety of reading. For kai eis τοὺς ξένους, Lachm. and Tisch. edit, from  $\S$  uncial, and a few cursive, MSS., with the Vulg., kai τοῦτο ξένους,—a very specious reading, but one not entitled to be received, both from deficiency of external authority, and failure of internal evidence, it presenting something factitious. In fact it arose, I suspect, from a Critical Reviser, to whom it appeared that the insertion of τοῦτο would better bring out the exegesis here thought inherent, and which is inculcated by Lücke. If there be any exegesis intended, it must rest on kai, which may be rendered 'yea,' as oft. elsewhere; and hence it is better to suppose, with Est., that the Apostle is mentioning two things;—namely, the beneficence of Gaius towards poor Christians of his own city and nation, and also to Christians who were strangers and foreigners, who came thither. And what is subjoined in the next verse is to be understood of these latter;—namely, travelling Christian brethren, who had been brought thither by business, or as Missionaries.

6. καλῶς ποιήσεις προπ.] Of this phrase, also used with a participle following, an example occurs in Jos. Bell. i. 32, 6, καλῶς δὲ ποιήσεις μνημονεύσας ὧν ὑπέσχεο. By προπ. is meant, 'by having brought them forward' on their journey: Participle of mode, as in a similar passage of Acts x. 33, καλῶς ἐποίησας παραγινόμενος, where see note.—'Ἀξίως τοῦ Θεοῦ, in a manner worthy of that God whose servants they are.

7. ὕπὲρ τοῦ ὀνόμ.] 'for his sake and in his cause;' i. e. Christ's, thus referring, as it must, to Θεοῦ immediately preceding, Christ being here, as well as elsewhere, termed GOD.—Μὴδὲν λαμβ., 'receiving no pay [nothing more than support] from their converts.'—For ἰθὺν Lachm. and Tisch. edit ἰθὺκῶν, from MSS. A, B, C, and some others; but without reason; for it has every appearance of being a mere gloss, or false correction.

8. ἡμᾶτε οὖν, &c.] 'Conclusio est, quæ rationibus subjicit propositi sui institum.' (Aretius.) And so Est., 'Conclusio hujus exhortationis, cum adjecta novâ ratione.'—For t. rec. ὑπολαμβάνειν Lachm. and Tisch. read ὑπολ., from MSS. A, B, C, and 9 cursives, with Theophyl. and Euseb.; rightly; since internal evidence here comes in aid of external authority, from the greater probability that ὑπολ. was an error of the scribes (who perpetually confound ὑπὸ and ἀπὸ), than that St. John used ὑπολ. for ὑπολ., an idiom which cannot be received without proof that it ever existed. Moreover, ὑπολαμβ. for ὑποδέχ. is found also in Xen. Anab. i. 1, 7. Dionys. Hal. Ant. 1437, 4. Diod. Sic. t. viii. 348, and x. 92, where Wessel. adduces other exx. from Strabo and other writers. Under these circumstances I have now received ὑπολ.—'ἵνα συνεργοὶ γινώμεθα τῇ ἀληθείᾳ.' That we may be aiding to the true faith of the Gospel, by being joint promoters of it.' See note on 1 Cor. iii. 9, also on Col. iv. 11. This construction of Dative of thing is so rare, that I know of no other ex. except in Plato, p. 212, σ. τῇ ἀνθρωπείᾳ φύσει.

9. The sense of this verse depends on the reading. About 10 cursives have ἄν after ἔγραψα, which was doubtless in the copies used by the Syr., Copt., and Vulg. Translators. But the authority is insufficient; and internal evidence is against the word, which was doubtless introduced to make the sense more distinct. As to the addition of τι after ἔγραψα in MSS. A, B, C, with 2 cursive, and the Copt. and Sahid. Versions, and edited by Lachm. and Tisch., it is only another attempt to help out the sense by Critica,—who knew not that this absolute constr. of the word is quite agreeable to the style of St. John, and suited to the language of common life. Another instance of it is found at v. 13, where strange is it that Lachm. and Tisch. should subjoin σοι, a word evidently from the margin, and introduced for the purpose of lessening the harsh brevity there existing. The fittest sense to be ascribed to ἔγραψα is, 'I lately wrote to the Church;—namely, on the subject just mentioned—the hospitable reception and furtherance of Missionaries. It would seem that Diotrophes had, by his turbulent and ambitious spirit, set at naught, or weakened, the effect of a letter lately written by John to the Church with the above-mentioned view; and that the Apostle complains of this interference with his duties. I agree with Lücke, that the letter in question, evidently not preserved, was a mere private letter, introductory of such travelling brethren, espec. Missionaries, as should come. The purpose of it, however, was thwarted, if not nullified, by the hostile influence, powerful, it seems, by position or by office, of Diotrophes, of whom John complains in the words οὐκ ἐπιδέχ. ἡμᾶς, 'refuses to recognize my authority to direct, or admit the wisdom of my monitions.'—φιλοπρωτ. is a term no where else occurring, and prob. provincial Greek,—though its original φιλόπρωτος is found in Plut. Artemid., and in other writers yet later.

10. Complaint here passes into intimation of the course which duty pointed out, to visit such an interference with his Apôstolis authority in a suitable manner; but what that is depends on the force of the words ὑπεμνήσω αὐτοῦ τὰ ἔργα, of which there exists a considerable diversity of rendering. The sense assigned by some, ροῖς φλυαρῶν ἡμᾶς. Καὶ μὴ ἀρκούμενος ἐπὶ τούτοις, οὔτε αὐτὸς ἐπιδέχεται τοὺς ἀδελφούς, καὶ τοὺς βουλομένους κωλύει, καὶ ἐκ τῆς ἐκκλησίας ἐκβάλλει. <sup>11</sup> ὁ Ἀγαπητὲ, μὴ μιμοῦ τὸ κακόν, ἀλλὰ τὸ ἀγαθόν. Ὁ ἀγοστοποιῶν ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐστίν ὁ δὲ κακοποιῶν οὐχ ἑώρακε τὸν Θεόν. <sup>12</sup> Δημητρίῳ μεμαρτύρηται ὑπὸ πάντων, καὶ ὑπ' αὐτῆς τῆς ἀληθείας· καὶ ἡμεῖς δὲ μαρτυροῦμεν, καὶ οἴδατε ὅτι ἡ μαρτυρία ἡμῶν ἀληθὴς ἐστίν.

<sup>13</sup> Πολλὰ εἶχον γράφειν, ἀλλ' οὐ θέλω διὰ μέλανος καὶ καλάμου σοι γράψαι. <sup>14</sup> ἐλπίζω δὲ εὐθέως ἰδεῖν σε, καὶ στόμα πρὸς στόμα λαλήσομεν. <sup>15</sup> Εἰρήνη σοι. ἀσπάζονται σε οἱ φίλοι· ἀσπάζου τοὺς φίλους κατ' ὄνομα.

'to remember,' 'to call to remembrance,' 'to be mindful of,' is one scarcely strong enough; nor is that of others 'to declare,' 'to remind.' The recent interpreters nearly all take the word in the Actice sense, for 'to cause to remember,' equiv. to θυμιῶ. So Wahl and Bretschn. Schleusen. renders by castigabo. Est. says that the meaning of the term is 'to bring to anyone's remembrance,' 'to refresh his memory;' and he renders, 'refricabo fidelibus memoriam eorum quam praviter agit.' But it should rather seem that the person referred to is Diotrophes. The full sense seems to be this: 'I will make him remember his evil deeds, by animadverting upon and punishing him for them,' by suitable reprimand, but short of excommunication. Thus there is an ellipsis of αὐτῷ, to be supplied from αὐτοῦ. Comp. Hdot. vii. 171, fin., ἡ Πυθίη ὑπομνήσασα ταῦτα, supply αὐτοῦ or αὐτοῖς.—καὶ ἐκ τῆς ἐκκλ. ἐκβ. As it can hardly be supposed that Diotrophes would excommunicate any one on so frivolous a pretext, it is best, with most recent Commentators, to take the sense of ἐκ τῆς ἐκκλ. ἐκβ. to be, 'refuses to receive them as Christians,' for his thus denying them hospitality compelled them to go elsewhere.

<sup>11</sup>. μὴ μιμοῦ τὸ κακόν, ἀλλὰ τὸ ἀγαθόν] 'Imitate not the evil example, but the good';

meaning to say, as Est. explains, 'Ne opera quidem istius impii te commoveant, ut velis imitari; multo minus ejus verba et praecepta, ut velis parere; q. d. Ne feceris secundum opera ejus, neque secundum doctrinam aut prohibitionem ejus, quoniam omnia haec mala sunt.' The injunction is then confirmed by a weighty sentiment, the full sense of which seems to be this: 'He who practises what is good, especially in works of benevolence, is [a true son] of God; he who practises any sort of evil doth not [really] know God, because, by his actions, he shows him insensible of his obligations to virtue.'

<sup>12</sup>. μεμαρτ. ὑπὸ πάντων] 'has a good testimony borne to him by all'; see Acts xvi. 2. Heb. xi. 2. In ὑπ' αὐτῆς τῆς ἀλ. there is an assidè dictum, not to be too much pressed on. It means, as Est. points out, 'ad ipsa veritate, i. e. per ipsam rei evidentiam,' for what is manifestly and demonstrably true. Comp. Joa. Antt. xvi. 8, 4, τὸν μὲν ὑπ' αὐτῆς τῆς ἀληθείας ἀναιτίον διαβαλεῖν, meaning, as Dr. Peile points out, 'to slander one whom truth itself could not charge with any fault.'

<sup>15</sup>. οἱ φίλοι—κατ' ὄνομα] meaning, 'Our friends [here] salute thee. Greet our friends [with thee] by name;' i. e. severally and individually.

b Pa. 27. 27.
Ioa. 1. 16.
1 Pet. 2. 11.
1 John 2. 6.
42.

o 3 John 12.

ΙΟΥΔΑ ΤΟΥ ΑΠΟΣΤΟΛΟΥ

ΕΠΙΣΤΟΛΗ ΚΑΘΟΛΙΚΗ.

a Luke 6. 16.
John 17. 11.
Acts 1. 13.
1 Pet. 1. 6.

<sup>1</sup> * ΙΟΥΔΑΣ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ δούλος, ἀδελφὸς δὲ Ἰακώβου, τοῖς ἐν Θεῷ Πατρὶ ἡγιασμένοις, καὶ Ἰησοῦ Χριστῷ τετηρημένοις κλητοῖς <sup>2</sup> ἔλεος ὑμῖν καὶ εἰρήνη καὶ ἀγάπη πληθυνθεῖη.

THE authenticity, or at least canonicity, of this Epistle, was at first called in question; but, after full examination, it was, at an early period, received into the Canon of Scripture, and accordingly is quoted as a genuine inspired writing by Tertullian, Clemens Alex., Origen, Ephr. Syr., Just. Mart., Irenæus, and other early Fathers. The writer styles himself the 'brother of James' the less, who was the bishop of Jerusalem. Thus he was one of the kinsmen of Christ. He was son of Alphæus, and was surnamed Thaddæus, or Lebbaeus; and one of the twelve Apostles. Of the particulars of his life after his presence with the disciples on the day of Pentecost, we have little or no certain information. It is probable that he remained for some time in Jerusalem, preaching the Gospel to the Jews; but that afterwards, as the troubles of Judæa came on, he quitted his native land, and went to preach the Gospel in foreign countries. Ecclesiastical tradition informs us that he evangelized Arabia, Syria, Mesopotamia, and Persia: indeed the Syrians still claim him as their Apostle. Upon the whole, there seems every reason to suppose that, after his leaving Judæa, he dedicated his evangelical labours chiefly to his own countrymen, and especially those who were called of the Eastern Dispersion; probably treading in the steps of St. Peter, who seems, towards the close of his life, to have devoted himself to that field. In fact, we may reasonably suppose that he was first a coadjutor with, and afterwards the successor to, that Apostle, in evangelizing the Eastern Dispersion; just as St. Thomas, probably passing over from Arabia to Hindoستان, evangelized at least the southern part of that vast region. That St. Jude did occupy the above field, is confirmed by the strong similarity (nay, even coincidence) between this Epistle and that of the 2nd of Peter, and will best serve to account for that coincidence, and moreover strengthen the evidence for the authenticity of that Epistle. It cannot, however, be denied, that much of obscurity hangs over the matter of Jude, the writer of this Epistle, which Dr. Davidson endeavours, with some success, to clear away, to whose full discussion the reader is referred. 'There were (he premises) two persons' called by the name of Jude,—one a 'brother of our Lord,' and another called 'brother of James;' which of these is here meant Critics are divided in opinion. He goes on to affirm that 'nothing is known of Jude the writer;' and that little is known of Jude the Apostle; though mention is made in history of Jude the Lord's brother.' Of the place where this Epistle was written we know nothing for certain; but it was prob. Palestine. And on its exact date the learned are by no means agreed; some, as Dr. Lardner, assigning it to as early a period as A. D. 65; others, as Dr. Mill, to as late as 90; nay, some even towards the close of the first century. It is impossible to fix any precise period; but the earlier date seems more entitled to admittance; but whether so early as even A. D. 70, affixed by Dr. Davidson, may be doubted. He seems to have been induced to take that view, because he had adopted, perhaps too easily, the notion that the 2nd Epistle of Peter was formed on this, which must thus have been written before it. However, I still think it more prob. that Jude made use of the 2nd Epistle of Peter, than vice versa; and if so, we have some clue to the true date, which was prob. a few years later than that of the 2nd Epistle of Peter.

With respect to the design of this Epistle, it is precisely the same as that of the second Epistle of Peter, on which it seems to have been partly formed. As to the disputed question to whom addressed, suffice it to observe, that, from the arguments and examples being chiefly taken from the Jewish Scriptures, there is every reason to suppose (with Est., Wita., Hamm., Benson, and Moldenhauer) that it was, though addressed to Christians generally, and therefore written in Greek, intended especially for the Jewish Christians, not only of the Eastern Dispersion (for whom it was prob. chiefly drawn up), but of the Western. Whether there was ever, as we are told, a Syr. Chaldee Version for the use of those Jewish Christians of the Eastern Dispersion who did not understand Greek, we have nothing like proof; though the tradition rests on

3<sup>b</sup> Ἀγαπητοί, πάσαν σπουδὴν ποιούμενος γράφειν ὑμῖν περὶ τῆς κοινῆς σωτηρίας, ἀνάγκην ἔσχον γράφαι ὑμῖν παρακαλῶν ἐπαγωνίζεσθαι τῇ ἀπαξ παραδοθείσῃ τοῖς ἁγίοις πίστει. 4<sup>c</sup> Πареисέδυσαν γάρ τινες ἄνθρωποι, οἱ πάλαι προγεγραμμένοι εἰς τοῦτο τὸ κρίμα, ἀσεβεῖς, τὴν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἡμῶν χάριν μετατιθέντες εἰς ἀσέλγειαν, καὶ τὸν μόνον δεσπότην [Θεὸν] καὶ Κύριον ἡμῶν

b Phil. 1. 27.
1 Tim. 1. 18.
2 Tim. 4. 7.
c Rom. 9.
21. 22.
Tit. 1. 16.
1 Pet. 2. 3.
2 Pet. 2. 1.
3. 13.

high probability. Of this Epistle the character as well as matter is quite akin to that of 2 Peter; the style is generally pure,—alike forcible and energetic, and yet abundant in πάθος; though the terms used are not unfrequently derived from the language of common life. As to its contents, the Epistle consists of two Parts (Pt. i. 5—19. Pt. ii. 20—23), preceded and introduced by an Inscription, Salutation, and Introduction.

1. τοῖς ἐν Θεῷ Πατρὶ ἡγ. equiv. to ἡγιασμένοι ἐν Χριστῷ at 1 Cor. i. 2. It is true, that for ἡγιασμένοι, Lachm. and Tisch. edit ἡγαπημένοι, from MSS. A, B, and seven cursives, confirmed by the Vulg., both the Syriac, the Coptic, and other Versions, and some Fathers; a reading worthy of attention, but not entitled to reception into the text. I cannot, however, regard it, with Laurmann, as a gloss; but would rather suppose it derived from a marginal scholium, proceeding from some theological Critic, who did not mean to exclude ἡγιασμ., but who thought that something more was requisite to complete the sense (just as at dylois other Critics subjoin κλητοῖς, to make it square with the expression at 1 Cor. i. 2, κλητοῖς dylois), having in mind Col. iii. 12, ἄγιοι καὶ ἡγαπημένοι, but not remembering that ἡγιασμ., as used here, and in Acts xx. 32. xvi. 18. 1 Cor. i. 2, includes the notion of ἡγαπ., since the sanctified are such from being beloved objects of Christ's redeeming love. See 1 Cor. ii. 9, comp. with John xiv. 23.—τηνρ., 'kept steadfast in the faith' to which they had been called by the grace of God. On κληρ. see note on Matt. xx. 16. Ver. 2 contains an apostolic salutation, like 1 Pet. i. 2.

3. πάσαν σπουδὴν—πίστει] The full sense is: 'When I made it my earnest business to write unto you concerning the common salvation, (that in which we have a common interest,) I judged it needful to write unto you in language exhorting you to earnestly contend for [the maintenance of] the faith once for all delivered to the saints,' and then, as Dr. Peile thinks implied, 'committed to the keeping of the Holy Church of CHRIST.' Ἐσχον ἀνάγκην is a very strong expression, but not too strong for the occasion which called for it, and, as Calvin remarks, 'it is as if the writer meant to sound a trumpet for shaking off spiritual torpor.'—ἀπαξ, 'once for all'; as Heb. vi. 4. ix. 27, 28. x. 2. 1 Pet. iii. 18, 20, and similarly in the Sept., Jos., and the Class. writers. The sense here is important, since it is intimated, as Est. remarks, 'fidei nihil addi posse, quia nimirum tota semel tradita sit, instar depositi, quod ita servandum datur, ut nec addi quidquam ei, nec auferri debeat. Quare nec ullæ revelationes, quæ fidei addant aliquid, expectandæ sunt aut recipiendæ; sed tantum tenenda et explicanda, quæ semel sunt tradita.'

4. The Apostle now shows why such care was necessary, to preserve the purity of the faith.—παρεισέδυσαν γάρ, &c., 'because certain persons had covertly insinuated themselves,'—compare 2 Pet. ii. 1,—a use of the word oft. occurring in Jos., Philo, Plut., and other writers. Compare Gal. ii. 4, οἵτινες παρεισῆλθον κατασκοπεῖσαι τὴν ἐλευθερίαν ἡμῶν.—Οἱ πάλαι προγεγραμμένοι, &c. In προγ., eis kr. we have a forensic mode of expression, denoting 'those cited to trial' by posting up their names, or those whose names were posted up, as required eis kr̄ma, for condemnation and punishment. So of such, it is said, 2 Pet. ii. 3, οἱ τὸ κρίμα οὐκ ἔργασι. Accordingly, the expression does not imply any predestination of the persons, but merely imports that they were long since forsoth, and thereby designated, as persons who should suffer.—τοῦτο τὸ κρίμα, i. e. such a punishment as the Apostle proceeds to state, vv. 5—7, 11, 15.—τὴν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἡμῶν χάριν μετατιθέντες εἰς ἀσέλγ., 'who abuse the gracious dispensation of the Gospel [meant to encourage virtue and promote holiness] into an occasion of lasciviousness.' Comp. 1 Pet. ii. 16.—μετατιθέναι prop. signifies 'to alter any thing from its original purpose,' and, figur., 'to misuse, abuse.' The persons in question (the false teachers so strongly censured by St. Peter and St. John) abused God's promise of mercy to the penitent, by representing that mercy as having no limits, and as extending even to unrepented and unforsoaken sin.—If the word Θεὸν, after μόνον, be genuine (which, however, is doubtful, for it is on strong evidence, external and internal, cancelled by Griesb., Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch.), it will not follow that the words δεσπότην Θεὸν καὶ Κύριον—Χριστόν should be necessarily understood of one person; for the canon of Mr. G. Sharp and Bp. Middl. affords but a slender proof thereof, as will appear from the more correct view of this point taken by Mr. Green, Gr. N. T. Dial. p. 216. The same remark applies to 2 Pet. i. 1 (which was probably had in mind by Jude), and 2 Thess. i. 12. 1 Tim. v. 5. This removal, however, of Θεὸν, does not at all invalidate the evidence which this passage affords to the Deity of our Lord Jesus Christ; but, as Dr. Peile observes, 'really adds to the weight of the Apostle's testimony to the Divine worship, and the allegiance that is due from us to our ascended Saviour, the GOD-MAN, CHRIST JESUS. For, not to mention that, despite of there being but one Article, the insertion of Θεὸν (as doubtless was intended by the interpolator) would tend rather to put before us Two Persons of the Godhead closely united (as in John xvii. 3) in joint agency—the very term δεσπότην, here so emphatically given to "our Lord Jesus Christ," is sufficient to proclaim that he is "set down with his Father on his throne" on high; Rev. iii. 21.' In short, that title of dominion, elsewhere applied to the Father (as Acts iv. 24. Luke ii. 26. Job v. 8. Prov. xxix. 26. Jer. xv. 11, et al.), is given to Christ the Son, here and at 2 Pet. ii. 1.

d Num. 14.
29. 30.
e 35. 36. 37.
Ps. 100. 20.
1 Cor. 10. 6.
Heb. 3. 18.
19.
f John 8. 44.
g 2 Pet. 2. 4.
h Gen. 19. 24.
i Gen. 19. 24.
Isa. 13. 19.
Jer. 50. 10.
e 50. 40.
Lam. 4. 6.
Ezek. 16. 40.
Hos. 11. 8.
Amos 4. 1.
Luke 17. 20.
2 Pet. 2. 6.
g 2 Pet. 2.
10, 11.

Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν ἀρνούμενοι. <sup>5</sup> δ' Ὑπομνήσαι δὲ ὑμᾶς βούλομαι, εἰδότες [ὑμᾶς] ἅπαξ τοῦτο, ὅτι ὁ Κύριος λαὸν ἐκ γῆς Αἰγύπτου σώσας, τὸ δεύτερον τοὺς μὴ πιστεύσαντας ἀπώλεσεν <sup>6</sup> ἀγγέλους τε τοὺς μὴ τηρήσαντας τὴν ἐαυτῶν ἀρχήν, ἀλλὰ ἀπολύνοντας τὸ ἴδιον οἰκητήριον, εἰς κρίσιν μεγάλης ἡμέρας, δεσμοῖς αἰδίοις ὑπὸ ζόφον τετήρηκεν <sup>7</sup> ὡς Σόδομα καὶ Γόμορρα, καὶ αἱ περὶ αὐτὰς πόλεις, —τὸν ὅμοιον τούτοις τρόπον ἐκπορνεύσασαι, καὶ ἀπελθούσαι ὀπίσω σαρκὸς ἐτέρας, —πρόκεινται δῆγμα, πυρὸς αἰωνίου δίκην ὑπέχουσαι. <sup>8</sup> ε' Ὁμοίως μέντοι καὶ οὗτοι, ἐν πνι-

5. ὑπομνήσαι δὲ ὑμᾶς βούλ., εἰδ. ὑμᾶς ἅπαξ τοῦτο, ὅτι, &c.] I agree with Dr. Peile, that the Apostle's earnest exhortation here was meant to have a twofold effect, mingling encouragement to the dispirited and weak-hearted, and warning to the careless and unspiritual professors of Christianity. Render: 'But I desire to remind you —you who were once made aware of this (= 'though you have been,' &c.).' However, the exact sense depends on the reading, which is disputed. For τοῦτο Lachm. and Tisch. edit πάντα, from A, B, C<sup>2</sup>, and 7 cursives, the Vulg., and later Syr. and Copt. Versions. But, though ancient, I agree with Griesb. in accounting it not the true reading, though I cannot agree with him in also rejecting τοῦτο, which has the support of 2 Pet. i. 12 (a passage doubtless present to the mind of St. Jude), οὐκ ἀμελήσαντες—ὑμᾶς ὑπομνήσκουσιν περὶ τούτων, where St. Peter might have written τούτου. The second ὑμᾶς has been cancelled by Lachm. and Tisch., from A, B, C<sup>2</sup>, and 15 cursives; but internal evidence is rather in its favour, since it is more likely to have been thrown out for the purpose of removing a tautology, than to have been inserted to point out the reference at εἰδότες. The next words may be rendered, with Dr. Peile, 'that the Lord, after having saved his people out of the land of Egypt, in the next place (lit. "the next thing he did," Peile) destroyed those who had been found unfaithful,' 'disobedient to his commands;' τοὺς μὴ πιστεύσαντας being for ἀπειθήσαντας (comp. Heb. iv. 2), unbelief producing disobedience. 'If we be asked (remarks Dr. Peile) what is the reference made in εἰδότες ἅπαξ, we answer that, (1) we believe St. Jude's Epistle to have been addressed (a good many years after the death of St. Peter and St. Paul) to the same Hebrew element in the same Christian communities, scattered over the face of Asia Minor, to which the Epistle to the Hebrews and both the Epistles of Peter were written; (2) that St. Jude reminds them in v. 5 of what the writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews had so impressively urged upon them in Heb. iii. 7—19, and in vv. 6, 7, &c., of what St. Peter had written in 2 Pet. ii. 4—9, &c.; (3) that St. Jude, like St. Peter (2 Pet. iii. 16), has borne incidental and undesigned testimony,—which, so far as it goes, makes for the prevailing opinion, that St. Paul was the writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews.'

6. τοὺς μὴ τηρ. τὴν ἰ. δ.] Some doubt exists as to the sense of τὴν ἐαυτῶν ἀρχήν, which the earlier Commentators in general explain 'their first state,' the later ones, 'their primitive dignity as sons of God, and the original excellence in which they were created.' The former sense is called for by the antithetic clause, in which the term ἀπολείποντας contains, as I pointed out in my Supplementary Notes, a metaphor taken from soldiers deserting their post, or abandoning the sphere of service assigned to them in search of another (comp. Hom. Il. xii. 167, οἱ δὲ—οὐδ' ἀπολείπονσι κοῖλον δόμον, ἀλλὰ μένουσιν, &c.); so that the words should be rendered, 'by having relinquished their proper situation and sphere of dignity;' for the latter of the above-mentioned two senses is comprised in the former. —ἴδιον οἰκτ. means, by a pregnancy of sense, 'their own (and thence rightful) place in the court of Heaven.' The next words may be rendered, 'He hath reserved in eternal chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day (of final account).—εἰς κρίσιν μεγάλης ἡμέρας is by hyperallage for εἰς ἡμέραν κρίσεως, 2 Pet. ii. 9. So the Pharisees, as Jos. informs us, Antt. xviii. 1, 3, believed that, ἐπὶ χροῶν, δικαιώσιν (punishments) καὶ τιμὰς, οἱ δὲ ἀρετῇ ἢ κακίᾳ ἐπιτίθενται ἐν τῇ βίῃ γίγονται καὶ ταῖς μὲν εἰρημὸν αἰδίου προστίθεται (are apportioned), ταῖς δὲ βεστώνῃ τοῦ ἀναβίου.

7. αἱ περὶ αὐτὰς πόλεις] meaning the circumjacent cities of Admah, Zeboim, and Zoar. At τούτοις there is reference to the inhabitants of those cities, by the figure πρὸς τὸ σημαίνοντες. —Ἀπελθούσαι ὀπίσω σαρκὸς ἐτ. These words are explanatory of the preceding term ἐκπορνεύσασαι, &c.; denoting those unnatural vices adverted to by St. Paul, Rom. i. 26, and πρόκεινται δῆγμα, is for ὡς παράδειγμα, meaning, as appears from 2 Pet. ii. 6, 'are set forth as an example for warning to all men.'—πυρὸς αἰωνίου δίκην ὑπέχουσαι, 'undergoing punishment,' &c. By the term αἰωνίου (the sense of which has been unwarrantably lowered by several recent Commentators) the Apostle means to represent them as publicly set forth, in their condemnation, for an eternal example of the punishment which God sometimes inflicts for sin in this world; [forming but a faint type of the eternal woe which he hath reserved for the next].—To advert to a peculiar idiom: in πυρὸς—δίκην, 'condemnation to fire,' there is an idiom so rare, that I find it elsewh. only in Artemid. Onir. l. i. p. 10, ἴνα, διὰ τὴν ἐπ' αὐτῶν λύπην, ὡς εἰπὼν δίκην πυρὸς, ὑπὸ τοῦ πάθους καίμονος ὁ πατήρ διαφθείρῃται, where it is observable that Artemid. softens the harshness of so very unusual an expression by ὡς εἰπὼν. Moreover, this use of δίκην occurs also in Hdot. iv. 43, ἀνισκολόσιν αὐτὸν τὴν ἀρχαίην δίκην αὐτῷ ἐπιτιμῶ.

8. ὁμοίως—βλάσφ.] The full sense is, 'In ζόμενοι, σάρκα μὲν μαίνουσι, κυριότητα δὲ ἀθετοῦσι, δόξας δὲ βλασφημοῦσιν. <sup>9</sup> ὁ δὲ Μιχαὴλ ὁ ἀρχάγγελος, ὅτε τῷ Δια- <sup>h Dan. 10. 13. & 12. 1. Zech. 3. 2. 2 Pet. 2. 11. Rev. 12. 7.</sup> βόλῃ διακρινόμενος διελέγετο περὶ τοῦ Μωϋσέως σώματος, οὐκ ἐτόλμησε κρῖναι ἐπενεγκεῖν βλασφημίας, ἀλλ' εἶπεν 'Ἐπιτι- <sup>12 Pet. 2. 11. k Gen. 4. 8. Num. 16. 1. & 21. 7. 21. 2 Pet. 2. 15. 1 John 3. 12.</sup> μῆσαι σοι Κύριος! <sup>10</sup> Οὗτοι δὲ, ὅσα μὲν οὐκ οἶδασι, βλασφημοῦσιν ὅσα δὲ φυσικῶς, ὡς τὰ ἄλογα ζῶα, ἐπίστανται, ἐν τούτοις φθείρονται. <sup>11</sup> Οὐαὶ αὐτοῖς! ὅτι τῇ ὁδῷ τοῦ Καὶν like manner, notwithstanding [such awful examples of punishment are held out] these dreamers defile the flesh [with lewdness], set at nought government, and revile dignities. See 2 Pet. ii.

 10, 11. The best Expositors, from Beza and Grotius down to Laurmann, are justly agreed that ἐντυνάζ. must be taken in a figurative sense, denoting the giving way to idle and delusive fancies, promising themselves security and acceptance in courses which the Gospel disallows.
 I have pointed accordingly, as, indeed, propriety requires; ἐντυνάζουσι standing for οἱ ἐντυνιάζονται, 'dreamers as they are,' the word being employed like ἀσάβειν sup. v. 4; and so τολμηταί, αὐθάδεις! 2 Pet. ii. 10, and σπῖλοι καὶ μῆμοι! 2 Pet. ii. 13. Jude may have had in mind a passage of Isa. lvi. 10 (where the false prophets are similarly spoken of), ἐκτιτύφλυνται πάντες, οὐκ ἔγνωσαν, κύριε ἰσχύει οὐ δύνασονται (for δύνασται) ὑλακτεῖν, ἐντυνιάζουσι κοίτην. I conj. κοίτην, for ἐπὶ κοίτην, 'as persons who dream on their couch.' However, Dr. Peile, with some reason, asks, 'whether (comparing Heb. xiii. 1) there may not be another, and more obvious (qu.?) interpretation of ἐντυν. κοίτην, which appears to have suggested to our Translators the received version filthy dreamers?
 Comp. Soph. Œd. T. 981, πολλοὶ γὰρ ἤδη καὶ δούρασι βροτῶν μητρὶ ἐντυνιάσθησαν.

9. ὁ δὲ Μιχαὴλ, &c.] Of these words the purpose we may suppose is, to show that the Gnostics here imitate the fallen angels in their rebellious speeches and conduct; whereas the Archangel on high affords them a better example; who, even under the greatest provocation, refused to pronounce a harsh sentence of condemnation against a fallen spirit. The circumstance here alluded to is by most recent Commentators supposed to have been derived from an Apocryphal book (now lost) called the ἀνάβασις Μωϋσίου, and to have been merely introduced by St. Jude as an instructive fable, serving to illustrate the doctrine in question, that we ought not to speak evil of δόξας ('ordines excellentiæ prædites, et honore supereminentes.' Calv.). But we should be slow to believe that an inspired Apostle would enforce his doctrine by a mere fable; and, indeed, the thing is evidently mentioned, not as a fable, but as a fact. See note on vv. 14, 15.—ἐπιτι-μῆσαι, 'correct;' said by meiosis for 'punish,' as in Pa. vi. 1. xxxvii. 1, et al. The Apostle had prob. in mind Zech. iii. 2, καὶ ἴδω πρὸς τὸν Διάβολον 'Ἐπιτιμῆσαι Κύριος ἐν σοί, Διά-βολε, though there the meiosis is not so perceptible as here; for the term exactly follows the Heb. עָרַב to chide, rebuke, lit. (as Dr. Henderson there explains), 'so to silence those who are the objects of reproof, or to restrain them from carrying their designs into execution.'

10. οὗτοι δὲ—φθείρονται.] We have here a strong mode of expression (pointed by the οὗτοι of scorn; q. d. 'those fellows') setting forth, as Hyper. observes, the arrogance of the false teachers 'a perverso judicio sive ingenio eorum, quo gratiâ Dei abutuntur. Aut enim non intelli-gunt res Divinas, et tunc eas aspernantur ac contemnunt; aut, si quæ tam perspicue sunt ut non possunt non intelligi, ipsi illis abutuntur, et in illis corrumpuntur; atque ita quomodocunque sit, transferunt Dei gratiam ad lasciviam.' Thus we may render: 'But those fellows, of things such as they have no knowledge of, they speak railing; and, on the other hand, such things as they do know,—naturally, or sensually, as the irrational animals,—they corrupt themselves therein.' The connexion is ably traced by Est.

 thus: 'Repetit Apostolus hac priori parte verbis generalibus id quod dixerat, majestatem autem blasphemant. Estque hæc connexio: Michaël Archangelus non fuit ausus maledicere Diabolo; at isti nequam homunciones passim ea quæ non noverunt, maledictis insectantur, etiam majes-tates, longe supra ipsos positas.'—In the last words of the latter clause, ἐν τούτοις φθείρονται, there is a remarkable pregnancy of sense, and brevity of expression, developed by Dr.
 Peile thus: 'In those things they first vitiate, then destroy, themselves;' or, rather, 'first vitiate the thing (or doctrine, by abuse), and then destroy themselves by that abuse.' This I apprehend important correction of the interpretation is confirmed by Hyper., ubi sup., and, what is more, by the parallel passage of 2 Pet. ii. 12, ἐν οἷς ἀγνοοῦσι βλασφημοῦντες, ἐν τῇ φθορᾷ αὐτῶν (the things so misunderstood and disparaged) καταφθαίρονται, or, as it ought, perhaps, to be read, καὶ φθαρ., see note.

11. οὐαὶ αὐτοῖς! ὅτι, &c.] 'Rurus interitum illis seductoris denuntiat, adductis ex antiquitate exemplis eorum, quorum mores imitantur, Cain, et Balam, et Core, qui omnes male perierunt.' Calv., Hyper., and Est., are agreed that the words οὐαὶ αὐτοῖς are not, indeed, simply declaratory, as Mackn. and Peile say, but denunciatory; intimating that the persons are justly worthy of the punishment so denounced. 'Nam (remarks Est.) sicut Cain invidit fratri, et ex invidiâ cum interfecit, ita et isti fraternitatem oderunt ac deserunt, et venenosus atque perniciosis suis doctrinis animas fratrum occidunt.'
 Thus the sense is, 'Woe is in store for them (comp. Heb. x. 27), forasmuch as they have walked in the way (took the steps by example) of Cain, and, by the aberration of Balam, have they impetuously rushed after the lure of gain, and by (adopting in their own case) the opposition of Core, have they come into perdition.' In the sense of 'rushing into, yielding to any evil passion, or vice,' I have noted the following exx., Test. xii. Patr. p. 520, παρσία, ἐν ᾧ ἐξήχυθον ἐπορεύθησαν, καὶ τῇ πλάνῃ τοῦ Βαλαὰμ μισθοῦ ἐξεχύθησαν, καὶ τῇ ἀντιλογίᾳ τοῦ Κορέ ἀπώλοντο.

1 Prov. 26.
14.
2 Pet. 2. 12,
17.

13 Ὅδοί τοι εἰσιν ἐν ταῖς ἀγάπαις ὑμῶν σπιλάδες, συνενωχούμενοι ἀφόβως, ἑαυτοὺς ποιμαίνοντες· νεφέλαι ἀνυδροὶ, ὑπὸ ἀνέμων * παραφερόμεναι· δένδρα φθινοπωρινὰ, ἄκαρπα, δις ἀπολύω (where the dat. is for accus. and εἰς). Plut. Anton. 21, εἰς ἀκόλαστον βίον ἐκκεχυμένοι. Polyb. xxxii. 11, 4, ἐξεκίχοντο εἰς ἑαίρας. Of ἀντιλογία in the sense 'rebellion,' or 'insurrection,' an ex. is adduced by Laurmann, from the Protevang. Jacobi, v. 9.

12. 'Pergit Apostolus describere mores corruptissimos illorum (rather 'istorum' = οὗτοι) qui Dei gratiam transferebant in luxuriam.' (Est.) See also Hyper. and Calv.—οἱ τοῖς εἰσιν ἐν ταῖς ἀγ. &c., meaning, 'Those persons are spots and a disgrace to your love-feasts, when they feast with you to an excess which shows no reverence to God, or regard to man;' see Luke xviii. 2. The term σπιλάδες is by many learned Commentators understood of those 'rocks,' hardly rising above the surface of the sea, on which vessels are shipwrecked; an apt emblem of those false teachers, who cause others to make shipwreck of their faith; comp. 1 Tim. i. 19. This interpretation, however, involves such incongruity of figure, that it is better to retain the sense commonly assigned, 'spots,' or 'stains,' what St. Peter, in a similar passage, calls σπιλοι. Thus far in my former Edd. I would now add, that I still see reason to reject the interpretation 'rocks,' besides the grounds of objection I have already stated, because it is forbidden by the parallel passage of 2 Pet. ii. 13, σπιλοι καὶ μῶμοι, from whence this was evidently formed. It is true that σπιλάς almost always has the sense 'a rock.' But that it sometimes denoted also 'a stain,' is probable from Hesych., who, with seeming reference to this passage, and prob. borrowing from some very ancient Scholiast, explains σπιλάδες by μεμιασμένοι. And though the two significations in question may seem too far apart to belong to the same word, yet we may imagine how the signification 'spot,' might arise from that of 'rock,' if we suppose that the peculiar sense thus ascribed might be derived from the σπιλάδες being viewed as 'rocks' not by the sea-side or sea-coast, but in the sea, as Apoll. Rhod. Arg. ii. 568; iii. 1294, et al., and in Lycoph. Theocr., and other poets, and also in some prose writers, e.g. Diod. Sic. i. iii. 44, σπιλάδες ὄξιναι ἐμβαλάντων, Apion, ap. Phot. Lex. σπιλάδες αἱ ἐν ὕδατι κοίλαι πέτραι. Here the metaphor might be taken from such rocky ridges, as only just rise above the surface of the sea, as in the case of the low coral reefs of the Polynesian Archipelago; which seem, when viewed from an eminence, mere spots on the surface of the ocean; and thus the term might be used to denote 'spots' on any surface. So Orphei Lith. xvi. 11, κατάστικτος σπιλάδεσσι Πυρσαῖσι, 'with red spots.' By Jude the word is used figuratively; the persons in question being thus represented to be as the σπιλ. ἐν τῇ θαλάσσῃ, and so as spots and stains ἐν ταῖς ἀγάπαις, 'staining,' 'deforming,' and 'disgracing,' the fair face of Christian society.—συνενωχ. ἀφόβως. These two words briefly characterize the persons in question as sensualists careful only to feed themselves, and so shamelessly eager to monopolize what is set before them in common with brother Christians, that they help themselves, regardless of others. Jude had prob. in mind the words of Ezek. xxiv. 8, where, speaking of the false shepherds of the flock of Israel, the Lord says by the prophet, οὐκ ἐξεζήτησαν οἱ ποιμένες τὰ πρόβατά μου· καὶ ἰβόσκοντο οἱ ποιμένες ἑαυτοὺς, τὰ δὲ πρόβατά μου οὐκ ἰβόσκοντο, i. e. 'did not care for their being fed.'—νεφέλαι ἀνυδροί, 'waterless clouds,' the arida nubila of Virg. Georg. iii. 197, which promise rain, but produce none; a fit emblem of false teachers, who promise much of evangelical truth and purity, but perform little worthy of the title; q. d. 'As clouds carried about in the air, but devoid of water, do not nourish the earth; so these boasters hurry about, promising much, but performing little, and doing no benefit whatever; specious seducers, as being like those fountains or clouds, which promise water—the πηγάς ἀνυδροί of 2 Pet. ii. 17,—from the long grass covering them,—but deceive those who rely upon them. To this purpose is a proverb in Schultens' Antholog., 'Doctus sine opere est ut nubes sine pluvia.'—ὑπὸ ἀνέμων παραφερόμεναι. This reading I have, with Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch., received instead of the t. rec. περιφέρ. It is found in most of the uncial, and by far the greater part of the cursive MSS., to which I can add all the Lamb. and nearly all the Mus. copies. And, in addition to this large amount of external authority, it may be thought to have internal evidence in its favour, from its being the more difficult reading. Yet, when nicely weighed, it may be found to be rather in favour of περιφέρ., since, by the adoption of παραφ., the imagery is marred, if not the propriety violated, inasmuch as the sense 'carried about,' 'whirled' this way and that, so as to keep no fixed direction,' is more suitable to the purpose of the present passage than that of 'being carried away.' Admitting, however, that παραφ. may have been written by Jude, we have only to suppose that here, as in Heb. xii. 9 (where see note), the idea inherent in περιφέρ. is implied in that contained in παραφ.—δένδρα φθινοπωρινὰ, meaning, 'trees as they are at the close of autumn, without fruit;'—at least as the Expositors almost all explain. Yet, considering that no one would look for fruit, or even leaves, at that season, Hamm. thinks that there is here meant to be intimated some fault in the trees, whereby they produce either no fruit, or fruit very immature and dwindling. Such, too, is the view adopted by Laurmann, who ingeniously conjectures that by φθινοπωρινοί is denoted 'a sort of useless trees, then so called. And the above view is much confirmed by what H. Stephens says in his Thes. in v.; and it is further supported by the Pech. Syr. Version. Thus the term is nearly equiv. to ἄκαρπα, but graphic, so θανόντα, ἐκριζωθέντα.<sup>13</sup> κύματα ἄγρια θαλάσσης, ἐπαφρίζοντα τὰς ἐαυτῶν αἰσχύνas ἀστέρες πλανῆται, οἱ ὁ ζόφος τοῦ σκότους εἰς [τὸν] αἶωνα τετήρηται! <sup>14</sup> Προεφίητσε δὲ καὶ τοῦτους ἔβδος ἀπὸ Ἀδὰμ, Ἐνὼχ, λέγων “Ἰδοὺ, ἦλθε Κύm Isa. 57.

10.
n Gen. 6. 18.
Dan. 7. 10.
Acts 1. 11.
1 Thess. 1.
10.
2 Thess. 1.
10.
Rev. 1. 7.

as to comport with the accompanying expressions dis ἀποθανόντα, and ἐκριζωθέντα. There seems to be a climax in the several terms φθινοπωρινά, ἄκαρτα, dis ἀποθανόντα, and ἐκριζωθέντα. Of these, dis ἀποθανόντα is explained by the best Commentators, 'doubly, i. e. altogether, dead.' But there rather seems an allusion to the preceding terms, which denote persons only thus far alive; see Benson and Mackn. In ἐκριζωθέντα we have the apex of the climax; for of trees uprooted there can be no more hope of fruit. Moreover, as ἄκαρτα is explanatory of φθινοπωρινά, so is ἐκριζωθέντα of dis ἀποθ.; for trees torn up by the roots may be said to be twice dead; i. e. as dead again as those which, though dead, still continue in the ground.

13. κύματα ἄγρια] This may be most closely rendered by an expression used by one of our most refined poets, Robert Burns, the 'wild waves.' The expression in Greek, however, is so rare that it might be thought to have place no where except in the present passage, and that of Wied. xiv. 1, prob. in the mind of St. Jude. Yet, if I mistake not, there are traces of it in a passage, corrupt though it be, of Mosch. Idyll. v. 5, ἀλλ' ἔταν ἀχθὴν πολλὰς βυθὸς, αἱ δὲ θάλασσα κυρτὸν ἐπαφρίζ, τὰ δὲ κύματα . . . μεμῆρη, where the lacuna should not be filled up (as is done by the Editors) by the very flat epithet μακρά. I would read κυρτὸν ἐπαφρίζ τὰ τε κύματα ἄγρια μεμῆρη. The ἰ in ἄγρια is long, by poetic licence, as in Hom. II. xxii. 313, ἀγρίον πρόσθεν δὲ σάκος, &c. Another ex. of ἀγρίος, as applied to an inanimate object (though not to 'waves'), occ. in Hdt. viii. 13, νῆς πολλὰν ἢ ἰτι ἀγριωτέρη, ποσότης δὲ ἰν πηλάγει φερομένοις ἐκίπτε. Ἐπαφρίζοντα is usually rendered desperantibus, foaming ocean, as if it were ἐξαφρ. I prefer 'foaming up,' viz. on the shore; ἀφρόν meaning not only the foam of the sea, but (as we find by the Schol. on Hom. II. xv. 626) the ἀρόβλημα, the wreck, i. e. sea-weeds, &c., thrown up on the sea-shore. And this illustrates the term αἰσχύνas just after; for, as the wreck is the refuse of the sea, so were the foolish and obscene discourses (the αἰσχύνas being rightly supposed by Rosenm. to denote the filthiness and foolish talking mentioned by St. Paul) which those persons spouted forth, their shame. Comp. Isa. lvii. 20. Finally, in the expression ἀστέρες πλανῆται (for the more usual one ἀστέρες διαβόητες), we have an allusion to the wandering, unsettled habits of those teachers, called stars according to Jewish imagery, prob. from the not unfrequent sense of ἀστέρες to denote meteors, whence, it should seem, its figurative use here, in which it is applied to the false teachers, ἀστέρες διαβόητες, shooting stars, or meteors; as being like meteors in their aiming at moral blazing for the present; hence their fires are short, sure soon to sink back into their native insignificance, and be trodden out. And accordingly the expression is meant to designate their transitoriness, such stars being only meteors, 'which,' in the words of Dryden, 'did but blaze, and rose, and die.'

14. προεφίητσε—τοῦτοις—Ἐνὼχ] Render: not 'to,' but 'for,' = 'in reference to, these also (among others) did Enoch prophesy, saying, Behold, the Lord came;' for so I would now render, with Mr. Green, Gr. N. T. Dial. p. 17; a past tense being, as he says, not inconsistent with prophecy, for it may be a narrative of a vision representing future events; though having in immediate view a class of persons similar to those at present spoken of, and, accordingly, also applicable to the latter. The words Ἰδοὺ, ἦλθε Κύριος—ἀμαρτωλοὶ ἀσβεῖτε have now been at length proved to be cited from an Apocryphal book of Enoch, often quoted by the Fathers (see Fabr. Cod. Pseud. V. T. vol. i. p. 160), and which was supposed to be lost, but has lately been discovered in an Æthiopic Version at least, which has been edited, with a translation, by Abp. Laurence, Oxford, 1821, who refers the composition to the time of Herod the Great. Notwithstanding this, however, Mr. Horne maintains that Jude did not quote from any book extant in his day purporting to have been written by Enoch, and thinks 'we may rationally conclude that the Apostle altered the traditional Antediluvian prophecy of Enoch, under the direction of the infallible Spirit, who was to guide them into all truth.' But nothing surely can be more harsh and far-fetched than this supposition, and the verbal coincidence overturns any such notion. At any rate, the quoting from the book in question will by no means invalidate the genuineness of the Epistle; for the Apostle's quoting as Enoch's a work which was received by the Jews as such, will not involve his inspiration; since the promise of preserving the Apostles from error, and guiding them into all truth, must be understood, with limitation, to mean all error of any consequence, and all truth important to the purpose of salvation. Now here Jude's quotation gives no currency to imposture; the Apostle merely meaning to apply what was, by tradition, said by Enoch of the Antediluvians, to the sinners of his own age. In short, the Apostle merely adverts to this tradition (without vouching for its truth) as a popular illustration of the weighty maxim, not to speak evil of dignities; and that from the example of the Archangel, who did not venture to rail even at Satan. As to the alterations supposed by some, from a comparison of this Æthiopic Version, to have been made by the Apostle, it is uncertain whether he made any, seeing that he prob. drew his quotation from the original Syro-Chaldee document; from which book, I agree with Dr. Peile, both the Apostle and the Æthiopic Translator may have derived the substance of what each has recorded of this ancient tradition (so oft. referred to by the Fathers) handed down from the earliest times, even before the Flood. To give a specimen of the value of the variations from the Apostle's text found in this Æthiopic Version, o Zech. 14.
3 E

 2. Matt. 13. 39.
 2. 25. 31.
 3 Thess. 1. 7.

ριος ἐν * ἀγίαις μυριάσιν αὐτοῦ, <sup>15</sup> * ποιῆσαι κρίσιν κατὰ πάντων, καὶ ἐξελέγξει πάντας τοὺς ἀσεβεῖς αὐτῶν περὶ πάντων τῶν ἔργων ἀσεβείας αὐτῶν ὧν ἡσέβησαν, καὶ περὶ πάντων τῶν σκληρῶν, ὧν ἐλάλησαν κατ' αὐτοῦ ἁμαρτωλοὶ ἀσεβεῖς." p Pa. 15. 16.

 1 Pet. 2. 18.

<sup>16</sup> οὗτοί εἰσι γογγυσταί, μεμφίμοιροι, κατὰ τὰς ἐπιθυμίας αὐτῶν πορευόμενοι· καὶ τὸ στόμα αὐτῶν λαλεῖ ὑπέρογκα, θαυμάζοντες πρόσωπα ὠφελείας χάριν. <sup>17</sup> Ὑμεῖς δὲ ἀγαπητοὶ, μνησθητε τῶν ῥημάτων τῶν προειρημένων ὑπὸ τῶν ἀποστόλων τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, <sup>18</sup> ὅτι ἔλεγον ὑμῖν, ὅτι "ἐν q Acts 20.

 29.
 1 Tim. 4. 1.
 5 Tim. 2. 1.
 2. 4. 2.
 3 Pet. 2. 1.
 2. 2. 2.

the πάντων, for αὐτῶν, represented in the Æthiop., it is required by the context; for the point of the warning turns upon the word all, as in Pa. xix. 17, 'the wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the people that forget God;' comp. 2 Thess. ii. 12, ἵνα κριθῶσι πάντες οἱ μὴ πιστεύσαντες τῇ ἀληθείᾳ. The writer meant to say that judgment and condemnation would be given against all such sinners; that their sins as well as works would be brought into judgment at the shortly impending advent of the Lord.—ἀγίαις μυριάσιν. This, for μυρ. ἀγ., is found in almost all the best MSS. (I add the Lamb. and Mus. copies) and early Editions, and has been adopted by almost every Editor from Wetst. to Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch.

<sup>15</sup> ποιῆσαι κρίσιν is best rendered 'to hold judgment'; lit. 'to perform the act of judgment' (κρίνω, John iii. 30), 'to carry it out.' See Acts xxviii. 31. Rom. ii. 5—10. 2 Cor. v. 10. The phrase is formed on a Hebraism; but does not, I think, occur in the Sept.—ἐξελέγξει—ἀσεβ. The force of ἐξελέγ. seems to be, not 'to convict,' or even merely 'to convict,' but, in a fuller sense, 'so to convict as to bring the convicted to judgment, and the execution of judgment upon him.' In this sense (which is very rare) the word occurs in Plut. Moral., p. 131, εὐθὺς ἐξελεγχόμενον πικρῶς παντὸς ἁμαρτήματος, where Wyttenb. renders, 'quem statim omne peccatum acerbis paenis arguetur.' And so Schleuss., Wahl, and Bretschn. render by punio; of which sense Bretschn. adduces another ex. from Wisd. xii. 17, ἐν τοῖς εἰδόσι θράσος ἐξελέγγεις, where that sense is found,—though the passage is, from corruption of text, almost unintelligible. Hence it will appear how little justified were Lachm. and Tisch. in editing ἐλέγξει, from many MSS., but in direct opposition to internal evidence. The Revisers, in this case, evidently altered an uncommon into a common term, and, moreover, one incapable of the strong sense required by the context. This opinion is, I find, confirmed by Dr. Peile, who adds, that 'under this view, καὶ ἐξελέγξει becomes an emphatic enlargement upon ποιῆσαι κρίσιν.—ἀσεβείας αὐτῶν ὧν ἡσέβη. This is not well rendered in E. V. 'ungodly deeds that they have ungodly committed;' which introduces a tautology not to be found in the original, where the seeming pleonasm has really an intensive force, and the sense is best expressed by a free version thus: 'Yea, to call all of them who are ungodly to strict account for all the grievous ungodliness of their doings.' Comp. the frequent phrase ἀσέβειαν δεσβεῖν. The words of the next clause may be rendered,

'And for all the harsh speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against them.' I render 'harsh,' in preference to 'hard,' because more suitable to this figurative use of the term, by which it denotes 'what grates on the ear,' 'shocks,' and is offensive to the mind.' So Gen. xlii. 7, 30, λαλεῖν σκληρὰ αὐτοῖς, and Pa. xiv. 4 (in Jude's mind), 'How long shall the wicked utter harsh things?' as Dr. French well renders: so also John vi. 50, σκληρὸς ὅστις ἐλάλει, where see note, and the passages of Eurip. and Stob. cited there, and in my Lex. in v., where I have shown how this sense arises.

<sup>16</sup> οὗτοί εἰσι γογγ., μεμφ.] A further graphic description of the seducers, 'a morbus of studius.' (Est.) 'Isti sunt qui obmurmurant et conqueri solent de omni re.' This may mean either, as Mackn. and Peile explain, 'murmuring against God on account of the dispensations of his Providence, and complaining of their condition, as being persons worthy of a better lot;' or, as Est. and others, 'murmuring against their ecclesiastical superiors; sparing no dignity nor excellence;' but the former is preferable.—μεμφίμ. may be literally rendered 'fovee-finders,' 'persons difficult to please;' of which character a spirited sketch is given by Theophrastus. The words κατὰ τὰς ἐπιθυμίας α. πορ. are usually understood as descriptive of their ends; but, from what precedes, we may rather suppose them to denote persons who care not for the opinion of others, even their superiors,—nay, 'who are little solicitous about the favour of God, and follow their own likings only;' in short, the προπειτίς of 2 Tim. iii. 4; which well suits the following, λαλεῖ ὑπέρογκα, sub. ῥήματα, with which comp. 2 Pet. ii. 18, ὑπέρογκα—φθιγγόμενοι, and Æschyl. Theat. 438, ἡ οὐρανὸν Πλάται—κυμαίνοντ' ἔπη, to which I refer the gloss of Hesych. ὑπέρογμα, 'beyond all bounds of modesty,' by vain boasting. The next words, θαυμάζοντες—χάριν, subjoin another trait, placed next to make it more prominent, denoting 'a time-serving spirit, paying court to the great and wealthy' ὠφέλ. χάριν = ὠφ. ἵκεα in Thucyd. i. 23, 'for what they could get.—θαυμάζ. πρόσ. is a Hebraism for the Class. θαυμάζειν τινα.

<sup>17</sup> The Epistle, as usual, concludes with exhortation. In τῶν ῥημάτων—ἀποστόλων there is doubtless a reference to 2 Pet. iii. 2, 3; but perhaps also to Acts xx. 29, 30. 1 Tim. iv. 1. 2 Tim. iii. 1. 2 Thess. ii. 8—12.

<sup>18</sup> By ἑυταῖστα, as at 2 Pet. iii. 8, are denoted scorners,—men who make a jest of serious and vital religion, and espec. of the doctrines of the advent of CHRIST to judgment, and of the ἐσχάτῃ χρόνῳ ἔσονται ἐμπαίκται, κατὰ τὰς ἑαυτῶν ἐπιθυμίας πορευόμενοι τῶν ἀσεβειῶν."

19 Ὁδοὶ εἰσὶν οἱ ἀποδιορίζοντες, ψυχικοί, Πνεῦμα μὴ ἔχοντες! 20 Ὑμεῖς δὲ, ἀγαπητοί, τῇ ἀγνωστάτῃ ὑμῶν πίστει ἐποικοδομοῦντες ἑαυτοὺς, ἐν Πνεύματι ἀγίῳ προσευχόμενοι, 21 ἑαυτοὺς ἐν ἀγάπῃ Θεοῦ τηρήσατε, προσδεχόμενοι τὸ ἔλεος τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον. 22 Καὶ οὗς μὲν ἐλεεῖτε, διακρινομένοι 23 οὗς δὲ ἐν φόβῳ σώζετε, ἐκ τοῦ πυρὸς ἀρr Prov. 18. 1.
Ezek. 14. 7.
Hos. 4. 14.
2 Sam. 10.
1 Cor. 2. 14.
s Rev. 2. 4.

resurrection of the dead. Τῶν ἀσεβειῶν has the force of the adjective desseis; and we may, with Laurmann, take the whole phrase ἐπιθυμίας τ. ἀσεβ. as at ver. 16, understanding it of a self-willed spirit, which follows its own fancies, however profane. Thus there was no occasion for Bentley to conjecture ἀσελγείων. It was the common interpretation, not the common reading, that wanted rectifying.

19. οὐδοὶ εἰσὶν οἱ ὁδοί.] Render, '[Ay] those are the men who [now] are exciting separation and causing schism.' Ἀποδιορίζω is a very rare word, properly denoting, in a geometrical sense (of which two exx. are adduced in Steph. Thes.), 'to separate any space, by fixing its limits, from another space,' and figur., 'to divide off,' 'to keep apart,' 'to separate persons one from another, thus creating schism.' The expression is imitated by Barnabas, Epist., at least in the Latin Version, 'Non separationem debetis seducere vos (read 'vosmet') sed in unum convenientes,' &c. There cannot be a doubt that in the original Greek (now lost) there was written ἀποδιορίζειν ἑαυτῶν, found in the great body of the MSS. and the Ekzav. Ed., but absent from most of the ancient MSS. (to which I add Lamb. 1182, Mus. 11, 836, 5116, and Cov. 3, omitted by Mill). The word has been rejected by Beng., Wetst., Matth., La., and Tis., but retained by Griesb. and Scholz. I have followed the former Editors, because internal evidences is against the word, which was far more likely to be inserted than removed. The passage in Barnab. will not prove that the Syr. Translator read ἑαυτοὺς, since the true rendering is not segregated (as in the Copt. Ver.), but 'qui segregant,' as Pocock and Schaaf rightly render; — a use of Neut. for Middl. Reflex. found in our English separate, whence Separatists, or Schismatics. If this be the true view, Dr. Peile's version, 'who cause separations,' separatists, by setting the example of separation, cannot be admitted. — ψυχικοί, Πνεῦμα μὴ ἔχοντες, 'sensual as they are, not having the Spirit.' This turn seems suggested by 2 Pet. ii. 13, σπῖλοι καὶ μῶμοι! where see note, and on 1 Cor. iii. 14.

20. The Apostle now resumes his exhortations, and bids them not only beware of the artifices of the false teachers, but study to make fresh advances in religious knowledge and practice; and in order to ensure the success of their endeavours, he enjoins them to pray in the Holy Spirit. On the force of the metaphor in τῇ πίστει ἐποικοδομῆσαι, and 1 Cor. iii. 10, and comp. 2 Pet. i. 5. A similar architectural metaphor is found in Xen. Cyrop. viii. 7, 15. Ἀγιωτάτῃ, so termed, as 'intended to make men most holy.' Ἐν Πνεύμ. ἁγ., for διὰ Πνεύμ. ἁγίου, 'by the aid and influence of the Holy Spirit.' The best comment on this clause is Rom. viii. 26.

21. ἑαυτοὺς τηρῶ. 'Keep yourselves, i. e. each other.' Ἐν ἀγάπῃ Θεοῦ, 'in love towards God.' Προσδεχ. τὸ ἔλεος τ. Κ., 'expecting and hoping for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ [to bring you] unto salvation.' See on Rom. xv. 8.

22, 23. To the right understanding of these verses, it is necessary to attend to the sense of ἑαυτοὺς ἐν ἀγάπῃ Θεοῦ τηρῆσατε before laid down; according to which the full sense here seems to be: '[And, in the exercise of this vigilant exertion to keep each in the love of God, remember that ye are not to abandon all those who seem to wander from the true faith; no!] some deal tenderly with, making a due discrimination between (i. e. as Dr. Peile adds, 'different phases of Christian character') others, of a more obstinate character, anxiously endeavour to save, dealing with them as brands snatched out of the burning fire.' Of this use of διακρ. as a Deponent, and in an absolute construction, another ex. occurs in Hsian. iv. 6, 12, οἱ δὲ στρατιῶται, τοῦ βιάζεσθαι τε καὶ ἀρπάζειν λαβόντας ἑξ ουραίνης, οὗκ ἐτι διακρίνοντο τίνας ἦσαν οἱ περισσότερους φθγγέμενοι, and Thucyd. i. 49, καὶ διακρίνοτο οὐδὲν ἐτι, and so διακρίνας for διακριμένους in Hdor. vii. 156. Here, then, on the principle even of a Heathen, Marc. Ant. vii. 15, ἴδιον ἀδράκην φιλεῖν καὶ τοὺς πατρίων-τας, 'these who offend,' the Apostle, we may suppose, means to say that some exertions should be made to save even certain of the false teachers themselves; for as the words οὗς μὲν ἑλεεῖτε may have respect to the people seduced, so may the words οὗς δὲ, &c., to certain of the seducers; and to these the expression ἐν φόβῳ σώζετε is highly suitable, q. d. 'anxiously strive to save;' implying circumspection and exertion; comp. Phil. ii. 12, and see my note on Thucyd. ii. 37, 11. Similarly it is said in Liban. Orat. de vita sua. φόβος ἡναγκάζετο πατέρας, τοὺς αὐτῶν καλεῖν παρ' ἑαυτοῦς, ὥσπερ ἐκ πυρὸς, where, I conjecture, should be read φ. ἡναγκαζέ τοὺς π. υἱοὺς α.; for υἱοὺς, expressed in abbreviation, and τοὺς, might easily be confounded; and τὸ and τοὺς are sometimes interchanged. It is true, that the above interpretation, as far as respects ἑλεεῖτε, depends on the determination of a question of disputed reading. Thus, for ἑλεεῖτε Lachm. and Tisch. edit. ἑλίγγετε, from MSS. A. B. and 14 cursives, supported by the Vulg. and some later Versions, together with Theophyl. and Œcumen. But external authority is insufficient, and internal evidence uncertain. That ἑλ. is required by the context, will appear from the context and scope of the passage, which I have above laid down. ἑλίγγ. seems to have πάζοντες μισούντες καὶ τὸν ἀπὸ τῆς σαρκὸς ἐσπιλωμένον χιτῶνα.

† Rom. 16.
26.
Eph. 2. 20.
u Rom. 16.
27.
† 1 Tim. 1. 17.

24 Ἡ δὲ δυναμένη φυλάξει † ὑμᾶς ἀπταιστούς, καὶ στήσαι κατενώπιον τῆς δόξης αὐτοῦ ἀμώμους ἐν ἀγαλλίασει, 25 ὁ μόνος [σοφῶ] Θεὸς σωτὴρ ἡμῶν, δόξα καὶ μεγαλωσύνη, κράτος καὶ ἐξουσία, καὶ νῦν καὶ εἰς πάντας τοὺς αἰῶνας! ἀμήν.

arisen from dull Critics, who could not discern the true force of ἡλεῖται. There is great difficulty in tracing the connexion, and determining the scope, of the closing words, μισούντες τὸν, explained by Wolf and Benson to mean, 'Let, however, your endeavours to reform them be made with great caution; be careful to avoid being yourselves corrupted by their society, and] show a hatred of whatever partakes, in the slightest degree, of iniquity and sin.' If this view be adopted, there may be partly an allusion to the command of the Jewish law, not to touch any thing unclean, and partly to the caution showed in avoiding all contact even with the clothes of persons who have any infectious disease. But there is such great harshness in supposing so many words left to be mentally supplied, that I am inclined to trace the connexion and scope, with Dr. Peile, in the following paraphrase: 'Your care for all the members of your own body in Christ, and your wish to be clothed with changes of raiment being shown in your abhorring even that soiled garment (Zech. iii. 3, 4) that comes of the flesh,—in opposition to the engrafted principle of the Spirit.' Comp. Rom. vii. 21—25. viii. 1—8. Gal. v. 16, 17. Certainly Jude's epithet ἐσπιλωμένα well corresponds to the ἑνπαρά of the Prophet, and said, as Dr. Peile adds, 'with allusion to that "soiled garment," the "filthy rags" of Isa. i. 16. lxiv. 6. Ps. xiv. 3. iii. 3. Job xv. 6. Eph. iv. 22. Col. iii. 8, 9. And this rendering (continues Dr. Peile) represents τὸν ἀπὸ τῆς σαρκὸς as a mere adjunct of ἐσπιλωμένον χιτῶνα, regarded as in itself the one substantive term wherein the Apostle would put before his readers that depravation of nature, found even in believers in Christ, which so adheres unto our very holiest services, as in the religious infamy of the world to have been set forth under the impressive type of Joshua, the high priest, who himself had need of a change of raiment before the Lord.'

24, 25. With the noble Doxology, which so suitably concludes this fine Epistle, comp. similar ones at Rom. xvi. 27. Eph. v. 27. Col. i. 22. 1 Tim. iii. 8. Here, however, there are two doubtful points of reading. For ὑμᾶς MSS. B, J, and 30 cursives (to which I add all the Lamb. copies and one Mus. copy) have αὐτοῦς, which is adopted by Lachm. and Tisch.; but without good reason, the other reading being called for by the general exhortation to soberness and purity of life, which has been going on throughout the Epistle. Besides, as Est. remarks, 'illis (sc. fratribus ab errore revocandis) prius optanda erat conversio a malo quam conservatio in bono. Denique Epilogi ratio postulat, ut iis ipsis ad quos scribit hujusmodi bona a Deo comprecetur.'

24. ἀπταιστούς] q. d. 'never stumbling, much less falling.' Comp. Lucian, t. ii. 449. Reitz, διὰ ἀπταιστον καὶ ἀκλινοῦ βίου εἰς γῆρας ὁδεύσαι.

25. σοφῶ has been, on strong grounds, chiefly of internal evidence, cancelled by almost every Editor. It was prob. introduced from the Epilogus to the Romans.—Σωτὴρ is here applied to God the Father, as at 1 Tim. ii. 3. Tit. i. 3. iii. 4. The words διὰ Ἰησοῦ Χρ. τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν, added in many MSS. and early Versions (after σωτῆρ ἡμῶν), and inserted in the text by almost all the recent Editors, may have arisen from the margin, and been derived from Rom. xv. 26, or may have been omitted propter homoteleuton ἡμῶν—ἡμῶν; but the former is more probable, as will appear from the following able note of Est., in rejection of the claim of this clause (however found in the Vulg. and all the Latin copies) to be considered genuine: 'Indicant autem (hæc verba) meritum Christi hominibus. At vero, cum Trinitati ea que sequuntur, non competant per meritum Christi, satis probabile sit, hæc partem ab Apostolo non fuisse scriptam. Ac si quis bene perpendat, inveniet, totam hæc doxologiam adscribi Christo DOMINO; ut hæc habeamus apertum Divinitatis ejus testimonium.'

ΑΠΟΚΑΛΥΨΙΣ

ΙΩΑΝΝΟΥ ΤΟΥ ΘΕΟΛΟΓΟΥ.

I. <sup>1</sup> 'ΑΠΟΚΑΛΥΨΙΣ 'ΙΗΣΟΥ ΧΡΙΣΤΟΥ, ἣν ἔδωκεν αὐτῷ
ὁ Θεὸς δεῖξαι τοῖς δούλοις αὐτοῦ ἃ δεῖ γενέσθαι ἐν τάχει, καὶ

OF this Book,—which is universally allowed to be the most sublime of all those contained in the New Test.,—the authenticity (namely, that it is a genuine production of St. John) was almost universally admitted in the first two centuries after the Christian era (this appears from Dr. Routh's Extracts [Rel. Sacr. i. 428] from Hermas Pastor, Ignatius, Caius Presbyter, Papias, Justin Martyr, Frates Viennenses et Lugdunenses, Irenæus, Melito, Theophilus, Antiochenus, Apollonius, Hippolytus, Tertullian, and Clem. Alex.); and if doubts were entertained in the third, they were soon removed, and the origin of them has been, with reason, ascribed to the well-meant, but misguided, zeal of some fanatical Expositors. If, too, it was in the early ages judged unsuitable to be read in Churches, that was not from any doubt of its authenticity, but from its very mysterious character; on account of which it was thought unfit to be read publicly. We have here a Revelation from the Lord Jesus Christ, composed of a series of Visions representing the future state of the Christian Church. In ch. I.—iii. is made known to St. John the then state of the Church in Asia (the things which are); in the fourth and following Chapters are revealed the things which shall be hereafter—the future destinies of the Church Universal, through its several periods of progress down to its final state of glory.

As to the date of the book, the learned are nearly agreed in supposing these Revelations to have been communicated about A.D. 96; but whether, as is generally supposed, in the isle of Patmos, whither the Apostle had been banished by the persecuting Roman Emperor, or after John's return to Ephesus, has been a matter of vehement dispute. See Dr. Davidson's ample discussion of the question; with whom I quite agree, that there is good reason to suppose that the Apostle wrote, as well as saw the visions, in the isle of Patmos; and that the written document was sent from Patmos to Asia Minor, to Ephesus. From the phraseology of this Book being occasionally such as widely recedes from all rules of Class. Greek usage, though quite reconcilable with those of Hebrew, it is not without some reason that several eminent Critics have supposed it to have been originally written in Hebrew; and it has been justly remarked, 'that if this theory of a Hebrew original could be established, it would relieve us from all the difficulties attending the objection that the style of the Apocalypse should so much differ from that employed by St. John in his Gospel and Epistles;' but whether it be so very different may be doubted. And, after all, this view of a Hebrew original is but an hypothesis, and cannot be admitted without the support of historical testimony; not to say, that it would be difficult to imagine why it should have been originally written in Hebrew, being intended almost entirely for the use of Jewish converts who understood Greek, or Gentile converts who knew nothing of Hebrew. We may perhaps suppose the Apostle to have put down the substances of the various revelations, as they were communicated to him, in the Syro-Chaldeæ, and afterwards drawn them forth more fully in Greek, for the use of the Christian Church generally throughout the world. It has been observed by Mr. Hartwell Horne, Introduct. vol. iv. 534,—agreeably to the opinion of several eminent Biblical Critics,—that 'there is scarcely an expression in this Divine book that is not derived from the Prophet Daniel, or some other Prophet of the Old Test.' 'It is (continues he) written in the same style and language with the prophecies of Daniel, and has the same relation to them that they have to one another, so that all of them make one complete commentary.' In the latter observation I nearly acquiesce, but at the former I pause, since it would make the Book a sort of cento of prophetic passages. Moreover, the use made of the Prophets of the O. T. in the adoption of Biblical phrases, and even whole clauses, nay, occasionally sentences, is by no means so exclusively confined to the Prophet Daniel as the first observation would imply. The truth of the matter is more exactly stated by Dr. Lightf. thus: 'The composition of this Book is much like that of Daniel, in that it repeats the same history in varied and more developed expressions; and it is exceedingly like Ezekiel, in method, and arrangement of the things spoken. The style is throughout very prophetic, as to the things spoken, and very Hebraizing as to the mode of speaking them.' In saying that 'the style is throughout very prophetic,' the Dr. seems ἐσήμανεν ἀποστεilas διὰ τοῦ ἀγγέλου αὐτοῦ τῷ δούλῳ αὐτοῦ

a 1 John 1.1. Ἰωάννη, <sup>2</sup> ὃς ἐμαρτύρησε τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ τὴν μαρτυ-

to have adverted to the manner, and character of the composition. And he might have added, that, besides the strong general similarity to the Books of Daniel and Ezekiel, this Book abounds in phrases, clauses, and sentences, derived from (as my marginal references will show) the other Prophets of the Old Test., espec. Isaiah, Jeremiah, and most of the Minor Prophets. In order to make such passages more distinct to the eye of the reader, the words are spaced out in the same manner as the Citations from the Old Test. are throughout the whole work.

On the scope and design of this Book considerable difference of opinion exists. Upon the whole, I must agree with Dean Woodhouse in considering 'that scheme of general interpretation as the best which regards the Apocalypse as a prophetic history of the fate and fortunes of the Christian Church, from the time when it was written to the latest period of the world; and those as being foretold by the means of symbols and emblematical representations.' In this view Dr. Davidson mainly coincides. 'The subject of the writer (says he) is the triumph of Christianity, chiefly and primarily over heathenism;—the persecuting, hostile power under which John himself and his contemporary fellow-Christians were suffering,—and over other opposing tendencies and influences. The Apostle (continues he) describes the destruction of Antichristianism—the triumph of Christianity over it: this is the comprehensive scope of his predictions. The spirit of the world is symbolically represented as persecuting the followers of Christ. Its enmity to Him, and consequently to all who bear his name, is [represented as] deep and determined. This personification of the Antichristian world is equivalent, to a certain extent, to the genius of the Roman empire, or rather it includes it. It should not, however, be limited to that,—either in comprehension or duration. The hostility of heathen Rome to the true religion is embodied in the descriptions; but it does not exhaust their significance. They embrace the leading tendencies which are opposed, in their nature, to the peaceful victories and universal dominion of Christ's kingdom on earth. Prominent events, at different periods of the Church's history, are not referred to; or they are referred to in an indefinite way, if they be the consummation of agencies which have been, and are in continuous operation against the progress of Messiah's kingdom.' In the above view I can only coincide partially, inasmuch as it is too limited to come up to the whole of what, I apprehend, the Apostle intended to bring forward,—though it is preferable to the other extreme, into which several Expositors have run. But it is not on the subjects, or designations, that writers have run into the extreme of going too far, or stopping far short of what the truth seems to call for, but still more in the application of the various symbolical representations, and in pointing out the fulfilment of prophecies, darkly predicted as they are. They have either attempted to apply all those symbolic representations, and to interpret them according to some preconceived system of their own,—or else abandoned he attempt as hopeless. Whereas, it would have been better to confine themselves to noticing the general bearings of those symbols, according to their usual meaning in Scripture, and then proceed to the application of those only, which have been, with more or less distinctness, developed by the lapse of time and the course of events. The actual predictions contained in this portion of the inspired word of God are doubtless all to be fulfilled; and when they are, the accomplishment is, we cannot doubt, to serve, along with other purposes, to strengthen and confirm the faith of all Christians who witness that completion. But conjectures as to the time and manner of such accomplishments are quite apart from the deeply momentous subjects of redemption, and our personal interest in them. But even were it not so, the plan, purpose, and limited extent (already far overrun) prescribed to this work, would have forbidden the complete carrying out of even a plan of exegesis on so limited a scale as that just adverted to. I must therefore refer my readers, for what could not here be furnished, to such writers as have professionally handled that department,—and espec. Mr. Elliot, in his last greatly improved Edition of his able work.

In sitting down to the ninth Edition of this work, I considered that the greatest service I could render, towards the full accomplishment of that which lay beyond my province, was to lay a firm foundation for exegesis. From the limited extent prescribed to a work intended to be strictly a HAND-BOOK to the Minister, or Theological Student, the Author's labours were in this book well-nigh confined to ascertaining the true reading, and briefly determining the external and literal sense, rather than opening out the internal and mystical, of the Sacred writer. In setting myself to form a systematic revision (thus forming a sort of provisional new revision) of this Book, I found very great service in the collations I had previously made of four ancient and exceedingly valuable MSS. of the Apocalypse (Lamb. 1186, and three Mus. copies), hitherto uncollated, and another Mus. (5787, Mill's Covell. 2) collated, indeed, by Mill, but, as often, in a most careless manner, so as to pass over, at least, one-third of the various readings. This Covell. 2, and the Lamb. 1186, both of the 11th century, I consider equal in value to any of the twelve choicest cursive MSS. Nay, there is great reason to think that one at least of the two,—the Lamb. 1186,—was a fellow copy from the same original with the celebrated Vat. B, and the other very nearly allied to one or the other. Of course, I could in the present work give only the general results, and the evidence only where at all important of these choice copies. Besides this, the arranging and digesting of the evidence, as to readings found in the former collations, were indispensable to my purpose; which, however, concerned only readings of importance, omitting all notice of multitudes of readings, either glosses, or corrections, or mere errors of scribes. All this, however, necessarily implied a vast amount of labour and thought, which, nevertheless, I was the more induced to bestow, since I felt convinced, with ρίαν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, ὅσα † τε εἶδε. <sup>3 b</sup> Μακάριος ὁ ἀναγινώσκων, καὶ οἱ ἀκούοντες τοὺς λόγους τῆς προφητείας, καὶ τηροῦντες τὰ ἐν αὐτῇ γέγραμμένα· ὁ γὰρ καιρὸς ἐγγύς.

<sup>4 c</sup> Ἰωάννης ταῖς ἑπτὰ ἐκκλησίαις ταῖς ἐν τῇ Ἀσίᾳ· χάρις ὑμῖν καὶ εἰρήνη ἀπὸ [τοῦ] ὁ ὢν καὶ ὁ ἦν καὶ ὁ ἐρχόμενος· καὶ ἀπὸ τῶν ἑπτὰ πνευμάτων αἱ [ἐστίν] ἐνώπιον τοῦ θρόνου αὐτοῦ, & 12. 17. & 14. 5.

Dr. Wordsworth (Pref. p. viii.), that 'the more closely the Apocalypse is examined and studied, the more clearly will it be perceived that every word of this Divine Book ought to be accurately weighed;' of course he means, both as to the exact reading and true interpretation. Accordingly here, even more than elsewhere in the present work, it has been my continued study to place in the readers' hands the means of judging for themselves, as to the genuine reading, and true interpretation, of those very numerous passages which have perplexed Critics, and baffled Expositors. With what success these labours have been bestowed,—as a 'labour of love,' on the composition of the blessed Apostle,—'judicant lectores eruditi et candidi.'

1. ἀποκάλυψις [Ἰη. Χρ.] Render: 'a revelation (i.e. a body of revelations) from Jesus Christ' (see note on Gal. i. 11, 12); meaning, as Dr. Henderson (Lect. on Insp., p. 384) explains, a development of future events directly furnished by the Son of God to the Apostle John in ecstatic vision. To this brief general Inscription there are various additions in the uncial, and a few cursive MSS.; but they are entitled to no attention, as being evidently interpolations.—ἐν τάχει, i.e. 'in a comparatively short period;' which, measured by the language of Scripture,—wherein a thousand years are as one day,—may denote any thing of by no means speedy fulfilment, though it may speedily begin to be fulfilled.—ἰσήμεναι, 'signified, made known, showed.' The construction (which is harsh) may be resolved either thus: καὶ ἀποστείλας (ὁ Θεὸς ὁ ὢν καὶ ὁ ἦν καὶ ὁ ἐρχόμενος), scil. τὴν ἀποκάλυψιν, ἰσήμεναι διὰ τοῦ ἀγγέλου α.: or thus, καὶ ἀποστείλας (τὸν ἀγγέλου αὐτοῦ) ἰσήμεναι διὰ τούτου, &c.

2. ἡμαρτήρησιν The full sense is, 'hath testified and recorded.' The τὰ in the t. rec. after ὅσα is not found in A, B, C, and 40 cursives (I add Lamb. 1186, and 3 out of 4 Mss. MSS.), all the Versions, and Greek Commentators, and is cancelled by Griesb., Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch.; But internal evidence is unfavourable. It is difficult to see how a word so unnecessary could creep into the major part of the copies. And as it is better to heal than to amputate, I would suggest that the τὰ may stand for some other word, mistaken for τὰ by the scribes; prob. γὰ, scilicet; and the two words are perpetually confounded. "Ὅσον is often followed by γὰ in the best Greek writers; e.g. Plato, 145, A, δὸν γὰ μὲ εἰδέναι, also p. 423; Soph. Œd. T. 1289; Phil. 1403. Render: 'which things, to wit, he saw;' words which, as Matth. points out, are not to be referred 'ad argumentum Apocalypses, sed ad ea quæ Joannes sciet in Evangelio, ut testia, narravit et docuit.'

3. ὁ ἀναγινώσκων, καὶ οἱ δκ.] This peculiar mode of expression has reference to the ancient custom, when books were scarce, for some one person to read to a number of others, who listened to what was thus read. Here the μακαριότης is pronounced on both the reader, or student, and the hearers.—τηρ. here denotes the keeping in the heart what was read (see Luke ii. 51), so as to observe the injunctions therein.—ὁ γὰρ καιρὸς ἐγγύς, 'the time [of their being fulfilled, or beginning to be fulfilled] is near at hand.'

4. ἀπὸ τοῦ ὁ ὢν, &c.] There is slender authority for the τοῦ; yet the reading Θεοῦ, found in two-thirds of the MSS., nay, edited by Matth.,—but injudiciously, as being an evident gloss,—appears to have been founded on it. And considering the great antiquity of Θεοῦ, and that the τοῦ must be still more ancient, it would seem to be genuine, only that it might be suspected of having been inserted to soften the harshness of the solecism existing without it; yet one cannot well see how the Article can here be dispensed with; for though ὁ ὢν, and espec. ὁ ἦν, might be used, like 'I AM' in Exod. iii. 14, as an indelible title of JEHOVAH (the Hebrew not admitting of inflection in the oblique cases), yet the Article would not be the less necessary. The τοῦ, indeed, is absent from A, C, and 17 cursives (I add Lamb. 1186, and 2 Mss. copies), and is cancelled by Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch.; but internal evidence is equally balanced. The ἰσήμεναι after δ is omitted in B, C, and 35 cursives [also in Lamb. 1186, and Mss. 1 & 2], and cancelled by Lachm. and Tia.; and certainly internal evidence is against it. Dr. Wordsworth, in his late revision of the text of this book, a codicibus antiquissimis, edits πνευμ. τῶν from the Alexandrian, and one other MS. But that is a manifest correction of some ancient Critic; being indeed another mode of removing a harsh construction. The words following, ἀπὸ τῶν ἑπτὰ πνευμαίων, &c., are, as Thos. Scott observes, 'generally interpr. of the "Divine Spirit," with respect to the abundance, sufficiency, and variety of his gifts, graces, and operations; and in relation to the seven Churches,' with each of which, and all others, the One and self-same Spirit, dwelt, as the Fountain of life, grace, and peace.' Others, however, as Grot., regard the ἑπτὰ πνευμαίων as the same with ἑπτὰ ἄγγελοι mentioned in Tob. xii. 15, as presenting the prayers of the Saints to the throne of grace; or rather, Abp. Newc. supposes, the seven ministering Spirits whom St. John saw discharging separate offices in subsequent revelations made to him. Yet it would hardly seem that any created spirits would be comprehended in the solemn benediction of the Father and the Son which follows. Hence the former interpretation is preferable, which is ably maintained by Poole and Wolfius; from whose statements it is evident that this was the way in which the expression τὸ Α καὶ τὸ Ω, [ἀρχὴ καὶ τέλος,] λέγει [ὁ] Κύριος ὁ Θεός, ὁ ὢν καὶ ὁ ἦν καὶ ὁ ἐρχόμενος, ὁ παντοκράτωρ.

<sup>9</sup> Ἐγὼ Ἰωάννης, ὁ [καὶ] ἀδελφὸς ὑμῶν καὶ συγκοινωνός <sup>h Rom. 8. 17. Phil. 1. 7. 2 Tim. 1. 8. 2 2. 12.</sup> ἐν τῇ θλίψει καὶ [ἐν τῇ] βασιλείᾳ καὶ ὑπομονῇ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, ἐγενόμην ἐν τῇ ὄψει τῇ καλουμένῃ Πάτμῳ διὰ τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ διὰ τὴν μαρτυρίαν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ. <sup>10</sup> Ἐγενόμην <sup>1 ch. 4. 2.</sup> ἐν Πνεύματι ἐν τῇ κυριακῇ ἡμέρᾳ, καὶ ἤκουσα ὀπίσω μου φωνὴν μεγάλην ὡς σάλπινγος, <sup>11</sup> λεγούσης· [Ἐγὼ εἰμι τὸ Α καὶ τὸ Ω, ὁ πρῶτος καὶ ὁ ἔσχατος· καὶ,] Ὁ βλέπεις γράψον εἰς βιβλίον, καὶ πέμψον ταῖς ἐπτά ἐκκλησίαις [ταῖς ἐν Ἀσίᾳ], εἰς Ἐφεσον, καὶ εἰς Σμύρναν, καὶ εἰς Πέργαμον, καὶ εἰς Θυάτειρα, καὶ εἰς Σάρδεις, καὶ εἰς Φιλαδέλφειαν, καὶ εἰς Λαοδικεῖαν.

himself, xxi. 6. xxii. 13; which fully establishes the Deity of Christ. It is finely remarked by Philo, de Mundo, Οὐδὲν παρά Θεῷ μίλλον, τῷ καὶ τὰ τῶν ὁρῶν ὑπὸ ἡμῶν τίτατα. The text which I long ago laid down in this verse, I have since found confirmed by Lachm. and Tisch. (2nd ed.), except that they cancel the words ἀρχὴ καὶ τέλος and ὁ, which I have only placed within double brackets. The words are absent from the Lamb. and Mus. MSS. The words ὁ Θεός were meant to intimate, by the subordination of ὢν (which could not have been expressed without a manifest tautology) the Deity of our Lord Jesus Christ. The Articles before Α and Ω have, as Dr. Wordsworth observes, a restrictive sense, showing that Christ is the only Author and Finisher of all things. The ὁ before Κύριος is, on strong grounds, confirmed by the Lamb. and Mus. MSS., cancelled by all the recent Editors. To the word is added ὁ Θεός in the uncial MSS. A, B, C, and almost all the cursive ones, thus affording a clear assertion of the Divinity of Christ.

9. The Apostle now proceeds to mention the manner in which he had received the revelations that he was about to deliver. By ἐν τῇ θλίψει—καὶ ὑπομονῇ Ἰ. Χρ. are denoted afflictions and troubles to be endured for the sake, and in the cause of Christ; Ἰ. Χριστοῦ being a Genit. of similitude; and the interposed βασιλ. intimates that he is to be partaker with them, in the kingdom prepared for them, and alluded to supr. v. 6; for the whole may be regarded as a Synchysis, for ἐν τῇ θλίψει καὶ ὑπομονῇ Ἰ. Χρ. καὶ βασιλ. αὐτοῦ. The best comment on this passage is 2 Tim. ii. 12, ἐν ὑπομονῇ, καὶ συμβασιλεύσωμι. See also Rom. viii. 17.—The καὶ before ἀδελφ. is cancelled by the same Editors on external authority nearly equal (to which I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3); but, since internal is rather in favour of the Particle, I have only bracketed it. The text I have adopted throughout this verse is nearly the same with that of Tisch. (2nd ed.); the only difference being, that for Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ in the first part of the verse he edits, as does Wordsw., ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰ., supported by a vast preponderance of external authority in MSS., Versions, and Fathers. But internal evidence is quite in favour of the reading Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, as being the more difficult reading,—though admitting, as I have shown, of a suitable sense, the Genit. being one of cause, i. e. 'on account of,' in the cause of Christ;—a sense, indeed, which the reading adopted by Tisch. is meant to express, though it evidently arose from a marginal scholium. The ἐν at συγκοιν. was prob. excluded by certain Critics, who did not perceive its force, and were ignorant of the true construction, which is similar to that in Phil. i. 7, where see my note. See also note on 1 Cor. ix. 23. Or it might be passed over, by the abbreviation written above, i. e. ς, being misunderstood, or having faded away. The Genit. Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ is one of explanation, conveying a testimony to the Messiahship of Jesus, whence, however, it would appear that Χριστοῦ has been, with some reason, cancelled by Lachm. and Tisch. from several MSS., the Vulg., and Ital. Versions, and Andreas.

10. Ἐγενόμην ἐν Πνεύμ. meaning, that 'he was the subject of the extraordinary operations of the Holy Ghost.' See Dr. Henderson, Lect. on Inspir. p. 26. The expression is nearly equiv. to ἐν ἐκστάσει γινώσκειν at Acts xxii. 17, denoting the being in prophetic Vision. See Bengel and Wets.—For ἤκουσα—φωνὴν Tisch. edits ἤκουσα φωνὴν ὀπίσω μου, from the MS. B and 25 cursives (I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3). And indeed internal evidence is in its favour, from its presenting a construction which, though rough, is one quite in the style of St. John.

11. τὸ Α καὶ τὸ Ω i. e. 'the First and the Last;' as v. 17, and xxii. 13, a mode of expression supposed to have been borrowed from Jewish phraseology (see Isa. xlv. 6), though I find it in the Class. writers; ex. gr. Theoc. Idyll. xvii. 3, where king Ptolemy is called ἀνδρῶν ἐν πρώτοιισιν καὶ πέματος, and Orpheus, Hymn xiv. 7, Ζεῦ, ἀρχὴ πάντων, πάντων τε τελευτῇ, and frag. vi. 9, Ζεὺς πρῶτος ἔγινετο—Ζεὺς ἔσχατος. Here, however, the words are absent from all the MSS. of any account, and are an interpolation.—The ἐπτά before ἐκκλ. and the words further on, ταῖς ἐν Ἀσίᾳ, are, on ample authority (which I can confirm from the Lamb. and Mus. copies), cancelled by all the recent Editors.—For τ. rec. Θυάτειρα, Lachm. and Tisch. edit αι, from A, B, C, and 6 cursives; while Wordsw. retains αι; rightly; since that spelling is confirmed by the authority of Strabo, and Steph. Byz., and,

13 Καὶ ἐπέστρεψα βλέπειν τὴν φωνὴν ἧτις * ἐλάλει μετ' ἐμοῦ καὶ ἐπιστρέψας εἶδον ἑπτὰ λυχνίας χρυσᾶς, 13<sup>1</sup> καὶ ἐν μέσῳ τῶν ἑπτὰ λυχνίων ὅμοιον Τίῳ ἀνθρώπου, ἐνδεδυμένον ποδήρη, καὶ περιεζωσμένον πρὸς τοῖς μαστοῖς ζωνὴν χρυσήν 14 ἡ δὲ κεφαλὴ αὐτοῦ καὶ αἱ τρίχες λευκαὶ ὥσ[ε]ι ἔριον λευκόν, ὡς χιών

1 Ezek. i. 26.
Dan. 7. 12.
ch. 2. 1.
8. 14. 14.
& 15. 6.
in Dan. 7. 9.
ch. 19. 13.

what is more, by the many coins yet existing of the city. The reading arose from a blunder of scribes, who oft. confound an and a final. At ii. 18 Tisch., with singular inconsistency, edits Θαυταίροις, though B and 14 cursives offer Θαυταίρη.

12. Βλέπειν—ἐμοῦ] The full sense is, 'to look and discover the sound that was talking with me,' = look whose voice it was that was addressing me, i. e. who it was that, &c. Βλέπειν φωνὴν is a phrase, I believe, without example in the Class. writers, and one so altogether peculiar, that one cannot doubt but that St. John had here in mind two passages of the Sept., where alone, as far as I know, any traces of the phrase are to be found, Exod. iv. 18, ὁ λαὸς ἰδὼν τὴν φωνὴν τῆς σάλπιγγος, and Deut. iv. 12, ὁμοίωμα οὐκ εἶδets ἄλλ' ἢ φωνὴν, scil. εἶδαι. The two passages are adduced, and the peculiarity pointed out, by Philo Judeus, De Migr. Abr., p. 395, and most ingeniously treated on agreeably to his mystical philosophy. Thus the peculiar mode of expression throughout the clause may be referred to the head of breviloquentia, associated with a transfusion of the peculiarity found in the two passages of the Pentateuch, where the interchange of signification in verbs expressing the same sense may be referred to Hebraisms; though such is occasionally observable in the Greek Class. writers, confined however to the poets, as Æschyl. and Pindar.—ἐλάλει, for t. rec. ἐλάλησα, has been adopted by almost all the Editors from Weist. to Lachm. and Tisch.;—with reason, since it is found in nearly the whole of the MSS. (including the Lamb. and Mss. copies), supported by the ancient Versions, several Fathers, and Arethas.

13. ὅμοιον Τίῳ ἀνθρ.] Most recent Commentators, arguing from the absence of the Article, render 'a son of man'; i. e. 'a human being.' Yet the absence of the Article will not prove this to be the sense intended. There is no reason to abandon the opinion of the ancient and most modern Commentators, that it means 'the Son of Man.' See note on Heb. i. 2; the Article being implied, though not expressed, since the title corresponds to that at Dan. vii. 13, where the Sept. closely follows the Hebrew, which could not express the Article. See Bp. Middl.—Πρὸς τοῖς μαστοῖς, for περὶ τὰ στῆθη, 'about the breasts.' The reading μέσῳ, edited by Lachm. from A, and 7 cursives (to which I can only add Mss. 2), is worthy of attention, but not of adoption; inasmuch as, since it is almost exclusively poetic, it was not likely to have been used by St. John; but since it is found in the Ionic Greek of Hdrot., it may have had place in the ordinary, or Provincial Greek of Asia Minor. At ποδήρη supply χιτῶνα, denoting 'a robe descending to the feet,' such as was worn by persons of dignity, espec. priests, Exod. xxviii. 27; and so the word is used in Jos. and Philo. For ποδήρη Lachm. edits -ην, from A, and one cursive; but I cannot find a single ex. of the form; hence I suspect that the reading arose from error of scribes, who wrote ποδήρη for ποδήρη, an error perpetually occurring.—For ὅμοιον, A and a few other MSS. have ὁμοίωμα, which may be the true reading, and ὁμοιον an alteration for plainness' sake for νῆρ. But it will require us to read just after, νῆρ, found in B, and 27 other MSS. Thus the construction will be, κ. ἄ. μ. λ. (εἰδόν) καὶ ὁμοίωμα νῆρ ἀνθρ., which is somewhat confirmed by Ezek. i. 4, 5 (a passage prob. in St. John's mind), καὶ εἶδον—καὶ ἐν τῷ μέσῳ αὐτοῦ ὡς θραύς (Alex. ὁμοίωμα) ἡλίτρου—καὶ ἐν τῷ μέσῳ ὡς ὁμοίωμα τ. ζ.—ὁμοίωμα ἀνθρώπου ἐν αὐτοῖς. See also Ezek. i. 26. viii. 12, and Dan. x. 16, ἰδὼν ὡς ὁμοίωμα νῆρ ἀνθρώπου ἡψατο. Yet none of those 28 MSS. seem to have ὁμοίωμα, and hence the reading is destitute of authority. Indeed, I suspect that it arose from Critica, who, stumbling at the somewhat harsh ellipsis of τινα, sought to get rid of it by reading ὁμοίωμα, but, to make it good, they ought also to have read νῆρ: at least the Doct. after ὁμ. is perhaps unprecedented; though it occurs after ὁμοίωμα in Platon. Theot. p. 176, ὁμοίωμας Θεῶ, 'a likening of oneself to God.'

14. ἡ δὲ κεφαλὴ—πυρρός] This and the subsequent particulars are all characteristics of a Divine nature, and suited to the Messiah. Comp. Ezek. viii. 2, and Dan. vii. 9. x. 6. By the imagery at Λευκαὶ ὡς ἔριον and ὡς χιών is denoted shining splendour; and, therefore, the whiteness is not to be understood of age. Here, for ὡσεὶ, Griesb., Scholz., and Lachm. edit ὡς, from MSS. A and B, and nearly half of the cursives. As to Tisch., he in his first edit. adopted ὡς, and in his second restored ὡσεὶ. No sufficient reason was there either to change, or to change back again. External authority is nearly equal; but internal evidence is rather in favour of ὡσεὶ, which was more likely to be altered into ὡς, than the reverse. Thus, in all the passages of St. John's Gospel where ὡσεὶ occurs, some MSS. have ὡς, which is in those passages received into the text by Lachm. Moreover, ὡσεὶ is confirmed by the passage of Dan. vi. 9. 13. x. 6, from which the wording in vv. 13, 14, and 15 were formed; though there ὡσεὶ is also used before χιών. However, if Tischendorf's 'second thoughts' were wiser here, they must be regarded as less wise at Matt. xxviii. 3, where he followed Lachm. in altering ὡσεὶ to ὡς, on only comparatively slender external authority, opposed by internal evidence, and the reading in the passage of Daniel, which must have been as much in the mind of St. Matt. there as of St. John here. The words of ὀφθαλμοὶ αὐτοῦ ὡς φλόξ πυρός seem formed on those at Dan. x. 6, οἱ ὀφθαλμοὶ αὐτοῦ ὡσεὶ λαμπράδες πυρός, though the term here, φλόξ, was suggested by the ἀστραπή just before used in the passage of Daniel. It is observable that the heathens similarly ascribed to their gods these 'radiant flaming eyes,' e. g. He-καὶ οἱ ὀφθαλμοὶ αὐτοῦ ὡς φλόξ πυρός <sup>15</sup> καὶ οἱ πόδες αὐτοῦ <sup>n ch. 12.</sup> ὅμοιοι χαλκοῖς βάνω, ὡς ἐν καμίῳ πεπυρωμένοι· καὶ ἡ φωνή αὐτοῦ ὡς φωνὴ ὑδάτων πολλῶν <sup>16</sup> καὶ ἔχων ἐν τῇ δεξιᾷ αὐτοῦ χειρὶ ἄστέρας ἑπτὰ· καὶ ἐκ τοῦ στόματος αὐτοῦ ῥομφαία διστόμης ὀξεῖα ἐκπαρευομένη καὶ ἡ ὄψις αὐτοῦ, ὡς ὁ ἥλιος φαίνει ἐν τῇ δυνάμει αὐτοῦ. <sup>17</sup> Καὶ ὅτε εἶδον αὐτὸν ἔπεσα πρὸς τοὺς πόδας αὐτοῦ ὡς νεκρός. καὶ [ἐπ]έθηκε τὴν δεξιάν αὐτοῦ [χεῖρα] ἐπ' ἐμέ, λέγων [μοι]. Μὴ φοβοῦ· ἐγώ εἰμι ὁ πρῶτος καὶ ὁ ἔσχατος, <sup>18</sup> καὶ ὁ ζῶν, καὶ ἐγενόμην νεκρός, καὶ εἶδον ζῶν εἰμι εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας τῶν αἰώνων, [ἀμήν] καὶ ἔχω τὰς σῖδ., Scut. Herc. 72, says of Apollo: πῦρ δ' ὡς ὀφθαλμῶν ἀπλάμπεται, and Hom. Il. i. 200, of Minerva, δεινὸν δέ οἱ ὅσσοι φάανθιν, and

i. 104. Od. iv. 662, ὅσσοι δέ οἱ πυρὶ λαμπυρόμεντι ἴκτεται.

15. χαλκοῖς βάνω] A word nowhere else occurring, and of which even the derivation is uncertain. The learned are not agreed whether it denotes 'smelting brass,' from χαλκός and λαῖβω or κλῖβανος, or χαλκός and αἰβανος, Mount Libanus, what is called auribaculum; as Hesiod, Scut. 12, describes Hercules as having feet of ὀρείχαλκος, 'a sort of fine brass,' more valuable than gold: be that as it may, the expression happily designates the irresistible power and might of Christ, as the φωνὴ ὁδ. πολλῶν is a most noble image of His grandeur and majesty.
The words ὡς φωνὴ ὑδάτων πολλῶν are derived from Ezek. xlviii. 2, in the Version of Theodot.

16. In his having in his hand (or rather on his hand) seven stars, there may be an allusion to the custom of wearing many rings on the fingers, each studded with a diamond, or other sparkling gem. By these stars or brilliants are (as we find from ver. 20) designated the angels, or bishops, of the Seven Churches; intimating, not only that they were to be burning and shining lights (as the planets in the night; see ii. 12, and note), but that when really such, by the faithful discharge of their sacred office, they were exceedingly precious in the sight of God.—ρομφ. διστ., metaphorically denoting 'the word of God,' 'the doctrine of the Gospel.' See Luke ii. 35. Heb.
iv. 12, comp. with Isa. xl. 4. xlix. 2. 3 Thess.
ii. 8, 12, also Dan. x. 6. vii. 9. Ezek. viii. 2.
—ἐν τῇ δυν. α., i. e. 'when he has attained his meridian height' (comp. Eccles. xxvi. 16, ἥλιος ἀνελθὼν ἐν ὀψιότητι), has attained his full power of heat.' It is well observed by Dr. Hales, that the minute accuracy, simplicity, as well as sublimity of the stupendous representation in this whole passage, must have been drawn from the life; since no human fancy could furnish such details.

17. For ἐπέθηκε τὴν δεξ. Laehm. and Tisch. read ἔθηκε δ. from MSS. A, B, C, with some cur-sives (1 add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. I and 2), and Arethas; and it may be the true reading; at least internal evidence is in its favour. See note on Mark viii. 5.

18. Tisch. and Thiele have removed the comma after ἔσχατος, which cannot be justified, since ὁ ζῶν is another and separate title of God, as 'that Being who liveth for ever;' though it is meant to match with the preceding one, 'the one eternal God who is from everlasting to everlasting,' see Isa. xli. 4, and xlviii. 12, denoting the self-existence of the Deity. The next words, καὶ ἐγενόμην—ζῶν εἰμι, &c., are exegetical of the preceding, and serve to further develop the idea, adverting to God the Son, in his character of Mediator, to whom it was given to have life in Himself, and who had been 'obedient unto death (even the death of the cross)' for sinners, but behold he is alive, as the first-fruits of the resurrection, to die no more.—τὰς κλείς—θαν., meaning, 'power over death and the dead, to unlock the gates of Hades and make my disciples triumph over it, by giving them both life and salvation.' On the expression ἔδωκε see Doddr. in loco, and espec. Stuart in his Exegetical Essays on the several terms expressive of future punishment, pp. 128—135, who shows that in the New Test.

ἔδωκε signifies, not hell, but 'the region of the dead,' 'the domains of death, or of him who bath the power of death, Satan.' He observes, that 'in the Apocalypse the writer not only represents Hades as the region of the dead, but Death as being king of it, and governing those that dwell therein.' He then assigns the following as the general sense of the words, ἔχω τὰς κλείς τοῦ ἔδωκε καὶ τοῦ θανάτου, 'Mine is the power to unlock the gates of Hades, to open the doors of this prison, from which none could escape. I have entered the region of Hades (comp. Acts ii.
17, 31), and am come forth living; yea, in possession of everlasting life.' Wesley well observes that 'the Lord gave St. Peter the keys of the kingdom of heaven, but not the keys of death and Hades,' and with reason asks, 'How then comes his supposed Successor at Rome by the Keys of Purgatory?'—The dupe has been on good grounds cancelled by all the recent Editors.
Not only external authority, but internal evidence, is against it; and it seems introduced from those many passages, espec. of doxology, where it occurs. So supr. v. 6. The thing is not quite so certain as to τοῦ ἔδωκε καὶ τοῦ θανάτου, for which A, B, C, and 40 cursives (with the Lamb. and Mus. copies) have τ. θαν. κ. τ. ἔδωκε. External authority is decidedly in favour of the latter, but internal evidence of the former; and the position seems to have been changed by those who took ἔδωκε to mean 'hell,' the place of eternal punishment, which, as is evident from the context, and from what I have adduced from Prof.
Stuart, is a mistaken view. The ancient Comκλείς † τοῦ ᾄδου καὶ τοῦ θανάτου. <sup>19</sup> Γράψον οὖν ἃ εἶδες, καὶ ἃ εἰσι, καὶ ἃ μέλλει γίνεσθαι μετὰ ταῦτα. <sup>20</sup> τὸ μυστήριον τῶν ἑπτὰ ἀστέρων, ὧν εἶδες ἐπὶ τῆς δεξιᾶς μου, καὶ τὰς ἑπτὰ λυχνίας τὰς χρυσᾶς. Οἱ ἑπτὰ ἀστέρες ἄγγελοι τῶν ἑπτὰ ἐκκλησιῶν εἰσι καὶ * λυχναὶ αἱ ἑπτὰ [ἃς εἶδες], ἑπτὰ ἐκκλησίαι εἰσί.

a ch. 1. 18, 20.

b 1 John 4. 2
vv. 9, 13, 19.

II. 1 * Τῷ ἄγγέλῳ τῆς * ἐν Ἐφέσῳ ἐκκλησίας γράψον Τάδε λέγει ὁ κρατῶν τοὺς ἑπτὰ ἀστέρας ἐν τῇ δεξιᾷ αὐτοῦ, ὁ περιπατῶν ἐν μέσῳ τῶν ἑπτὰ λυχνῶν τῶν χρυσῶν. <sup>2</sup> Οἶδα τὰ ἔργα σου, καὶ τὸν κόπον σου καὶ τὴν ὑπομονήν σου, καὶ ὅτι οὐ δύνῃ βαστάσαι κακοὺς καὶ * ἐπείρασας τοὺς * λέγοντας ἑαυτοὺς mentator Andreas adduces both readings, and Arethas only notices one, τοῦ θαν. καὶ ἔδ.; yet he (as also Andreas) rightly explains ἔδ. of the region of the dead, as also does the Syriac Translator, rendering it by Showl. Thus the sense is the same on either reading; if the former be adopted, the sense may be expressed thus: 'I hold the keys of (possess power to unlock) the gates of Hades, and make my disciples triumph over death, both restoring them to life from death, and bestowing on them everlasting life and eternal salvation.'

19. The οὖν has been inserted by all the recent Editors, from A, B, C, and 41 cursives (I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1), several Versions, and Fathers, confirmed by the context. In short, the case here is the same as that of ἡλάλει at ver. 12; the absence of οὖν in the t. rec. being traceable to its absence in the Erasmus text, which was here, as in so many other instances, injudiciously followed by R. Stephens, when he ought to have followed the Complut.—ἃ εἰσι, καὶ ἃ μέλλει γ. μ. τ. 'The subject-matter, which the Prophet is commissioned to deliver, is divided into two parts: 1. the scene at that time before him, with the addresses to the Churches, revealing to them, and commenting upon their present internal state; 2. the events which were to happen to the Church universal in future times.' (Woodhouse.)

20. τὸ μυστ. i. e. the mystical meaning: that concealed under figurative resemblances. See xvii. 7. Of course, γράψον is to be repeated from the preceding context; q. d. 'Write from first the mystery,' &c.

II. In this and the next Chap. are contained the seven Messages to the seven Churches of Asia, and certain predictions, whose fulfilment is verified by the testimony of Ecclesiastical history, and attested by the present state of these Churches as described by Mr. Arundell, in his interesting work describing his visits to the seven Churches, which, it is singular, are mentioned supr. v. 11, in the very order in which any one would take them, who intended to visit them in rotation, beginning at Ephesus. These messages are both admonitory and consolatory; and though immediately addressed, as the case might require, to the seven Churches (viz. through the medium of their presidents, who represented them: see Ezek. xxv. 3. xxvii. 3. xxviii. 2. xxi. 2. xxxi.

2), were, nevertheless, meant for the benefit of the Church Universal in all succeeding ages.

1. τῷ ἄγγέλῳ] By ἄγγελοι is here denoted 'the presiding minister of the Ephesian Church,' whether bishop, or by whatever other name then called. This name, ἄγγ., was borrowed from the Synagogue, where the chief officer was so called, and also Episcopos.—For Ἐφεσίους, A, B, C, and 40 cursives (I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3), and the Vulg. and Copt. Versions, with Andreas, and Arethas, have ἐν Ἐφέσῳ, adopted by Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch.; rightly; since internal evidence is in its favour. The τῷ for τῇ, edited by Lachm., from A, C, is worthy of attention but not adoption. It arose, I suspect, from an error of scribes, who confounded the two abbreviations of τῇς and τῷ.—The phrase τάδε λέγει is said to be formed on the Heb. וְכֵן יָדַעְתִּי, so often found in the prophetic books of the Old Test. It may rather be said to be Oriental in its character, being the form used in the East as a preface to orders given by monarchs, or to Epistles on general business. So in Thucyd. i. 129, Xerxes begins his letter to Pausanias with Ὅδε λέγει Βασιλεὺς Πέρσης Πανσέρις, and the phrase is in the Old Test. often used by kings in the very same manner. See 1 Kings xx. 2. xxii. 27. 2 Kings ix. 18. xviii. 19.—ὁ κρατῶν. Render: 'he who holds in charge.'—ὁ περιπατῶν—χρυσῶν. This figuratively represents Christ as walking amidst the Church for observation, as well as for aid and direction.

2. οἶδα τὰ ἔργα σου] I know [and approve of] thy works, namely, those of faith and love. The next words are exegetical: 'even (καὶ) thy labour and patient endurance [of afflictions].' The σου is absent from A, C, and 9 cursives, and has been cancelled by Lachm. and Tisch. But internal evidence, as well as external authority, is in its favour; since I doubt not that it was excluded by certain Critics, for the purpose of removing a tautology.—ὁ δύνῃ βαστ., 'thou canst not bear with, endure,' a later Greek idiom, found also in Arr. Epict. i. 3. 2. This expression and ἰσάτασας, οἶδα τὸν κόπον σου and οὐ ἰκονίλας, v. 3, are antithetically opposed to each other.—ἰπειράσας, 'thou hast put to the proof,' or trial. So 1 John iv. 1, δοκιμάζειτε τὰ πνεύματα. The readings ἰπειράσας and λέγοντας, for t. rec. ἰπειράσας and φάσκοντας, have been adopted by the recent Editors and myself, on the strongest authority of MSS. (to which I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3), ἀποστόλους εἶναι, καὶ οὐκ εἰσὶ, καὶ εὗρες αὐτοὺς ψευδεῖς, <sup>3</sup> καὶ ὑπομονὴν ἔχεις, καὶ ἐβάστασας, διὰ τὸ ὄνομά μου, καὶ οὐκ * ἐκοπίεσας. <sup>4</sup> Ἄλλ' ἔχω κατὰ σοῦ, ὅτι τὴν ἀγάπην σου τὴν πρώτην ἀφῆκας. <sup>5</sup> Μνημόνευε οὖν πόθεν [ἐκ] πέπτωκας, καὶ μετανόησον καὶ τὰ πρῶτα ἔργα ποιήσον εἰ δὲ μὴ, ἔρχομαί σοι ταχὺ καὶ κινήσω τὴν λυχνίαν σου ἐκ τοῦ τόπου αὐτῆς, ἐὰν μὴ μετανόησῃς. <sup>6</sup> Ἄλλὰ τοῦτο ἔχεις, ὅτι μισεῖς τὰ ἔργα τῶν Νικολαϊτῶν ἃ καγὼ μισῶ. <sup>7</sup> Ὁ ἔχων οὖς ἀκουσάτω τί τὸ Πνεῦμα λέγει ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις· "Τῷ νικῶντι δώσω αὐτῷ φαγεῖν ἐκ τοῦ ξύλου τῆς ζωῆς, ὃ ἐστὶν ἐν [μέσῳ] * τῷ παραδείσῳ τοῦ Θεοῦ μου."

and the Compl. Ed. The other arose from R. Stephens preferring the Erasmusian to the Complut. readings. There is every reason to think that ἐπιείκων was a mere error of the scribes, and φάσκοντες a correction of style by the ancient Critics; though it is found in the Sept., Gen. xvi. 20, φάσκοντες αὐτῶν εἶναι τὸ ὕδωρ.

3. For t. rec. κοκοπίεσας καὶ οὐ κίμηναι, I have edited as I have, with Griesb., Scholz, and Tisch., from B, and 40 cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3). The reading οὐ κοκοπίεσας, edited by Lachm., from A, C, and one cursive, arose from error of scribes.

4. ἔχω κατὰ σοῦ See note on Acts xix. 38. — τὴν ἀγάπην—ἀφῆκας, lit., 'thou hast let go thy first love,' i.e. the first warmth of thy love and affection for me, and zeal for my religion.

5. μνημ. πόθεν [ἐκ] πῶν. The ἐκ, which I placed within brackets, has been cancelled by Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch., from A, B, C, and 34 cursives (I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3), confirmed by internal evidence. Whichever be the true reading, there is a metaphor taken from persons who 'fall off' from their vows, or pledges of love, affection, or from duty. See Eccus. v. 11, and comp. Shaksp. Hamlet: 'Love cools, friendship falls off.'—τὰ πρῶτα ἔργα, 'the (= thy) first works;' 'what thou first didst in faith and obedience.' Comp. Heb. iii. 14, and Dionys. Hal. Ant. p. 2089, 3, αἰδοῦμενοι τὰς ἐπὶ τοῖς πρώτοις ἔργοις τιμὰς ἀφανίσαι. Of the three steps to recover the first love, there is placed in the foreground a lively remembrance from what degree of faith, love, and obedience, one has fallen,—then deep repentance for that and falling off, and further, a hearty resolution, under the aids of Divine grace, to do 'the first works,' and that, as Wesley observes, 'both outwardly and inwardly; or else we can never regain our first love.'—ταχὺ has been cancelled by Lachm. and Tisch., on the authority of A, C (to which I can add nothing), and the Vulg.—quite insufficient, espec. since internal evidence is divided. The word was prob. omitted through the carelessness of an ancient scribe. By κινήσω τὴν λ. is meant, 'I will remove thee from being a Church, by taking away the preaching of the Gospel;' a most alarming and rousing denunciation.

6. ἀλλὰ τοῦτο ἔχεις, &c. ['but this [praise] thou hast—that of hating the practices of the Nicolaitans; who were a branch of the Gnostics, and held it to be lawful to eat meats offered to idols, and practised fornication. Comp. Ezek. xvi. 30, ἔργα πόρνης.—μισεῖτε, 'thou holdest in hatred,' 'strongly disapprovest of,' as in Jos. Bell. i. 6, 4, κατηντιβόλου (scil. αὐτόν) μισῆσαι τὴν Ἀριστοβόλου βίαν.]

7. ὁ ἔχων οὖς ἀκ., &c. An earnest injunction to strict attention, often repeated in the subsequent matter.—τῷ νικῶντι, 'who overcometh [the temptations of the world, the flesh, and the Devil].'
—φαγεῖν ἐκ τοῦ ξύλου τῆς ζωῆς, &c. Here ξύλου, by a usage derived from the Sept., denotes tree; which, by a common metonymy, is put for the fruit. The words contain a figurative designation of that eternal life which was lost by our first parents, and restored by Christ. This life is here compared to Paradise, in order to intimate its felicity, and denominated the Paradise of God, to denote the heavenly Paradise. So Jalkut Rubeni, cited by Schoettgen: 'Deus—animam educit in *paradisi*um, eique gustandum præbet arborem vite.'—μέσῳ is cancelled, and τῷ π—π read for τοῦ π—ον, by Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch., from A, B, C, and 33 cursives (I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2); rightly; since the reading prob. came from a marg. scholium. The μον after Θεοῦ, inserted by the same Editors, stands on a strong footing, being found in B, and 38 cursives (I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2), and the Compl. Ed.—To advert to matters of far more moment than Critical discussion. On comparing the parallel portions of the other six Epistles with v. 7 here, we find twelve promises contained, which, as Wesley observes, are 'an extract of all the promises of God.' On this he (after Bengel) makes the following judicious remarks: 'Some of them are not expressly mentioned again in this Book,—as the inscription of the name of the new Jerusalem, the sitting upon the throne. Some resemble what is afterwards mentioned,—as the hidden manna (xix. 12), the ruling the nations (xix. 15), the morning star (xxii. 16). And some are expressly mentioned, as the tree of life (xxii. 2), freedom from the second death (xx. 6), the name in the book of life (xx. 12. xxi. 27), the remaining in the temple of God (vii. 15), the inscription of the name of God and of the Lamb (xiv. 1. xxii. 4). In these promises sometimes the enjoyment o Isa. 41. 4.

 α 44. 6.
 ch. 1. 5, 11,
 17, 18.
 f vv. 2, 13, 19.

g 1 Cor. 2.
 2 Tim. 2. 5.
 α 4. 7, 8.
 James 1. 12.

h Matt. 12. 9.
 ver. 7.
 ch. 20. 14.
 α 21. 5.

8 * Καὶ τῷ ἄγγελῳ τῆς * ἐν Σμύρνῃ ἐκκλησίας γράφει· Τάδε λέγει ὁ πρῶτος καὶ ὁ ἔσχατος, ὃς ἐγένετο νεκρὸς, καὶ ἔζησεν 9 Ὁὐδὲ σου τὰ ἔργα, καὶ τὴν θλίψιν καὶ τὴν πτωχείαν, (ἀλλὰ πλούσιος [δὲ] εἶ,) καὶ τὴν βλασφημίαν ἐκ τῶν λεγόντων Ἰου-δαίους εἶναι ἑαυτοὺς καὶ οὐκ εἶσιν, ἀλλὰ συναγαγὴ τοῦ Σατανᾶ.
 10 Ἐμὴν φοβοῦ ἃ μέλλεις πάσχειν. ἰδοὺ ἃ μέλλει βαλεῖν ἐξ ὑμῶν ὁ Διάβολος εἰς φυλακὴν, ἵνα πειρασθῇτε· καὶ ἔχετε θλίψιν ἡμερῶν δέκα. Γίνου πιστὸς ἄχρι θανάτου, καὶ δώσω σοι τὸν στέφανον τῆς ζωῆς. 11 Ὁ ἔχων οὖς ἀκουσάτω τί τὸ Πνεῦμα λέγει ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις· “Ὁ νικῶν οὐ μὴ ἀδικηθῇ ἐκ τοῦ θανάτου τοῦ δευτέρου.”

of the highest goods, sometimes deliverance from the greatest evils, is mentioned. And each implies the other; so that where either part is expressed, the whole is to be understood. That part is expressed which has most resemblance to the virtues, or works, of him that was spoken to in the letter preceding. To eat of the tree of life,—the first thing promised in these letters, is the last and highest in the accomplishment (xxii. 2, 14, 19). The tree of life and the water of life go together (xxii. 1, 2), both implying the living with God eternally: in the paradise of my God.

8. ἐν Σμύρνῃ] This reading, for the t. rec. Σμυρναίων, has been, on the strongest authority, confirmed by internal evidence, received by all the recent Editors. The case is exactly the same as that of ἐν Ἐφίῳ, supra, v. 1.—ὁ πρῶτος καὶ ὁ ἔσχατος. ‘Periphrasis Messiaei, ex cap. i. 17, 18, huius potissimum loco apta, ubi id agatur, ut solamen adhiberetur Smyrnenisibus, prohibet et castis, sed Judeorum malevolentia et invidia laessitia.’ (Heinr.)

9. τὰ ἔργα, καὶ] ‘Thy work, yea.’ These words, not found in MSS. A, C, with 2 or 3 cursives, and the Vulg. and some later Versions, and Latin Fathers, and all the MSS. except 4 (for I find them in the Lamb. and Mus. copies), have been cancelled by Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch., but without sufficient authority, espec. considering that they are confirmed by the MS. B, and the Presch. Syr. Version; and internal evidence is rather in their favour, from the probability of their having been excluded by those Critics, who thought they overloaded the sentence, not aware that καὶ signifies scilicet, nempe, as in the parallel passages, which see in Dr. Wordsworth’s Harmony. My judgment is confirmed by the suffrage of Wordsw.—ἀλλὰ, adopted by all the best Editors, is founded on the strongest authority, nearly as valid as the preceding. Of course the δὲ, which rests on very little, may be cancelled. Indeed, it seems to have arisen from a correction of reading. The ἐκ, received by the recent Editors, rests on external authority—A, B, C, and 45 cursives (1 add. Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2), confirmed by internal evidence. It is a peculiarly Hellenistic idiom for ἐκ, ‘on the part of.’—To advert to matters of interpretation. By πλούσιος εἶ is meant, ‘art spiritually rich;’ see Matt. vi. 20, and 2 Cor. vi. 10. By τῶν λεγόντων—εἰσιν it is denied that they are Jews in the true and spiritual sense; q. d. they dishonour the name by adopting it; see Rom. ii. 24. By βλασφ., &c., is intimated, that while they yet claimed to be exclusively the people of God, they are really the synagogue, or people of Satan; συνογ. being for λαός, comp. John viii. 39—45.

10. μὴδὲν φοβ. ἃ μ. π.] ‘fear not aught of these things which thou art just about to suffer.’ For μὴδὲν Lachm. adopts μή, from A, B, C, and 2 or 3 cursives, while Scholz and Tisch. retain μὴδὲν, rightly: since external authority is insufficient, and internal evidence adverse, μή being evidently an emendation of Critics. For πάσχειν, the MS. B, and about half the cursives (with the Lamb. and Mus. copies), have πείσσειν, evidently from alteration, and that for the sake of adaptation to βαλεῖν; though MSS. A, B, and not a few cursives, have βάλλειν, edited by Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch. (ed. 1), who, however, in his second has restored βαλεῖν. No great occasion was there to change either way; for which of the two is the true reading it is difficult to say; and the point may be considered an open question. Yet internal evidence is rather in favour of βαλεῖν, and variation of construction is one of the characteristics of this book. After ἰδοὺ Lachm., Tisch., and Wordsw. subjoin ἃ, from MS. B, and 26 cursives (1 add. Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2); perhaps rightly, since the Particle has considerable force (viz. that of now), pre-announcing, as Wordsw. remarks, ‘immediate persecution.’—γίνου πιστὸς ἐς ζωὴν. See supra. v. 7, comp. with Matt. x. 22, also 2 Redr. vii. 57, sq. Joa. Ant. iv. 8, 2.—ὁ Διάβολος,—namely, by his instruments, the devilish Jewish persecutors; see John viii. 44.—ἵνα πειρασθῇτε, ‘that ye may be put to the proof, and purified [in the furnace of affliction].’—For ἡμερῶν, B, and 27 cursives (1 add. Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2), have ἡμέρας; but internal evidence is in favour of ἡμερῶν. Some take these days for years (as usual in prophecy); others, to denote a very short space (as Gen. xxiv. 55. Numb. xi. 19. 1 Sam. xxv. 38); which might be justified by history; see Daubuz and Newton.—τὸν στέφανον v. 7. See 1 Cor. ix. 25. James i. 12. 1 Pet. v. 4, and notes.

11. οὐ μὴ ἀδικηθῇ ἐκ, &c.] ‘shall by no means be hurt by the second death;’ in other words, ‘he may be hurt even unto death by the malice of the Jews; but he shall not be hurt as regards the second death, even the death, i. e. perdition, of the soul; compare Matt. x. 28. That the gehenna, implied in the loss of the soul, is here meant, is plain from xx. 14. xxi. 8, where the second death is said to be the lake of fire.

12 <sup>1</sup> Καὶ τῷ ἀγγέλῳ τῆς ἐν Περγὰμῳ ἐκκλησίας γράψον Τάδε <sup>1</sup> λέγει ὁ ἔχων τὴν ῥομφαίαν τὴν δίστομον τὴν ὀξείαν <sup>13</sup> Οἶδα τὰ ἔργα σου, καὶ πού κατοικεῖς· ὅπου ὁ θρόνος τοῦ Σατανᾶ· καὶ κρατεῖς τὸ ὄνομά μου, καὶ οὐκ ἠρνήσω τὴν πίστιν μου, [καὶ] ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις [ἐν] αἷς Ἀντίπας ὁ μάρτυς μου ὁ πιστός, ὃς ἀπεκτάνθη παρ' ὑμῖν, ὅπου ὁ Σατανᾶς * κατοικεῖ. <sup>14</sup> Ἀλλὰ ἔχω <sup>15</sup> κατὰ σου ὀλίγα, ὅτι ἔχεις ἐκεῖ κρατοῦντας τὴν διδαχὴν Βαλαὰμ, ὃς † ἐδίδασκεν τὸν Βαλὰκ βαλεῖν σκάνδαλον ἐνώπιον τῶν υἱῶν Ἰσραὴλ, φαγεῖν εἰδωλόθυτα καὶ πορνεῦσαι. <sup>16</sup> οὕτως ἔχεις καὶ σὺ κρατοῦντας τὴν διδαχὴν [τῶν] Νικολαϊτῶν * ὁμοίως.

12. τὴν ῥομφαίαν—ὀξείαν] i. e. τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ, ver. 16, and i. 16. Heb. iv. 12. Heinr., however, thinks there is reference to the immedi- cable culpas inflicted by the false teachers, and which required that the diseased flesh should be cut out with a knife or lancet.

13. τὰ ἔργα σου, καὶ] These words are absent from MSS. A, C, and one or two cursives, the Vulg., and some Versions, and are cancelled by Lachm. and Tisch., but retained by Griesb., Scholz, and Wordsw.; very properly; since the authority is quite insufficient to justify cancelling words, of which the omission, by accident, is more probable than the insertion for no particular reason. I suspect that the omission took place in copying from ancient originals that had εἶδα σου τὰ ἔργα, καὶ σου.—Ὅπου ὁ θρόνος τ. Σ., 'where the seat of Satan is;' so called from the city being, as we learn from Arethas, more given to idolatry (and consequently vice) than any other place in Asia Minor.—κρατεῖς τὸ ὄνομά μου, 'thou adherest firmly to me and my religion.'—καὶ οὐκ ἠρνήσω. 'And didst not deny thy faith in me, the faith thou hadst professed in me.' The expression occurs also in 1 Tim. v. 8, where see note. The καὶ before ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις is cancelled by Tisch., from MS. B, and nearly the whole of the cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3); but it is retained by Lachm.; very properly; since internal evidence is in its favour. The sense (unperceived by the Revisers who removed the καὶ) is even.—ἐν before αἷς has been cancelled by Matth. and Tisch., from above half of the MSS.; but retained by Griesb., Scholz, and Wordsw.: perhaps rightly; for it seems to have been removed for the purpose of doing away with a tautology. This view is confirmed by the circumstance that in MSS. A and C both ἐν and αἷς are left out; a reading this inconsiderately adopted by Lachm. At ἐν αἷς Ἀντ. supply ἦν, which, or something equivalent, the writer prob. intended to have expressed at the end of the sentence; but, from the length of the suspended clauses, omitted to do it.—μάρτυς μου ὁ πιστός. Render: 'my faithful witness'; a phrase oft. occurring in Scripture; see Pa. lxxxix. 87. Prov. xiv. 5. Jer. xlii. 8, and supra i. 5. iii. 14. Antipas is supposed to have suffered martyrdom in the recent persecution under Diocletian. The δε is cancelled by Tisch. in his second edition, whose second thoughts were here the less wise, since external authority for cancelling it is next to nothing,—only that of two cursives MSS. and the Æth. Version; and internal evidence is adverse, since the δε might either be absorbed in the εἰ just before, or have been put out by the Revisers for the purpose of doing away with the anacoluthon; but most uncritically. How the anacoluthon arose, I have already pointed out. The reading ἔπου ὁ Σατ. κατοικεῖ, for the t. rec. ἔπου κατ. ὁ Σατ., is adopted, on competent authority, by all the Editors from Matth. and Griesb. down to Tisch.

14. Fort. rec. ἀλλ' Lachm., Tisch., and Wordsw. edit ἀλλὰ, from B, and, adds Tisch., doubtless other MSS. (I can myself adduce Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3).—κρατοῦντας, 'persons holding,' 'some who hold, or maintain;' see Jude 10.—τὴν δὲ Βαλ., i. e. such doctrines as, like Balaam's suggestion to Balak, breed iniquity among the people of God, by turning the grace of God into lasciviousness, which is in 2 Pet. ii. 10—15, and Jude 4, called 'the way, or sinful course, of Balaam.' The next words advert to the points of similitude. Together with the passages of Numb. xxv. 2, and xxx. 16, which bear on Balaam's case; comp. Isa. Anti. iv. 6, 9. The δε is cancelled by Tisch., on the authority of only MS. B, quite insufficient, even were internal evidence decidedly in favour (which is not the case) of the word being cancelled. Wordsw. edits εἰδέτε, from MS. B, and 33 cursives (I add Lamb. 1186, Mus. 1, 2, 3, and Cov. 2). However, I still retain, with Lachm. and Tisch., the t. rec., since internal evidence is in its favour. After Ἰσραὴλ Tisch. introduces καὶ, from B, and 20 cursives (I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3), but without sufficient reason, since the weight of authority is adverse; as also is internal evidence, from the καὶ having every appearance of being a mere attempt to supply what seems wanting, but one far from happy, since the true ellipse would rather be ἔστι, equiv. to αἷς τὸ. However, there is no real ellipse, but only a use of the Infinitive to denote purposes: an idiom found both in the Scriptural writers (as the Sept.) and the Olass. writers (see Wiesner's Gr. Gr. N. T., p. 297, and Matth. Gr. Gr. § 531), and of frequent occurrence in Thucyd., ex. gr. i. 17. iii. 6 & 38. iv. 84. v. 111. vii. 4.

16 <sup>k</sup> Μετανόησον ὅν εἰ δὲ μὴ, ἔρχομαί σοι ταχὺ, καὶ πολεμήσω μετ' αὐτῶν ἐν τῇ ῥομφαίᾳ τοῦ στόματός μου. 17 <sup>l</sup> Ὁ ἔχων οὗς ἀκουσάτω τί τὸ Πνεῦμα λέγει ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις "Τῷ νικῶντι δώσω αὐτῷ [φαγεῖν ἀπὸ] τοῦ μάννα τοῦ κεκρυμμένου, καὶ δώσω αὐτῷ ψῆφον λευκὴν, καὶ ἐπὶ τὴν ψῆφον ὄνομα καινὸν γεγραμμένον, ὃ οὐδεὶς * ὀιδεν εἰ μὴ ὁ λαμβάνων."

m ch. i. 14.
15.

n 1 Kings 16. 31.

2 Kings 2. 7.
Acts 13. 26.
1 Cor. 10. 19, 20.

18 <sup>m</sup> Καὶ τῷ ἀγγέλῳ τῆς ἐν Θυατείροις ἐκκλησίας γράψον Τάδε λέγει ὁ Τίος τοῦ Θεοῦ, ὁ ἔχων τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς αὐτοῦ ὡς φλόγα πυρὸς, καὶ οἱ πόδες αὐτοῦ ὅμοιοι χαλκολιβάνῳ. 19 Οἶδά σου τὰ ἔργα, καὶ τὴν ἀγίπνην καὶ τὴν διακονίαν, καὶ τὴν πίστιν καὶ τὴν ὑπομονήν σου καὶ τὰ ἔργα σου [καὶ] τὰ ἔσχατα πλείονα τῶν πρώτων. 20 <sup>n</sup> Ἀλλ' ἔχω κατὰ σοῦ [ὀλέγα], ὅτι * ἀφείς

15. The τῶν before Νικ. is on strong grounds cancelled by all the recent Editors; yet internal evidence is in its favour.—The reading ὁμοίως, for t. rec. ὁμοίω, has been received by all the Critical Editors; and with reason, since internal evidence comes in aid of external authority of the strongest kind, to which I add the suffrage of Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3.

16. The οὖν is from A, B, C, and 36 cursives (I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3) inserted by all the recent Editors.—αὐτῶν, meaning those who hold the doctrine of Balaam. The metaphor of ῥομφαίᾳ τοῦ στόμ. seems suggested by Isa. xlix. 2.

17. τῷ νικῶντι] i. e. quantum in se; see note sup. v. 7. What follows, on giving him of the hidden manna and the white stone, may be regarded as a periphrasis of the simple idea of making him partaker of God's kingdom in heaven. The words φαγεῖν ἀπὸ have been, on the strongest grounds, external and internal, removed by all the recent Editors.—τοῦ μάννα τ. κεκρ., i. e. 'of the bread of life' in its spiritual sense, as indicated by our Lord at John vi. 32, seqq., of which the manna, hidden and laid up in the tabernacle, free from corruption, was a type; intimating the benefits derived to the faithful followers of Christ by the offering of his body.—forgiveness of sins, and life everlasting. (Woodh.) The manna of the Tabernacle was so far hidden, that, as Schoettgen shows, it was never seen but by the High Priest. So the spiritual manna may be said to be hidden, as being laid up for use in the heart of the true Christian. Comp. 1 Pet. iii. 4, ὁ κρυπτός τῆς καρδίας ἀνθρώπου.—Ψῆφον λευκὴν, so called, according to some, as a token of acquittal; in allusion to the white and black stones used at elections or trials; the former to denote acquittal or approbation; the latter, condemnation or rejection. According to others, λευκ. alludes to the white stone given as a warrant for receiving the prize at the Grecian Games; see Lowman and Dodd. I rather coincide in the opinion of Dr. Ward (Dissertation on passages of Scripture), Heine, and Prof. Lee, that there is an allusion to the well-known testera hospitalitatis usual in ancient times,—a sort of carte blanche, entitling the person who showed it to ask for and receive what he might want.—ὄνομα καινόν, said with reference to the Oriental custom of giving new names to persons advanced to great dignity; prob. adopted from the favoured servants of God, as Abram and Jacob, having often new names bestowed on them, when placed in new circumstances. Thus is here designated high spiritual favour, the reward laid up in heaven for the righteous.—ὃ οὐδεὶς ὀιδεν—λαμβ., meaning, as Abp. Newc. explains, 'at the time when it is given, secret and mysterious to all men but to him who receives it.' Very strong external authority exists for ὀιδεν, introduced by the same Editors in the place of ἔγνω; but internal evidence is rather in favour of the latter reading, which may have been used in the same sense, scilicet, as at John vii. 29, where see note.

18. ὁ ἔχων τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς—πύρε] See note at i. 14, and comp. Eurip. Hec. 1255, πύρε' ἔχουσα δῆργματα, where the Scholiast explains by πυρῶνδεις ὀφθαλμοὺς ἔχουσα.

19. καὶ τὰ ἔσχατα πλείονα τῶν πρώτων] The reverse of what is said at 2 Pet. ii. 20. The καὶ, which I have placed within double brackets, has been cancelled by Scholz, Lach., and Tia.; and with reason. We may suppose it to have been brought in, either through carelessness of scribes, or by Critics ignorant of the construction, in which there is a brevity of expression, for καὶ ὅτι τὰ ἔσχατα πλείονα [εἰσι] τῶν πρώτων.

20. The alterations of the t. rec. adopted in this verse and the next are all based on the strongest authority, and have accordingly been adopted by all the best Editors.—ὀλέγα has been rightly removed by all the recent Editors, as being absent from almost every MS. There is good reason to think it was introduced from the parallel passage, sup. v. 14. 'Ἀφείς, for ἄς, a manifest gloss, has been with reason adopted by all the recent Editors, on the authority of almost all the MSS. However, I am inclined to read ἀφείς, for reasons which will appear from note on xi. 9. In the remainder of the verse, my text coincides with that of Tisch. The σου after γυναικα, which I have now not scrupled to admit, is very strongly supported by external authority (including the Lamb. and Mus. copies); and internal evidence is rather in its favour. By Jezebel some female heresiarch is supposed to be meant. The tradition of the ancients (preserved τὴν γυναῖκα σου Ἰεζαβὲλ, * ἢ † λέγουσα ἑαυτὴν προφῆτην, * καὶ διδάσκει καὶ πλανᾷ τοὺς ἐμὸν δούλους πορνεύσαι καὶ * φαγεῖν εἰδωλόθυτα. <sup>21</sup> Καὶ ἔδωκα αὐτῇ χρόνον ἵνα μετανοήσῃ [ἐκ τῆς πορνείας αὐτῆς]. καὶ οὐ * θέλω μετανοῆσαι ἐκ τῆς πορνείας αὐτῆς.

<sup>22</sup> Ἰδοὺ, [ἐγὼ] βάλλω αὐτὴν εἰς κλίνην, καὶ τοὺς μοιχεύοντας μετ' αὐτῆς εἰς θλίψιν μεγάλην, ἐὰν μὴ μετανοήσωσιν ἐκ τῶν ἔργων * αὐτῆς. <sup>23</sup> * καὶ τὰ τέκνα αὐτῆς ἀποκτενῶ ἐν θανάτῳ καὶ γινώσκονται πᾶσαι αἱ ἐκκλησίαι, ὅτι ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ ἔρουνων νεφροὺς καὶ καρδίας καὶ δώσω ὑμῖν ἐκάστην κατὰ τὰ ἔργα ὑμῶν. <sup>24</sup> Ὅτι μὲν δὲ λέγω [καί] τοῖς λοιποῖς τοῖς ἐν Θυατείροις, ὅσοι οὐκ ἔχουσι τὴν διδαχὴν ταύτην, [καί] οἵτινες οὐκ ἔγνωσαν τὰ βαθέα

o 1 Sam. 16.
7.
Chron. 22.
2. & 20. 17.
Pa. 7. 10.
22. 19.
22. 19.
Jer. 11. 20.
2. 17. 10.
Mark. 16. 27.
John 2. 24.
25.
Acts 1. 24.
Rom. 2. 6.
2. 14. 12.
2 Cor. 6. 10.
Gal. 6. 5.
ch. 20. 12.

in the Commentaries of Arethas and Andreas) that this person was the wife of the angel, or minister, of the Church at Thyatira, is not lightly to be set aside. Could we know the circumstances of the case, all reason to stumble at what carries the appearance of something strange, would prob. cease. The ἢ λέγουσα for Vulg. τὴν λέγουσαν καὶ διδάσκει καὶ πλανᾷ, for Vulg. διδάσκειν καὶ πλανᾷσθαι, is adopted on strong authority by almost every recent Editor. Wordsw., indeed, edits ἢ λέγει, from MS. B, and 38 cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3), and I should be willing to adopt it, were not internal evidence adverse, inasmuch as the reading prob. sprang from Grammatical correction. φαγεῖν εἰδωλόθυτα, for εἰδ. φαγ., is adopted from almost all the best MSS. by the recent Editors, whom I now follow.

21, 22. In these verses fornication and adultery are interchanged; both denoting 'the spiritual fornication, or adultery, of apostasy from the truth by heresy.' It is true, that in the former verse the words ἐκ τῆς πορνείας αὐτῆς (first time) are cancelled by the recent Editors, on strong external authority, confirmed by the Lamb. and Mus. copies. Yet internal evidence is rather in their favour, since they may have been cancelled for the purpose of removing a tautology. The reading οὐ θέλω μετανοῆσαι ἐκ τῆς πορνείας αὐτῆς, for the t. rec. οὐ μετανοῆσαι, has been with reason received by all the recent Editors, as found in almost all the ancient MSS., including Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2. The reading supplies, as Wordsw. observes, a strong text for the freedom of the human will, against necessitarian doctrines. The ἐγὼ before βάλλω is absent from almost all the MSS., and is rightly cancelled by the recent Editors. The 'casting upon a bed' denotes (2 Sam. xiii. 5) afflicting with severe sickness, or pains and afflictions similar thereto. The sense of τῶν ἔργων αὐτῆς, is 'of the evil deeds committed by and with her.'—βάλλω εἰς κλίνην. Comp. Plut. de Sanit. Tuend. c. 14, φυλάττεισθαι ὅπως οὐ περιπαισῶνται τοῖς αὐτοῖς, οὐδ' αὐτοὺς τὴν κλίνην (I conj. τῇ κλίνῃ) καταπαύων ὀνείρας, πῶς τὴν πολυτίμητον ὑγίαν. This passage will serve to show that the present is not what Heinr. supposes it, a Syriac idiom.—τοὺς μοιχ. μετ' αὐτῆς, i. e. those who hold her heretical doctrines. Αὐτῆς, for t. rec. αὐτῶν, has been with reason adopted by all the recent Editors, on the strongest external authority, confirmed by internal evidence.

<sup>23</sup> ἀποκτενῶ ἐν θανάτῳ. 'I will kill by death.' This is not a pleonasm, but rather an intensive expression, formed on Hebraism, and well explained by Winer. Gr. § 45, Obs. 3, on the principle of the Hebrew Inf. Absolute. Here, however, by θαν. may be meant 'a violent death,' as that by pestilence, according to the use of the word ch. vi. 8. Ezek. xiv. 29. Jer. xiv. 2.—ὁ ἔρουνων νεφροὺς καὶ καρδίας, a title appropriate to Deity, formed on Pa. vii. 9, ἔτρεψεν καρδίαν καὶ νεφροὺς ὁ Θεός: Prov. xx. 27, δε ἔρουνε ταμιεῖα κοιλίας: Pa. xiv. 2, δοκίμασον τοὺς νεφροὺς καὶ τὴν καρδίαν μου. With the last clause, δώσω ὑμῖν—ἔργα ὑμῶν, comp. Eccles. xxxv. 19, ἔσται ἀνταποδῶν ἀνθρώπῳ κατὰ τὰς πράξεις αὐτοῦ.

<sup>24</sup>. [καί] λοιποῖς. So I intended to edit; but I have now not simply removed the καί, but substituted in its place τοῖς, with Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch., from A, B, C, and 37 cursives (I add Lamb. 1186, Mus. 1, 2, 3), and several Versions. By τοῖς λοιποῖς are meant the [great] number which remained, when separated from the bad. The full sense may be thus expressed: 'But to you I [now] speak, the rest [of the flock] in Thyatira.'—ὅς. οὐκ ἔχουσι. Strict propriety would require ἔχοντες καὶ γινώσκοντες: but this is one of the many slips in Grecism found in this Book. The second καί has been cancelled by Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch., on the strong external authority of A, B, C, and 42 cursives (I add Lamb. 1186, Mus. 1, 2, 3), with Andr., Areth., and Primas.—τὴν διδ. τ., this doctrine, namely, on the lawfulness of eating idol meats and of adultery. At οἵτινες—ἔσται. there is a repetition of the sentiment, with a substitution for διδ. of a phrase expressing the nature of the doctrines in question, and formed (as appears from the εἰς λέγουσι) on a favourite phrase of the professors of them. They, it seems, called their doctrines τὰ βάθη τοῦ Θεοῦ (a phrase perhaps borrowed from St. Paul, 1 Cor. ii. 10), 'the deep mysteries of God'; whereas such mysteries of iniquity were rather the deep mysteries of Satan.—I have, with Grieb., Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch., adopted βαθύς, from A, B, C, and 41 cursives (I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3), confirmed by internal evidence. For t. rec. βαθύ I have, with Matth., Grieb., Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch., edited βάλλω, from A, C, and 37 cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1186, p ch. 3. 11.

9 Pa. 2. 8.
Matt. 10. 23.
Luke 22. 20.
1 Cor. 6. 3.
ch. 3. 21.
7 Pa. 2. 5, 9.
& 49. 15.

9 vv. 7, 11.
17.

a ch. 1. 4.
16, 30. & 2. 1.
& 4. 5. & 5. 6.

b ver. 10.
Matt. 24. 49.
45.
Luke 12. 39.
40.
1 Thess. 5. 2.
3 Pet. 3. 10.
ch. 16. 14.

τοῦ Σατανᾶ, ὡς λέγουσιν, Οὐ *βάλλω ἐφ' ὑμᾶς ἄλλο βάρος 25 ἢ πλὴν ὃ ἔχετε, κρατήσατε ἄχρις οὗ ἂν ἤξω. 26 Ἄ καὶ ὁ νικῶν καὶ ὁ τηρῶν ἄχρι τέλους τὰ ἔργα μου, δώσω αὐτῷ ἐξουσίαν ἐπὶ τῶν ἐθνῶν.—27 καὶ ποιμανεῖ αὐτοὺς ἐν ῥάβδῳ σιδηρᾷ, ὡς τὰ σκευὴ τὰ κεραμικὰ † συντριβεται, ὡς καὶ γὰρ εἶληφα παρὰ τοῦ Πατρός μου 28 καὶ δώσω αὐτῷ τὸν ἀστέρα τὸν πρωΐνον. 29 Ὁ ἔχων οὖς ἀκουσάτω τί τὸ Πνεῦμα λέγει ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις.

III. 1 Ἄ καὶ τῷ ἀγγέλῳ τῆς ἐν Σάρδεσιν ἐκκλησίας γράψον Τάδε λέγει ὁ ἔχων τὰ ἑπτὰ πνεύματα τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ τοὺς ἑπτὰ ἀστέρας· Οἶδά σου τὰ ἔργα, ὅτι [τὸ] ὄνομα ἔχεις ὅτι ζῆς, καὶ νεκρὸς εἶ. 2 Γίνου ἡρηγορῶν, καὶ † στήριξον τὰ λοιπὰ, ἃ † ἐμελ-λον † ἀποθανεῖν. οὐ γὰρ εὐρήκᾳ σου τὰ ἔργα πεπληρωμένα ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ μου. 3 Ὁ Μνημόνευε οὖν πῶς εἶληφας καὶ and Mus. 1, 2, 3): yet internal evidence is rather in favour of βαλῶ, which has the support of the Pesch. Syr. and Vulg. Versions, and may be the true reading.

26—28. To perseverance in the faith of Christ, and in the works arising thence, is promised 'power over the nations'; meaning, over the yet unconverted Gentiles; see Matt. xix. 28, compared with Dan. vii. 22, 27. And this, in the verse following, is explained to be the same power which the Saviour himself had received over them, and which is expressed in words nearly resembling those prophetic of Christ, in the second Psalm. (Woodhouse.)

26, 27. ὁ νικῶν καὶ ὁ τηρῶν, &c.] by an anacoluthon frequent in Scrip., and sometimes in the Class. writers, meaning, according to some, that 'he who overcometh the world shall participate in the blessings of that spiritual kingdom of Christ, which shall ultimately prevail over the idolatry and wickedness of the heathen nations.' Others, however, understand ἐξουσίαν of 'a temporal dominion' over the unconverted nations, when Christ shall reign on earth. But it would rather seem only to denote 'advantage over the heathen,' by being admitted into heaven,—while they figuratively are spoken of as broken in pieces like a potter's vessel, by being consigned to utter destruction. By ὁ τηρῶν τὰ ἔργα μου is meant, 'he who keepeth or observeth the works which I require.' For τὰ σκευὴ τὰ κεραμικὰ, ver. 27, the Sept. has σκαῖος κεραμῖος. But the New Test. reading is defended by Plut. viii. 327, 1, Reiske, where we have κεραμικοὶ τροχοί. The quotation is as near the Sept. of Ps. ii. 9, as the application of the passage will permit. It is, however, not so much a quotation from Ps. ii. 9, as an application of the general substance of the passage to the present purpose.—For συντριβεται, Lachm., Tisch., and Wordsw., edit συντριβήσεται, from MS. B, and 38 cursives (I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2), confirmed by most of the Versions: while Scholz retains συντριβεται, with reason, since the reading is uncertain.

28. τὸν ἀστέρα τὸν πρωΐνον] Perhaps said symbolically, as also infr. xxii. 16, of our Lord Jesus Christ, as 'the morning-star' ushering in the Gospel day of knowledge, grace, and glory. It is, however, the general opinion of the more learned Commentators, that the sense is, 'I will give him glories of which that star is an emblem' (Dan. xii. 3); i.e. (in the words of Scott) the ineffable glory with which he will invest his victorious disciples, in the presence and enjoyment of him their Lord and Saviour, and in conformity to his glory.

III. 1. ὁ ἔχων τὰ ἑπτὰ πν. τ. Θ.] meaning either, 'whose commands the Seven Spirits obey'; or, 'who giveth the Holy Spirit,' from whom all spiritual life and strength proceeds; the interpretation here depending upon that at i. 4; see also i. 16, 20.—ὄνομα ἔχεις ὅτι, &c. ὄνομα here, as often in the Class. writers, would seem used in opposition to ἔργον, to denote semblance as opposed to reality. See my Lex. in v. The τὸ, however, is cancelled by all the recent Editors; yet internal evidence is in favour of the word, and the use of the Article would here be very suitable, considering that ὄνομα here denotes, not name, i.e. 'appellation,' but attribute, 'what is ascribed to a person or thing as a quality.'—καὶ νεκρὸς εἶ. Render: 'and yet dead thou art, spiritually dead [in trespasses and sins], devoid of Divine grace.'

2. τὰ λοιπὰ i.e. 'the remaining principles [of piety and holiness].' Ἐμελλον: so Griesb., Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch., for t. rec. μέλλει, which, though the reading be doubtful,—ἐμελλας being found in B and 20 cursives (also Lamb. 1186) and edited by Matth.,—is at least greatly preferable to the t. rec. μέλλει, which is almost devoid of authority, and has internal evidence quite against it.—For στήριξον all the recent Editors read στήρισον, from MSS. A, C, and 12 cursives (I add Lamb. 1186, 1 m.); but internal evidence is in favour of στήριξον.—Πεπληρ. is for τελεῖται, meaning, 'completely answering' to what God requires. See Col. iv. 12, and note.

3. In πῶς (for ποῖα) εἰληφας καὶ ἡκουσας the former term refers to doctrines, the latter to precepts. On reconsideration of the point, I am still of opinion that πῶς is used for ποῖα; which view is supported by the Arab. Version, and by Areth., for he must have so taken the πῶς, since ἤκουσας, καὶ τήρει καὶ μετανόησον. Ἐὰν οὖν μὴ γρηγορήσῃς, ἤξω ἐπὶ σέ ὡς κλέπτης, καὶ οὐ μὴ γνῶς, ποίαν ὥραν ἤξω ἐπὶ σέ.

4 Ἐὰν ἔχῃς ὀλίγα ὀνόματα [καὶ] ἐν Σάρδεσιν ἃ οὐκ ἐμόλυναν τὰ ἱμάτια αὐτῶν, καὶ περιπατήσουσι μετ' ἐμοῦ ἐν λευκοῖς, ὅτι ἄξιοι εἰσιν. 5 Ὁ νικῶν, οὗτος περιβαλεῖται ἐν ἱματίοις λευκοῖς· καὶ οὐ μὴ ἐξαλείψω τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ ἐκ τῆς βίβλου τῆς ζωῆς· καὶ ὁμολογήσω τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ ἐνώπιον τοῦ Πατρὸς μου καὶ ἐνώπιον τῶν ἀγγέλων αὐτοῦ. 6 Ὁ ἔχων οὖς ἀκουσάτω τί τὸ Πνεῦμα λέγει ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις.

7 Καὶ τῷ ἀγγέλῳ τῆς ἐν Φιλαδελφείᾳ ἐκκλησίας γράψον· Τάδε λέγει ὁ Ἅγιος ὁ ἀληθινός· ὁ ἔχων τὴν *κλεῖν τοῦ Δαυτὶδ, ὁ ἀνοίγων καὶ οὐδεὶς †κλείει, καὶ κλείει καὶ he explains it by τὴν παράδοσιν ἣν ἐκ τῶν ἀποστόλων εἰληφας, having doubtless in mind 2 Thesa. iii. 6, κατὰ τὴν παράδοσιν ἣν παρέλαβον παρ' ἡμῶν. The above view of the Particle is placed beyond doubt by Mark iv. 24, βλῖπτει, τὴ ἀκούετε, as comp. with the parallel passage of Luke viii. 18, βλῖπτει πᾶς ἀκούετε: so that, in fact, πᾶς stands for ὅστις, = αὐτῶν. And ὅσοια ἅττα (for ἅτινα) occurs in the purest Greek writers. Τήρει may be rendered, 'keep such fast hold of as to preserve.'—Ἐξω ὡς κλέπτης: a comparison used by our Lord, and from him by the Apostles Paul, Peter, and John.

4. The ἄλλ' before ἔχεις has been on strong grounds (I add Lamb. 1186, Mus. 1, 2) adopted by all the Editors, from Griesbach downwards. The καὶ before ἐν is with good reason cancelled by all the recent Editors. Ὅνoma, 'persons,' and thus the Neut. is put for the Masc.—ol. found, indeed, in 6 cursive MSS., but so evidently arising from a marginal scholium, that one cannot but wonder at the utter failure of judgment in Tisch., who has, alone of the Editors, brought it into the text.—ἐμόλυναν τὰ ἱμάτια α. Alluding to the defilement of sin, proceeding from evil communications. Τὰ ἱμάτια is added for adaptation to the following image, designating high honour and happiness. The expression ἐν λευκοῖς (scil. ἱματίοις) is very rare, but an ex. of it is found in Artemid. Onir. ii. 3, and Arrian, Epict. iii. 22, περιτ. ἐν κοκκίνοις. At ἄξιοι εἰσιν supply, from the context, μετ' ἐμοῦ περιπατήν. Comp. Luke vii. 4, ἀξίος ἐστὶ τὸ περιεῖν τοῦτο. The force of the term ἀξίος as here used is not to be pressed on with reference to any theological system. The term may be supposed to have merely a familiar acceptance, q. d. 'worthy of walking with Jesus, in so far as they had not defiled their clothing by mixing with the workers of iniquity.'

5. Ὁ νικῶν—περιβ.] This is ποί, as Heinr. supposes, a mere repetition of what was said at v. 4, but an enforcement of the announcement there, and is meant to intimate how it would come to pass that they had not defiled their clothes,—namely, because they were οἱ νικῶντες, q. d. 'He that conquereth, that person (alone) shall be clothed in white,' &c. The οὗτος, adopted by Lachm. from A, C, and 17 cursives, with the Syr., Vulg., and other Versions, arose from error of scribes, who perpetually confound οὗτος and οὕτως.—Οὐ μὴ ἐξαλείψω—ζωῆς. The metaphor here is prob. the same as in Phil. iv. 3, where see note; though it is by most Expositors thought to contain an allusion to a custom, not of civil life, but of military, by which the names of those on the muster-roll, who were cashiered for misconduct, were expunged therefrom. Comp. Xen. Hist. ii. 3, 51, Θνηρ. ἐξαλείφω ἐκ τοῦ καταλόγου, also Aristoph. Pac. 1181, τοῖς μὲν ἐγγράφοντας, τοὺς δ' ἀλείφοντας, and Plato, p. 501, καὶ τὸ μὲν ἐν ἐξαλείφειν, τὸ δὲ πάλιν ἐγγράφειν. See my note on Thucyd. iii. 57, 2. Comp. Exod. xxii. 31. Pa. ix. 28, and Dan. xii. 1—4, which passages were prob. in St. John's mind; but the metaphor in them is not military, but civil, taken from keeping accounts in books, or making out lists of citizens' names, which, however, were liable to be struck out for misconduct. Of the former metaphor an ex. occurs in Eurip. Peleiad. Frag. 4, δὲ γ' (scil. τὸν δόλον) ἐξαλείφει ῥῶον, ἢ γράφει Θεός, where the marked antithesis leads me to suspect, that for γράφει Eurip. wrote γγράφει.—For t. rec. ἐξομολογήσονται, I now read, with Griesb., Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch., ὁμολογήσονται, from A, B, C, and 37 cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1186 and Mus. 1, 2, 3), confirmed by And. and Areth.

7. For Φ—ίq, A, B, C, and I suspect, not a few cursives (at any rate Lamb. 1186 and Mus. 1, 2, 3) have Φ—ίq, the more ancient, and prob. the true spelling.—ὁ Ἅγιος ὁ ἀληθινός. Render, 'the Holy One the True One,' = 'the Holy and True One'; an epithet belonging appropriately to the DEITY (Exod. xxviii. 36. Isa. vi. 3), but also pertaining to the only-begotten Son, as partaking of the nature of the Father.—ὁ ἔχων τὴν κλεῖν τοῦ Δ., i. e. 'has the power of shutting out, or receiving into the spiritual kingdom,' which, as the Son of David, the Messiah, he established, i. e.; comp. Acts iii. 14. 1 John v. 20. See more in Bengel and Wesley. The words of the v. are closely formed on Isa. xxii. 22, where, however, κλεῖδα is found, as it is in the t. rec. here, though the recent Editors adopt κλεῖν, from the uncial and the greater part of the cursive MSS. (to which I add Lamb. 1186 and Mus. 1, 2, 3.) For the former κλεῖν Lachm., Tisch., and Wordsw. edit κλείσει from all the uncial and 30 cursive MSS. (I add Mus. 3), while Matth., Griesb., and Scholz retain κλείει, which is confirmed by internal evidence. The same is true of ἀνοίγει, which, however, I find in Lamb.

οὐδεὶς † ἀνοίγει. <sup>8</sup> Οἶδά σου τὰ ἔργα,—ιδὺν, δέδωκα ἐνώπιόν σου θύραν ἀνεργμένην, * ἣν οὐδεὶς δύναται κλείσαι αὐτήν,—ὅτι μικρὰν ἔχεις δύναμιν, καὶ ἐτήρησάς μου τὸν λόγον, καὶ οὐκ ἠρνήσας τὸ ὄνομά μου. <sup>9</sup> Ἴδου, δίδωμι ἐκ τῆς συναγωγῆς τοῦ Σατανᾶ τῶν λεγόντων ἑαυτοὺς Ἰουδαίους εἶναι, καὶ οὐκ εἰσιν, ἀλλὰ ψεύδονται· ιδὺν, ποιήσω αὐτοὺς ἵνα † ἤξωσι καὶ † προσκυνήσωσιν ἐνώπιον τῶν ποδῶν σου, καὶ γνῶσιν ὅτι ἐγὼ ἠγάπησά σε. <sup>10</sup> Ὅτι ἐτήρησας τὸν λόγον τῆς ὑπομονῆς μου, κἀγὼ σὲ τηρήσω ἐκ τῆς ὥρας τοῦ πειρασμοῦ τῆς μελλούσης ἔρχεσθαι ἐπὶ τῆς οἰκουμένης ὅλης, πειράσαι τοὺς κατοικοῦντας ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς. <sup>11</sup> Ἴδου, ἔρχομαι ταχύ κρατῶ δ' ἔχεις, ἵνα μηδεὶς λάβῃ τὸν στέφανόν σου. <sup>12</sup> Ὁ νικῶν, ποιήσω αὐτὸν στυλὸν ἐν τῷ ναῷ τοῦ Θεοῦ μου, καὶ ἔξω οὐ μὴ ἐξέλθῃ ἔτι, καὶ γράψω

g Phil. 4. 6.
ch. 1. 2.
h 1. 26.
ch. 12. 7, 12.
h 1 Kings 7.
31.
Gal. 4. 24.
Hob. 12. 22.
ch. 3. 17.
h 31. 2. 10.
h 22. 4.

1186 and Mus. 1, 2, 3; in short, the reading is an open question.

8. δίδωκα—θύραν—ἥν] Here δίδωκα is a Hebr. for τέθεικα, formed on the Hebr. יָצַק for יָצַק. Render, 'I have placed before thee.' Comp. Neh. ix. 35, Sept., ἐν τῇ γῇ—ᾧ (for ἡ) δίδωκα ἐνώπιον αὐτῶν, for Hebr. יָצַק יָצַק. However, both here and there δίδωκα may mean (figur.), 'I have made to be;' correspondent to ποιήσω, just after. By θύραν ἀνεργμένην may be meant 'an opportunity of preaching the Gospel successfully,' as 1 Cor. xvi. 9. 2 Cor. ii. 12. Thus it may mean the door of opportunity, or even of utterance. I have, with Griesb., Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch., adopted ἥν for the t. rec. from A, B, C, and above 40 cursives (I add Lamb. 1186 and Mus. 1, 2, 3), with almost all the Versions, confirmed by internal evidence, in the Hebraistic pleonasm at ἥν—αὐτήν, oft. occurring in the Sept. By ὅτι μικρὰ ἔχεις δύναμιν seems meant, 'that thou hast [only] a little power,' that of a poor mean Church. The ἥν, for καὶ, before οὐδεὶς, I have, on the strongest authority, external and internal, received, with all the recent Editors,—καὶ ἐτήρ. μου τὸν λόγον, 'and [yet] thou hast kept my word,' meaning my doctrine as set forth in the Gospel. Comp. ch. viii. 52, sq., xiv. 23. xvii. 6.

9. δίδωμι ἐκ] Δίδ. is regarded as put for ποιήσω. But there is rather a signif. prag.; and Dr. Burton well paraphrases: 'I will give some of these persons into your power, and cause them to come, &c., viz. 'to come over to Christianity, and thus honour thee.' This is confirmed by what Prof. Lee says, who regards this verse as a remarkable instance of the language used under the old Dispensation being applied even to the New; for the present passage is (he adds) taken from Isa. xlix. 23, or rather ix. 14, which belongs exclusively, from first to last, to the times of the Christian Dispensation. At 'I will give' there is a signif. prag., q. d. 'I who have all power, will,' &c. For ἤξωσι καὶ προσκυνήσωσι Lachm. and Tisch. edit. -ουσιν, from MSS. A, C, and a few cursives (to which I add Mus. 1, 2, 3), while Griesb., Matth., Scholz, and Wordsw. retain, as I have done, -ωσι, though internal evidence is in favour of -ουσιν, which, were there more external authority for it, I would adopt. The δίδω just before for δίδωμι, adopted by Lachm. from A and C, prob. arose from an error of scribes in passing over the termination, as is frequently the case. The ἰγὼ before ἤξωσι, omitted in B and 26 cursives (with Lamb. 1186 and Mus. 1, 2, 3), ought not to have been marked for expurgation by Griesb., since internal evidence is quite in its favour; nothing being more frequent in St. John than the ἰγὼ emphatic; though oft. passed over by scribes, as if without meaning. Render, 'and they shall know that it is I who have loved [and do love] thee.'

10—12. These verses contain a promise of honour and glory in the eternal Temple in heaven to the members of the Church who persevere in the faith, i. 3, ii. 15, 17. Gal. ii. 9.

10. ἐτήρησας τὸν λόγον τ. ὑπομονῆς μου] The full sense is, 'Thou hast observed the precept of patience (i. e. patient continuance in well-doing)' enjoined in my word, the Gospel.—κἀγὼ σὲ τηρ., &c. Render, 'I too will preserve thee from the season of trial that is about to come upon the whole world, to try those who dwell upon the earth.'

11. Ἰδού] This has been cancelled by all the recent Editors, on strong external authority,—(to which I add Lamb. 1186, Mus. 1, 2), and was prob. introduced from v. 20. By τὸν στέφανόν σου is meant, not, as Grot. and Rosenm. explain, 'the honour of perseverance unto the end,' but 'the crown of life,' destined for those who fight the good fight of faith, and conquer,—as is alluded to in the next v. Thus we have here an agnostic allusion to the ancient contests: 'ubi (to use the words of Durham) aliquem initio bene currentem (see Gal. v. 7) alius antevertit et palmam praeipit,' carries off his crown of victory (that which might have been his), before he can put it on.

12. ποιήσω αὐτὸν στυλὸν ἐν τ. ν.] A metaphor denoting high dignity and trust; see Gal. ii. 9, comp. also Isa. xxii. 17—26, prob. in John's mind. In the next words the metaphor is abandoned, and the sense is, that 'he shall not be put out of that house;' implying, as Daubuz remarks, an eternal state to be enjoyed in the New Jerusalem.—ἡ καταβαλίσουσα. So, for t. rec. ᾧ καταβαλίσαι, all the best Editors, on competent authority (to which I add Lamb. 1186 and Mus. 1, 2), escape, since internal evidence favours that reading.—Ὅφ οὐ μὴ ἐξέλθῃ ἔτι the sense is, 'shall no more go forth from the Temple, but be fixed ἐπ' αὐτὸν τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ Θεοῦ μου, καὶ τὸ ὄνομα τῆς πόλεως τοῦ Θεοῦ μου, τῆς καυχῆς Ἱερουσαλὴμ, ἡ * καταβαίνουσα ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ἀπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ μου, καὶ τὸ ὄνομά μου τὸ καινόν. <sup>13</sup> Ὁ ἔχων οὖς ἀκουσάτω τί τὸ Πνεῦμα λέγει ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις.

<sup>14</sup> Καὶ τῷ ἀγγέλῳ τῆς * ἐν Λαοδικείᾳ ἐκκλησίας γράψων <sup>1 Col. 1. 18. 2. 5, 6. 3. 7.</sup> Τάδε λέγει ὁ Ἀμὴν, ὁ μάρτυς ὁ πιστὸς καὶ ἀληθινός, ἡ ἀρχὴ τῆς κτίσεως τοῦ Θεοῦ. <sup>15</sup> Οἶδά σου τὰ ἔργα, ὅτι οὔτε ψυχρὸς εἶ, οὔτε ζεστός· ὀφείλων ψυχρὸς * ἦς ἡ ζεστός! <sup>16</sup> Οὕτως, ὅτι χλιαρὸς εἶ, καὶ οὔτε ψυχρὸς οὔτε ζεστός, μέλλω σε ἐμίσαι ἐκ τοῦ στόματός μου. <sup>17</sup> * Ὅτι λέγεις, ὅτι πλούσιός εἰμι καὶ πε- <sup>1 Cor. 4. 4.</sup> πλοῦντήκα, καὶ οὐδενὸς χρεῖαν ἔχω, καὶ οὐκ οἶδας ὅτι σὺ εἶ ὁ τάλαιπῶρος καὶ ἑλεεινός, καὶ πτωχὸς καὶ τυφλὸς καὶ γυμνός, <sup>18</sup> συμβουλευώ σοι ἀγοράσαι παρ' ἐμοῦ χρυσίον πεπτρωμένον <sup>13 Cor. 3. 2. ch. 7. 13. 2. 16. 18. 3.</sup> ἐκ πυρός, ἵνα πλουτήσῃς καὶ ἱμάτια λευκά, ἵνα περιβάλῃ καὶ μὴ φανερωθῇ ἡ αἰσχύνῃ τῆς γυμνότητός σου καὶ κολλῶριον, there, as one of the two pillars, Jachin and Boaz;—shall still continue a member of my Church, holy and happy in its blessed society continually.

14. ἐν Λαοδικείᾳ ἐκκλ.] So, for t. rec. τῆς ἐκκλ. Λαοδικείων, the best Editors, from almost all the MSS., confirmed by several Versions and Fathers.—ὁ Ἀμὴν, i. e. the Truth itself, as God is called in the Old Test. the God of truth; see also 2 Cor. i. 20, comp. with John viii. 12—19.—ὁ μάρτυς ὁ π., see note at i. 5.—ἡ ἀρχὴ τῆς ατ., see Col. i. 15—18, and comp. John i. 3. On the expression ἀρχὴ τῆς κτίσεως comp. Prov. viii. 22, and see the passages of Theoph., Tatian, and Clem. Alex., cited by Bretschn. in his Lex. in v. ἀρχή.

15. οὔτε ψυχρὸς εἶ οὔτε ζ.] i. e. art lukewarm and indifferent as to religion, neither wholly abandoning, nor fully observing it. So Woodh. observes, that 'by the cold are meant, not persons devoid of all warm feelings and affections, but who, having their passions absorbed by worldly objects, have hitherto been cold to religious affection. However (continues he) of such persons there is some hope that the time may come, when, from experience of the vanity of mere worldly pursuits, they may listen to the suggestions of the Spirit, and turn their affections to their proper objects,—God, and his works and promises.' True,—for, as Dr. Henry More says, 'Coldness, though not better in itself than lukewarmness, might have sooner led the Church of Laodicea to repentance.' Wordsw. says that the reading of B is εἶς, which is confirmed by No. 1632; but that is merely an εἰς for ἦς. Thus εἶς has not the support of any one uncial MS., for A omits ὀφείλων—ζεστός, owing to the recurrence of ζεστός. I adopt ἦς for εἶς, with all the recent Editors, on strong external authority.

16. μέλλω σε ἐμίσαι ἐκ τοῦ στόμ. μου] By the same metaphor it is said at Lev. xviii. 28, 'spued out (ἐξήμιασ, Symm.) the nations that were before you.'

17. πτωχός—τυφλός—γυμνός] These three defects, and also their remedies, are now mentioned.—πεπλούτηκα, 'I am become rich,'

'abundant in means;' formed on Hos. xii. 8, Sept. Comp. 1 Cor. iv. 8, ἥδη ἐπλουτήσατε (where see my note), and Ovid. Metam. v. 193: 'Sum felix—felixque manebo;—uitam me coram facit, &c.—ὁ τάλαιπῶρος, &c. Render, as the force of the Article requires, 'the wretched and pitiable one,' 'the poor, and blind, and naked one.' A metaphor taken from a blind mendicant in wretched case, with only a few rags to cover him.

18. We have here a continuation of the allegory, and that in words similar to those at Matt. vi. 20. Comp. Philo, p. 589, and Isa. lxi. 10.—συμβουλευώ σοι ἀγοράσαι, &c. Comp. Isa. lv. 1, 2. The pronoun ἐμοῖ is strongly emphatic, Christ being alone the dispenser of true riches. Here, then, we have these several things respectively opposed,—to poverty, fine gold; to nakedness, white raiment; to blindness, eye-salve. Thus, to supply their poverty, they are to have recourse to Him, from whom they may receive 'gold tried in the fire' (i. e. gold of the purest sort, and fully assayed; see Prov. viii. 10, 19; meaning Gospel truth); to remedy their nakedness, they are to seek to be clothed in the white garment of CHRIST's righteousness; and to remove their blindness, they are to seek the ointment of Christ, that they may see the true light of the Gospel. For πυρός, Tisch. and Wordsw. adduce, as the reading of MS. B, πύρας, which, I suspect, does not exist, since the Lamb. 1186, and two Mus. copies, which very rarely recede from B, have πυρός.—For κόλλ. ἵνα ἐγχείσῃς, Griesb., Scholz, Lachm., and Tisch. adopt κόλλ. ἐγχείσαι, from A, C, and 6 cursives (I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3), while Matth. reads what I have hitherto edited on weighty authority. On reconsideration, however, I am of opinion that both ἵνα ἐγχεῖ and ἐγχείσων (the t. rec. and the Stephanic) are merely glosses on the reading ἐγχείσαι, found in the above-cited MSS. and in Andr.; though, of the two glossographers, one took ἐγχείσαι as an Imperial. Midd., the other for ἱεῖς. ἁλός, which latter is the more correct view, and called for by the preceding context; the complete sense, after fill-m Job 8. 17. † ἵνα ἐγγρίσῃ τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς σου, ἵνα βλέπῃς. 19 m Ἐγὼ Prov. 8. 11, δσοὺς ἐὰν φιλῶ, ἐλέγξω καὶ παιδεύω. * ἤλγετε οὖν, καὶ 12. Heb. 12. 5, 6. James 1. 12. μετανόησον. 20 n Ἰδοὺ, ἔστηκα ἐπὶ τὴν θύραν καὶ κρούω. ἐάν n Cant. 5. 2. John 14. 21, τις ἀκούσῃ τῆς φωνῆς μου, καὶ ἀνοίξῃ τὴν θύραν, καὶ εἰσελεύ-20. σομαι πρὸς αὐτὸν, καὶ δειπνήσω μετ' αὐτοῦ, καὶ αὐτὸς μετ' ἐμοῦ.

o Matt. 10. 21 o Ὁ νικῶν, δώσω αὐτῷ καθίσαι μετ' ἐμοῦ ἐν τῷ θρόνῳ μου, 22. Luke 22. 30. ὡς καὶ ἐν ἐνίκησά, καὶ ἐκάθισα μετὰ τοῦ Πατρὸς μου ἐν τῷ θρόνῳ 1 Cor. 6. 2. αὐτοῦ. 22 p Ὁ ἔχων οὖς ἀκουσάτω τί τὸ Πνεῦμα λέγει ταῖς 3 Tim. 2. 12. ἐκκλησίαις.
 ch. 2. 26, 27. p ch. 2. 7, 11.
 17. & 2. 6, 12.

a ch. 1. 10.

b Ezek. 1.
 26. & 10. 1.
 ch. 1. 10.

IV. 1<sup>a</sup> Μετὰ ταῦτα εἶδον, καὶ ἰδοὺ θύρα ἀνεφγμένη ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ καὶ ἡ φωνὴ ἡ πρώτη, ἣν ἤκουσα, ὡς σάλπιγγος λαλούσης μετ' ἐμοῦ, * λέγων Ἀνάβα ὧδε, καὶ δεῖξω σοι ἃ δεῖ γενέσθαι μετὰ ταῦτα. 2<sup>b</sup> Καὶ εὐθέως ἐγενόμην ἐν Πνεύματι καὶ ἰδοὺ, ing up the ellipse, being, 'and I (counsel thee) to buy of me eye-salve, for to anoint thine eyes [withal], that thou mayest see again (i.e. recover thy sight).' There is very slender authority, indeed, for the t. rec. ἰγγρῶσον. And though nearly all the MSS., except eight or nine, support ἵνα ἐγγρίσῃ, yet internal evidence is so against it. The use of the Verb ἀγοράσαι in this sense is very peculiar, it being, not 'to procure any thing by a price paid,' but simply 'to obtain it' in any other way that the possessor may please to accept, i.e. by receiving whatever the buyer has to offer, be it ever so little, or even nothing at all. The only other ex. known to me of this use is in Isa. lv. 1 (doubtless in St. John's mind), ὅσοι μὴ ἔχετε ἀργύριον—ἀγοράσατε, where the Hebr. קנה is used, as also at Neh. x. 31, in the sense 'to obtain by taking,' with no reference to price paid, where Thom. Aquin. well explains 'emito' to mean 'ac si emeritis accipias.' Thus the person is invited to make the proffered article his own by simply applying the grace of the Gospel, offered generally, to himself individually. Here βλέπω stands for ἀναβλέπω, the term employed in the above passage of Philo Jud.

19—21. See Heb. xii. 5—12. Luke xii. 37. John iii. 29. vi. 35.

19. δσοὺς—παιδεύω] This passage, like that in Heb. xii. 5, seems written with a view to Prov. iii. 21.—ζήλεις. So, for t. rec. ζήλωσον, Lachm. & Tisch. edit. from all the uncial and above half of the cursive MSS. (I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2), together with Arethas, while Griesb., Scholz, & Wordsw. retain ζήλωσον, notwithstanding that internal evidence is against it.—The form ζηλώω is, indeed, one of very rare occurrence; but it is found in Simpl. on Epict. c. xxvi. p. 212, and sometimes in Chrys. The sense here intended is, 'be zealous, ardent, and active,' as opposed to being lukewarm and sluggish.

20. The καὶ before εἰσελ. is inserted by all the recent Editors, from the Vat. MS. and nearly half of the cursives, to which I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2. However, internal evidence is rather against the word, which is often introduced from the negligence of scribes.

IV. 'After the first terrestrial vision, others, still more amazing, were vouchsafed to the enraptured Apostle, by successive openings in heaven, affording new and more extended prospects of futurity; 1. a door was opened in heaven, which gave him a view of the spiritual Church and worship, Rev. iv. 1; 2. the spiritual sanctuary was opened, xi. 19; 3. again, xv. 5; and 4thly, heaven itself was fully opened, xix. 11. Hence the remainder of the book naturally resolves itself into four celestial visions. The first and grand vision begins at chap. iv. and ends at xi. 18; the second begins at xi. 19, and ends at xiv. 20; the third begins at xv., and ends at xix. 10; and the fourth begins at xix. 11, and ends at xxii. 5.' (Dr. Hales.) This and the next Chapter form an introduction to the prophetic part of the Book. In the present Chapter is represented St. John's Vision of the Heaven opened, with the Almighty seated on an exalted throne surrounded by four-and-twenty Elders and four Living Creatures, who adore him as the Creator and Lord of all.

1. μετὰ ταῦτα εἶδον] The sense is, 'After this I had another vision,' or a continuation of the first. This expression, εἶδον, καὶ ἰδοὺ, which is of freq. occ. in the present Book and the Prophets of the O. T., is intended to intimate that something espec. note-worthy in the way of revelation took place.—θύρα ἀνεφγμ. Render: not 'a door was opened,' but behold 'a door was open,' i.e. stood open, as in Demosth., p. 764, 22. See Ezek. i. 1. Matt. iii. 16. Acts vii. 56, and Dabuz in loc.—ἡ πρώτη. This is justly supposed by Dr. Barton to be an allusion to i. 10; q. d. 'Lo! the heavens were opened, and lo! there was the former voice, which I had heard as of a trumpet speaking to me; and it said,' &c.—ἀλολούσης μετ' ἐμοῦ. Compare i. 10, ὡς σάλπ., λεγούσης, where one MS. has λελούσης introduced from the present passage. The reading λήγων, for t. rec. λήγουσα, has been adopted, on strong external authority, confirmed by internal evidence, by all the Editors from Griesb. to Tisch.

2. καὶ εὐθέως] The καὶ has been cancelled by the recent Editors on strong external authority; but, since internal is equally balanced, the reading is uncertain. The form καὶ εὐθέως often occurs in the N. T., espec. St. Mark's Gospel, and sometimes in St. John's.—ἴγιν. ἐν Πνεύμ.

θρόνος ἔκειτο ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ, καὶ ἐπὶ † τοῦ θρόνου καθήμε-νος<sup>3</sup> καὶ ὁ καθήμενος [ἦν] ὅμοιος ὁράσει λίθῳ ἰάσπιδι καὶ σαρδίῳ καὶ ἱρις κυκλόθεν τοῦ θρόνου * ὅμοιος ὁράσει σμαραγδίνῳ. <sup>4</sup> Καὶ κυκλόθεν τοῦ θρόνου θρόνοι εἴκοσι [καὶ] τέσσαρες καὶ ἐπὶ τοὺς θρόνους [εἶδον] τοὺς εἴκοσι καὶ τέσσαρας πρεσβυτέρους καθημένους, περιβεβλημένους ἐν ἱματίοις λευκοῖς, καὶ [ἔσχον] ἐπὶ τὰς κεφαλὰς αὐτῶν στεφάνους χρυσοῦς. <sup>5</sup> Καὶ <sup>c ch. 1. 4.</sup> ἐκ τοῦ θρόνου ἐκπορεύονται ἀστραπαὶ καὶ βρονταὶ καὶ φωναί· <sup>& 2. 1. & 5. 6.</sup> καὶ ἑπτὰ λαμπάδες πυρὸς καίόμεναι ἐνώπιον τοῦ θρόνου, αἱ εἰσὶ τὰ ἑπτὰ πνεύματα τοῦ Θεοῦ. <sup>6</sup> <sup>d ch. 15. 2.</sup> καὶ ἐνώπιον τοῦ θρόνου θάλασσα ὑαλίνη ὅμοια κρυστάλλῳ· καὶ ἐν μέσῳ τοῦ θρόνου καὶ κύκλῳ τοῦ θρόνου τέσσαρα ζῶα γέμοντα ὀφθαλμῶν ἔμπροσ-

See note supra i. 10.—καθήμενος, scil. ἦν. The Person here spoken of is (as Daubuz remarks), by his attributes, plainly JEHOVAH, God the Father. 'We are not to imagine (says Doddr.) that the Person sitting on the throne [or the Lamb], or the four-and-twenty elders, or the four animals, were real beings, existing in nature; though they represented, in a figurative manner, things that did really exist.' On the thing signified by each symbol, reference is made to the tabernacle and temple service; see Abp. Newc., Dean Woodhouse, and Prof. Lee. The πρεσβ., ver. 4, are supposed by some to denote the ministers of the Christian Church, double the number of the Jewish tribes; by others, the Jewish and Christian Churches, or the twelve Patriarchs, and the twelve Apostles; which seems the more prob. opinion. 'The rest of the Chapter (says Prof. Lee) seems to mark out the majesty of Almighty God, attended by his ministers, who are prepared to execute his purposes, and before they do so, they ascribe praise to him, as the Creator of all things.'—For τοῦ θρόνου, Griesb., Lachm., and Tisch. edit τὸν θρόνον, from A, B, and 25 cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3), while Scholz and Wordsw. retain τοῦ θρόνου, which I continue to do; though, since internal evidence is in favour of τὸν θρόνον, it may be the true reading.

3. The ἦν has been on strong grounds cancelled by all the recent Editors.—ὅμοιος. On reconsidering the question (a disputed one) as to the reading, I doubt not that ὅμοιος is the genuine reading, as found in MS. A and six cursives (to which I add Mus. 2), together with Andreas. Internal evidence is in its favour, and it has been adopted by all the recent Editors. The other readings, ὁμοίως and ὅμοια, are evidently grammatical corrections.—λίθῳ ἰάσπιδι καὶ σαρδίῳ. By the former is supposed to be meant the diamond; by the latter is denoted a precious stone of a red colour, called σαρδ., as brought from Sardinia. Both are supposed to be symbolical of the splendid purity and awful glory of the Divine nature. The ἱρις is symbolical of God's mercy and faithfulness, to be shown to Christians, as formerly they were to the Antediluvian world. See Gen. ix. 17.

4. θρόνοι] Not seats, but thrones. The καὶ is absent from most of the best MSS., and came prob. from the margin.—εἶδον. This word has been with reason (espec. since internal evidence is against it) cancelled, on the authority of MSS. A, B, and 20 cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3), by recent Editors. As respects ἔσχον just after, internal evidence is quite against it, though external authority is decidedly favourable.

5. ἀστραπαὶ καὶ βρονταὶ καὶ φωναί] Agreeably to the terrific homage attendant on the majesty of God on Mount Sinai. For βρονταὶ καὶ φων., all the recent Editors read, on strong external authority, φων. καὶ βρ.; but internal evidence seems rather in favour of the former reading. The 'seven lamps of fire' are supposed to correspond to the seven lights of the Candlestick in the Tabernacle.—τὰ ἑπτὰ πνεύματα, 'the seven spirits.' See note on i. 4.

6. θάλασσα ὑαλ.] The sea or laver of glass (analogous to that of brass under the Law) is supposed to be symbolical of the spiritual purity necessary for introduction to heaven. (See Heb. x. 22.) Before θάλασσα, Griesb., Tisch., and Wordsw. insert ὡς, from MSS. A, B, and 37 cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 2, 3), confirmed by the Versions. It is prob., though not certainly, genuine, internal evidence being rather against it.—τέσσαρα ζῶα. Render: 'four living creatures' (not beasts), with Dr. Words., who well observes, that 'the translation living creature is preferable on several grounds; 1. as being more accurate; 2. as preventing the possibility of confusion between those heavenly [celestial] animals and the [terrestrial] beasts in ch. xiii.; 3. because it identifies the living creatures with the living creatures in Ezek. i. 20. x. 15, 17, 20.' As to the figures of these four living creatures, see the interesting illustrations of Dr. Wordsw., and a curious passage cited from Irenæus, iii. 11, by Heinr. These 'living creatures' are supposed to represent, either the highest order of angelic beings, whose qualities and offices are figuratively described: or, as Abp. Newc. explains, 'the whole body of the Church of God, who serve him in heaven with strength of affection, with perseverance, with reason, and with swiftness of obedience;' qualities which seem to be signified by the emblems in ver. 7. The epithet 'full of eyes,' denotes their know-θεν καὶ ὀπισθεν. <sup>7</sup> Καὶ τὸ ζῶον τὸ πρῶτον ὅμοιον λέοντι, καὶ τὸ δεύτερον ζῶον ὅμοιον μόσχῳ, καὶ τὸ τρίτον ζῶον ἔχον τὸ πρόσωπον [ὡς] ἀνθρώπου, καὶ τὸ τέταρτον ζῶον ὅμοιον ἀετῷ πετομένῳ. <sup>8</sup> Καὶ τέσσαρα ζῶα, ἐν καθ' ἑαυτὸ εἶχον ἀνὰ πτέρυγας ἕξ, κυκλόθεν καὶ ἔσθθεν * γέμουσιν ὀφθαλμῶν καὶ ἀνάπαισιν οὐκ ἔχουσιν ἡμέρας καὶ νυκτὸς λέγοντα· " Ἀγιος, ἅγιος, ἅγιος Κύριος ὁ Θεὸς ὁ παντοκράτωρ, ὁ ἦν καὶ ὁ ὢν καὶ ὁ ἐρχόμενος!" <sup>9</sup> Καὶ ὅταν δώσουσι τὰ ζῶα δόξαν καὶ τιμὴν καὶ εὐχαριστίαν τῷ καθημένῳ ἐπὶ τοῦ θρόνου, τῷ ζῶντι εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας τῶν αἰώνων, <sup>10</sup> πεσοῦνται οἱ εἴκοσι καὶ τέσσαρες πρεσβύτεροι ἐνώπιον τοῦ καθημένου ἐπὶ τοῦ θρόνου, καὶ προσκυνήσουσι τῷ ζῶντι εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας τῶν αἰώνων, καὶ βαλοῦσι τοὺς στεφάνους αὐτῶν ἐνώπιον τοῦ θρόνου, λέγοντες· <sup>11</sup> " Ἀξίος εἰ, ὁ Κύριος καὶ ὁ Θεὸς ἡμῶν, λαβεῖν τὴν δόξαν καὶ τὴν τιμὴν καὶ τὴν δύναμιν ὅτι σὺ ἔκτισας τὰ πάντα, καὶ διὰ τὸ θέλημά σου * ἦσαν, καὶ ἐκτίσθησαν.

V. 1 * Καὶ εἶδον ἐπὶ τὴν δεξιὰν τοῦ καθημένου ἐπὶ τοῦ θρόνου βιβλίον γεγραμμένον ἔσθθεν καὶ * ἔξθθεν, κατεσφραγισμένον ledge, wisdom, prudence, and foresight. The imagery is, with reason, supposed to be formed on Ezek. i. 5, seqq.

7. The t. rec. ὡς ἄνθρωποι cannot be defended, but arose doubtless from the frequent confusion of ε and υ. Greatly preferable is the reading ὡς ἀνθρώπων, edited by Tisch. Yet, considering that the ὡς has no place in MS. B and 21 cursives, with Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3, it is probably from the margin. As respects πετομένης, for the t. rec. πετομένης, it has been very properly received, on competent authority, by the recent Editors. There is every reason to think that πετομ. was a mere error of the scribes, such as is observable infra viii. 13. xiv. 6. xix. 17. I say error, for I agree with Dindorf on Stoph. Thea. in v., that no certain ex. exists of πετάομαι, at least in the Present tense.

8. ἡμέρας καὶ νυκτός] Said per anthropopathiam, to denote 'continually, at all fit times.'—ὁ ἦν—ἐργ. An expression denoting the eternity of the Deity.

9. The Futures δώσουσι, προσκυνήσουσι, &c., are used like the Aorist in the Class. writers, to designate what is customary.

10. βαλοῦσι τοὺς στεφ., &c.] in sign of deep reverence and perfect subservience. On this Chorus of the angels here and at v. 12, see Bp. Bull, Primit. Ap. Trad., p. 40.

11. ἄξιος εἰ, ὁ Κύριος—ὁ Θεός] For t. rec. Κύριος, A, B, and 30 cursives, with the Lamb. and Mus. copies, confirmed by the early Versions and several Fathers, have ὁ Κύριος καὶ ὁ Θεός ἡμῶν,—a reading which is edited by Lachm., Tisch., and Wordsw., while Scholz retains the t. rec.; which I should still continue to do, were not the external authority for it too slender to be relied on, and internal evidence not entirely in its favour.—τὴν δόξαν καὶ τὴν τιμὴν, &c. The Article has here the force of notoriety; being used as at Acts xii. 23 (where see note), and Matt. vi. 13, ὅτι σοὺ ἔστιν ἡ βασιλεία καὶ ἡ δύναμις καὶ ἡ δόξα, &c.—ἦσαν, καὶ ἐκτίσθησαν, meaning, 'were brought into being, and have been created'; i. e. implying their remaining, by the same will, such as they were at their creation.

V. 1. ἐπὶ τὴν δεξιάν] for ἐπὶ τῇ δεξιᾷ, elsewhere. Under this image are denoted the prophecies which follow. This volume of prophecy is said to be 'in the right hand of God,' as being of Divine original, and infallibly true: it is written 'within and without,' as being abundant and perfect in matter; and 'sealed with seven seals,' as having its fulfilment in successive times. No one, either in heaven or earth, was worthy to unfold this volume of prophecy, except the Lamb of God, the Saviour of the world, vv. 2—6; and as no other could explain the scheme of the Divine administration, when he took the book into his hand for this purpose, the living creatures and elders, i. e. the angelic host, and the Church of the redeemed triumphant in heaven, pay him a glad and willing homage, vv. 7—14. (Holden.)—γεγραμμ. ἔσθθεν καὶ ἔξθθεν. The long rolls of parchment used by the ancients, which we call books, were seldom written but on one side,—namely, that which was in rolling turned inwards. Any one written on both sides was called διπλογράφος. The reading, however, here varies. For the t. rec. ἔσθθεν, the MS. B, and above 30 cursives, with Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, have ἔξθθεν, which is edited by Scholz, Lachm., and Wordsw.; while Tisch. retains, as did Griesb., ἔσθθεν; perhaps rightly, for ἔξ may be no more than a correction of some Critic, whose purpose it was to make the term correspond with ἔσθθεν. 'Ὅτι ἔσθθεν is, moreover, confirmed by the Pesh. Syr. Version, and by Origen and Cyprian, as also by the reading in the parallel passage of Ezek. ii. 9 & 10.—

σφραγίσιν ἐπτά. <sup>2</sup> Καὶ εἶδον ἄγγελον ἰσχυρὸν, κηρύσσοντα ἐν φωνῇ μεγάλῃ· Τίς [ἐστίν] ἄξιος ἀνοῖξαι τὸ βιβλίον καὶ λύσαι τὰς σφραγίδας αὐτοῦ; <sup>3</sup> <sup>b</sup> Καὶ οὐδεὶς ἠδύνατο ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ, οὐδὲ ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, οὐδὲ ὑποκάτω τῆς γῆς, ἀνοῖξαι τὸ βιβλίον, οὐδὲ βλέπειν αὐτό. <sup>4</sup> Καὶ ἐγὼ ἔκλαιον πολλά, ὅτι οὐδεὶς ἄξιος εὐρέθη ἀνοῖξαι [καὶ ἀναγῶναι] τὸ βιβλίον, οὔτε βλέπειν αὐτό. <sup>5</sup> <sup>c</sup> Καὶ εἰς ἐκ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων λέγει μοι· Μὴ κλαίε· ἰδοὺ, <sup>d</sup> ἐνίκησεν ὁ λέων ὁ [ὢν] ἐκ τῆς φυλῆς 'Ιούδα, ἡ ῥίζα Δαυὶδ, <sup>e</sup> ἡ ῥίζα Δαυὶδ, <sup>f</sup> ἀνοῖξαι τὸ βιβλίον καὶ [λύσαι] τὰς ἐπτά σφραγίδας αὐτοῦ. <sup>g</sup>

<sup>b</sup> Phil. 2. 10. ver. 13.

<sup>c</sup> Gen. 40. 9, 10.
<sup>d</sup> Isa. 11. 1, 10.
<sup>e</sup> Rom. 15. 12.
<sup>f</sup> ch. 17. 14.
<sup>g</sup> & a. 1.

κατεσφρ., 'sealed down;' the seals (as Dr. Burton observes) being placed on the last fold, so that the roll could not be opened without breaking them.

<sup>2</sup> κηρύσσοντα] 'proclaiming, as a herald,' such as the Rabbins supposed to be in heaven. The ἐν here has been inserted, on strong external authority, confirmed by internal evidence, by all the recent Editors. The ἐστίν, which I placed within single brackets, has been cancelled by Lachm. and Tisch.,—a course not quite called for, since the change of position of the word in some MSS. might, as often, lead to its omission. I scarcely doubt that St. John wrote τίς ἀξίος ἐστίν, as found in 20 MSS. (to which I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3), and also the Commentaries of Andr. and Areth., and the Fathers Cypr. and Primas.

<sup>3</sup> ἠδύνατο] i. e. 'could undertake it,' as being of dignity competent thereto; explained by ἀξίος εὐρέθη just after.—To advert to a few matters of somewhat difficult reading. After ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ, MS. B, and 23 cursives (also Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3), with the Syr., Arab., and Copt. Vers., have ἄνω, which has been received into the text by Griesb., Matth., Scholz, and Wordsw.; but unfortunately, since there is very little doubt that the word was introduced from Exod. xx. 4, and some other passage in the Sept., where the expression occurs. Tisch. prob. saw the matter in this light, since he has forborne to receive ἄνω. The reading οὐδὲ, for the second οὐδὲ, though of no inconsiderable authority, is opposed by internal evidence, the οὐδὲ being evidently a Critical correction. The third οὐδὲ has been altered into οὐτε by Lachm., from MSS. A, B, and a few cursives, but wrongly; since there is little doubt but that it came from the margia, and was meant to correct the second οὐδὲ. Moreover, οὐδὲ is required by the context, which calls for a stronger sense,—namely, ne quidem, 'nor even,' as in Matt. vi. 29. viii. 10, et al. This was seen by Grot. (though by him alone), as I infer from his remark: 'Est gradatio. Nec aperire quis poterat, nec legere, imò nec introspicere saltem.' By the term introspicere Grot. prob. meant, 'to get an insight into,' not permeare, as Eichh. renders. It is difficult, indeed, to elicit this sense from βλέπειν, and hence the interpretation of Heinr., 'nemo ausus est oculis intueri librum,' may prob. be the true one, espec. considering that it derives some confirmation from Areth., who explains οὐδὲ βλέπ. by οὐδὲ ἀντιῶν πρός τὰ θεῖα κείμενα ἰσχυρῶν ὀφρ. The sense assigned by Heinr. is the literal one, and the other may be meant to be implied therein. The οὐδὲ demands this latter view, and rejects the other,—namely, 'for who is there that could fully comprehend what was there written?' See Isa. xiv. 27. Jer. xxiii. 18.

<sup>4</sup> πολλά] Above half of the MSS., confirmed by the reading (however erroneous) of the MS. B (which is also in Lamb. 1186), πολλόν, have πολλή, which was adopted by Matth., Heinr., Lachm., and Tisch.; while Griesb., Scholz, and Wordsw. retain πολλά; rightly; since the other reading has every appearance of having arisen from either a marginal gloss, or a false alteration. This use of πολλά for πολλή is not unfreq. in N. T., e. g. Matt. xvi. 21. xvii. 19. Mark v. 26. Luke ix. 22, πολλά παθεῖν. Rom. xvi. 1 and 12, πολλά κοπιᾷς. 1 Cor. xvi. 12, πολλά περικάλισα. James iii. 2, πολλά πταίωμαι. By ἀξίος is here meant, not dignus, but idoneus, 'qualified to do a thing;' seemingly an idiom of ordinary Greek, or a provincialism, like that of our Adj. meet, for competent, fit. So Shakesp., Ant. and Cleop. i. 3, 'You can do better yet; but this is meet.' The words καὶ ἀναγῶναι are with reason cancelled by all the recent Editors. —οὐτε βλέπειν. From what I have said at v. 3, it can scarcely be doubted that St. John wrote οὐδὲ, found in one MS. and Areth., and prob. existing in several other MSS. have the same reading.

<sup>5</sup> ἐνίκησεν is, as I have pointed out, for ἐξ-νίκη, q. d. '[so] prevailed,' as to open it. A Class. writer would have prob. written ικράτης, which is found so used in Thucyd. v. 104, 4, κρατοῦντες τῷ πλήθει, ὥστε μὴ αὐτίκα τὰς πόλεις ἀνοίγασθαι, where ὥστε with Inf. is used for the simple Inf. It has, however, been suggested to me by one whose judgment and good taste are unquestionable, that possibly the use of the simple verb ἐνίκησεν, for the compound ἐξεν-, was produced by the allusion itself of a lion, even the Lion of Judah, conquering and to conquer, by the overbearing instrumentality of physical strength.—ὢν. This has been cancelled by all the recent Editors on the strongest evidence, external and internal. For ἀνοῖξαι, MS. B, and about 30 cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2), have ὁ ἀνοίγων, which is edited by Matth. and Tisch.,—a reading which may seem called for by a well-known Critical canon; which nevertheless has its exceptions, and espec. in a case where, as here, the reading is so difficult, that no satisfactory sense can be made of it; and accordingly we are allowed to reject it. Hence I thought proper to retain ἀνοῖξαι, as did Griesb., and as has since been done by Scholz and Wordsw. The simple Infinit. ἀνοῖξαι is here, as often, for d John 1. 20, 6 d Καὶ εἶδον, [καὶ ἰδοῦ] ἐν μέσῳ τοῦ θρόνου καὶ τῶν τεσσάρων ζώων, καὶ ἐν μέσῳ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων, ἄρνιον ἑστῆκος ὡς ἐσφαγμένον, ἔχον κέρατα ἑπτὰ καὶ ὀφθαλμούς ἑπτὰ, * ἃ εἰσι τὰ ἑπτὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ πνεύματα τὰ ἀπεσταλμένα εἰς πᾶσαν τὴν γῆν. 7 Καὶ ἦλθε καὶ εἶλπε [τὸ βιβλίον] ἐκ τῆς δεξιᾶς τοῦ καθημένου ἐπὶ τοῦ θρόνου. 8 * Καὶ ὅτε ἔλαβε τὸ βιβλίον, τὰ τέσσαρα ζῶα καὶ οἱ εἰκοσιτέσσαρες πρεσβύτεροι ἔπεσον ἐνώπιον τοῦ ἁρνίου, ἔχοντες ἕκαστος * κιβάρην, καὶ φιάλας χρυσᾶς γεμούσας θυμιαμάτων, αἱ εἰσιν αἱ προσευχαὶ τῶν ἁγίων 9 * καὶ ᾄδουσιν ᾠδὴν καινὴν, λέγοντες· Ἄξιός εἰ λαβεῖν τὸ βιβλίον, καὶ ἀνοῖξαι τὰς σφραγίδας αὐτοῦ· ὅτι ἐσφάγης, καὶ ἡγόρασας τῷ Θεῷ ἡμᾶς ἐν τῷ αἵματί σου ἐκ πάσης φυλῆς καὶ γλώσσης, καὶ λαοῦ καὶ ἔθνους, 10 * καὶ ἐποίησας * αὐτοὺς τῷ Θεῷ ἡμῶν βασιλεῖς καὶ ἱερεῖς, καὶ εἰς τὸ = ὥστε, with Infin. just before. I suspect that the reading was introduced by certain Critics who were ignorant of the nature of the construction, and so altered the expression. Though they did not, I am persuaded, write ὁ ἀνοίγων, but ὁ ἀνοίξας, scil. ἔσται. Such, I doubt not, was read by the Pesh. Syr. and Arabic Translators. The ἁγίοι just after has been, on the strongest grounds, cancelled by all the recent Editors.

6. καὶ ἰδοῦ] These words are on strong, but not paramount, authority, cancelled by all the recent Editors.—ἄρνιον ἑστ. ὡς ἐσφαγμ., 'as if newly slain': an emblematical representation of the Saviour's High Priesthood before God, in our nature, as risen from the dead, through the merit of his sacrifice in behalf of 'all who come to the Father through him.' (Scott.) The sense may be best expressed freely thus—'a lamb in a standing posture, as it were, butchered,' i. e. so badly cut and gashed as an animal is on being sacrificed. See more in note infra, xiii. 3. For ἔχον, MSS. A and B (to which I add Cov. 2, omitted by Mill) have ἔχων, which is edited by Tisch. in his second ed. Yet his second thoughts are here not so wise as his first. * ἔχον cannot be tolerated; and it evidently arose from an error of the scribes, who perpetually confound the two letters. And such slips are too frequent in those three MSS. to occasion any wonder here. A very little after, the MSS. fluctuate between οἱ, the t. rec., and αἱ, which I edited, after Matth., on very strong external evidence, including two of the three uncial MSS. which Tisch. has in his second ed. adopted, deserting the οἱ of his first, which was adopted by Griesb., and recently by Scholz and Wordsw.; but, I think, wrongly. External authority is rather in favour of αἱ, as is also internal, considering that the change of αἱ into οἱ might easily arise from the ὀφθαλμοὺς just before, but not the contrary. Those who inadvertently wrote οἱ did not bear in mind, that the reference in αἱ is to both the horns and the eyes, the gender being, as usual, accommodated to the former noun. Both the horns and the eyes are (i. e. are emblematical of) the seven spirits sent forth for the effectual working of God's will in all parts, being emblems of his irresistible strength and perfect knowledge.

7. καὶ ἦλθε καὶ εἶλ. Render, 'and he went and took [the book].' The words τὸ βιβ. are cancelled by Matth., Lachm., and Tisch., from MSS. A, B, and 30 cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1186, Msa. 1, 2, 3), while by Gr., Sch., and Wordsw. they are retained; rightly; considering that internal evidence is divided; for the words might have been ejected by the Critics, for the purpose of removing a tautology.

8. φιάλας] Not vials, but cups, patenas; something like our dishes; see Schweigh. on Hdot. ii. 151.—αἱ εἰσιν αἱ προσ. τῶν ἁγ., denoting that the prayers of God's true worshippers are highly acceptable spiritual sacrifices.—αἰθάρας, for t. rec. -as, I now read, with Matth., La., Tia., Wordsw., from A, B, and 30 cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1186 and Msa. 1, 2, 3), confirmed by internal evidence.

9. ᾠδὴν καινὴν] The expression seems derived from Ps. xxxiii. 3, and xl. 3, and Isa. xlii. 10, and denotes 'a song in a nobler and loftier strain' than had ever been before used by them. Such is the import of καινὴν in Isa. xlii. 19, Num. xvi. 1, and Jos. Antt. iii. 4. The ᾠμας a little after, absent from MS. A, has been cancelled by Tisch., though retained by all the other Editors; and very properly, since it is almost indispensable to the sense, and might be omitted through carelessness on the part of the scribes, or rather removed by the rashness of the Reviser of the Alex. MS., who stumbled at ἡμᾶς followed by αὐτοῖς, and ingeniously removed the anomaly by cancelling ἡμᾶς, thus making αὐτοῖς serve for both ἡγορασας and ἰωοίσας. The reading αὐτοῖς for ἡμᾶς has been adopted by nearly all the Editors, on the strongest grounds.—ἄξιός εἰ, &c. A sort of acclamation, usual in ancient times, and often employed to hail a newly-elected Emperor.

10. For βασιλεῖς La. and Tia. read βασιλίας, from MS. A, supported by the Vulg. and Copt. Versions, and some Fathers. But the change in question requires much stronger evidence; and therefore I still retain βασιλεῖς, with Gr., Sch., and Wordsw. For t. rec. βασιλεύσουσιν, I now read βασιλεύουσιν, with La., Tia., and Wordsw., from MSS. A, B, and 15 cursives, confirmed by the Syr. and Arab. Versions, and also by internal evidence, from the probability that βασιλεύς was a gloss on βασιλεύουσι, proceeding from some Critic, who saw, rightly, that there is a use of Present for Future, as often in * βασιλεύουσιν ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς. <sup>11</sup> <sup>h</sup> Καὶ εἶδον καὶ ἤκουσα φωνὴν ἡ Dan. 7. 10.

 ἀγγέλων πολλῶν * κύκλῳ τοῦ θρόνου καὶ τῶν ζώων καὶ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων καὶ ἦν ὁ ἀριθμὸς αὐτῶν μυριάδες μυριάδων καὶ χιλιάδες χιλιάδων, <sup>12</sup> <sup>i</sup> λέγοντες φωνῇ μεγάλῃ " Ἀξίον ἐστὶ τὸ <sup>1</sup> ch. 4. 11.
 ἄρνιον τὸ ἐσφαγμένον λαβεῖν τὴν δύναμιν καὶ τὸν πλοῦτον, καὶ σοφίαν καὶ ἰσχύν, καὶ τιμὴν καὶ δόξαν καὶ εὐλογίαν. <sup>13</sup> <sup>k</sup> Καὶ <sup>k</sup> Phil. 2. 10.
 πᾶν κτίσμα, ὃ [ἐστίν] ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ καὶ * ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, καὶ ὑπο- <sup>1</sup> Chron. 22.
 κάτω τῆς γῆς, καὶ ἐπὶ τῆς θαλάσσης ἃ ἐστὶ, καὶ τὰ ἐν αὐτοῖς, <sup>11</sup> ‡ πάντα ἤκουσα λέγοντας " Τῷ καθήμενῳ ἐπὶ τοῦ θρόνου καὶ <sup>Rom. 9. 5.</sup> τῷ ἄρνει ἡ εὐλογία καὶ ἡ τιμὴ καὶ ἡ δόξα καὶ τὸ κράτος εἰς τοὺς <sup>1</sup> Tim. 6. 16. αἰῶνας τῶν αἰώνων!" <sup>14</sup> Καὶ τὰ τέσσαρα ζῶα ἔλεγον Ἀμήν <sup>ch. 7. 10.</sup> καὶ οἱ [εἰκοσιτέσσαρες] πρεσβύτεροι ἔπεσαν καὶ προσεκύνησαν [ζῶντι εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας τῶν αἰώνων].

VI. <sup>1</sup> <sup>a</sup> Καὶ εἶδον ὅτε ἦνοιξε τὸ ἄρνιον μίαν ἐκ τῶν ἑπτὰ σφρα- <sup>ch. 5. 6, 7.</sup> this book, and also in the Gospel and Epistles of St. John. This Future sense may be supposed, whether the reigning here spoken of be referred to the Millennial reign with Christ, or to that with God in heaven.

11. κύκλῳ] This, for the t. rec. κυκλόθεν, is adopted, on the strongest evidence, by all the recent Editors.—τῶν ζώων. 'This is governed not by κύκλῳ, but by φωνῇ, thus: 'I heard the voices of the angels round the throne, and of the ζῶα, and of the elders.' (Burton.)

12. λαβεῖν τὴν δύναμιν—εὐλογίαν] This seven-fold praise is supposed to correspond to the seven-fold attributes above. The τῶν before πλοῦτον, which I received, with Matth., from MS. B., has been since adopted by Sch., Tis., and Wordsw. The article, from its being placed next to the first noun subst., would seem meant to be extended to all the rest, intimating, as Wordsw. remarks, that, as in the Doxology of the Lord's Prayer, the blessing, &c. is restrained to those to whom it is ascribed; in other words, that to God alone, and to the Lamb, is to be ascribed Divine honour, &c., and to no one else.

13. The ἔστιν, which I bracketed, has been cancelled by La., Tis., and Wordsw. And certainly both external authority and internal evidence are against the word.—ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς,—which I edited for ἐπὶ τῇ γῇ, from MSS. A., B., and about 30 cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2).—has been also adopted by Sch., La., and Tis. The reading πάντα, which I edited for t. rec. πάντα, has also been adopted by Tis. But on reconsidering the matter I have restored πάντα, which might easily be mistaken for πάντα, since the terminations are very similar. To edit, as does Wordsw., αὐτοῖς πάντα καὶ πάντα from only one MS. (B) is running counter to every principle of criticism. Nothing is more manifest than that that reading arose only from a blending, through inadvertence on the part of the scribes, of the two readings before noticed. For ἐπὶ τοῦ θρόνου, MSS. A., B., and about 20 cursives, have ἐπὶ τῷ θρόνῳ, which was edited by Matth., and lately by La. and Tis., while Sch. and Wordsw. retain τοῦ θρόνου, very properly; for internal evidence is in favour of that reading, which was changed to τῷ θρόνῳ either by the negligence of the scribes, the terminations ον and α being perpetually confounded, or the licence of Critics.—τὰ ἐν αὐτοῖς, i. e. 'things in the sea as well as in the earth; the dead committed to them.' (Newc.)

14. The readings which I long ago bracketed have been, on the strongest grounds, cancelled by the recent Editors generally.

VI. In the following vision, the above-mentioned Four Living Creatures, the Elders, and the Angels, are represented as looking together at the opening, by the Lamb, of the Seven Seals; for that ἑπτὰ, which I have, with all the recent Editors, admitted into the text, is genuine, is attested by the strongest authority (to which I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2), confirmed by internal evidence, since the omission is easily accounted for on the principle which I have suggested in my Suppl. Vol. The Lamb now breaks the seals of the Book of the counsels of God, and discloses a series of symbolical prophecies illustrative of the history of the Church, each of which, as observes Lowman, 'is, in part, some figurative or hieroglyphical picture, or some representation in the style and figurative expressions of ancient prophecy, describing certain particular dispensations of Providence, proper and peculiar to the several successive states of the Church and Empire during the space of time contained in this period.' The first seal is admitted to refer to the triumph of Christianity over both Judaism and Paganism; the others are more or less obscure and disputed, inasmuch as the White Horse, the Bow, and the Crown, may be regarded as emblems of victory, triumph, and royalty, accompanying the final triumph of the Gospel over all opposition, the imagery being similar to that at Zech. vi. 1—6. However, I am now induced to think that by this figurative language is set forth, not so much the triumph of the Gospel, as of its Heavenly Author, who, though designated at Isa. lxii. 11, and xl. 10, as 'feeding his flock like a shepherd,' yet is in the verse immediately preceding described as a Sovereign of uncontrollable power,—a mighty CONQUEROR, vanquishing all opposition to the Gospel. The γίδων, καὶ ἤκουσα ἐνὸς ἐκ τῶν τεσσάρων ζώων λέγοντος ὡς * φωνὴ βροντῆς * Ἐρχου καὶ ἴδε. <sup>2</sup> <sup>b</sup> Καὶ εἶδον, καὶ ἰδοὺ, ἵππος λευκός, καὶ ὁ καθήμενος ἐπ' * αὐτὸν ἔχων τόξον καὶ ἐδόθη αὐτῷ στέφανος, καὶ ἐξῆλθε νικῶν, καὶ ἵνα νικήσῃ.

<sup>3</sup> Καὶ ὅτε ἤνοιξε τὴν δευτέραν σφραγίδα, ἤκουσα τοῦ δευτέρου ζώου λέγοντος Ἐρχου καὶ βλέπε. <sup>4</sup> <sup>c</sup> Καὶ ἐξῆλθεν ἄλλος ἵπ-πος πυρρός· καὶ τῷ καθήμενῳ ἐπ' * αὐτὸν ἐδόθη αὐτῷ λαβεῖν τὴν εἰρήνην * ἐκ τῆς γῆς, καὶ ἵνα ἀλλήλους σφάξωσι· καὶ ἐδόθη αὐτῷ μάχαιρα μεγάλη. <sup>5</sup> <sup>d</sup> Καὶ ὅτε ἤνοιξε τὴν * σφραγίδα τὴν τρίτην, ἤκουσα τοῦ τρίτου ζώου λέγοντος Ἐρχου [καὶ] βλέπε!
 καὶ εἶδον, καὶ ἰδοὺ ἵππος μέλας, καὶ ὁ καθήμενος ἐπ' * αὐτὸν ἔχων ζυγὸν ἐν τῇ χειρὶ αὐτοῦ. <sup>6</sup> * Καὶ ἤκουσα φωνὴν ἐν μέσῳ τῶν τεσσάρων ζώων λέγουσαν “Χοίνιξ σίτου δηναρίου, καὶ τρεῖς χοίνικες κριθῆς δηναρίου” καὶ “τὸ ἔλαιον καὶ τὸν οἶνον crowns is a symbol of supreme sovereignty; and the riding on a white horse, of victory. To advert to two matters of reading, besides the above ἵπ-τά, φωνή, for t. rec. φωνῆ, has been adopted by all the recent Editors on very strong authority. The words καὶ ἴδε are cancelled by Lachm. and Tisch., from MSS. A, C, and 11 cursives,—an authority, however, insufficient to warrant aught more than bracketing the words. It is a form of speaking meant to solicit attention to any thing said, or, as here, done, of which examples occur ch. iii. 5 and 7, and in John i. 47, also in Ezek. viii. 9, and elsewhere in the Sept. Αὐτὸς, for t. rec. αὐτῷ, is adopted by all the recent Editors, on very strong authority, to which I add Lamb. 1186, Mus. 1, 2, 3. The construction of ἐπὶ with accus. for dat. is Hellenistic, and occurs in Matt. xxi. 5, ἐπιβιβάζετε ἐπὶ ὄνον, though it is also later class. Greek.

2. In νικῶν, ἵνα νικήσῃ, there is a Hellenistic idiom, the sense being, ‘that he should gain victory after victory.’

3. ὅτε ἤνοιξε] Render: ‘when he opened,’ also at vv. 5, 6, 7, 9, 12, and viii. 1. For t. rec. τὴν δευτέραν σφρ. the Editors in general, from Græc. to Tisch., read τὴν σφρ. τ. δευτ., as they do also at v. 7, but on insufficient external authority. At v. 7, indeed, τὴν σφρ. τὴν τριτ. occurs in nearly all the copies, and so at viii. 1, but at v. 9 all the copies have τὴν πέμπτην σφρ. I cannot but suspect that in all these several passages St. John wrote τὴν δευτέραν, τρίτην, τετάρτην, πέμπτην, ἑκτὴν, ἑβδόμην, since the construction is more in the manner of the Apostle, and of the Hellenistic writers generally.

4. ἵππος πυρρός—μεγ.] A symbol borrowed from Zech. vi. 2, portending wars, seditions, and blood-shedding, though on the event referred to Interpreters are not agreed. For ἀπὸ, MSS. A, B, and 30 cursives, with Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, have ἐκ, which is adopted by all the best Editors,—with some reason, since internal evidence, in its favour, is added to strong external authority supporting it. The reading of Lachm., who cancels ἀπὸ, is specious, but rests on insufficient authority, that of MS. A, and 4 cursives, and is on other grounds inadmissible, espec. considering that such an expression as ‘the peace of the earth’ occurs no where in Scripture, nor indeed elsewhere. On the other hand, λαβῆν (for ἀπολ.) τὴν εἰρ. ἐκ (for ἀπὸ, by Hellenistic idiom) seems formed on the saying of our Lord, Matt. x. 34, οὐκ ἤλθον βαλεῖν εἰρήνην [ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν] ἀλλὰ μάχαιραν.

5, 6. ἵππος μέλας] An emblem of woe, the colour being of evil omen. On the sense and reference in ζυγὸν Expositors very much differ. The Common Version, ‘a pair of balances,’ or ‘weighing scales’ (as in the Sept. and the Class. writers), may, however, be retained, and the expression be understood of nicely balanced scales for exactly weighing out the corn: an allusion to severe famine; corn being usually measured. The choenix was our quart, and was considered a sufficient portion for a man’s support for a day. See Hdut. vii. 186. The price subjoined (which has been proved to be enormous, nearly twenty times the usual one) is meant to intimate the excessive scarcity and dearth of the article. By σίτου is meant ‘[bread] corn,’ i. e. wheat; and the proportion between the quality of wheat and of barley was, it seems, an usual one. On the purport of the subjoined words, τὸ ἔλαιον—μὴ ἀδικ., Commentators are not agreed whether there is herein contained a command not to mix the wine and oil, or an injunction not to do wrong in respect to them. If the former be adopted, ἀδικ. will be = βλάπτ., as oft. in this Book, also Jos., and the Class. writers; as Thucyd. ii. 5 and 71. iii. 28. iv. 52 and 98, where the word is interchanged with βλάπτ.: if the latter, we may suppose μὴ ἀδικ. to mean, ‘See that thou dost not adulterate,’ lit. ‘play the rogue with it,’ a figur. sense not harsher than many in this Book, and even some in the Class. writers. Thus the four articles are adverted to, which (according to simplicity of living in the East) formed the main support of life. For κριθῆς, κριθῶν is edited by La. and Tie., from A, C, and one cursive; but on insufficient evidence.—The ὅς at v. 6, prefixed to φωνῆν by La., from A, C, and 3 cursives, rests on an insufficient foundation, and came from Critica, who knew it freq. occurred in this Book, and thought it required here.

μη ἀδικήσης." 7 Καὶ ὅτε ἤνοιξε τὴν σφραγίδα τὴν τετάρτην, ἤκουσα [φωνήν] τοῦ τετάρτου ζώου † λέγουσαν Ἐρχου [καὶ] βλέπε. 8 † καὶ εἶδον, καὶ ἰδὼν ἵππος χλωρὸς, καὶ ὁ καθήμενος ἐπάνω αὐτοῦ, ὄνομα αὐτῷ ὁ Θάνατος, καὶ ὁ Ἀίδης ἀκολουθεῖ μετ' † αὐτοῦ καὶ ἐδόθη αὐτοῖς ἐξουσία ἐπὶ τὸ τέταρτον τῆς γῆς ἀποκτείνειν ἐν ῥομφαίᾳ καὶ ἐν λιμῷ καὶ ἐν θανάτῳ, καὶ ὑπὸ τῶν θηρίων τῆς γῆς.

9 † Καὶ ὅτε ἤνοιξε τὴν πέμπτην σφραγίδα, εἶδον ὑποκάτω τοῦ θυσιαστηρίου τὰς ψυχὰς τῶν ἐσφαγμένων διὰ τὸν λόγον τοῦ

7. φωνήν] The word is cancelled by Tia., on the authority of MSS. B, C, and nearly 30 cursives; but its genuineness is still an open question. It can scarcely be doubted, inasmuch as the removal of the word would efface the characteristic of the writer. There is very strong authority (to which I could add) for the reading λέγοντος, instead of t. rec. λεγούσης, which I would receive, were not internal evidence against it.

8. χλωρός] 'of a pale green, yellow green colour:' an emblem of mortality, such as is caused by pestilence and death (pallida mors) stalking about; or, as marking that sallow hue incident to fear, according to the Homeric ἐμὲ δὲ χλωρὸν δῖος εἶλε.—By Θάνατος is here, as supr. ii. 23, to be understood 'death by pestilence,' usually following in the train of war. See Thucyd. ii. 54. By the expression ὁ Ἀίδης is meant Shesol, or 'the grave' personified; as 1 Cor. xv. 55, τοῦ σου, θάνατε, τὸ κίττρον; τοῦ σου, αἶδη, τὸ νίκος; On the forcible expression ἀκολ. μετ' αὐτοῦ, see note on Luke ix. 49, οὐκ ἀκολ. μετ' ἡμῶν. The next words follow up the general idea of death and the grave by the more special ones, of what is most destructive of the human race,—war, famine, and pestilence.—καὶ ὑπὸ τῶν θηρίων τῆς γῆς. Render: 'by the means, or instrumentality, of the beasts.' A very appropriate addition; for, as Abp. Newc. observes, 'wild beasts increase where destructive calamities thin mankind.' So Exod. xxiii. 29, οὐκ ἐμβαλῶ αὐτοὺς ἐν ἱσταντῷ ἐνι, ἵνα μὴ γίνηται ἡ γῆ ἐρημος, καὶ πολλὰ γίνηται ἐπὶ σὶ τὰ θηρία τῆς γῆς. And in point of fact, the histories of the period in question attest, that in various parts the wild beasts so increased upon the small residue of the inhabitants left by war, famine, and pestilence, that they were compelled to wage war with them, to keep them under, though with great difficulty and loss of life. One account records the entrance of 500 wolves at once into a depopulated city. To advert to some matters of disputed reading. The reading αὐτῷ for αὐτοῦ after μετ', found in the MS. B, and very many cursives, prob. arose from a marginal gloss, or false correction. For ἀκολουθεῖ all the recent Editors read ἀκολ. from MSS. B, C, and 29 cursives (also Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3), with Andr., Areth., and some Latin Fathers. But internal evidence is in favour of ἀκολουθ., which is more in the manner of St. John, and of the Scriptural writers in general; for the narrative Present is frequent in both the Old and the New Test. Moreover, it is found in the greater part of the MSS., confirmed by the Pesch. Syr. Version; and it has been, with reason, recalled by Tia. 2nd Ed. For αὐτοῖς, Gr., Sch., and Tia., edit αὐτῷ, from MS. B, and 34 cursives (1 add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2), confirmed by the Syr. Version, while La. and Wordsw. retain αὐτοῖς, from MSS. A, C, and upwards of half of the rest. But internal evidence is rather in favour of αὐτῷ, since the s might easily arise, as often from the i following. The reading αὐτῷ is also confirmed by the Pesch. Syr. and Vulg. Versions; and it is more likely to be genuine from its having greater spirit, not to say more propriety and vraisemblance; since Θάνατος is here considered as the principal person, and Ἀίδης as only his follower. The recent Editors place ἀποκτείνειν, not before the words ἐπὶ τὸ τέτ. τῆς γῆς, but after them, on the very strongest evidence of MSS., which ought, where internal evidence does not interfere, to be decisive. I have decided accordingly.

9—11. This, as also the subsequent seal, derives no light, like the former, from the living creatures as to the time of the commencement; for here we have not a prophecy concerning new events; but this is meant to minister consolation under the scandal of the Cross, and has reference to the preceding persecutions, which were of long continuance.

9. τοῦ θυσιαστηρίου] meaning, not, as some have supposed, the golden altar for incense within the Holy of holies, but (as the subject requires) the altar of burnt-offering in the court of the priests; for there is a tacit comparison of the martyrs to the victims in the Temple Service. 'These (observes Thos. Scott) appeared as sacrifices newly offered, to show their fellowship with Christ in his sufferings, and the acceptableness of their faithfulness unto death, through his propitiatory oblation.—διὰ τὸν λόγον—εἰχον, 'in the cause of God's word [the Gospel], and for the testimony which they had borne [to its truth].'
(I add Lamb. 1186, Mus. 1, 2, 3), with Andr. and Areth., subjoin τοῦ ἀρνίου, which was adopted by Matth., and recently by Wordsw.; but wrongly; since internal evidence is decidedly against the words, which evidently came from a marginal scholium, proceeding from certain correctors, who thought it necessary to complete the sense, and who supposed the reference to be to our Lord Jesus Christ. Thus several MSS. have Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, which reading might seem to derive confirmation from supr. i. 9; infr. xii. 17. xix. 10. xx. 4, and 2 Tim. i. 8. But, in point of fact, the reference is to τοῦ Θεοῦ just before, and what is meant is the testimony just spoken of,— h Zech. 1.

12.
2 Esd. 15. 8.

1 ch. 3. 5.
2 7. 9, 14.
Heb. 11. 40.

h ch. 16. 15.
Joel 2. 10, 31.
2. 15.
Matt. 24. 20.
Acts 2. 30.

Θεοῦ, καὶ διὰ τὴν μαρτυρίαν ἣν εἶχον. <sup>10</sup> <sup>h</sup> καὶ *ἐκραξαν φωνῇ μεγάλῃ, λέγοντες· "Ἔως πότε, ὁ δεσπότης ὁ ἅγιος καὶ [ὁ] ἀληθινός, οὐ κρίνεις καὶ ἐκδικεῖς τὸ αἷμα ἡμῶν *ἐκ τῶν κατοι-κούντων ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς;" <sup>11</sup> <sup>h</sup> Καὶ *ἐδόθη αὐτοῖς *στολὴ λευκὴ καὶ ἐρρέθη *αὐτοῖς ἵνα †ἀναπαύσωνται ἔτι χρόνον [μικρόν], ἕως [οὔ] *πληρωθῶσι καὶ οἱ σύνδουλοι αὐτῶν καὶ οἱ ἀδελφοὶ αὐτῶν, οἱ μέλλοντες †ἀποκτείνεσθαι ὡς καὶ αὐτοί.

<sup>12</sup> <sup>h</sup> Καὶ εἶδον ὅτε ἤνοιξε τὴν σφραγίδα τὴν ἕκτην, [καὶ ἰδοὺ] †σεισμός μέγας ἐγένετο· καὶ ὁ ἥλιος ἐγένετο μέλας ὡς σάκκος namely, the attestation of God to Jesus as the Christ, as conveyed in the words, 'This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased.' Comp. for confirmation 1 John v. 10, ὁ πιστεύων εἰς τὸν Υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἔχει τὴν μαρτυρίαν (scil. τοῦ Θεοῦ) ἐν ἑαυτῷ, where the words τοῦ Θεοῦ are, in MS. A, and about 10 cursives, with some Versions, brought into the text, and were received injudiciously by Lachm.

10. λέγοντες] for λέγουσαι, by the figure πρὸς τὸ σημαίνοναι.—Ἔως πότε, &c. Hardy (after the older Commentators) observes that this is an 'euphonestis impatienter a brachio fortiori vindictam expetentium.' But it is well remarked by Iaspis, 'Martyres illi non vindictæ cupiditate incensi hanc questionem proponunt, sed modo sciscitantur, quando vaticinia eventum habitura sint.' The same applies to the words infra xix. 17, seqq. Comp. 2 Esdr. xiv. 8.—ὁ ἅγιος καὶ ὁ ἀληθ. Render, 'the Holy and True One.'—To advert to some matters of reading.—ἐκραξαν for ἐκραζον is adopted by all the most eminent Editors from Matth. and Gr. to Tis.; and with reason; since it is found in the 3 uncials and a large portion of the cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1186, Mus. 1, 2). See note on Acts xiii. 6.—The ὁ before ἀληθ. is cancelled by all the recent Editors, on strong external authority, confirmed by the Lamb. and Mus. copies. Yet internal evidence is equally balanced. The ὁ is more likely to have been left out than put in; and no reason is there why it should not have been employed here, as supr. iii. 7, ὁ ἅγιος, ὁ ἀληθινός, where it has place in all the copies. That the Article communicates an intensity of sense, plainly appears from another passage of St. John, 1 Epist. v. 20, γινώσκουμεν τὸν ἀληθινόν—καὶ ἴσμεν ἐν τῷ ἀληθινῷ. And vain were it to appeal to such passages as supr. iii. 14, ὁ πιστός καὶ ἀληθινός, because there the second epithet is so merely exegetical of the first, as not merely to dispense with, but absolutely to reject, the Article. For ἀπὸ Matth., La., and Tis. edit ἐκ, on very strong external authority (to which I add Lamb. 1186, Mus. 1, 2, 3), confirmed by internal evidence, so that I have now received the reading.

11. ἰδοὺ—στολὴ λευκὴ] So, for t. rec. ἰδοῦθησαν στολαὶ λευκαί, the principal Editors read, on the strongest grounds, both external and internal. By the use of the Sing. it is intimated that, as Wordsw. remarks, 'the same white robe of Christ's righteousness was given to each, as a symbol of Divine acceptance.' La., Tis., and Wordsw. insert ἰδούτω, from MSS. A, B, and nearly 20 cursives; though in his 2nd edit. Tis. removes it,—very properly, since internal evidence is against it, from its having the appearance of being brought in for the purpose of softening a harshness, though one not uncommon in this Book. The reading ἀναπαύσονται, adopted by La. and Tis., is a very specious reading, confirmed by internal evidence, but requires stronger testimony than that of 7 MSS. The μικρόν has, on the strongest grounds, been cancelled by all the Editors. The same may be said of the οὐ just after. As respects πληρωθῶσι, for t. rec. πληρώσονται, which I edited, from MSS. A, C, and a few cursives, I am of the same opinion as before; and this opinion I find confirmed by the suffrage of La. and Wordsw., who adopt it in their texts. It is true that Gr., Matth., Sch., and Tis. edit πληρώσων, from very strong external authority, opposed, however, by internal evidence. One may justly require some proof that such an idiom as this use of the active πληρ. in a passive sense ever existed. Until that be furnished, I shall continue to think that the scribes read θ as if it were σ: on which confusion of the letters see Schaefer and Bast on Greg. de Dialect. Ed. Schaefer, p. 300, seq.; p. 633, sq. Nay, the two letters were, we know, often interchanged in pronunciation, as found in varying dialects.—For ἀποκτείνεσθαι the most ancient MSS. fluctuate between ἀποκτείνω and ἀποκτείνω, the former of which is prob. the more genuine spelling.

12—17. This sixth seal is generally understood to refer to the downfall of Paganism, and the establishment of Christianity in the reign of Constantine; and thus the earthquake, and other natural commotions and phenomena, as they often denote revolutions and changes of religious systems, so they are here supposed to mark the violent commotions which agitated the empire from the reign of Maximilian to that of Constantine. Dean Woodhouse, however, supposes this vision to relate to the end of the world, and the final triumph of the Gospel over its enemies. Comp. Matt. xxiv. 29.

12. καὶ ἰδοὺ] The words are cancelled by the recent Editors, on very strong authority, which I could confirm from Lamb. and Mus. copies; and they were prob. introduced from the parallel passages. For σεισμ. μέγ. ἰγίετο, La. and Tis. edit σεισ. ἰγ. μέγ., from MS. A, and a very few cursives; but on insufficient grounds. The same may be said of ἰγίετο μίλας, changed, on as slender grounds, to μίλας ἰγ. by the same Editors. I suspect that Critical alteration was τρίχινος, καὶ ἡ σελήνη ὅλη ἐγένετο ὡς αἷμα, <sup>13</sup> καὶ οἱ ἀστέρες τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ἔπεσαν εἰς τὴν γῆν, ὡς συκὴ βάλλει τοὺς ὀλύνθους αὐτῆς ὑπὸ μεγάλου ἀνέμου σειομένη, <sup>14</sup> καὶ ὁ οὐρανὸς ἀπεχω- <sup>1 Pa. 102. 27. Isa. 54. 4. Heb. 1. 12. ch. 16. 30.</sup> ρίσθη ὡς βιβλίον εἰλισσόμενον, καὶ πᾶν ὄρος καὶ νῆσος ἐκ τῶν τόπων αὐτῶν ἐκινήθησαν· <sup>15</sup> καὶ οἱ βασιλεῖς τῆς γῆς <sup>12 Isa. 2. 19.</sup> καὶ οἱ μεγιστᾶνες καὶ οἱ χιλιάρχοι, καὶ οἱ πλούσιοι καὶ οἱ *ἰσχυροὶ, καὶ πᾶς δούλος καὶ [πᾶς] ἐλεύθερος, ἔκρυψαν ἑαυτοὺς εἰς τὰ σπήλαια καὶ εἰς τὰς πέτρας τῶν ὀρέων, <sup>16</sup> καὶ <sup>12 Isa. 2. 19. Hos. 10. 8. Luke 23. 30. ch. 2. 6.</sup> λέγουσι τοῖς ὄρεσι καὶ ταῖς πέτραις· “* Πέσατε ἐφ’ ἡμᾶς, καὶ κρύψατε ἡμᾶς ἀπὸ προσώπου τοῦ καθημένου ἐπὶ † τοῦ † θρόνου, busy on one or both those occasions, to prevent a cacophony: and, though no sufficient evidence exists to determine what was the original reading, yet prob. it was καὶ σειομένη μέγ. ἰγ. καὶ ὁ ἥλιος μέλας ἰγέν. By σάκκος τρίχινος is denoted ‘a sort of blackish coarse hair-cloth, made of camels’ hair,’ then in common use, espec. for wear in seasons of sorrow, or of penitence; see Matt. xi. 21, and note. The imagery here would seem to point at public calamities of all kinds. The ὅλη, inserted by all the Editors, from Matth. downwards, is found in too many MSS. (including the 3 uncials, and the Lamb. and Mus. copies), confirmed by the ancient Versions, to allow us to suppose it introduced from the margin. On the other hand, there is something at which early Critics might stumble; and who, I suspect, for that reason excluded the world; just as at Acts xix. 29, ἐπλήσθη ἡ πόλις ὅλη (or ὅλη ἡ πόλις) συγκύματα, where the ὅλη is absent from 4 MSS., and the Vulg., and is cancelled by La. and Tis. on insufficient grounds, internal evidence being rather in its favour.

13. ὡς συκὴ βάλλει τοὺς ὀλύνθους] A most forcible image, and such as attests accurate observation,—violent winds shaking off in great number the unripe and late-formed figs, which would otherwise remain for a later gathering. Comp. Isa. xxiv. 4, καὶ πάντα τὰ δέντρα πεισῶνται ὡς φύλλα ἐξ ἀμπέλου, καὶ ὡς πίπτει φύλλα ἀπὸ συκῆς.—The reading σαλευμένη, for σειομένη, edited by La. from MS. A, is merely a gloss, or false correction of Critics, who knew not that σεισθαι is a term espec. used of the shaking of the branches, or leaves, of trees, by the wind, or otherwise; so that the fruit is shaken off. Comp. Hesiod, Scut. 298, ὄρχος—σειομένη φύλλοισι. It is well observed by Wesley, that ‘when the Scripture compares some very great with a very little thing, the majesty and omnipotence of God, before whom great things are little, is highly exalted.’

14. ὁ οὐρανὸς—εἰλισσέσθαι.] The full sense is, ‘the heaven (i. e. the æthereal, or the firmament) was parted off (or separated in the midst), [and the part removed,] as a scroll is rolled up.’ So Isa. xxiv. 4, καὶ εἰλιγῆσται ὁ οὐρανὸς ὡς βιβλίον, imitated in the passage of Orac. Sibyll., cited by Heintz, ὁπότεν θεὸς αἰθέρι ναίων Οὐρανὸν εἰλιξει, καθάπερ βιβλίον εἰλιγται.

15. καὶ οἱ βασιλεῖς, &c.] Here are graphically described the effects of this catastrophe,—in the vain endeavours to escape the wrath of Omnipotence, by persons of whatever rank, from the highest to the lowest,—from those who occupy thrones, to those who are in the lowest estate.—ἔκρυψαν ἑαυτοὺς εἰς τὰ σπήλαια, &c. Comp. Procop. p. 197, φημὶ δὲ ὑμῖν ἀφίξασθαι χρόνον, ἥνικα ὑπὸ ταῖς ἀκάνθαις βουλόμενοι τὰς κεφαλὰς κρύπτισθαι. There is here a constr. pronominal, for ‘hid themselves by creeping into.’—ἰσχυροὶ, for t. rec. δυνατοὶ, has been adopted by all the recent Editors, from A, B, C, and 35 cursives; to which I add Lamb. 1186 and Mus. 1, 2.—The πᾶς before ἰσχυρ. is absent from A, B, C, and 30 cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1186 and Mus. 1, 2, 3), and is cancelled by Matth., Gr., La., Tis., and Wordsw., but retained by Sch.; and internal evidence is in its favour, since it may have been expunged to remove a tautology.

16. καὶ λέγουσι, &c.] Prob. formed on Hos. x. 8, καὶ ἰροῦσι τοῖς ὄρεσι· Κρύψατε ἡμᾶς, καὶ τοῖς βουνόις· Πέσατε ἐφ’ ἡμᾶς, which passage is more closely followed in Luke xxiii. 30. In ἀπὸ προσώπου there is not a Hebraism (as in Ex. ii. 15, ἀνιχθήσονται ἀπὸ προσώπου Φαραὼ), but a stronger and more graphic expression designating wrath and vengeance, as shown in the countenance of the Avenger. Comp. Gen. iv. 14, ἀπὸ τοῦ προσώπου τοῦ Κυρίου κρυβήσονται, and Nah. i. 6, ἀπὸ προσώπου ὀργῆς αὐτοῦ τίς ὑποστήσεται; which passages may possibly have been in St. John’s mind. In the last two clauses there is a hendiatys, by which the term ὀργή is meant to apply both to God and to Christ. It is here well pointed out by Grot. that ‘St. John mixes up (as supr. ii. 14) his own words with those of the Jews; for they are represented as wishing to be covered against so many evils by God the Father, not by Christ; while St. John shows that the evils in question have their rise from the wrath of God and of Christ.’—For t. rec. πίστετε, I have now, with Tis., adopted πίσατε, from MS. A, and 2 ancient cursives, as will, I doubt not, be found, on more careful collation, in several others. Internal evidence is quite in its favour, as being an Alexandrian form, often occurring in the Sept., and also in the N. T., espec. in this Book.—For τοῦ θρόνου, Matth. and Tis. edit τῷ θρόνῳ, from MS. B, and 20 cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 3), while Gr., Sch., and Wordsw. retain τοῦ θρόνου (which I find in Mus. 2, and Cov. 2, passed over by Mill); rightly; since internal evidence is in its favour; though the reading is an open question.

o Isa. 12. 8.
Joel 2. 11.
Zeph. 1. 14.
Ps. 76. 7.
a Dan. 7. 2.

καὶ ἀπὸ τῆς ὀργῆς τοῦ Ἀρνίου <sup>17</sup> ὅτι ἦλθεν ἡ ἡμέρα ἡ μεγάλη τῆς ὀργῆς αὐτοῦ, καὶ τίς δύναται σταθῆναι ;”

VII. <sup>1</sup> Καὶ μετὰ ταῦτα εἶδον τέσσαρας ἄγγέλους ἐστῶτας ἐπὶ τὰς τέσσαρας γωνίας τῆς γῆς, κρατοῦντας τοὺς τέσσαρας ἀνέμους τῆς γῆς, ἵνα μὴ πνέῃ ἄνεμος ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς μήτε ἐπὶ τῆς θαλάσσης, μήτε † ἐπὶ † πᾶν δένδρον. <sup>2</sup> <sup>b</sup> Καὶ εἶδον ἄλλον ἄγγελον * ἀναβαίνοντα ἀπὸ ἀνατολῆς ἡλίου, ἔχοντα σφραγίδα Θεοῦ ζῶντος καὶ ἔκραξε φωνῇ μεγάλῃ τοῖς τέσσαρσιν ἄγγέλοις

17. ἦλθεν ἡ ἡμέρα ἡ μεγ.] This seems formed on Mal. iv. 5, and the general substance of the verse on Joel ii. 11, and other passages of the Prophets. For σταθῆναι several MSS. have στήναι, of which the reading of other MSS. στήναι is evidently a gloss. The same variety of reading is found in Col. iv. 12, where, for στήναι, some MSS. have σταθῆναι. Nevertheless, σταθῆναι here may justly be presumed to be the true reading, and στήναι a gloss, as in Mark iii. 25, οὐ δύναται ἡ—οὐκία σταθῆναι, where three of the most ancient MSS. have στήναι, which has been most uncritically edited by Tis., who here omits to even mention στήναι.

VII. This Chapter is admitted to be a continuation of the preceding vision, and of course is explained according to the view adopted of that. Those who, as Eichl., Rosenm., and Heinr., suppose it to have reference to the downfall of Paganism, and the establishment of Christianity, maintain that by the four angels are meant the pretorian prefects appointed by Constantine over the four great provinces; and by the fifth angel, Constantine himself, who had the seal of the living God by being converted to Christianity, and through whom the persecutions against the Church ceased. Others, however, as Dean Woodhouse, assign a more general reference, and suppose that this is a sequel to the preceding, and contains a representation of the gathering of God's elect servants from the wrath to come, and the consequent triumph of men and angels.

1. τὰς τέσσαρας γωνίας τ. γ.] 'the four angular quarters,' corresponding to the cardinal points. The ἄγγέλους must be understood according to the general view above adverted to.—μήτε ἐπὶ πᾶν δένδρον. This is rendered, 'nor on any tree.' But that would require δένδρον, found, indeed, in MS. A, but prob. from emendation, and indeed the sense thus arising is not a little jejune. However, as the MSS. of this Book are well known to be very incorrect, I cannot but suspect a corruption, and for ἐπὶ πᾶν I conjecture ἐπισείω, to stir. Thus the words μήτε—δένδρον will be a further development of what was said,—namely, that 'there should not be a breath of wind, nor to stir the foliage of a tree.' Certainly the error in question might easily arise in ill-written MSS., espec. written with abbreviations. If, however, it should be thought that ἐπ., in composition, would not be applicable here, and that the genuineness of the πᾶν (for which the τὶ of many MSS. is manifestly a corruption) is attested by its strongly Hebraic character, and a similar use at ix. 4, ἐπὶ τὴν αὐτὴν ἵνα μὴ ἀδικήσῃ τὸν χόρτον τῆς γῆς, οὐδὲ πᾶν χλωρὸν, οὐδὲ πᾶν δένδρον, then I would propose, for ἐπὶ, simply to read σείω, between which words, in Manuscript abbreviations, the difference is but small. This conjecture is confirmed by what occurs supr. v. 13, ὡς συναῖ βάλῃ τοὺς ὀλύνθους αὐτῆς ὑπὸ μεγάλου ἀνέμου σειομένη. In the imagery of both these passages there is something graphic,—with which similar ones might be adduced from the Class. writers. Comp. a similar use of σείω in Hesych. in ν. σκοφαντῶ, τῶν τὰ ἀκρόθρυα σειόντων, '[said] of those who shake the fruit-trees,' that the fruit may fall.—Thus far in my former Edd. On reconsideration of this difficult question, it now occurs to me, that, although there is strong external authority (to which I can add the Lamb. and Mus. copies) for the reading ἐπὶ τὶ δένδρον, adopted by Matth., La., Tis., and Wordsw., yet the t. rec., retained by Gr. and Sch., besides being based on stronger external authority, has internal evidence in its favour, from its yielding a far better sense than τὶ, which is not a little frigid and jejune, and was prob. only a gloss on the harshly Hebraistic πᾶν. As to the reading of MS. A, ἐπὶ δένδρον, it removes the difficulty, but only by cutting the knot. I am now of opinion that almost as great objection lies against πᾶν as against τὶ, and though I still prefer the former of my two emendations, the objection that I have started against ἐπισείω seems fatal; to avoid which, I would now propose to read μὴδ' ἐπὶ σείω δ., meaning 'that there should not be wind, nor not any longer to stir the leaves of a tree.' I have already shown how easily σείω, written in MS. abbreviation, might be mistaken for πᾶν, written at full length. And although I cannot find that any existing MS. has this reading, yet that it was in the copy used by Areth., is evident from the following words of his exposition: ἐπὶ καὶ τὰ δένδρα τῆς ἀπὸ τῶν ἀνέμων ἐπισείωσιν (read ἐπισείωσιν, succussione, 'a gentle stirring of the foliage') ἀπολούστα ἀσφύχεται, whence it is plain that that Commentator read, not πᾶν, but σείω. And that such was in the original from which the MS. A was transcribed I more than suspect; at least, that it was formerly there, but afterwards lost, by being eaten away by a worm, or otherwise become illegible; of which I have noticed instances in MSS. After σείω had been lost, the reading δένδρον would easily creep in, to suit the preceding Genitives, γῆς καὶ θαλάσσης.

2. ἀναβαίνοντα] So, for t. rec. ἀναβάνα, the recent Editors read, from all three of the uncials, and several of the cursives (to which I add the Lamb. and Mus. copies).—ἔχοντα stands for κατέχ., 'holding in his hand,' 'bearing.' For ἔκραξε, MS. A (alone) has ἱκραζον, which is οἷς ἐδόθη αὐτοῖς ἀδικῆσαι τὴν γῆν καὶ τὴν θάλασσαν, <sup>3</sup> λέγων <sup>o ch. 2. 6. & 9. 4. Ezek. 9. 4.</sup> “Μὴ ἀδικήσητε τὴν γῆν μήτε τὴν θάλασσαν, μήτε τὰ δένδρα, ἄχρις οὐ σφραγίσωμεν τοὺς δούλους τοῦ Θεοῦ ἡμῶν ἐπὶ τῶν μετώπων αὐτῶν.” <sup>4</sup> Καὶ ἤκουσα τὸν ἀριθμὸν τῶν ἐσφραγισμέ- <sup>4 ch. 14. 1.</sup> νων, ρμδ̄ χιλιάδες † ἐσφραγισμένοι ἐκ πάσης φυλῆς υἱῶν Ἰσραὴλ· <sup>5</sup> ἐκ φυλῆς Ἰούδα, ιβ̄ χιλιάδες ἐσφραγισμένοι· ἐκ φυλῆς Ῥουβὴν, ιβ̄ χιλιάδες ἐσφραγισμένοι· ἐκ φυλῆς Γὰδ, ιβ̄ χιλιάδες ἐσφρα-γισμένοι· <sup>6</sup> ἐκ φυλῆς Ἀσήρ, ιβ̄ χιλιάδες ἐσφραγισμένοι· ἐκ φυλῆς Νεφθαλεὶμ, ιβ̄ χιλιάδες ἐσφραγισμένοι· ἐκ φυλῆς Μανασσῆ, ιβ̄ χιλιάδες ἐσφραγισμένοι· <sup>7</sup> ἐκ φυλῆς Συμεὼν, ιβ̄ χιλιάδες ἐσφραγισμένοι· ἐκ φυλῆς Λευὶ, ιβ̄ χιλιάδες ἐσφρα-γισμένοι· ἐκ φυλῆς Ἰσαχάρ, ιβ̄ χιλιάδες ἐσφραγισμένοι· <sup>8</sup> ἐκ φυλῆς Ζαβουλὼν, ιβ̄ χιλιάδες ἐσφραγισμένοι· ἐκ φυλῆς Ἰωσήφ, ιβ̄ χιλιάδες ἐσφραγισμένοι· ἐκ φυλῆς Βενιαμὴν, ιβ̄ χιλιάδες ἐσφραγισμένοι.

<sup>9</sup> * Μετὰ ταῦτα εἶδον, καὶ ἰδοὺ ὄχλος πολλὸς, ὃν ἀριθμῆσαι <sup>o ch. 2. 6, 12. & 9. 11. Rev. 14.</sup> αὐτὸν οὐδεὶς * ἐδύνατο, ἐκ παντὸς ἔθνους καὶ φυλῶν καὶ λαῶν καὶ γλωσσῶν, † ἐστῶτες ἐνώπιον τοῦ θρόνου καὶ ἐνώπιον τοῦ Ἀρνίου, † περιβεβλημένοι στολὰς λευκάς, καὶ † φοίνικες ἐν ταῖς χερσὶν αὐτῶν <sup>10</sup> * καὶ * κρᾶζουσι φωνῇ μεγάλῃ, λέγοντες· “Ἡ <sup>f Ps. 2. 6. Isa. 44. 11. Jer. 2. 28. Hos. 12. 4.</sup> σωτηρία τῷ Θεῷ ἡμῶν τῷ καθημένῳ ἐπὶ τοῦ θρόνου καὶ τῷ edited by Tia, but on insufficient authority; though it is somewhat countenanced by ἱκραῖον found in many MSS. at xii. 2, though there Tia. himself edits κρᾶζει. Indeed, the form ἱκραῖα occurs even in the text of Tia. at x. 3, xviii. 2. xix. 17, and the best MSS. at xviii. 19, edited by La. and Tia. It would seem that ἱκραῖα for ἱκραῖον was a peculiarity of St. John's phraseology.

3. σφραγίσωμεν] As denoting that they belonged to God; for, as it is shown by the Commentators, slaves were marked with the mark of their master. Comp. Exod. xii. 7. 13.

4. Here the 144,000 is admitted to be a great and indefinite number, denoting the great numbers of those converted from the Jewish to the Christian faith. The tribe of Dan is omitted for reasons which we can only conjecture: either, it is supposed, from its idolatry, or because it had become extinct. Joseph is here put for Ephraim. Levi is mentioned, because equally participating in the benefits of Christ.

9. ὄχλος πολλός—ἰδύνατο] Comp. 2 Eedr. ii. 42. By this ὄχλος some understand the Gen- tile converts to the Gospel; others, those com- posing, together with the preceding, the universal and visible Church of Christ; others, again, the spirits of just men made perfect, and received into glory, especially the martyrs and confessors of the primitive Church. By their being clothed in white robes, and having palm branches, are de- noted their spiritual victory, justification, and sanctification. For περιβεβλημένοι many MSS. have περιβεβλημένοι, which is adopted by almost all the recent Editors, who suppose the common reading to have arisen from emendation, Vol. II.

to remove the anacoluthon in ἰστῶτες; a prin- ciple, however, so far distrusted by Matthæi, that he has, from some MSS., altered ἰστῶτες into ἰστῶτας. Yet that reading seems to have origi- nated in alteration, to adapt it to περιβεβλη- μένους (for otherwise there would be an anomaly of expression unparalleled even in this Book); and I suspect that the οὐ in περιβεβλημένοι arose from blending the end of the word with the beginning of the next. As to the anacoluthon, we are not to bring in irregularities cause- lessly.—Thus far in my former Edd. On recon- sideration, I still continue to be of the same opinion as to the reading here; though I am ready to admit that the question as to the true reading is an open one. At any rate I prefer the reading ἰστῶτες to ἰστῶτας, adopted by Matth. and Wordsw. Though the Accusat. might be thought to have been accommodated not to ὄχλος, but to ὅς (scil. ὄχλος).—For φοίνικες, MS. B, and 30 cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3), have -κας, adopted by La. and Tia, while Matth., Gr., and Wordsw. retained -κας, which I continue to do, because in- ternal evidence is quite in its favour; though I am ready to admit that the true reading (in either case of very anomalous construction) is an open question.

10. κρᾶζουσι] This, for t. rec. κρᾶζετε, is adopted by all the recent Editors, on very strong authority (I add the Lamb. and Mus. copies), perhaps rightly; though internal evidence is in favour of κρᾶζετε, which may have been meant to match with ἰστῶτες and περιβεβλημένοι.— Ἡ σωτηρία—Ἀρνίε! A sublime chorus of the heavenly host, in which the Article at σωτ. is Ἀρνίῳ!" <sup>11</sup> Καὶ πάντες οἱ ἄγγελοι ἐστήκεσαν κύκλῳ τοῦ θρόνου καὶ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων καὶ τῶν τεσσάρων ζώων, καὶ ἔπεσαν ἐνώπιον τοῦ θρόνου ἐπὶ * τὰ πρόσωπα αὐτῶν, καὶ προσεκύνησαν τῷ Θεῷ, <sup>12</sup> λέγοντες "Ἀμήν! ἡ εὐλογία καὶ ἡ δόξα καὶ ἡ σοφία καὶ ἡ εὐχαριστία καὶ ἡ τιμὴ καὶ ἡ δύναμις καὶ ἡ ἰσχὺς τῷ Θεῷ ἡμῶν εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας τῶν αἰώνων, ἀμήν." [<sup>13</sup> Καὶ ἀπεκρίθη εἰς ἐκ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων, λέγων μοι· Οὗτοι οἱ περιβεβλημένοι τὰς στολὰς τὰς λευκάς, τίνες εἰσὶ καὶ πόθεν ἦλθον; <sup>14</sup> καὶ εἶρηκα αὐτῷ, κύριε μου, σὺ οἶδας. Καὶ εἶπέ μοι· Ὅδοί εἰσιν οἱ ἐρχόμενοι ἐκ τῆς θλίψεως τῆς μεγάλης, καὶ ἐπλύναν τὰς στολὰς αὐτῶν καὶ ἐλευκάναν στολὰς αὐτῶν ἐν τῷ αἵματι τοῦ Ἀρνίου. <sup>15</sup> Διὰ τοῦτό εἰσω ἐνώπιον τοῦ θρόνου τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ λατρεύουσιν αὐτῷ ἡμέρας καὶ νυκτὸς ἐν τῷ ναῷ αὐτοῦ καὶ ὁ καθήμενος ἐπὶ τοῦ θρόνου σκηνώσει ἐπ' αὐτούς. <sup>16</sup> Οὐ πεινά-

g. Im. 1. 18.
Heb. 9. 14.
1 John 1. 7.
ch. 1. 6.
2. 2.
2. 17. 6.

h. Im. 4. 5. 6.
Ps. 131. 6.

i. Ps. 131. 6.
Isa. 66. 10.

supposed by Dean Woodhouse to be emphatic,—‘the salvation;’ but it would rather seem to be used according to that canon of Bp. Middl. (ch. v. § 1), by which abstract nouns (i. e. nouns used in their most abstract sense) take the Article to express that abstraction. And so John iv. 22, ἡ σωτηρία ἐκ τῶν Ἰουδαίων ἐστίν, ‘salvation is from the Jews,’ and Acts iv. 12, ἡ ἀλλοφροσύνη ἡ σωτηρία. See also ch. xii. 10. xix. 1, and comp. v. 12.—For τοῦ θρόνου many MSS. have τῷ θρόνῳ, which is here, as on most other occasions, edited by La. and Tis.; though elsewhere they retain τοῦ θρόνου. I cannot imagine that the writer would adopt such a variety of construction; and therefore I have chosen, with Sch. and Wordsw., to retain τοῦ θρόνου, espec. considering that external authority is most in its favour.

11. Fort. rec. πρόσωπον all the recent Editors adopt πρόσωπα, from A, B, C, and 40 cursives (I add Lamb. 1186 and Mus. 1, 2); rightly; since the other is only a critical alteration. I have now adopted ἦσαν, with La., Tis., and Wordsw., from A, C, and several cursives, since internal evidence is in its favour.

12. λέγοντες Ἀμήν! ἡ εὐλογία, &c. There is here, as at supr. v. 4, and infr. xix. 4. xxii. 20, an ‘acclamatio in Doxologicum principio,’ serving to confirm the words of the great multitude;—only, as Wesl. observes, the Angels carry the praises much higher.

13—17. Here are described the glory and felicity of the Church.

13. ἀπεκρίθη ἡ ἀπάντησις. ‘answered.’—τίνες εἰσὶ—ἦλθον; A question, as Daubuz observes, not asked for want of knowledge, but in order to excite attention.

14. καὶ εἶπε αὐτῷ, κ. μ., σὺ οἶδας.] Comp. Ezek. xxxvii. 3. καὶ εἶπε πρὸς αὐτόν, κύριε, κύριε, σὺ ἐπίστη ταῦτα, also Jer. xv. 15. It would seem that St. John had in mind both those passages. In either passage the Pron. σὺ is emphatic, q. d. ‘It is thou who knowest (not I).’ The σὺ I have with some hesitation received, with La., Tis., and Wordsw., on strong authority, to which I add Lamb. and Mus. omn.—For τὰς στολὰς αὐτῶν Sch., La., and Wordsw., edit αὐτὰς from MS. A, and 7 cursives; while Tis. cancels the words, from MS. B, and 26 cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1186, Mus. 1, 2, 3, and Cov. 2, omitted by Mill). But I am far from being sure that the words are not genuine, and that they were not (as is so often the case) cancelled or altered for the sake of removing a tautology. In fact, I scarcely doubt that both the above two readings are only alterations of the early Critics, attesting the two ways in which they sought to remove the tautology; which is, however, quite in the manner of the sacred writers, espec. in cases where the feelings of the writer are strongly moved, as in the present passage, which may be said to inculcate most forcibly the cardinal doctrine of the Atonement by the blood of Jesus.

15. διὰ τοῦτό εἰσιν ἐνώπιον, &c.] With this I would compare a fine passage in Theocrit. Idyll. xvii. 16—25, containing the εὐπρόσβωτος of the Ptolemies of Egypt.—I here again retain τοῦ θρόνου (for which Matth., La., and Tis. adopt τῷ θρόνῳ, from MS. B, and 20 cursives), for reasons which I have adduced supr. v. 10. However, I doubt whether τῷ θρόνῳ be really in MS. B. It is noted in Bentley’s collation, but not in the other two. What increases my suspicion is, that the Lamb. and Mus. copies, which almost invariably support the Cod. B, here all desert it. And as for the 20 cursives alleged for τῷ θρ., there is, I suspect, some mistake; at least in recollating the very precious MS. 7 (the Cov. 2) I found τοῦ θρόνου.—λατρεύουσιν—ναῷ αὐτοῦ, namely, as priests (see i. 6), though a priesthood far more august than the Levitical.—σκηνώσει ἐπ’ αὐτούς, i. e. as Iaspis explains, ‘will ever cheer them with his presence, and protect them from harm.’ Comp. Num. ix. 18, 22, where σκηνοῦν is, in this sense, interchanged with σκέπειν. See Ezek. xliii. 9, and infra xxi. 3.

16, 17. The general sentiment here is, that ‘they shall be delivered from all the evils and miseries under which they laboured;’ and this is expressed by imagery of the most exquisite kind (oft. found in the Old Test. See Isa. xlix. 9, 10. lv. 1. Ps. xxiii. 2), designating both the evils from which they shall be everlastingly delivered, and the positive good which they shall eternally enjoy.

σουσιν ἔτι, οὐδὲ διψήσουσιν ἔτι, οὐδὲ μὴ πέσῃ ἐπ' αὐτοὺς ὁ ἥλιος, οὐδὲ πᾶν καύμα· 17 * ὅτι τὸ Ἀρνίον τὸ ἀνὰ μέσον τοῦ θρόνου πρίμανε αὐτοὺς, καὶ ὁδηγήσει αὐτοὺς ἐπὶ † ζωσας ἡγήγας ὑδάτων, καὶ ἐξαλείψει ὁ Θεὸς πᾶν δάκρυον * ἐκ τῶν ὀφθαλμῶν αὐτῶν.

VIII. 1 Καὶ ὅτε ἤνοιξε τὴν σφραγίδα τὴν ἐβδόμην, ἐγένετο σιγή ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ ὡς ἡμῶριον. 2 Καὶ εἶδον τοὺς ἑπτὰ ἀγγέλους οἱ ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐστήκασιν, καὶ ἐδόθησαν αὐτοῖς ἑπτὰ

16. οὐδὲ μὴ πέσῃ ἐπ' αὐτούς] namely, so as to injure them.

17. To advert to some matters of criticism and philology. For ποιμαίνει and ὁδηγεῖται, Matth. and Tis. edit ποιμαίνει and ὁδηγεῖται, with 30 cursives (to which I add Mus. 1, 2), while Gr., Sch., and Wordsw. retain the t. rec.; rightly; since, though internal evidence might seem in favour of the Present form, yet more external authority is needed; and internal evidence is partly in favour of the t. rec.; for it is not improb. that ποιμαίνει sprang from error of scribes, which would lead to the alteration of ὁδ. into the Present. Besides, the Pesch. Syr. and Vulg. Versions strongly confirm the t. rec.—As to the disputed reading ζωσας, I now feel a doubt whether my defence of the t. rec. be sufficient to sustain it; and I am inclined to defer to the authority of external evidence in a case like this, in which internal evidence is equally balanced, and would admit ζωσας, espec. considering that it is confirmed by three passages, infra xvi. 3. xxi. 6, and xxii. 1 and 17, comp. with John iv. 14; though ζωσας is somewhat supported by John iv. 14, ἵδωμεν ἂν σοι ὕδωρ ζῶν, meaning, 'the fountain of eternal life;' a passage, perhaps, present to the mind of some Critics of early times, who altered ζωσας to ζωσας, by way of removing a certain awkwardness arising from the Genit. ὑδάτων after ζωσας.—Ἐξαλείψει stands for the more Class. ἀπομόρξει, used in Plat. vi. 643, and Polyb. xv. 26, 3. The ἐκ for ἀπὸ has been adopted by all the best Editors, on the strongest evidence external and internal.

VIII. 'Here the writer (after the episode, by way of preparation, contained in the last Chapter) returns to the subject treated of at ch. vi. and unlooses the seventh and last seal; thus opening out, not an emblematic picture, but the book, or roll itself, written on both sides, and filled with matter of the most mournful kind, of which the events are supposed to be already accomplished, and the return itself of the Messiah is regarded as if seen with the eyes.' (Heinr.) The opening of the seventh seal introduces the period of the seven trumpets, which is, like the former, variously viewed by different Commentators, whose expositions are chiefly threefold: 1. That of Grot., Lightf., and Hamm., which supposes these prophecies to have been fulfilled in the Jewish wars, ending in the destruction of Jerusalem; 2. That of Mede, Bp. Newton, and others; of which see a full detail in Woodhouse. 3. That of Vitringa, and some eminent foreign Commentators, adopted by Dean Woodhouse, which distinguishes the prophetic history of the seals from that of the trumpets; the latter not being allowed as a continuation of the former, in a regular line of succession. 'The emblems (observes Dean Woodhouse) under the seals are understood to exhibit a general history of the greater changes which were to take place in the world, more espec. in the Christian Church, until the end; while those under the trumpets are supposed to foretel and recount the history of the same times, but much more particularly and minutely, and under different characters. The seals foretel the history of the Christian Church; and the first six contain a short, rapid, and general sketch of the progress of Christianity from its first establishment in the world to that time, yet future, when the enemies of Christ shall be separated for punishment, and his faithful servants for heavenly favour and rewards.'

1. ἐγένετο σιγή—ἡμῶριον] This is generally supposed to be an allusion to a ceremony in Jewish worship, of silence for secret prayer, while incense was offered on the golden altar in the Sanctuary. It seems better, however, to imagine no such allusion, but to simply suppose the awful silence merely as suspending the gratification of even holy curiosity, and as a solemn pause preparatory and introductory to yet more august representations; such as were, to use the words of Hor. Od. ii. 13, 29, 'sacro digna silentio,' things not only worthy to be heard in, but to be ushered in, by deep silence.—For ἡμῶριον La. and Tis. edit, from MSS. A. C (I add Mus. 2), ἡμῶριον; while Sch. and Wordsw. retain ἡμῶριον, found in B and all the other MSS.; very properly; for there is no proof that the word ἡμῶριον ever existed; while ἡμῶριον is found in good writers of the later Greek. I doubt not that the reading ἡμῶριον arose from an error of the scribes, who here committed other blunders. The word is an Adverbial expression, formed on the subst. ἡμῶριον used as an Accus. of time, of which exx. occur in Strabo and Pollux. And, though it be very rare, I have found the Adverbial use of ἡμῶρι. in Procop. Hist. p. 623, ἀνθρώπων οὐδὲ ἡμῶριον θανάτον ἴστυν ἵσταῖσα βίωσαν.

2. τοὺς ἑπτὰ ἀγγέλους—ἴστ.] The words should be rendered, 'And I beheld the seven Angels who stand before (the presence of) God;' those mentioned again, but as discharging another office, supr. xv. 1. Jackson, of Leicester, remarks, 'Constantinus Judaeorum opinio statuit, septem Angelos Deo proximos: forte hauserunt ex Tob. xii. 15, vel Zech. iv. 10.' We find traces of this in the Rabbinical writers; e.g. Targum Jonath. ad Gen. xi. 7, 'Dixit Deus septem Angelis, qui stant coram illo;' which confirms my rendering of ἴσθη, required by the context, and that idiom in the form ἴσθηκασιν (unknown, it seems, both to the ancient and modern Translators), by which the Perf. tense ἴσθηκα is used as a Prob ch. 5. 6.

a 3. 5.
c 12. 13.
d 14. 15.

c Ps. 141. 2.
Luke 1. 10.

d Ezek. 20.
22.
Isa. 2. 12.
ch. 9. 4.
a 16. 2.

σάλπυγγες. <sup>3</sup> <sup>b</sup> Καὶ ἄλλος ἄγγελος ἦλθε, καὶ ἐστάθη ἐπὶ τὸ θυσιαστήριον ἔχων λιβανωτὸν χρυσοῦν καὶ ἐδόθη αὐτῷ θυμιάματα πολλὰ, ἵνα † δώσῃ ταῖς προσευχαῖς τῶν ἁγίων πάντων ἐπὶ τὸ θυσιαστήριον τὸ χρυσοῦν τὸ ἐνώπιον τοῦ θρόνου. <sup>4</sup> <sup>c</sup> καὶ ἀνέβη ὁ καπνὸς τῶν θυμιαμάτων ταῖς προσευχαῖς τῶν ἁγίων ἐκ χειρὸς τοῦ ἁγγέλου ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ. <sup>5</sup> καὶ εἴληφεν ὁ ἄγγελος τὸν λιβανωτὸν, καὶ ἐγέμισεν αὐτὸν ἐκ τοῦ πυρὸς τοῦ θυσιαστηρίου, καὶ ἔβαλεν εἰς τὴν γῆν καὶ ἐγένοντο φωναὶ καὶ βρονταὶ καὶ ἀστραπαὶ καὶ σεισμός.

<sup>6</sup> Καὶ οἱ ἑπτὰ ἄγγελοι οἱ ἔχοντες τὰς ἑπτὰ σάλπυγγας ἤτοιμασαν ἑαυτοὺς ἵνα σαλπίσωσι. <sup>7</sup> <sup>d</sup> Καὶ ὁ πρῶτος [ἄγγελος] ἐσάλπισε καὶ ἐγένετο χάλαζα καὶ πῦρ μεμιγμένα ἐν αἵματι, sent; on which see Battm. Gr. Gr. § 107, ii. 2.

3. ἄλλος ἄγγελος] i. e. the great Angel of the Covenant, the Lord Jesus, as most Commentators explain. To this, however, well-founded objections have been made by Dean Woodhouse, who supposes that the angel represents the Christian priesthood in general, exercised in subordination to the great High-priest.—ἵνα δώσῃ—δύλων, 'that he might give it to the prayers of the saints,' i. e. that he might give the effect of incense to the prayers of the saints (Vitringa and Burton); thus showing, by an expressive emblem, that the prayers of the saints are acceptable to God.—To advert to a matter of various reading. For δώσῃ, La. and Tis. edit δώσει, from MSS. A and C, and not a few cursives (I add Mus. 1), with Andr.; while Sch. and Wordsw. retain δώσῃ. Nay, the latter regards δώσει as scarcely a various reading at all, but a mere change arising from the ὁμοφωνία between ῖ and ῑ, put by itacism. Here, however, the change is between εῖ and ῑ, and it should seem that the change in question represents a true various reading pointing at a variety of construction between the *ῑ*ae followed by Subj. and by Fut. Ind. And vestiges there are of the latter idiom (unclassical though it be) elsewhere in the N. T., espec. in this Book. So infr. ix. 4, ἀδικήσουσιν, and xxii. 14, in all the MSS., καὶ ἔσται, infr. xiii. 16, in some copies ἵνα δάσωσιν, John xv. 8, ἵνα γενήσῃς, where several copies have the Subj. I Cor. xiii. 3, ἵνα καθήσονται, as Tis. edita, from most of the uncial MSS., where others, with the t. rec., have καθήσονται. 1 Pet. iii. 1, ἵνα κερδηθῇσονται, as Tis. edita, from all the most ancient MSS., where the t. rec. has κερδηθήσονται. Eph. vi. 3, ἵνα εἰ σοὶ γίνῃται καὶ ἔσται. So also Mark xii. 19, in MSS. A, B, and many others, ἵνα λάβῃ—καὶ ἔξαναστήσῃ. Hence it is very possible that δώσει may here be the true reading.

5. εἴληφεν—τὸν λιβανωτὸν—καὶ ἔβαλεν εἰς τὴν γῆν] This preparatory vision may, with Dean Woodhouse, be supposed to concern the Christian Church, and the 'burning incense' be understood, with him, to denote the Christian religion and worship pure and heavenly in its origin and nature, but which, being sent down to earth, and mixing with the passions of sinful men, produces signal commotions. It begins in pure incense,—which is offered up purely for a time, till, mingling with human corruptions, it becomes the instrument of discord and violence. After this, the general view, are in the sequel of this seal more particularly depicted the heresies and commotions which, under the name of Christianity, afflicted the Christian world, and almost banished from it true religion. The symbolical action of casting the contents of the golden censer upon the earth naturally paves the way for the representation of the effects of the Gospel thus sent, in producing commotions upon earth, agreeably to our Lord's words, Luke xii. 49, πῦρ ἦλθον βαλεῖν εἰς τὴν γῆν, i. e. 'divisions and discords.'

6. οἱ ἔχοντες] The οἱ before ἔχοντες, absent from t. rec., has been, on ample authority, inserted by all the recent Editors.—τὰς ἑπτὰ σάλπ. On the intent of these trumpets great difference of opinion exists. The best founded view seems to be that of Dean Woodhouse, who supposes them to designate hostile attacks, and thinks that throughout the object is the same—the pure Christian Church; and that the assailants are not only its infidel and acknowledged foes, but also those, its most formidable enemies, who, professing to belong to its body, have taught doctrines, and pursued measures, contrary to its purity, destructive of its peace, and almost of its existence,—the heretics and anticristian corrupters. 'A view (continues he) confirmed by the fact, that in those visions of the trumpets whose meaning can be most accurately ascertained, the Christian Church is evidently the object of assault. Such it is seen to be in the fifth and sixth trumpets, and yet more clearly and confessedly in the seventh, where (xi. 15) upon the angel's sounding, the heavenly voices immediately proclaim the victory, and award the kingdoms of the world to Christ; and that this Church is to partake the happiness and glory of his victory and reign, is apparent from the subsequent song of the elders, and indeed from all holy writ. In this seventh and last conflict the contending powers are fully declared, and we may reasonably suppose them the same in all the stages of the warfare, under the four first trumpets, as well as under the three last.'

7. ἄγγελος] The word has been cancelled by all the recent Editors, on strong evidence, external and internal.—ἰγύνετο—αἵματι. Comp.

καὶ ἐβλήθη εἰς τὴν γῆν καὶ τὸ τρίτον τῆς γῆς κατεκάν, καὶ τὸ τρίτον τῶν δένδρων κατεκάν, καὶ πᾶς χόρτος χλωρὸς κατεκάν.
8<sup>ο</sup> Καὶ ὁ δεῦτερος ἄγγελος ἐσάλπισε καὶ ὡς ὄρος μέγα πυρὶ καίόμενον ἐβλήθη εἰς τὴν θάλασσαν καὶ ἐγένετο τὸ τρίτον τῆς θαλάσσης αἷμα, <sup>9</sup> καὶ ἀπέθανε τὸ τρίτον τῶν κτισμάτων τῶν ἐν τῇ θαλάσῃ, τὰ ἔχοντα ψυχὰς, καὶ τὸ τρίτον τῶν πλοίων † διεφθάρη. <sup>10</sup> Καὶ ὁ τρίτος ἄγγελος ἐσάλπισε καὶ ἔπεσεν ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ἀστὴρ μέγας καίόμενος ὡς λαμπάς, καὶ ἔπεσεν ἐπὶ τὸ τρίτον τῶν ποταμῶν, καὶ ἐπὶ τὰς πηγὰς [τῶν] ὑδάτων
11<sup>ο</sup> καὶ τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ ἀστέρος λέγεται [ὁ] ἄψινθος καὶ † γίνεται τὸ τρίτον τῶν ὑδάτων εἰς ἄψινθον καὶ πολλοὶ τῶν ἀνθρώπων

Jer. 51. 25.
Amos 7. 4.
ch. 16. 3.

Isa. 14. 12.
ch. 16. 4.

Ruth i. 20.
Exod. 16. 22.
Jer. 9. 15.

Isa. ix. 18, 19. xxix. 17—24. Exod. ix. 23, 24. Ezek. xxvi. 15, 16; whence it is plain that the in has been here rightly inserted, from many MSS. (I add all the Lamb and Mus. copies) and early Editions, by the most eminent Editors; who also, on the best authority (to which I can make the same addition) insert καὶ τὸ τρίτον τῆς γῆς κατεκάν. The omission, no doubt, arose from the recurrence of κατεκάν. The whole imagery here is such as is often employed to denote great calamity, as χάλαξα is a symbol of Divine wrath, infr. xi. 19. xvi. 21.—εἰς τὴν γῆν, 'upon the land,' as distinguished from the sea at ver. 8. So Dean Woodhouse, who also takes τὴν γῆν to denote Jewish Christians; and τὴν θάλασσαν at ver. 8, the Gentile Christians. By 'the trees' he understands 'genuine Christians,' many of them (τὸ τρίτον denoting a considerable part) destroyed by the fire of persecution, and by 'the green grass,' 'those Christians who make a fair show, but in time of persecution fall away.' Finally, he considers the imagery of the remainder of this Chapter, as symbolically designating the corruptions of the Gospel by heretics, and the darkness and ignorance subsequent to that corruption.

8. ὄρος μέγ. π. καίω. ἐβλ. ε. τ. θάλ.] In tracing the fulfilment, our usual guides fail us, and propound little short of absurdities. Prof. Lee is so far right in supposing the figures derived from Jer. li. 25, and thus the 'mountain' may designate an immense host of men cast upon any spot; prob. pointing at the irruption of the vast hordes of Sarmatian descent on the Roman empire, whereby it was in the end destroyed; just as was the Babylonian empire, as recorded by the Prophet. The 'sea' here cannot designate, as many suppose, the people of Europe so destroyed, but 'the sea,' κατ' ἑξοχὴν, the Mediterranean,—an expression used to designate the situation of the sea which washed the shores of nearly the whole Roman empire.—πυρὶ, not found in MS. B, and 29 cursive, with the Lamb. and Mus. copies, with Aræth., was cancelled by Matth.; but on insecure grounds, since it is found in the other uncial MSS., and above half of the cursive, confirmed by the Syr., Vulg., and other Versions; and likely was it to have been thrown out by certain Critics, who viewed it as a pleonasm, not bearing in mind Heb. xii. 18, and even infr. xxi. 8, λίμνη τῇ καίωμιν πυρὶ.

9. διεφθάρη] The MS. A, and 8 cursive, with Andr., have διεφθάρησαν, which has been adopted by La. and Tia, but on insufficient grounds, external authority being against the reading, and internal evidence by no means in its favour, since it has every appearance of being a mere alteration proceeding from some Critics, who thought a Plural verb called for by grammatical propriety; though the contrary would rather be the case. In this casting of the burning mount into the sea, there is a symbol of utter destruction, as appears from xviii. 21, λίθον ὡς μύλον μέγας, καὶ ἐβαλεν εἰς τὴν θάλασσαν, where see note. Moreover, it is plain that the writer meant to keep the animalia and the inanimate creation distinct, and for that reason employed two verbs, each of which, depending on τὸ τρίτον, must be in the Sing. And, as ἀπέθανεν is so, thus ought διεφθ.

10, 11. The idea of the falling star seems to be taken from Isa. xiv. 12, where the fall of Babylon is predicted; and as Babylon appears in this book to be put for heathen Rome, the fall of the latter is here undoubtedly had in view by the Apocalypse. The star is further called wormwood, to denote, perhaps, the sorrows inflicted by that people, wherever they went. See Ruth i. 20. Exod. xv. 50. (Lee).—ἀστὴρ—ὡς λαμπάς. Daubuz remarks, that 'the Romans sometimes called a comet [rather a meteor] fulx cælestis.' So, I would add, did the Greeks occasionally use the term λαμπάς. Thus, in Artemid. Onir. i. ii. 9, we have, τὸ δὲ αὐτὸ σημαίνει καὶ λαμπάδες ἐξ οὐρανοῦ κατιόνται; which passage furnishes an apt illustration of the use of the term here, since λαμπάδες there must denote meteors, or 'falling stars.'

11. The Art. ὁ is prefixed to ἄψινθος by all the recent Editors. It is prob., but not certainly, genuine, since, while the Article here is confirmed by a passage supr. vi. 8, it is, on the other hand, rejected by another, infr. iv. 11, though more likely was it to have been thrown out than put in. For γίνεται, MSS. A, B, and not a few others (with Lamb. and Mus. copies), have ἔγινετο, which is received by Matth., La., Tia., and Wordsw., while Gr. and Sch. retain γίνεται, rightly; since it has a preponderance of external authority, and is supported by internal evidence, from the circumstance that the use of the Present is quite in the style of St. John, and indeed of the Scriptural writers in general. Even Wordsw. seems to have intended to edit γίνεται, which seems to be in MS. C, since in his note he remarks, 'The original is γίνεται (sic) εἰν ἀπέθανον ἐκ τῶν ὑδάτων, ὅτι ἐπικράνθησαν. <sup>12</sup> Καὶ ὁ τέταρτος ἄγγελος ἐσάλπισε καὶ ἐπλήρη τὸ τρίτον τοῦ ἡλίου, καὶ τὸ τρίτον τῆς σελήνης, καὶ τὸ τρίτον τῶν ἀστέρων ἵνα σκοτισθῇ τὸ τρίτον αὐτῶν, καὶ ἡ ἡμέρα μὴ * φάνη τὸ τρίτον αὐτῆς, καὶ ἡ νύξ ὁμοίως. <sup>13</sup> Καὶ εἶδον, καὶ ἤκουσα ἑνὸς * ἀετοῦ πετομένου ἐν μεσουρανήματι λέγοντος φωνῇ μεγάλῃ "Οὐαί, οὐαί, οὐαί τοῖς κατοικοῦσιν ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, ἐκ τῶν λοιπῶν φωνῶν τῆς σάλπυγγος τῶν τριῶν ἀγγέλων τῶν μελλόντων σαλπίζειν!"

a Luke 8. 31.
b 10. 14.
ch. 17. 8.

IX. 1 * Καὶ ὁ πέμπτος ἄγγελος ἐσάλπισε καὶ εἶδον ἀστέρα ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ πεπτωκότα εἰς τὴν γῆν, καὶ ἐδόθη αὐτῷ ἡ κλεῖς τοῦ φρέατος τῆς ἀβύσσου <sup>2</sup> καὶ ἤνοιξε τὸ φρέαρ τῆς ἀβύσσου καὶ ἀνέβη καπνὸς ἐκ τοῦ φρέατος ὡς καπνὸς καμίνου † μεγάλης ἀψιθον.' The τῶν before ἀθρ. has been, on good grounds, inserted by all the recent Editors.

12. A better comment on this passage than Isa. viii. 21, 22. ix. 1—7, cannot be given; which is a direct prophecy of these times. Another such prophecy is in Zech. xiv.; and vv. 6, 7, mark out the particulars here mentioned. (Lee.)—To advert to matters of disputed reading. For t. rec. φάση, MSS. A, B, and several cursives, have φάση, which has been received by Matth., and, after him, by La., Tia., and Wordsw.; while Gr., Heinr., Vater, and Sch. retain φάση. Internal evidence is in favour of φάση, from the rarity of the form; and that evidence ought here to decide. The sense is, 'so that the day did not shine for one-third of its course,' or 'was shorn of one-third of its light.'

13. The readings αετοῦ for ἀγγέλου, and πετομένου for πετῶν, are, on the strongest grounds, adopted by all the recent Editors.—μεσουρανήματι may be rendered, the 'mid-heaven,' or the space between heaven and earth, and answering to the akhera of heaven, or the sky. The word occurs only in the later writers.—οὐαί, οὐαί, οὐαί—σαλπίζειν! The sense may be thus expressed, with Iaspis: 'Ferri adhuc poterant, quæ vidisti, omnia: sed tria illa mala, nunc ingruentia, funestissimum afferent exitum.' The exact references in these woes will be according to the hypothesis adopted; and to any of the above it is very suitable. Dean Woodhouse observes, that 'under the four first trumpets, which have their beginning from this period, the storm increases; and under the three last, it advances to its maturity, and produces the most special and desolating effects, by three distinct explosions. The three woes correspond to the three last trumpets, which, or the woes-trumpets, are generally regarded as predicting the miserable state of the Church in the dark ages.' See also Bp. Newton.

IX. 1. εἶδον—εἰς τὴν γῆν] Render: 'I saw a star fallen (= 'which had fallen') from heaven unto earth.' By ἡ κλεῖς is meant the 'power to open.' It is generally agreed, that this star must denote, agreeably to the symbolical language of prophecy, a teacher, as in viii. 10; and that, no doubt, a false teacher pretending to a Divine Legation. Most Expositors fix on Mahomet; but good reasons are given by Dean Woodhouse why it may be supposed to denote Satan, the instigator to all heresy, and the great Heresiarch.—τοῦ φρέατος τῆς ἀβύσσου means, as Prof. Lee explains, 'the well of the abyss of waters' in the bowels of the earth. He also compares Ezek. xxvi. 19, from which he thinks that here by opening the great deep is implied the letting loose of some power to take vengeance similar to that in the passage of the Prophet. The subsequent expressions, καπνὸς, ἐκκένσθη, and ἀπρίδας, have all assigned to them, by Woodhouse, a mystical sense. Others, however, take a very different view, according to the hypothesis they adopt.

2. ἤνοιξε τὸ φρ.] 'opened,' not, as Beng. thinks, by making an orifice, but by opening the mouth of the pit by removing the huge stone which closed it. See Gen. xxix. 2.—καμ. μεγάλη, 'of a huge furnace.' There is, however, a variety of reading, and consequent difference of opinion, among Critics. For μεγ., MS. B, and 30 cursives (with Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3), have καμίνου, approved by Mill, and edited by Matth.; while Gr., La., Tia., and Wordsw. have, with me, retained μεγ., supposing, I imagine, καμιν. a critical alteration, to introduce a term more definite, as called for by the context; having, perhaps, in mind Dan. iii. 6, εἰς τὴν κάμινον τοῦ πυρὸς καμίνου. Yet that is almost implied in καμίνου, and μεγ. might be mentioned by way of showing that the fire was a great one. Comp. Ezek. xxiv. 9. However, on careful reconsideration of the question, the thing seems not clearly made out. It is quite as prob. that καμιν. was written by the Apostle, and that μεγάλη came in either from a marginal Scholium, or from a Critic, who thought the circumstance of size better expressed, than implied. When, however, brought in addition to καμιν. (as we find in several MSS.), it was likely to expel καμιν. That St John used the epithet καμιν. is pretty certain, from various passages of the O. T., which seem to have been in his mind; e. gr. Exod. xix. 18. Dan. iii. 6, already noticed. Job xii. 11, ἐκκεντρήσαν αὐτοῦ ἱκανοῖται καπνὸς καμίνου καμίνου περὶ ἐνθράκων. Besides, as Heinr. truly observes, καμιν. here is a term more suitable to the context, than μεγάλη, and, though that would not of itself sufficiently prove its genuineness, yet internal evidence much confirms the strong external authority for καμιν. Besides, I cannot find a single ex. of the use of μεγάλ. with καμ.

καὶ ἐσκοτίσθη ὁ ἥλιος καὶ ὁ ἄηρ ἐκ τοῦ καπνοῦ τοῦ φρέατος.
<sup>3</sup> Καὶ ἐκ τοῦ καπνοῦ ἐξήλθον ἀκρίδες εἰς τὴν γῆν, καὶ ἐδόθη αὐταῖς ἐξουσία ὡς ἔχουσιν ἐξουσίαν οἱ σκορπίοι τῆς γῆς· <sup>4</sup> <sup>b</sup> καὶ ἐρρέθη αὐταῖς ἵνα μὴ ἀδικήσωσι τὸν χόρτον τῆς γῆς, οὐδὲ πᾶν χλωρὸν, οὐδὲ πᾶν δένδρον,—εἰ μὴ τοὺς ἀνθρώπους [μόνους] οἷτινες οὐκ ἔχουσι τὴν σφραγίδα τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐπὶ τῶν μετώπων αὐτῶν. <sup>5</sup> Καὶ ἐδόθη αὐταῖς ἵνα μὴ ἀποκτείνωσιν αὐτοὺς, ἀλλ’ ἵνα † βασανισθῶσι μῆνας πέντε· καὶ ὁ βασανισμὸς αὐτῶν ὡς βασανισμὸς σκορπίου, ὅταν παίσῃ ἄνθρωπον. <sup>6</sup> Καὶ ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις ἐκείναις ζητήσουσιν οἱ ἄνθρωποι τὸν θάνατον, καὶ * οὐ μὴ εὕρῃσουσιν αὐτόν καὶ ἐπιθυμήσουσιν ἀποθανεῖν, καὶ φεύξ-εται ὁ θάνατος ἀπ’ αὐτῶν. <sup>7</sup> <sup>a</sup> Καὶ τὰ ὁμοιώματα τῶν ἀκρίδων ὅμοια ἔπποις ἡτοιμασμένους εἰς πόλεμον καὶ ἐπὶ τὰς κεφαλὰς αὐτῶν ὡς στέφανοι ὅμοιοι χρυσῷ, καὶ τὰ πρόσωπα αὐτῶν ὡς πρόσωπα ἀνθρώπων, <sup>8</sup> καὶ εἶχον τρίχας ὡς τρίχας γυναικῶν, <sup>a</sup> Joel 1. 6.
 καὶ οἱ ὀδόντες αὐτῶν ὡς λεόντων ἦσαν. <sup>9</sup> καὶ εἶχον θώρακας ὡς θώρακας σιδηροῦς, καὶ ἡ φωνὴ τῶν πτερύγων αὐτῶν ὡς φωνὴ <sup>b</sup> Ezek. 2. 4.

 ch. 6. 6.
 & 7. 2.

<sup>c</sup> Isa. 2. 19.
 Jer. 5. 1.
 Hos. 10. 8.
 Luke 22. 30.
 ch. 6. 16.

<sup>d</sup> Ezek. 10. 4.
 Wied. 16. 9.
 Joel 2. 4.

—Ἐσκοτίθη, for -τίσθη, found in MS. A, and 3 cursives, is a mere grammatical alteration, as baseless in evidence, as groundless in propriety of diction.

3. ὡς ἔχουσιν ἐξουσίαν οἱ σκορπ. i. e. power not to kill, but to torture and inflict misery.

4. ἵνα μὴ ἀδικήσωσι.] La. and Tis. edit ἀδικήσουσι, from MS. A, and one cursive;—a reading worthy of attention, as will appear from my note supr. viii. 3, though not of adoption on authority so slender.—μόνους has been, on the strongest grounds, cancelled by all the recent Editors.—αὐτῶν is cancelled by La., Tis. (last ed.), and Wordsw., from the MS. A, and 2 cursives. But that authority is insufficient to authorize the cancelling of a word, espec. where internal evidence is, as here, equally balanced. This is now, I find, seen by Tis., since he has, in his 2nd ed., restored the word.

6. [ζητήσουσι.—ἀπ’ αὐτῶν] A very expressive, and, by the parallelism, most energetic, mode of expressing an utter weariness of life. Comp. Luke xxiii. 29, sq. xxi. 28, and the Class. citations in Wetst., and Bp. Jebb, Sac. Lit. p. 315, fin.—ὁ θάνατος is absent from Cov. 2, and from that alone; yet Dr. Mill, Proleg. 163, is of opinion that this is the genuine reading; thinking that it was more likely ὁ θάνατος should have been left understood than expressed. But although that would in the Class. Greek writers have been the case, yet not in such a writer as St. John. It is, moreover, highly improb. that the expression should have crept into all the copies but one. It is far more likely that the expression was lost by its variety of position—a case of frequent occurrence. Besides, to remove the expression would diminish the force, and mar the beauty, of a passage all but poetic, ὁ θάνατος being almost personified, as it is quite so in several other passages of Scripture. For the same reason I have, with all the recent Editors, adopted οὐ μὴ for οὐχ, from the 3 uncial, and many cursive MSS. (to which I add Lamb.

1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3).—For φεύξεται Lach. and Tis. read φεύγει, from MS. A alone,—inadmissible, on such slight authority, and, indeed, I suspect a mere error of the scribe (who so often blunders) for φεύξει, which might happen, since Γ and Ζ in some forms of uncial writing, as X and Λ, are very similar. Or the true reading in the original may be φεύγει, 2nd Fut. ; a form of the ordinary Greek often found in the later writers. It is quite possible that St. John may have used the form.

7—10. These figurative locusts are now described, representing a sort of army; comp. Joel ii. 4, seqq. The description has many striking points of similarity in the Arabians, who are generally supposed to be here meant; they being always famed for horsemanship. Thus the crowns will correspond to the turbans of that people; and their having the hair of women is explained by the Arabian custom of wearing their hair long. By the ‘teeth of lions,’ they are well designated as strong to devour. The breast-plates allude to the scales of the locusts; and the sound of their wings, to the rapidity of their conquests. The description, however, I apprehend, would be quite as applicable to some other Eastern nations as to the Arabians; and certainly there are many characteristics which suit the Zelotes, according to the hypothesis of many learned Commentators. So Jos. Bell. Jud. iv. 9, 10, γυναικίζονται διὰ τὸ ὄψις, ἐφόρων ταῖς δαξιαῖς θρυπτομένοις διὰ τοῖς βαβίλασιν, ἐκπίπτες ἐξαιτῆς ἐγίνοντο πολεμισταί. There are, Bp. Newton thinks, ‘some things here said in allusion to the properties of natural locusts, which well designate horsemen; their heads resembling a horse’s head; whence the Italians call them cavallette.’ So, I would add, the army of Thracians, under Sitalkes, going to the aid of the Athenians against Macedonia, spoken of by Thucyd. ii. 98, are thus alluded to by Aristoph. Acham. 137, ‘Ὅσον τὸ χρέμα παρόντων προσέρχεται! In either case there is a strong figure, to denote immense ἀρμάτων ἵππων πολλῶν τρεχόντων εἰς πόλεμον. <sup>10</sup> καὶ ἔχουσιν οὐράς ὁμοίας σκορπίους, καὶ κέντρα ἦν ἐν ταῖς οὐραῖς αὐτῶν, καὶ ἡ ἐξουσία αὐτῶν ἀδικῆσαι τοὺς ἀνθρώπους μῆνας πέντε.

f ver. 1.

g ch. 8. 12.

<sup>11</sup> [Καὶ] ἔχουσιν ἐφ' αὐτῶν βασιλέα τὸν ἄγγελον τῆς ἀβύσσου, ὄνομα αὐτῷ Ἑβραϊστὶ Ἀβαδδὼν, † καὶ ἐν τῇ Ἑλληνικῇ ὄνομα ἔχει Ἀπολλύων. <sup>12</sup> εἴ Ἡ οὐαὶ ἡ μία ἀπῆλθεν ἰδοὺ, † ἔρχονται ἔτι δύο οὐαὶ μετὰ ταῦτα.

h ch. 7. 1.

<sup>13</sup> Καὶ ὁ ἕκτος ἄγγελος ἐσάλπισε καὶ ἤκουσα φωνὴν μίαν ἐκ τῶν τεσσάρων κεράτων τοῦ θυσιαστηρίου τοῦ χρυσοῦ τοῦ ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ, <sup>14</sup> † λέγουσαν τῷ ἕκτῳ ἄγγέλῳ, ὁ ἔχων τὴν σάλπιγγα· Λύσον τοὺς τέσσαρας ἄγγέλους τοὺς δεδεμένους ἐπὶ τῷ ποταμῷ τῷ μεγάλῳ Εὐφράτῃ. <sup>15</sup> Καὶ ἐλύθησαν οἱ τέσσαρες ἄγγελοι οἱ ἡτομασμένοι εἰς τὴν ὥραν καὶ ἡμέραν καὶ μῆνα καὶ ἑνιαυτὸν, ἵνα ἀποκτείνωσι τὸ τρίτον τῶν ἀνθρώπων. <sup>16</sup> † Καὶ

i Ps. 68. 17.
Dan. 7. 10.

multitudes and insatiable rapacity.—Thus far in my former Edd. I would now add another trait in this graphic sketch of the figurative locusts, namely, as appears from v. 9, ἀρμάτων—τρεχόντων εἰς πόλεμον, their impetuosity in rushing to the contest,—a trait to which there is allusion in their very designation as ἀκρίδας. Thus in Antiphan. προγ. fr. i. 6, p. 546, a person of most vehement character describes himself as τύπτειν κίραυσι, ἐκτεφλοῦν τιν' ἀστραπή, φέρειν τιν' ἀρας ἀνιμῶς,—θώρας μοχλιεύει σισαμῶς, εἰσπηδᾷν ἀκρίς.

<sup>10</sup> κέντρα ἦν ἐν ταῖς οὐραῖς α.] This is meant to show that they were highly periculosissimi, ever ready to hurt as well as to spoil. So Pliny, Hist. xi. 25, cited by Heintz., says of scorpions, 'Semper cauda in seculum est, nulloque momento meditari cessat, ne quando deest occasione.'—ἡ ἐξουσία αὐτῶν, scil. ἦν, τοῦ, &c., equiv. to ἰδὸθ' αὐταῖς, supr. v. 5. Thus ἐξουσία is used, as infr. v. 19, of the virtue, or power, with which nature endues animals.—The μῆνας πέντε here and supr. v. 5, prob. have reference to the whole lifetime of these ephemeral creatures, which are hatched in early spring, and die at the end of summer.

<sup>11</sup> In Ἀβαδδὼν (lit. 'the destroyer') there is an allusion to Job xxvi. 6. xxviii. 22, and Prov. xv. 11; for there it is joined with ὕψος and γῆ so as to correspond to the Greek Ἀΐδης. It may here designate Satan, as the instigator of heresy. For καὶ ἔχουσιν, MS. B, and 26 cursives, have ἔχουσαι, which is edited by Matth., Sch., and Tis.; while MS. A and some others have ἔχουσιν, adopted by Gr. and Wordsw.; rightly; for that is more likely to have been the original reading. However, my own text, [καὶ] ἔχουσιν, seems the most correct, since the καὶ is most prob. genuine, and was, we may suppose, removed after the ἔχουσαι crept in. For ἐφ' αὐτῶν, Tis. and Wordsw. edit ἐν αὐτῶν, from MSS. A, B, and several others; while Gr. and Sch. retain ἐφ' αὐτῶν, which is the more likely to be genuine as being more Hellenistic in its character. For t. rec. καὶ ἐν, Matth. and Tis. edit, from MS. B, and 30 cursives, ἐν εἰ; while Sch. and Wordsw. retain καὶ ἐν; very properly; since internal evidence is quite in its favour, the other being prob. a mere correction of style.

<sup>12</sup> ἡ οὐαὶ—ταῦτα] The words may be regarded, with Heintz., as those of the angel exclaiming aloud in the mid-heaven.—Strong authority (A and 20 cursives, with Lamb. and Mus. om.) exists for ἔρχεται, adopted by the recent Editors; yet it prob. arose from error of scribes, who mistook the abbreviation of the two terminations.

<sup>13</sup>—<sup>21</sup>. This is by one class of Interpreters referred to the victories of Vespasian; by others, to those of the Mahometans; the first was being, they think, of the Arabian locusts; and the next, of the Euphratean horsemen. Dean Woodhouse, while he admits that this vision may be fitly applied to the irruption of particular Mahometan nations, yet suggests that the symbols of this vision, although more strictly applicable to the first grand irruption by Mahomet and his Saracens, may not unfitly be so applied as to comprehend them all.

<sup>14</sup> λέγουσαν] The MSS. here fluctuate between the readings λέγουσα, λέγουσαν, λέγουτος, and λέγων, and Editors differ in their texts. Gr. and Sch. retain the t. rec. λέγουσαν, Matth. and Wordsw. edit λέγουτος, from B and 20 cursives; La. and Tis. adopt λέγουσα, which I prefer, as having internal evidence in its favour, and being confirmed by xi. 15, ἰδούστε φωνὰ μ. λέγουσας, as at least Gr., Sch., La., and Tis. read, for t. rec. λέγουσαι, which prob. arose, as here, from grammatical emendation.—ὁ ἔχων, for τῷ ἔχοντι, a solecism arising from utter neglect of the rules of apposition and concord; like that infr. xiv. 12, and elsewhere in this Book; of which see cxx. in Green, Gr. N. T. Dial., p. 315. The t. rec. has εἰς εἶχε, but this is of slender authority, and evidently arose from grammatical correction.

<sup>15</sup> καὶ ἐλύθησαν—ἑνιαυτὸν] Render: 'So there were loosed the four angels [that were bound] who were prepared [unto action] for an hour, &c.:' meaning, prob., as Daubuz supposes, 'for any such time as God should appoint.' The purpose of the work, for which they were ready, is expressed in the words following, ἵνα ἀποκτείνωσι τὸ τρίτον, &c.

ὁ ἀριθμὸς τῶν στρατευμάτων τοῦ † ἵππικοῦ δύο μυριάδες μυριάδων [καὶ] ἤκουσα τὸν ἀριθμὸν αὐτῶν. 17 * Καὶ οὕτως εἶδον <sup>k Isa. 5. 28.</sup> τοὺς ἵππους ἐν τῇ ὁράσει, καὶ τοὺς καθημένους ἐπ' αὐτῶν, ἔχοντας <sup>1 Chron. 12. 8.</sup> θώρακας πυρίνους καὶ ὑακινθίνους καὶ θειώδεις καὶ αἱ κεφαλὰι τῶν ἵππων ὡς κεφαλὰι λεόντων καὶ ἐκ τῶν στομάτων αὐτῶν ἐκπορεύεται πῦρ καὶ καπνὸς καὶ θεῖον. 18 * Ἀπὸ τῶν τριῶν πληγῶν τούτων ἀπεκτάνθησαν τὸ τρίτον τῶν ἀνθρώπων, ἐκ τοῦ πυρὸς καὶ [ἐκ] τοῦ καπνοῦ καὶ [ἐκ] τοῦ θείου τοῦ ἐκπορευομένου ἐκ τῶν στομάτων αὐτῶν. 19 * ἡ γὰρ ἐξουσία αὐτῶν ἐν τῷ στόματι αὐτῶν * ἐστὶ, καὶ ἐν ταῖς οὐραῖς αὐτῶν αἱ γὰρ οὐραὶ αὐτῶν ὅμοιαι † ὄφεσιν, ἔχουσαι κεφαλὰς, καὶ ἐν αὐταῖς ἀδικοῦσι. 20 <sup>1 Lev. 17. 7. Douc. 28. 17. P. 165. 27. & 115. 5. &c. & 125. 5.</sup> Καὶ οἱ λοιποὶ τῶν ἀνθρώπων, οἱ οὐκ ἀπεκτάνθησαν ἐν ταῖς πλῆγαῖς ταύταις, † οὔτε μετενόησαν ἐκ τῶν ἔργων τῶν χειρῶν αὐτῶν, ἵνα μὴ † προσκυνήσωσι τὰ δαιμόνια, καὶ τὰ εἰδῶλα τὰ

16. τῶν] This has been inserted, on strong authority (which I can confirm), by all the recent Editors. For the t. rec. ἵππικοῦ, upwards of 27 MSS. (to which I add Mus. 3) have ἵππων, which was received into the text by Matth., and by Tia. in his 2nd ed.; while all the other Editors agree in retaining ἵππικοῦ. No reason was there for Tia. to have differed from almost all other Editors, and from himself (1st ed.), since it was more likely that St. John should have adopted the term ἵππικοῦ, than ἵππων. So τὸ ἵππικόν is used by Polyb., Diod., Plut., Lucian, and Ælian; whereas the other is a more purely Attic idiom, and not likely to have been known to St. John. Upon the whole, I doubt not that τοῦ ἵππικοῦ was the original reading, which afterwards passed into τοῦ ἵππων, from the scribes mistaking ἵππικοῦ, written abbreviatim for ἵππων. This has happened elsewhere. Thus in Xen. Ages. i. 23, ἵππων and ἵππικόν were confounded, as also in Xen. Hist. iii. 4, 15, and what is more at v. 17 of this chapter, where, for ἵππων, MS. B has ἵππικοῦς. The καὶ before ἤκουσα is, on competent authority, cancelled by the recent Editors.

17. πυρίνους] flaming, flashing fire, radiant; an interpretation confirmed and illustrated by the fine expression employed in Milton, Par. Reg. iii. 326, 'The field, all iron (namely, from the armour of the soldiery), cast a gleaming brown.'

18. ἀπὸ] for t. rec. ὑπό, is adopted by all the recent Editors, from A, B, C, and above half the cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3), Andr., and Areth.; rightly; since the ὑπό prob. arose from a gloss; though ἀπὸ may (so perpetually are the words confounded) have arisen from error of scribes.—πλῆγῶν after τριῶν, has been on strong grounds adopted by all the Editors from Weta. to Tisch.—The ἐκ before τοῦ πυρὸς, for t. rec. ἀπὸ, is adopted by the recent Editors on rather slender external authority; but it is supported by internal evidence.—The ἐκ before τοῦ καπνοῦ and τοῦ θείου is also cancelled by the recent Editors, on external authority; which would be sufficient, were it confirmed by internal evidence. The words were more prob. expunged for the purpose of removing a tautology, than put in where they might seem unnecessary, though carrying a slight intensity of sense.—τοῦ ἐκπορευομένου I would now render, 'which issues'; for I agree with Dr. Wordsworth, that the Present tense is much more expressive here, as it is also at v. 17, as showing the perpetual agency and the Divine power of HOLY SCRIPTURE.

19. ἡ γὰρ ἐξουσία—ἐστὶ] So, for t. rec. αἱ γὰρ ἐξουσίαι εἰσιν, all the Editors, from Weta. to Tia., on the strongest external authority, confirmed by internal evidence. The mistake arose, I suspect, merely from error of scribes, occasioned by itacism. The words καὶ ἐν ταῖς—αὐτῶν are inserted, on ample authority, by all the best Editors.—For ὄφεσιν, MS. B, and 20 cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3), have ὄφεις, which is confirmed by internal evidence, and by the same construction being found in St. John's Gospel, viii. 55, in all the MSS. except A, D, and 4 cursives, from which the recent Editors have rashly edited ὄφεις, against the strongest external authority, supported by internal. The same construction occurs in A 1 m., and No. 2, one of the most ancient of the cursive MSS., in Mark xii. 13. See my note on John viii. 55. In deference, however, to the united judgment of the Editors, I have not forbidden the reading.

20. 21. Whatever hypothesis be adopted respecting this vision, it seems evident that these verses designate the state of the Christian world during the period in question, whatever that may be. It seems to mean, that the foregoing plagues of Divine wrath on the corrupt Christian world did not produce reformation; the remnant not abandoning their senseless and idolatrous superstitions, and the vices attendant thereon.

20. οὐκ ἀπεκτάνθησαν ἐκ τῶν ἔργων, &c.] I still continue to reject the reading οὐ for οὐτα, though adopted by all the Editors, because it leaves the τς quite unaccounted for. My conjectural emendation οὐδὲ, ne quidem, I find confirmed by MS. B, and another Vat. MS., numbered 38 in Sch.'s list.—προσκυνήσωσι. La., Tia., and Wordsworth read προσκυνήσουσιν, from MSS. A, C, and 3 cursives,—a reading worthy of attention, but not of reception, except on better χρυσᾶ καὶ τὰ ἀργυρᾶ καὶ τὰ χαλκᾶ, καὶ τὰ λίθινα καὶ τὰ ξύλινα, ἃ οὔτε βλέπειν δύναται, οὔτε ἀκούειν, οὔτε περιπατεῖν 21 καὶ οὐ μετενόησαν ἐκ τῶν φόνων αὐτῶν, οὔτε ἐκ τῶν φαρμακειῶν αὐτῶν, οὔτε ἐκ τῆς πορνείας αὐτῶν, οὔτε ἐκ τῶν κλεμμάτων αὐτῶν.

a Matt. 17, 2.
 ch. 1, 15, 16.

b Matt. 28.
 18.
 Acts 1, 2.
 ch. 4, 5.
 & 5, 6.

X. 1 * Καὶ εἶδον ἄλλον ἄγγελον ἰσχυρὸν καταβαίνοντα ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, περιβεβλημένον νεφέλῃν, καὶ ἡ ἱρις ἐπὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν, καὶ τὸ πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ ὡς ὁ ἥλιος, καὶ οἱ πόδες αὐτοῦ ὡς στύλοι πυρός, 2<sup>b</sup> καὶ ἔχων ἐν τῇ χειρὶ αὐτοῦ βιβλαρίδιον ἀνεωγμένον καὶ ἔθηκε τὸν πόδα αὐτοῦ τὸν δεξιὸν ἐπὶ * τῆς θαλάσσης, τὸν δὲ εὐώνυμον ἐπὶ * τῆς γῆς 3 καὶ ἔκραξε φωνῇ μεγάλῃ ὥσπερ λέων μυκάται, καὶ ὅτε ἔκραξεν, ἐλάλησαν αἱ authority. The τὰ before εἶδωλα is found in nearly half of the MSS., including the three uncials, and is adopted by all the best Editors, with reason, espec. considering that internal evidence is quite in favour of the word; which is further strengthened by Dan. v. 23, καὶ τοῖς θεοῖς (= τὰ δαιμόνια here) τοὺς χρυσοὺς καὶ ἀργυροὺς καὶ χαλκοὺς καὶ ξύλινοι καὶ λίθινοι, &c., which passage greatly confirms the words καὶ τὰ χαλκᾶ, though absent in nearly half of the MSS. and some Versions and Fathers, and the omission of which was, uncritically, recommended by Dr. Mill. The Article has much force in both the words (namely, δαιμόνια and εἶδωλα), and therefore ought not to have been passed over in our Common Version. Its meaning is, 'the spirits' (i. e. those of departed heroes or benefactors) which they had deified, and the idols which they used to worship.—2 οὔτε βλέπειν δύναται. La., Tia., and Wordsw. read δύναται, from two of the uncial MSS., which, considering that it is confirmed by internal evidence, I am disposed to receive, espec. as I find it confirmed by the words following those above cited from Dan. v. 23, οὐ οὐ βλέπουν, καὶ οὐ οὐκ ἀκούουσιν. Yet δύναται is confirmed by B, and most of the cursives, to which I add the Lamb. and Mus. copies. In the words 2 οὔτε—περιπατεῖν, St. John had doubtless in mind Ps. cxv. 7, Sept., χεῖρας ἔχουσιν καὶ οὐ ψηλαφήσουσι, πόδας ἔχουσιν καὶ οὐ περιπατήσουσι.

21. φόνων] Namely, of those who opposed their superstitions. By φαρμ. may be meant either exorcisms, or pretended miracles (see Gal. v. 20), or the poisoning of their opposers.—πορν. and κλεμ. may, with Bp. Newton, be understood of the tolerating of public brothels, and of oppressive exactions and impositions.

X. 1. ἄγγελον—στύλοι πυρός] The Person described by such sublime imagery has been generally supposed to be either Christ himself, or an emblematical display of his glory. Dean Woodhouse, however, supposes this to be the same kind of Divine messenger as before, but coming with a more dignified commission.—To advert to a matter of Criticism and Philology. The ἡ before ἱρις has been, on good grounds, received by all the Editors from Wets. to Tia.; for, although external authority in its favour be not very strong as far as regards number of MSS., yet, as respects antiquity and weight, considerable,—namely, A, B, C, and 18 of the best cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3); and internal evidence is quite in its favour, since the Article, whether in Greek or English, can hardly be dispensed with. How much this fine touch (of the rainbow) adds to the splendour of the noble imagery in a passage quite unrivalled—Sir Wm. Jones has remarked—in any uninspired composition! For τῆς κ-ῆς I have now adopted, with all the recent Editors, τὴν κ-ῆν, with A, C, and several cursives, confirmed by internal evidence.

2. βιβλαρίδιον] It has been not a little debated what portion of the subsequent matter may be supposed to constitute the contents of this book. Mr. Valpy, partly from Woodhouse, supposes it to contain no more than the former part of this Chapter, which is an important appendix to the preceding, as it gives a general account of the state of the Western Church, during the period of the 5th and 6th trumpets. Then, adds he, 'the former subject proceeds, the 7th trumpet is sounded, and a compendious view is given of the subsequent events to the end of the world.'—The term ἀνεωγμένον should be rendered, not opened, but open, as Tynd., Wakef., and Abp. Newc., supported by the Pesch. Syr., and the other ancient Versions. The ἔχω just before, for t. rec. εἶχον, has been adopted, on the strongest evidence, external and internal, by all the recent Editors. Why Tia. should here have chosen to stand alone in editing βιβλαρίδιον, from some 12 MSS. out of nearly a hundred, I cannot imagine, since even La., in this case, rises above the petty pedantry too usual with him, of ever catching up slips of the pen by old and careless scribes, in preference to correct readings. Not but there are five times as many errors of the scribes found, even in the so magnified uncial MSS. A, B, C, as are received even by La. But the existence of such portents should make one slow to receive a term like this βιβλιδ., of which not a vestige can be found elsewhere, and which may readily be accounted for as a slip of the pen, or a false spelling, such as perpetually occur in the most ancient MSS.—The readings τῆς θαλάσσης and τῆς γῆς for t. rec. τὴν θάλασσαν and τὴν γῆν are, on competent authority, adopted by the best Editors.

ἐπτά βρονταὶ τὰς ἑαυτῶν φωνάς. <sup>4</sup> καὶ ὅτε ἐλάλησαν αἱ ἐπτά <sup>o Dan. 2. 30. & 12. 4. 9.</sup> βρονταὶ [τὰς φωνὰς ἑαυτῶν], ἐμελλον γράφειν. καὶ ἤκουσα φωνὴν ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, λέγουσάν [μοι]. Σφράγισον ἃ ἐλάλησαν αἱ ἐπτά βρονταὶ, καὶ μὴ * αὐτὰ γράψῃς. <sup>5</sup> <sup>d Dan. 12. 7.</sup> Καὶ ὁ ἄγγελος, <sup>o ch. 14. 17.</sup> ὃν εἶδον ἐστῶτα ἐπὶ τῆς θαλάσσης καὶ ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, ἤρε τὴν χεῖρα αὐτοῦ τὴν δεξιάν εἰς τὸν οὐρανόν, <sup>o ch. 11. 18.</sup> <sup>6</sup> καὶ ὤμωσεν ἐν τῷ ζῶντι, εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας τῶν αἰώνων, ὃς ἔκτισε τὸν οὐρανὸν καὶ τὰ ἐν αὐτῷ, καὶ τὴν γῆν καὶ τὰ ἐν αὐτῇ, καὶ τὴν θάλασσαν καὶ τὰ ἐν αὐτῇ, ὅτι χρόνος * οὐκέτι ἔσται. <sup>7</sup> ἄλλὰ ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις τῆς φωνῆς τοῦ ἐβδόμου ἀγγέλου, ὅταν μέλλῃ σαλπίζειν, καὶ * ἐτελέσθῃ τὸ μυστήριον τοῦ Θεοῦ, ὡς εὐηγγέλισε * τοὺς ἑαυτοῦ * δούλους τοὺς προφήτας.

<sup>8</sup> Καὶ ἡ φωνὴ ἦν ἤκουσα ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ πάλιν λαλοῦσα <sup>o ver. 4.</sup> μετ' ἐμοῦ, καὶ λέγουσα· Ὑπαγε, λάβε τὸ βιβλαρίδιον τὸ ἡνεωγμένον ἐν τῇ χεὶρὶ τοῦ ἀγγέλου τοῦ ἐστῶτος ἐπὶ τῆς θαλάσσης καὶ ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς. <sup>9</sup> <sup>h Ezech. 2. & 3. 1a.</sup> Καὶ ἀπῆλθον πρὸς τὸν ἄγγελον, λέγων

4. τὰς φωνὰς ἑαυτῶν] These words,—not found in A, B, C, and many cursives (I add the Lamb. and Mus. copies), Versions, and Fathers,—have been cancelled by all the recent Critical Editors; perhaps rightly; but they may have been expunged by ancient Critics, to remove a tautology. The later Editors read ἤμελλον for ἔμ, on good authority; perhaps rightly. This is certainly so in the case of μοι, which they, on strong authority, cancel.—Σφράγισον ἃ ἐλάλησαν—γράψῃς, i. e. 'place them among those so sealed by Daniel, viii. 26. xii. 9.' (Prof. Lee.) This suppression is enjoined, since the prophecies in question were only proper for the knowledge of the Apostle, not for that of the Church. Of the sense, 'to not make known,' another ex. occurs in Stobæus, Serm. p. 215, Σφράγισον τοὺς λόγους σιγῇ. I have now adopted αὐτὰ for ταῦτα, with all the recent Editors, on the strongest evidence, and have, with all the recent Editors, admitted the words τὴν δεξιάν from MSS. B, C, and 40 cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1186 and Mus. 1, 2), confirmed by the ancient Versions; though internal evidence is against the words.

5. ἤρα τὴν χεῖρα αὐτοῦ, &c.] A gesture anciently used in swearing. See Gen. xiv. 22.

6. ὅτι χρόνος οὐκέτι ἔσται] I quite agree with Prof. Scholef., that neither the Common Translation, nor another which has been proposed ('that the time should not be'), gives a satisfactory sense; and that the words ought to be rendered, 'that there should be no more delay;' the scope of the passage being, that without any further delay, upon the sounding of the seventh angel, 'the mystery of God should be finished.' Such, too, is the view of the sense adopted by Heinr. and Iaspis, meaning (says Prof. Lee) that 'that dispensation which was temporal shall now come to a close;' see Deut. xxxii. 40, 43, and comp. xii. 5—7; also sup. i. 8, and the passage of Philo, there adduced. Yet this sense of delay cannot, I think, be proved to exist, as they imagine, in the term χρόνος. It would rather seem to rest on the ἔσται, which is probably used provincially for ἵνα ἔσται. So Thucyd. i. 80, εἰ δὲ μελετήσομεν καὶ ἀντιπαράσκευασόμεθα, χρόνος ἵνα ἔσται, 'time must intervene;' to omit other passages which might be adduced; though it is not improb. that St. John wrote οὐκέτι ἵνα ἔσται. For the t. rec. ἔτι οὐκ there is little or no authority; and internal evidence is against it; since it seems to have been an alteration, made to elicit the sense contained in our Common Version. The other reading is supported by all the best MSS., and confirmed by the parallel passage at xxi. 1.

7. καὶ ἐτελέσθῃ] This, for the t. rec. καὶ τελεσθῇ, is also edited, on good grounds (which I could confirm), by La, Tia, and Wordsw., as well as all the principal Editors preceding them. Thus far the reading is certain. And the interpretation of Bp. Middl., adduced in my former Edd., is confirmed by the suffrage of Matth.; and, considering the phraseology we have here to deal with, it may, nay must, be acquiesced in. This is, in fact, no other than one of the many anomalous constructions existing in the present Book: and in τελεσθῇ we have one of the nearly as many grammatical corrections which swarm in most of the later and inferior MSS. In the expression μυστήριον τοῦ Θεοῦ, see note on 1 Cor. iv. 1.—ὡς εὐηγγέλισα τοῖς δούλοις τοῖς προφήταις. So the t. rec. On reconsidering the question as respects the reading here, I am now of opinion that, though external authority may be equal, yet internal evidence turns the scale in favour of τοῖς δούλοις τοῖς προφήταις, which I find in all the Lamb. and Mus. copies, and have now adopted. Comp. a very similar construction in Thucyd. i. 1, 1. The construction recurs at xiv. 6, where all the MSS. but 3 or 4, have εὐαγγελίσαι τοὺς κατ.

8. ἡνεωγμένον] Here we have an ex. of the triple augment in verbs, sometimes found in the later writers; on which see Winer, Gr.

9. ἀπῆλθον] La. and Tia. edit ἀπῆλθεν, from MS. A and 3 cursives (to which I add Mus. 2); but that is evidence insufficient to warrant the introduction of a reading which, though the writer αὐτῷ * δούναί μοι τὸ βιβλαρίδιον καὶ λέγει μοι, Λάβε καὶ κατάφαγε αὐτό· καὶ πικρανεῖ σου τὴν κοιλίαν, ἀλλ' ἐν τῷ στόματί σου ἔσται γλυκὺ ὡς μέλι. <sup>10</sup> <sup>1</sup> καὶ ἔλαβον τὸ βιβλαρίδιον ἐκ τῆς χειρὸς τοῦ ἀγγέλου, καὶ κατέφαγον αὐτό· καὶ ἦν ἐν τῷ στόματί μου ‡ ὡς μέλι γλυκὺ καὶ ὅτε ἔφαγον αὐτό, ἐπικράνθη ἡ κοιλία μου <sup>11</sup> καὶ λέγει μοι· Δεῖ σε πάλιν προφητεῦσαι ἐπὶ λαοῖς καὶ ἔθνεσι καὶ γλώσσαις καὶ βασιλεῦσι πολλοῖς.

a Ezek. 3. 2.
& 12. 10.
b Ezek. 40.
3. &c.
c 41. & 42.
d 43.
ch. 31. 15.

b Ezek. 40.
17, 19, 20.
ch. 12. 5.
Ps. 70. 1.
Luke 21. 24.

c ch. 20. 4.
& 12. 5, 14.

XI. <sup>1</sup> Καὶ ἐδόθη μοι κάλαμος ὅμοιος ῥάβδῳ, [καὶ ὁ ἀγγελος εἰσήκει] λέγων Ἐγείραι καὶ μέτρησον τὸν ναὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ τὸ θυσιαστήριον, καὶ τοὺς προσκυνοῦντας ἐν αὐτῷ <sup>2</sup> καὶ τὴν αὐλὴν τὴν ἔξωθεν τοῦ ναοῦ ἔκβαλε ἔξω, καὶ μὴ αὐτὴν μετρήσῃς, ὅτι ἐδόθη τοῖς ἔθνεσι καὶ τὴν πόλιν τὴν ἁγίαν πατήσουσι μῆνας τεσσαράκοντα δύο. <sup>3</sup> Καὶ δώσω τοῖς δυοῖς μάρτυσί μου, καὶ might have been likely to use it, yet cannot be proved to have used. I have, with all the recent Editors, adopted δούναί, for t. rec. δός, on strong external authority (to which I add the Lamb. and Mus. copies), confirmed by internal evidence.

—The same may be said of the τοῦ inserted just before.—I have not adopted the γλυκὺ ὡς μέλι, with La., Tis., and Wordsw., because, in such matters of position merely, ancient MSS. have not (from the carelessness of their transcribers) their usual weight. I have also not adopted λέγουσι for λέγει at v. 11, with La. and Tis., because, though external authority is considerable —A, B, and 2 cursives—(I add Lamb. 1186 and Mus. 1, 2), yet internal evidence is quite adverse, inasmuch as it would involve little short of nonsense. The united evidence of the ancient Versions strongly confirms λέγει, as used of the Angel from whom John took the Book. Render,
'Whereupon he saith to me.—κατάφαγε αὐτό, meaning, with avidity devoured the contents, by digesting the matter therein contained. From several passages of the O. Test., and one of Ar-temid. Onir. l. ii. 50 (cited by Weta.), it appears that such a figur. mode of speaking obtained in the Greek verb, as it does in our Engl. 'to devour.'
The words following, vv. 10, 11, denote, that the contents would occasion partly comfort, and partly sorrow,—meaning, that 'it shall give pleasure, peace, and blessedness to the believer in its de- clarations;' but, as to its trials, it foretels them as bitter things indeed; many of them shall be slain, and otherwise tried.' See Jer. xv. 16—18.
Ezek. ii. 8—10. iii. 1—3, 14.

XI. 1—14. On these verses there has been much debate; some supposing them to be the contents of the little Book; others, to contain prophecies of events in the Christian Church under the 6th trumpet, which were posterior to the taking of Constantinople; others, again, regard them as a symbolical declaration of the approaching destruction of Jerusalem. All, however, are agreed that the symbolical representation in question is formed on what is found in Ezek. xl.
—xliv.

1. For μέτρησον, Wordsw. adduces μίρις, as the reading of MS. B: but of this I find not a shadow of proof; but if it did exist, it would only be an itacism for μερίσαι, which might be confirmed by 2 other MSS., but the reading would only be a gloss.—The words καὶ—εἰσάκει: have been, on the strongest authority (which I can confirm from all the Lamb. and Mus. copies), cancelled by all the recent Editors. They were plainly meant to supply a Nominat. case to λέγων, though it does not require one, since we may refer it either to 'the mighty angel' who gave to St. John the little Book, or to 'the voice from heaven,' by which he had been called and directed in the last chapter.—τὸν ναὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ, meaning

'the Church,' or body of true believers, as Woodh. explains. Others, however, interpret differently, according to the particular hypothesis adopted by them.

2. ἔκβαλε ἔξω i.e. 'put out of your measurement, take no account of it.'—τὴν πόλιν τὴν ἁγίαν, i.e. the Christian Church.—πατήσουσι.
Dean Woodhouse and Dr. Burton object to our common Version, 'they shall tread under foot,' and take the sense to be, 'shall walk in,' or frequent, as Isa. i. 12, compared with Ps. xlv. 4.
But the other sense is espoused by the most learned Commentators, who take πατ. for κατε- πατ., 'profane,' which is confirmed by the Peshito Syriac ܩܕܫܐ, trample under foot; the very same expression as that used by the same Translator, at Matt. vii. 6, of the trampling under foot of the pearls by the swine.—The μετρήσουσιν, for t. rec. πατήσ. of A, is an evident false correction of a Critic, who stumbled at πατ., not remembering Luke xxi. 24, ἔσται (sc.

Hierusalem) πατουμένη ὑπὸ ἰδῶν, and was heedlessly thinking of μετρ. at l. 2, and xxi. 15, seqq.

3. 4. τοῖς δυοῖς μάρτ.—οὗτοι εἰσιν αἱ δύο ἑλ.
&c.] Expositors are not at all agreed as to the persons here designated as 'my two witnesses.' Something depends on the construction, in which there is a remarkable brevity, and a strongly Hebraistic idiom. The sense may be best expressed, fully and freely, thus: 'And I will give power to my two witnesses (the two who bear witness of me) that they may prophesy—clothed in sackcloth: those are the two olive trees and the two candlesticks which stand before the Lord of the earth.' The subject of their prophetic προφητεύουσιν ἡμέρας χιλίας διακοσίας ἐξήκοντα περιβεβλημένοι σάκκους.<sup>4</sup> οὗτοι εἰσιν αἱ δύο ἐλαίαι καὶ αἱ δύο λυχνίαι αἱ<sup>4</sup> Zech. 4, 2, 4, 11, 14.

 ἐνώπιον τοῦ * Κυρίου τῆς γῆς * ἐστῶτες.<sup>5</sup> Καὶ εἴ τις αὐτοὺς * θέλει ἀδικῆσαι, πῦρ ἐκπορεύεται ἐκ τοῦ στόματος αὐτῶν, καὶ κατεσθίει τοὺς ἐχθροὺς αὐτῶν καὶ εἴ τις * θέλει αὐτοὺς ἀδικῆσαι, οὕτως δεῖ αὐτὸν ἀποκτανθῆναι.<sup>6</sup> οὗτοι ἔχουσιν ἐξουσίαν κλεῖσαι τὸν<sup>6</sup> Exod. 7, 8, 2, 6, 9.
 οὐρανόν, ἵνα μὴ * ὑετὸς βρέχῃ * τὰς ἡμέρας αὐτῶν τῆς προφη-τείας· καὶ ἐξουσίαν ἔχουσιν ἐπὶ τῶν ὑδάτων στρέφειν αὐτὰ εἰς<sup>6</sup> Exod. 7, 8, 10, & 12,
1 Kings 17,
1.
 αἶμα, καὶ πατάξαι τὴν γῆν ἐν πάσῃ πληγῇ, ὅσακις ἐὰν θελή-<sup>7</sup> 1 Dan. 7, 21.
12, 1, 7, 11 & 17, 2.
 σωσι.<sup>7</sup> Καὶ ὅταν τελέσωσι τὴν μαρτυρίαν αὐτῶν, τὸ θηρίον address must be understood to be the second coming of Christ to final judgment: thus those two witnesses, or heralds, occupy a similar position to that of the herald of His first advent to temporal judgment—John the Baptist. Of course the manner of their preaching must be a most earnest inculcation of the truths of the Gospel, and the necessity of preparation for Christ's final advent. The expression περιβεβλη. σάκκ. is thrown in to intimate the deep anxiety of those two witnesses, that the people should receive the witness. As to the question, who are the two persons meant?—several are specified by Expositors, all, more or less, eminent instruments in the hands of God, but almost all excluded from adoption by one unsuitability or other. It is not, I apprehend, 'given to us' at present to know who are the persons. It is sufficient for us to know, by the Apostle's evident allusion to Zech. iv. 10, 14, that the persons bear a strong similarity to Zerubbabel and Joshua, as two chosen instruments in God's hand, associated to their office, full of the unction of the Holy One; also burning and shining lights (like the two candelabra) always standing by the Lord of the whole earth, προεδρεύοντες τῷ Κυρίῳ.—As to the readings, I have, with Matth., Gr., Sch., La., Tis., and Wordsw., adopted Kypion, for t. rec. Θεοῦ, and ἐστῶτες, for t. rec. ἐστῶσαι, from MSS. A, B, C, and many of the best cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1186, Mus. 1, 2, 3, and Cov. 2, omitted by Mill), confirmed by Andr. and Areth., and supported by internal evidence, and the above-cited passage of Zech. As to ἐστῶσαι, it was evidently devised by the Revisers, to soften the harshness inherent in ἐστῶτες, on which Jackson, of Leicester, remarks, 'Lectio est maxime accommodata stylo Apocalypsicis, qui nominibus femininis aut neutrius generis sepe adjungit adjectiva aut participia generis masculini, cum res est de humanis personis; ut in hoc loco: vid. infra xix. 14, et Matt. xxiv. 15.'

5. The readings θίλει for θίλη, and θίλει αὐτοὺς for αὐτ. θίλ., which I have adopted from the recent Editors, are founded on strong authority, confirmed by the Lamb. and Mus. MSS.

6. οὗτοι ἔχουσιν—οὐρανόν] The best Expositors are agreed that by this is fig. denoted, that their prayers will bring down judgments on their persecutors; and, generally, that they will have as great an influence in heaven, as the most eminent of the prophets had on earth. See 1 Kings xvii. 1, and xviii. 1.—To advert to matters of disputed reading. For οὗτοι—οὐρανόν, as in my text, Gr., Sch., and Tis., edit from 20 MSS., οὗτοι ἔχουσιν—τὸν οὐρανόν ἔξουσιν. And so La., except that he prefixes, as does Wordsw., τὴν τοῖς ἔξουσιν, from MSS. A, C. But the transposition in Tischendorf's text is intolerably harsh, and not in the manner of the Sacred writer. Nor can I find a single instance of the phrase ἔχουσιν ἔξουσιν, or διδόναι, being ever divided by words interposed between the two terms forming the phrase; which, indeed, in the case of ἔχουσιν ἔξουσιν, as serving to express one idea (nearly equiv. to δύνασθαι), would involve an impropriety of language. It may be doubted whether the τὴν of A, C, be genuine; and the word occurs just after in the same phrase, without the Article, as also several times with ἔχουσιν and διδόναι, both in this Book and elsewhere in the N. Test.: τὴν may, however, be genuine, since it is confirmed by the words of our Lord in Luke x. 19, ἰδοὺ δίδωκα ὑμῖν τὴν ἐξουσίαν τοῦ πατρί, &c. For t. rec. βρίχῃ ὑστ., just before, MSS. A, B, C, and many cursives (to which I add the Lamb. and Mus. copies), have ὑστ. βρ., which all the recent Editors have very properly received. For t. rec. ἐν ἡμέραις, I have, on very strong authority, confirmed by internal evidence, adopted τὰς ἡμέρας.—The change of αὐτῶν τῆς προφ. into τῆς προφ. αὐτῶν is made by the same Editors, from nearly the same authority of MSS. But, considering that internal evidence is in favour of the t. rec., as being the harsher, I have, with Matth., retained it. After θελήσωσι all the recent Editors subjoin ἐν, on strong external authority. It is prob. but not certainly, genuine. In not a few MSS. the words ὅσακις ἐὰν θελήσ. are placed before instead of after πάσῃ (or ἐν π.) πληγῇ, and this reading is adopted by Matth., Gr., Sch., and Wordsw., while La. and Tis. retain the common position; and rightly, considering that it is more agreeable to the style of St. John.

7. ὅταν τελέσωσι τὴν μαρτυρίαν] i. e. when this succession of witnesses shall have continued as long as the Providence of God may think fit. (Abp. Newc.) When they shall have given their testimony completely; i. e. shall have called in the remnant of Israel, and vast numbers from among the heathen. (Lee.) By the Beast here mentioned the ancient and some eminent modern Commentators understand the Roman power (alluded to by St. Paul, 2 Thes. ii. 4), and the persecution by which the saints shall be brought so near to utter destruction (being considered dead, though not actually buried), to be the tenth and last general persecution, 'which (says the author of the Universal History, vol. xv. p. 502) broke out A.D. 303, and raged ten whole years with a fury hardly to be expressed; and in which such numbers of Christians suffered death in all the provinces, that the tyrants, imagining they had compassed their wicked intent, and entirely abolished Christianity, told the world in a pompous, but lying inscription, that they had extinguished the Christian name and superstition, and every where restored the worship of the gods to its former purity and lustre. For πόλεμον μετ' αὐτῶν, I have, with all the recent Editors, adopted the reading μετ' αὐτῶν πόλ., on considerable external authority (to which I add the Lamb. and Mus. MSS.), confirmed by internal evidence.

τὸ ἀναβαίνειν ἐκ τῆς ἀβύσσου ποιήσει * μετ' αὐτῶν πόλεμον, καὶ νικήσει αὐτοὺς καὶ ἀποκτενεῖ αὐτούς. <sup>8</sup> * Καὶ * τὸ * πτώμα αὐτῶν ἐπὶ τῆς πλατείας τῆς πόλεως τῆς μεγάλης, ἣτις καλεῖται πνευματικῶς Σόδομα καὶ Αἴγυπτος, ὅπου καὶ ὁ Κύριος ἡμῶν ἐσταυρώθη. <sup>9</sup> Καὶ * βλέπουσιν ἐκ τῶν λαῶν καὶ φυλῶν καὶ γλωσσῶν καὶ ἐθνῶν * τὸ πτώμα αὐτῶν ἡμέρας τρεῖς καὶ ἡμισυ, καὶ τὰ πτώματα αὐτῶν οὐκ † ἀφήσουσι τεθῆναι εἰς * μνήμα. <sup>10</sup> Καὶ οἱ κατοικοῦντες ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς * χαίρουσιν ἐπ' αὐτοῖς καὶ † εὐφρανθήσονται· καὶ δῶρα † πέμψουσιν ἀλλήλοις, ὅτι οὗτοι οἱ δύο προφῆται ἐβασάνισαν τοὺς κατοικοῦντας ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς. <sup>11</sup> Καὶ μετὰ τὰς τρεῖς ἡμέρας καὶ ἡμισυ πνεῦμα ζωῆς

8. τὸ πτώμα αὐτῶν ἐπὶ τῆς πλατείας τ. πόλ.] An example of the greatest brutality and indignity.—To advert to a matter of disputed reading. There is strong external authority, confirmed by internal evidence, for the reading τὸ πτώμα, which I have now received, with all the recent Editors. The same idiom (which, though harsh, is quite agreeable to the style of this book) occurs, in a still greater number of MSS., at the next verse. In both passages the word is used generically, for the Plural πτώματα, as in Matt. xxiv. 28, ὅπου ἕαν ᾗ τὸ πτώμα, ἐκεῖ συναχθήσονται οἱ δέσποται, where see note.

9.—13. On the prophetic sense of these verses, see Dean Woodhouse and Thos. Scott.

9. βλέ. ἐκ τῶν λαῶν] Supply either τινες, which I still prefer, or ἄνθρωποι, on which ellipse, see note on Mark vi. 51. As to the reading βλέπουσιν, though I have, in deference to the united suffrages of all the recent Editors, adopted it on very strong authority (to which I add the Lamb. and Mus. copies), yet I doubt whether the t. rec. βλέψουσιν, found in many cursive MSS., and confirmed by the ancient Versions, be not the true reading; for, in a case like this (the letters π and ψ being often confounded by the scribes), external authority has not its usual weight; and internal evidence is, at least, equally balanced. See note on next verse. For t. rec. ἀφήσουσιν, Tis. reads, from MSS. A, B, and several others, ἀφίουσιν, but La. and Wordsw. ἀφίουσιν; of which two forms I prefer the latter, which I regard as a Present, namely, from the old, and at an early period obsolete, ἴω, ἴις, &c., perhaps peculiar to the Alexandrian dialect, and of which only a few vestiges are found in the Sept., e. gr.

in Eccles. ii. 18, ὅτι ἀφίω αὐτόν, and v. 12, τῷ ἐμπληροῦντι τοῦ πλουτῆσαι οὐκ ἔστιν ἀφίω αὐτόν τοῦ ὀνῶσαι. Neh. ix. 17, in several copies, Σὺ, ὁ Θεὸς, ἀφίω ἁμαρτίας. The same present occurs also, I suspect, supr. ii. 20, ὅτι ἀφίς or ἀφίς, as found in the best and greater part of the MSS. The true reading seems to be ἀφίς, of which ἀφίς and the t. rec. ἴς are only glosses. A vestige of the Imperf. tense of this verb occurs in Mark xi. 16, οὐκ ἦφιεν (scil. τινα) ἰνα, &c. See more in note on Luke xi. 4.

10. δῶρα πέμψ. ἀλλ.] A custom of expressing great joy; see Esth. ix. 22, from which this expression seems taken.—ἐβασάνισαν, namely, by drawing God's judgments on them, vv. 5, 6. Some suppose an allusion to 1 Kings xviii. 17. (Abp. Newc.) On the events which were to take place after the 1260 days, as stated in vv. 7—13, interpreters are by no means agreed. With the accomplishment of these the 2nd woe-trumpet terminates; and the 7th trumpet, or the 3rd woe-trumpet, begins to sound, as described in vv. 14—18. On the purport, however, of these, equal diversity of opinion exists. It would seem, as Dr. Burton supposes, that they refer to a future extension of the Gospel.—To advert to a matter of disputed reading. For t. rec. χαροῦσι, the recent Editors read χαίρουσι, from A, B, C, and many cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1186, Mus. 2, 3, and Cov. 2, omitted by Mill), confirmed by internal evidence. And accordingly I have now received it. For t. rec. εὐφρανθήσονται, La., Tis., and Wordsw. adopt, on strong authority, from MSS., confirmed by internal evidence, εὐφραίνονται, which is probably, though not certainly, the true reading. The reading πέμψουσιν is left untouched, and even unnoticed, by all those Editors, and Commentators, who in the preceding context adopt the Present tense in the foregoing verbs, thus forming what is called the Prophetic Present. But so great is the harshness of a verb in the Fut., coming after so many others in the Present, that, rather than adopt πέμψουσιν, I would suppose that St. John wrote πέμψουσι, which is found indeed in one MS. (No. 80), and exists, I dare say, in not a few others; for minute is the difference in most ancient MSS. between π and ψ,—so much so, as often to deceive the eyes both of transcribers and collators. See note on v. 9, supr.

ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ εἰσῆλθεν † ἐπ' * αὐτοῖς· καὶ ἔστησαν ἐπὶ τοὺς πόδας αὐτῶν, καὶ φόβος μέγας † ἔπεσεν ἐπὶ τοὺς θεωροῦντας αὐτούς.

12 Καὶ * ἤκουσα φωνὴν μεγάλην ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ λέγουσαν αὐτοῖς· * Ἀνάβατε ὧδε! καὶ ἀνέβησαν εἰς τὸν οὐρανὸν ἐν τῇ νεφέλῃ, καὶ ἐθεώρησαν αὐτοὺς οἱ ἐχθροὶ αὐτῶν 13 καὶ ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ὥρᾳ ἐγένετο σεισμός μέγας, καὶ τὸ δέκατον τῆς πόλεως ἔπεσε, καὶ ἀπεκτάνθησαν ἐν τῷ σεισμῷ ὀνόματα ἀνθρώπων χιλιάδες ἑπτὰ· καὶ οἱ λοιποὶ ἔμφοβοι ἐγένοντο, καὶ ἔδωκαν δόξαν τῷ Θεῷ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ. 14 <sup>h</sup> Ἡ οὐαὶ ἡ δευτέρα ἀπῆλθεν ἰδοὺ, ἡ οὐαὶ ἡ <sup>h ch. 8. 1a</sup> <sup>a 9. 12.</sup> <sup>ch. 15. 1.</sup> τρίτη ἔρχεται ταχύ.

15 <sup>1</sup> Καὶ ὁ ἑβδομὸς ἄγγελος ἐσάλπισε καὶ ἐγένοντο φωναὶ <sup>1 ch. 10. 7.</sup> μεγάλαι ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ, * λέγοντες· Ἐγένοντο αἱ βασιλεῖαι τοῦ κόσμου, τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν καὶ τοῦ Χριστοῦ αὐτοῦ, καὶ βασι-

11. For the t. rec. ἐπ' αὐτοῖς, the MS. B and many others have ἐκ αὐτοῦ; the MS. A and a few others, with Andreas and Vigil. Tap. have ἐν αὐτοῖς; and again the MS. C and a few others have αὐτοῖς. Internal evidence is quite in favour of ἐκ αὐτοῦ, edited by Gr., Sch., and Tis. The other readings are plainly glosses, of which the purpose was to remove, or soften, a harsh Hebraism. By φόβος is denoted the feeling of awe produced by witnessing something supernatural. See note on Luke v. 9 and 26. For t. rec. ἴπαιον, La., Tis., and Wordsw. edit ἐπίπαιον, from MSS. A, C, and many others, perhaps rightly, since internal evidence draws two ways, but the reading is an open question.

12. For the t. rec. ἤκουσαν, the MS. B, confirmed by Andr., Areth., and the Syr., Copt., Arab., and Armen. Versions, have ἤκουσα, which was edited by Matth., and recently by Tis and Wordsw.; while Gr., Sch., and La. retain ἤκουσαν. Which may be regarded as the true reading, is almost an open question, and the authority of MSS. is so minute a difference as -an and -a is not considerable; and internal evidence must decide; that evidence is, I think, in favour of ἤκουσα, which I have now adopted. For ἀνάβητες, MSS. A, C, and several cursives have ἀνάβητε, adopted by La., Tis., and Wordsw., perhaps rightly; but, if so, La. must be wrong at the similar passage, supr. iv. 1, ἀνέβη ὧδε, in editing ἀνάβητες, from only one MS. (A)—a most glaring inconsistency. The state of the evidence there makes it all but certain that ἀνάβητε is the true reading here, which I have now received. Here I cannot but remark on the strange negligence of Gr. and Sch., in omitting almost all mention here of the ἀνάβητε, notwithstanding that Weta. had already recorded it, as found in MSS. A and C and No. 28; to which authorities Tis. subjoins Andr. (as Sch. had done) and Areth. But there Tis. is chargeable with the same negligence. When he referred to Arethas he must have been alud agens, since Arethas has in his text ἀνάβητες, and in his commentary does not touch on the expression. In τῇ νεφέλῃ Wordsw. recognises a reference to the cloud of Christ's glory, appealing to other passages in this book, i. 7. x. 1. xiv. 14, 15, 16. But the reference, I apprehend, is simply to the cloud provided to receive them in their ascent; which view is confirmed by 1 Thess. iv. 17, ἀπαγγελόμεθα ἐν νεφέλῃ, answering to τῇ νεφ. here. If there be any allusion beyond this reference, it cannot be to the cloud of Christ's glory, but must rather be to the cloud of Christ's ascension, as recorded in Acts i. 9, νεφέλῃ ὑπέλαβεν αὐτόν.—On the full force of ἐκ τ. νεφέλῃ, see my note on 1 Thess. iv. 17.—At ἰδοὺ αὐτοὶ supply ἀναβάντας from the preceding ἀνάβητε.

13. Ἰδωκαν δόξαν τῷ Θεῷ τ. οὐρ.] The first two words intimate their heartfelt penitence and true conversion. As respects the expression τῷ Θεῷ τοῦ οὐρ., it is one very unusual, and accordingly deserves attention, though neglected by the Commentators,—with the exception of Bengel, who remarks that 'the Supreme Being is styled the Lord of the earth at ver. 4, where he declares his right over the earth by the two witnesses; and he is styled the God of heaven, as here, when he not only gives rain from heaven, after most severe drought, but also declares his majesty from heaven by taking his witnesses up into heaven.' This view, like many others in the same Commentator, is rather ingenious than solid. The best comment on the present passage is supplied by the parallel one (in which the thought is more developed), infr. xiv. 7, φοβήθητε τὸν Θεὸν καὶ δότε αὐτῷ (Him especially) δόξαν, καὶ προσκυνήσατε τῷ ποιήσαντι τὸν οὐρανὸν καὶ τὴν γῆν καὶ τὴν θάλασσαν.

14. For the t. rec. ἰδοὺ, ἡ οὐαὶ ἡ τρίτη, I have now adopted, with Matth., La., Tis., and Words., ἡ οὐ. ἡ τρ. ἰδ., from MS. B. and 25 cursives (I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3), also Andr. and Areth., confirmed by internal evidence.

15. λέγοντες.] So, for t. rec. λέγουσα, all the Editors, from Gr. to Tis. and Words., read, on competent external authority (to which I add Lamb. and Mus. omn.), confirmed by internal evidence. For t. rec. ἰγίνοντο αἱ βασιλεῖαι, the Editors from Weta. to Tis. and Words. are agreed in receiving ἰγίνετο ἡ βασιλεία, from all the three uncials and nearly half of the cursive MSS., confirmed by Andr. and Areth., nearly all the Versions, and several Fathers. The t. rec. did not, I think, arise from error of scribes, but from the false correction of Critics, who thought the Plural required by Rev. i. 5, ὁ ἀρχὸν τῶν βασιλείων τῆς γῆς, but wrongly, since the two passages are of a different character.

1 ch. 4. 4, 10. λεύσει εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας τῶν αἰώνων! <sup>16</sup> καὶ οἱ εἴκοσι [καὶ] τέσσαρες πρεσβύτεροι οἱ ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ καθήμενοι ἐπὶ τοὺς θρόνους αὐτῶν, ἔπεσαν ἐπὶ τὰ πρόσωπα αὐτῶν, καὶ προσεκύνησαν τῷ Θεῷ, <sup>17</sup> λέγοντες· Εὐχαριστοῦμέν σοι, Κύριε ὁ Θεὸς ὁ παντοκράτωρ, ὁ ὢν καὶ ὁ ἦν [καὶ ὁ ἐρχόμενος]· ὅτι εἰληφας τὴν δύναμίν σου τὴν μεγάλην καὶ ἐβασίλευσας <sup>18</sup> καὶ τὰ ἔθνη ὠργίσθησαν, καὶ ἤλθεν ἡ ὀργή σου, καὶ ὁ καιρὸς τῶν νεκρῶν κριθῆναι, καὶ δοῦναι τὸν μισθὸν τοῖς δούλοις σου τοῖς προφήταις καὶ τοῖς ἁγίοις, καὶ τοῖς φοβουμένοις τὸ ὄνομά σου τοῖς μικροῖς καὶ τοῖς μεγάλους, καὶ διαφθεῖραι τοὺς † διαφθείροντας τὴν γῆν.

m ch. 11. 5. <sup>19</sup> καὶ ἡνοίγη ὁ ναὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ, καὶ ὤφθη ἡ κιβωτὸς τῆς διαθήκης † αὐτοῦ ἐν τῷ ναῷ αὐτοῦ καὶ ἐγένοντο ἄστραπαι καὶ φωναὶ καὶ βρονταὶ καὶ σεισμός καὶ χάλαζα μεγάλη. XII. <sup>1</sup> Καὶ σημεῖον μέγα ὤφθη ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ γυνή

16. The καὶ after εἴκοσι is, on good grounds, cancelled by the recent Editors; and the οἱ before ἐνώπιον is cancelled by La. and Words., on the authority of MSS. A, B, and 4 cursives;—an authority, however, insufficient, and in opposition to internal evidence, which is quite in favour of οἱ, the Article being required by καθήμενοι, and only left out by accident, being absorbed in the οἱ preceding.

17. The words καὶ ὁ ἐρχ., which I placed within brackets, have been cancelled by all the Editors from Matth. and Gr. to Tis. and Words.; very properly, for reasons which fully occurred to Bengel, profiting (as often elsewhere, though never with any acknowledgment) by whose able and interesting comment, Wesley remarks, 'God is frequently styled He who was, and is, and who is to come. But now (i. e. according to the representation here) he is actually come: the words "who is to come" being, as it were, swallowed up,—an uncouth expression this, which Wesley here himself framed for the occasion. Of the words καὶ ἐβασίλευσας the full sense is not reigned, but 'didst and dost reign,' 'dost exercise the rule which thou didst acquire, take possession of (εἰληφας).' This use of the Aorist, as denoting habit of action, is not unfrequent in the N. T.—εἰληφας τὴν δύν., 'thou hast taken to thee this great strength.' So Isa. li. 9, ἐνδύσας τὴν ἰσχύϊν τοῦ βραχίονός σου.

18. ὠργίσθησαν meaning, 'were rebellious and contumacious.' Ps. xcvi. 1, Sept.—ἤλθεν ἡ ὀργή σου, &c. Supply ἐπ' αὐτά. The imagery seems derived from Ps. ii. 2, seqq., applied in a similar manner at Acts iv. 25, seqq. It is well observed by Heinr. that the σου is emphatical; q. d. 'ultionem meditatus est Jova, et ejus ὀργή contra illorum ὀργήν insurrexit, per paronomasiam, ut infra διαφθεῖραι τοὺς διαφθ.' In the words following, the construction is harsh, and the mode of expression obscurely brief. The sense, when fully evolved, will be as follows: καιρὸς ἵστι, μικροῖς μὲν (δούλοις σου) τοῦ κριθῆναι, σοὶ δὲ, ὁ Θεὸς, καιρὸς ἵστι τοῦ δοῦναι τὸν μισθὸν αὐτοῖς, καὶ σοὶ ἵστι καιρὸς τοῦ διαφθεῖραι τοὺς διαφθείροντας. It is not clear whether διαφθεῖροντας is to be taken of destruction by wars and persecutions, or figuratively, of corrupting by false doctrines and evil examples.—τοὺς διαφθεῖροντας. Not, 'those who destroy,' but 'those who destroyed,' this being the particip. imperf. A view confirmed by the Pesch. Syr., Vulg., and Æth. Versions, and several modern interpreters, and also by the reading διαφθείραντας, oc. in MS. Cov. 2, and three other copies mentioned by Matth.: which, however, seems a gloss on the sense, 'who had destroyed,'—prob. the true sense.

19. For the first αὐτοῦ in the t. rec., MS. B, and others, have Κύριον, or τοῦ Κυρίου, which latter has been adopted by Matth., Gr., and Sch. On reconsideration of the question, I agree with Tis. and Words. in retaining the t. rec. The words καὶ σεισμός, not found in MS. B, and 25 cursives, confirmed by the Arab. Version and Æth., have been cancelled by Matth. and Tis. But the external authority for removing them is scarcely sufficient; and internal evidence is against their removal, from the circumstance, that one can better imagine why the two words should have been intentionally removed,—namely, by certain Critics, who might think this particular overloaded the picture—than inadvertently omitted. The genuineness of the words is, moreover, supported by the Pesch. Syr., Vulg., and Æth. Versions, and the ancient MSS. A and C, as also by the parallel passages of viii. 5, καὶ ἔγένοντο φωναὶ καὶ βρονταὶ καὶ ἄστραπαι καὶ σεισμός, and xvi. 18, where the same words occur. How apposite is here the mention of earthquakes will appear by considering that these convulsions, as Humboldt has shown, are usually preceded, and sometimes accompanied, by thunder and lightning, convulsion being, it seems, common to both. Moreover, the words are further confirmed by Isa. xxix. 6, Sept. (which seems to have been in the mind of St. John), ἐπισκοπή γὰρ ἵσται μετὰ βροντῆς καὶ σεισμοῦ καὶ φωνῆς μεγάλης.

XII. 1. With this ought to have been joined the last verse of the preceding Chapter, as being introductory of a new subject, 'containing (observes Prof. Lee) another exhibition of the difficulties, judgment, &c., attendant on the propagaπεριβεβλημένη τὸν ἥλιον, καὶ ἡ σελήνη ὑποκατῶ τῶν ποδῶν αὐτῆς, καὶ ἐπὶ τῆς κεφαλῆς αὐτῆς στέφανος ἀστέρων δώδεκα.<sup>2</sup> καὶ ἐν γαστρὶ ἔχουσα, κράζει ὠδίνουσα καὶ βασανιζομένη τεκεῖν. <sup>3</sup> Καὶ ὤφθη ἄλλο σημεῖον ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ καὶ ἰδοὺ δράκων μέγας πυρρὸς, ἔχων κεφαλὰς ἑπτὰ καὶ κέρατα δέκα, καὶ ἐπὶ τὰς κεφαλὰς αὐτοῦ διαδήματα ἑπτὰ· <sup>4</sup> καὶ ἡ οὐρὰ αὐτοῦ σύρει τὸ τρίτον τῶν ἀστέρων τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, καὶ ἔβαλεν αὐτοὺς εἰς τὴν γῆν καὶ ὁ δράκων ἔσθηκεν ἐνώπιον τῆς γυναικὸς τῆς μελλούσης τεκεῖν ἵνα, ὅταν τέκῃ, τὸ τέκνον αὐτῆς καταφάγῃ. <sup>5</sup> * Καὶ ἔτεκεν υἱὸν * ἄρσενά, ὃς μέλλει ποιμαίνειν πάντα τὰ ἔθνη ἐν ῥάβδῳ σιδηρᾷ· καὶ ἠρπάσθη τὸ τέκνον αὐτῆς πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν καὶ πρὸς τὸν θρόνον αὐτοῦ. <sup>6</sup> * καὶ ἡ γυνὴ ἔφυγεν εἰς τὴν ἔρημον, <sup>b</sup> ὅπου ἔχει ἱκί τόπον ἡτοιμασμένον ἀπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἵνα ἐκεῖ τρέφωσιν αὐτήν, ἡμέρας χιλίας διακοσίας ἐξήκοντα. <sup>7</sup> * Καὶ ἐγένετο πόλεμος ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ ὁ Μιχαὴλ καὶ οἱ ἄγγελοι αὐτοῦ * τοῦ πολεμῆσαι κατὰ τοῦ δράκοντος, καὶ ὁ

a Ps. 2, 9.
ch. 2, 27.
b ch. 19, 15.

b ch. 11, 2.

c Dan. 10, 12.
d 12, 1.
e Jude 9.

tion of the Gospel.' Of that verse the first clause is thought to have reference to a Jewish opinion, as to what should take place at the coming of the Messiah. Be that as it may, the sentiment (expressed graphically) is this,—that 'now there is an universal access to the favour of God, and the highest rewards in heaven await the pious worshippers of him.' In the second clause the purport of the sublime imagery introduced is not clear. See Heinr. and Prof. Lee.—περιβεβλημένη τὸν ἥλιον—δώδεκα. By γυνή some suppose to be meant the Jewish Church; but it would rather seem to be, as others think, the Christian Church, whose heavenly origin is designated by the sublimely figurative phraseology subjoined, which is supposed to be derived from Gen. xxxvii. 9, with which comp. Gal. iv. 19. The twelve stars are, with reason, thought to have a reference to the twelve Apostles, xxi. 14.

2. ὠδίνουσα καὶ βασαν. τ.] 'being in travail, and in great pangs to be delivered.' The Church may be viewed from its first beginning, when the promise of a Redeemer was given to our first parents; and the expectation of this promise being fulfilled is expressed in this verse. See Micah v. 3. Rom. viii. 22. (Woodhouse and Burton.)

3. ἔχων κεφαλὰς—διαδήματα] All meant to suggest mighty power among the kingdoms of the earth.

4. In ἡ οὐρὰ αὐτοῦ σύρει—οὐρανοῦ there seems to be an allusion to the notion of a comet taking its course across the heaven.—ἵνα καταφάγῃ, 'that he may utterly destroy.'

5. ποιμαίνειν—ῥάβδῳ σιδηρᾷ] i. e. finally subdue all her enemies, on some of whom God will execute signal vengeance. (Abp. Newc.) I now read ἄρσενά, with several cursive MSS., confirmed by MSS. A and C, which have indeed ἄρσεν, but evidently a mistake of scribes for ἄρσενά; or the α may have faded away in an old archetype. The MS. B has ἄρσεν, where the σ may have been carelessly omitted, or have faded away. Dr. Wordsworth's ἄρσεν is quite inadmissible in any prose writer, espec. of the N. T.

VOL. II.

—I have adopted, with La. and Tis., the second πρὸς, from strong external, confirmed by internal, evidence.

6. ἔφυγεν εἰς τὴν ἔρ.] A circumstance supposed to be derived from the flight of the Virgin Mary into Egypt with the infant Jesus. The mystical sense is disputed. But, after all, Professor Lee may be nearest the truth in supposing 'nothing more to be meant than God's faithfulness in never losing sight of his promise.'—ἱκί. This word, omitted in the t. rec., has been, on very strong authority, confirmed by internal evidence, introduced by all the recent Editors. For τρέφωσιν, the MS. B and 25 cursives have ἱκί, which was adopted by Matth., and recently by Tis.; while Gr., Sch., and Wordsw. retain τρέφ., as I still continue to do, espec. considering that internal evidence is in favour of it; for I scarcely doubt that the ἱκί arose from the ἱκί just before with abbreviation. Moreover, the simple verb occurs in the parallel passage infr. v. 14, εἰς τὸν τόπον αὐτῆς, ὅπου τρέφεται, &c. &c.

7—9. We have here a visionary scene presented to the mind of the Apostle, of which the allegory is variously interpreted; but perhaps best by Mede, Newton, Newc., and Bp. Horsley, as representing the vehement struggles between Christianity and Paganism during the first ages of the Gospel. 'The angel,' observes Bp. Horsley, 'of the two opposite armies represent two opposite parties in the Roman State, at the time which the vision more particularly regards. Michael's angels are the party who espoused the side of the Christian religion, the friends of which had, for many years, been numerous, and became very powerful under Constantine: the dragon's angels are the party which endeavoured to support the old idolatry.' Dr. Burton, however, renders καὶ ἔγένετο πόλ., 'Now there had been war'; and thinks that vv. 7—13 are parenthetical, and relate to an event prior to that in the preceding verses. 'It accounts (he says) for the hostility of Satan to the Church of Christ.'

7. πολεμῆσαι] On carefully reconsidering the

3 H

δ δαν. 2. 25. δράκων ἐπολέμησε καὶ οἱ ἄγγελοι αὐτοῦ <sup>8 d</sup> καὶ οὐκ ἴσχυσαν, ο Gen. 2. 1. 4. * οὐδὲ τόπος εὐρέθη αὐτῶν ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ. <sup>9 c</sup> καὶ ἐβλήθη Luke 10. 18. ὁ δράκων ὁ μέγας,—ὁ ὄφης ὁ ἀρχαῖος ὁ καλούμενος Διάβολος John 12. 31. καὶ [ὁ] Σατανᾶς,—ὁ πλανῶν τὴν οἰκουμένην ὅλην, ἐβλήθη εἰς 1 Cor. 11. 3. τὴν γῆν, καὶ οἱ ἄγγελοι αὐτοῦ μετ' αὐτοῦ ἐβλήθησαν. <sup>10 c</sup> Καὶ ch. 20. 2. ἤκουσα φωνὴν μεγάλην * ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ λέγουσαν Ἄρτι ἐγένετο f Job 1. 9. ἡ σωτηρία καὶ ἡ δύναμις καὶ ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ Θεοῦ ἡμῶν, καὶ
 2. 4. ἡ ἐξουσία τοῦ Χριστοῦ αὐτοῦ! ὅτι κατεβλήθη ὁ κατήγορος τῶν Zech. 3. 1. ἀδελφῶν ἡμῶν, ὁ κατηγορῶν αὐτῶν ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ ἡμῶν ch. 11. 18. ἡμέρας καὶ νυκτός. <sup>11 c</sup> καὶ αὐτοὶ ἐνίκησαν αὐτὸν διὰ τὸ αἷμα g Rom. 8. 31, 34, 37. τοῦ Ἀρνίου καὶ διὰ τὸν λόγον τῆς μαρτυρίας αὐτῶν καὶ οὐκ 2. 18. 20. ἠγάπησαν τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτῶν ἄχρι θανάτου. <sup>12 h</sup> Διὰ τοῦτο h Ps. 90. 11. εὐφραίνεσθε οἱ οὐρανοὶ καὶ οἱ ἐν αὐτοῖς σκηνοῦντες. οὐαὶ [τοῖς Isa. 40. 13. κατοικοῦσι] τῇ γῇ καὶ τῇ θαλάσσῃ! ὅτι κατέβη ὁ Διάβολος ch. 8. 12. πρὸς ὑμᾶς ἔχων θυμὸν μέγαν, εἰδὼς ὅτι ὀλίγον καιρὸν ἔχει.
<sup>13</sup> Καὶ ὅτε εἶδεν ὁ δράκων ὅτι ἐβλήθη εἰς τὴν γῆν, ἐδίωξε τὴν question of the reading here, I have seen reason to admit τοῦ πολέμησαι for ἰπολήμηναι, on the ground of strong external authority, confirmed by internal evidence.

8. καὶ οὐκ ἴσχυσαν] MS. A, and 25 cursives, with the Copt. Version and Andr., have ἴσχυσαν, which has been received by Matth., Gr., Sch., La., and Wordsw., but I still prefer, with Tin., to retain ἰσχυσαν, on the ground of its being superior in external authority, and supported by internal evidence; for ἴσχυσαν would involve such a harshness and anomaly of construction as could scarcely be found even in this Book. Moreover, the reading ἰσχυσαν is strongly supported by the Pesch. Syr. and Vulg. Versions. The οὐδὲ which I adopted, with Matth., Gr., and Sch., on strong evidence, external and internal, is also, I find, received by La. and Tin.

9. καὶ ἐβλήθη, &c.] An animated symbolical representation of the complete victory of Christianity over Heathenism. The ὁ before Σατ. is absent from MS. B, and 30 cursives (I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3), with Areth.; and its genuineness is doubtful.

10. ὁ κατήγορος τῶν ἀδ. ἡ.] See James ii. 7, and notes. For κατήγορος MS. A has κατήγωρ, which is edited by Gr. and Sch.; but rashly; for though it may seem more likely to be true, as presenting a very uncommon form, yet the vast preponderance of external evidence (namely, that of all the other MSS.) must forbid its being received. Besides, internal evidence may be urged for κατήγορος; since it is not improb. that in the MS. from which the Alexandrian was transcribed, the termination ο for ω written above (which frequently occurs), had been inadvertently omitted, and was faded away, or eaten away by a worm. This view is confirmed by the fact, noticed by Matth., that in several cursive MSS. he found κατήγορ. as I have found in the Cod. Cov. 2 of the 11th century. I must not omit to observe, that as to Gr. and Matth. cancelling the κατ in κατεβλήθη, it might arise from the κατ following; but it is prob. genuine; and the writer, as he is in other places very antithetical, so here seems to have intended a paronomasia between καταβλήθη and κατήγορος. Thus Paul (Acts xxiii. 3), on the High Priest's ordering his apparitors to 'smite him on the mouth,' says, 'God shall smite thee, thou whited wall.'

11. οὐκ ἠγάπησαν τὴν ψυχὴν α. ἡ. θ.] The phraseology is Hebraic, and obscure from brevity. The full sense is, 'they were careless of life, set lightly by it, even unto hazarding the loss of it by death,' a very rare use of ἀγαπ.; of which, however, I find another ex. in Artem. Onir. l. ii. 20, μεγάλων ἰφίμιοι, καὶ τὸ προστοχόν (an every-day matter) οὐκ ἀγαπῶνται.—Ἀχρί θαν. Bp. Middl. 'cannot imagine why our Translators used the uncouth phrase, "unto the death," εἰς θάνατον, as they were not led to it by the original.' Had the learned Prelate been as conversant with our old English authors as he was with the Class. writers, he would have been at no loss to see why the Article should here have been used. It was an idiom in frequent use in the time of Tyndale, from whom our Translators derived it. So Hackluyt says, of Chancellor's voyage to Russia, and the attempt to bring about a commercial treaty with Great Britain, 'he resolved either to bring that to pass, or else to die the death.' It occurs elsewhere in our Common Version, and Judg. v. 18, 'they jeoparded their lives unto the death,' Sept., λαὸς ἐνέκλεισε ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ εἰς θάνατον, obscit morti. The reason why our Translators used the expression 'the death' was, because that use of the Article, they well knew, always implied a violent death, as here, and in the fore-cited passage.

12. The words τοῖς κατοικοῦσι are, on the strongest grounds, cancelled by all the recent Editors.

13. This verse ought to commence a new section, as was seen by R. Stephens in his ed. O mirif., and also by Tyndale.—ἐξήμην. I would here now read ἀρσενος, for the reason mentioned supr. v. 5; and there is no incompetent authority γυναῖκα ἦτις ἔτεκε τὸν ἄρρενα· <sup>14</sup> καὶ ἐδόθησαν τῇ γυναικὶ αἱ <sup>i Dan. 7. 25. & 12. 7. ver. 6.</sup> δύο πτέρυγες τοῦ αἵτου τοῦ μεγάλου, ἵνα πέτηται εἰς τὴν ἔρημον εἰς τὸν τόπον αὐτῆς, ὅπου τρέφεται ἐκεῖ καιρὸν καὶ καιροὺς καὶ ἡμισυ καιροῦ, ἀπὸ προσώπου τοῦ ὄφεως· <sup>15</sup> καὶ ἔβαλεν ὁ ὄφης * ἐκ τοῦ στόματος αὐτοῦ ὀπίσω τῆς γυναικὸς ὕδωρ ὡς ποταμὸν, ἵνα * αὐτὴν ποταμοφόρητον ποιήσῃ. <sup>16</sup> καὶ ἐβοήθησεν ἡ γῆ τῇ γυναικὶ, καὶ ἤνοιξεν ἡ γῆ τὸ στόμα αὐτῆς καὶ κατέπιε τὸν ποταμὸν ὃν ἔβαλεν ὁ δράκων ἐκ τοῦ στόματος αὐτοῦ. <sup>17</sup> <sup>k 1 John 5. 10.</sup> Καὶ ὠργίσθη ὁ δράκων ἐπὶ τῇ γυναικὶ, καὶ ἀπῆλθε ποιῆσαι πόλεμον μετὰ τῶν λοιπῶν τοῦ σπέρματος αὐτῆς, τῶν τηρούντων τὰς ἐντολὰς τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ ἐχόντων τὴν μαρτυρίαν [τοῦ] Ἰησοῦ [Χριστοῦ].

<sup>18</sup> καὶ ἐστάθην ἐπὶ τὴν ἄμμον τῆς θαλάσσης· XIII. 1 * καὶ <sup>a Dan. 1. 7. ch. 17. 2, 9. 12.</sup>

in MS. C, and also A (for ἀρρενα, v. 5, is only a slip of the scribe for ἀρρενα), together with at least 2 others, Nos. 14 and 22. One cannot imagine what could induce La. here to edit, solely from the MS. A, the barbarous ἀρρενα—far more such than κατήγερ, which may have existed in Provincial Greek.

14. ἐδόθησαν—δύο πτέρυγες τ. d.] MSS. A, C, and 6 cursives (to which I add Cov. 2, omitted by Mill), Andreas, and Hippolytus, have αἱ before δύο, which has been adopted by La., Tis., and Wordsw.,—with some reason, since, though external authority for it is not very strong, it is supported by internal evidence, and by the Pesch. Syr. Version. I doubt not that the αἱ was in pronunciation absorbed by the εἰ just before. It is, indeed, required by propriety of language, considering that an eagle has but two wings, and to these two the Article has reference. Our authorized Version, followed by Abp. Newc., is here doubly erroneous, in the rendering 'two wings of a great eagle'; a rendering which overlooks the Article in a passage where all the copies have it; and only partially right is the rendering of Wakef., 'two wings of the great eagle.' Wesley offers a version altogether right, yet only by following his constant guide, Bengel,—who shows that here the great eagle means the Roman empire [rather power], as in Ezek. xvii. 3, 'the great eagle' means the king of Babylon; and by 'the two wings' there spoken of are to be understood the eastern and the western branches of the empire. The Hebraic idiom in ὅπου is such as is frequent in the Sept., as is also ἀπὸ προσώπου just after.

15—17. Of these verses (which have been variously interpreted) the sense seems simply to be, that 'the enemies of unadulterated Christian truth took different ways to subdue it; and particularly by endeavouring to, as it were, drown it by a flood of opposition and persecution, direct and indirect. But God raised up, from time to time, many who supported the faithful disciples of Christ.'

18. The alterations of position from the t. rec., which I have here, with the recent Editors, adopted, is based on MSS. A, B, C, and very many cursives, also Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2. On nearly the same authority rests the αὐτὴν, for t. rec. ταύτην, prob. an error of scribes. The subsequent most spirited term ποταμοφόρητος is so rare, that no other ex. occurs, except in Hesych. Lex. in v. ἀπόρρεσι, in explanation of the phrase ποταμοφόρητον ἱκοίμεθα, where ποταμ. must mean what is 'so carried away by the whelming waters as to be drowned.' And such seems the sense here intended; and St. John may have had in his mind Ps. cxliv. 4, 'then had the waters overwhelmed us' (Sept. καταπόντιες), 'the stream (ποταμός) had gone over our soul,' i. e. drowned us. Yet there the full sense has not been perceived, and I doubt not that the Heb. נָסַח in that passage (exactly as in Isa. xxviii. 17, 'the water shall sweep away by its washing [waves] the hiding-place,' for so I would there render) means 'would have whelmed and carried us away.'

16. ἤνοιξεν—κατίς] Fermed on Num. xxvi. 10. Deut. xi. 6.

17. ὀργίσθη] 'was angry at the woman:' see note on Luke xii. 53. The words τοῦ καὶ Χριστοῦ are, on very strong grounds, cancelled by the recent Editors. In the words ἐχόντων τὴν μαρτυρίαν Wordsw. recognises a phrase peculiar to the Apocalypse and the writings of St. John, expressing a firm maintenance of the truth. See Rev. vi. 9, 11. xix. 10, and 1 John v. 10.

18. ἐστάθην] MSS. A, C, and one cursive, with the Syr., Vulg., and Arab. Versions, have ἐστάθην, which has been edited by La., Thiele, and Wordsw.; but on insufficient authority; and the reading prob. arose from the very common confusion of the two terminations -ην and -η. All the other Editors retain ἐστάθην; but, according to that reading, the words ought to be thrown to the next chapter, as has been done virtually by Gr., Sch., and myself. Wordsw., indeed, conjoins the words with both chapters by pointing 'Ἰησοῦ καὶ ἐστάθην—θαλάσσης· καὶ εἶδον. But this is inconsistent with his own reading, by which ἐστάθην is referred to the dragon; whereas his punctuation would make the verb refer to both the dragon and St. John himself, which could not be. On further consideration, I am of opinion that ἐστάθην is prob., but not certainly, the true reading, as more suitable to the context; and internal evidence is in its favour. If this be the true reading, the sense will be, 'And he took post on the sea shore,' εἶδον ἐκ τῆς θαλάσσης θηρίον ἀναβαῖνον, ἔχον * κέρατα δέκα καὶ κεφαλὰς ἑπτὰ, καὶ ἐπὶ τῶν κεράτων αὐτοῦ δέκα διαδή-ματα, καὶ ἐπὶ τὰς κεφαλὰς αὐτοῦ * ὀνόματα βλασφημίας.

b ch. 12. 9. 2<sup>b</sup> Καὶ τὸ θηρίον ὃ εἶδον ἦν ὅμοιον παρδάλει, καὶ οἱ πόδες αὐτοῦ ὡς * ἄρκου, καὶ τὸ στόμα αὐτοῦ ὡς στόμα λέοντος.
c ch. 17. 2. αὐτοῦ καὶ ἐξουσίαν μεγάλην. 3<sup>c</sup> Καὶ [εἶδον] μίαν ἐκ τῶν κεφαλῶν αὐτοῦ ὡς ἐσφαγμένην εἰς θάνατον καὶ ἡ πληρὴ τοῦ θανάτου αὐτοῦ ἐθεραπεύθη. Καὶ ἐθαύμασεν ὅλη ἡ γῆ ὀπίσω τοῦ ch. 12. 12. θηρίου, 4<sup>d</sup> καὶ προσεκύνησαν * τῷ δράκοντι, ὅτι ἔδωκεν τὴν ἐξου-σίαν τῷ θηρίῳ, καὶ προσεκύνησαν * τῷ θηρίῳ, λέγοντες· Τίς namely, of the Mediterranean. Thus the Apostle is supposed beholding the encampment; and the next words may be rendered, 'Then I beheld,' &c.

XIII. On the contents of this and the next Chapter, considerable diversity of opinion exists; espec. as to the explanation of particular symbols, and their application to particular events. The best Expositors, however, are in general agreed that there is a reference to Papal Rome and the Romish religion, as opposed to the pure Church of Christ. See Prof. Lee's remarks on this Chapter, who adduces reasons for regarding it as 'a recital of the attacks to be made upon the Church and people of God by Daniel's fourth monarchy.' The beast rising out of the sea, he thinks, beyond all doubt, nothing more than Daniel's fourth beast, vii. 7; see also viii. 23. xi. 36-38. Of course, he understands the whole of the Roman power, civil and religious, as associated to destroy Christianity.

1. κίρπτα—κεφ. ἑπτὰ.] I have, with all the recent Editors, adopted this position, instead of that in the t. rec., from MSS. A, B, C, and very many cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1186 and Mus. 1, 2, 3), confirmed by all the Versions and several Fathers. I have now admitted, with the same Editors, and on authority as great, ὀνόματα, for t. rec. ὄνομα, espec. since it is confirmed by internal evidence, inasmuch as the Plur. is far more suitable; and the τα was likely to be lost through the negligence of scribes, by being placed over the μα.

2. ἄρκου.] So strong is the external authority, confirmed by internal evidence, existing for ἄρκου, found in very many ancient MSS. (also the Lamb. and Mus. copies), and adopted by almost all the Editors, that I have now received it. The genuineness of the word is attested by its being an Alexandrian form, occurring several times in the Sept. and Apoc., and once or twice in Jos. and Philo, though rarely, if ever, in the Class. writers.

3. The εἶδον, which I bracketed, has been cancelled, on strong authority (A, B, C, and many cursives, with Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3), by almost all the recent Editors. Nevertheless this fetching εἶδον from the preceding context, where it is not in direct assertion, is intolerably harsh. If it be adopted, the harshness may be lessened by punctuating thus: καὶ—ὃ θηρ.—λέοντος (καὶ ἔδωκεν αὐτῷ—μεγάλην), καὶ μίαν. Thus there will be an anacoluthon, or an antipodoton, the words being as if there had been written καὶ θηρίον εἶδον ὃ ἦν ὄμ., &c. As to the reading αὐτοῖ for αὐτ, edited by Matth. and Tie., for this there exists strong, but not preponderating, authority; and internal evidence is in favour of αὐτ, 'as it were,' (see notes on James v. 5. 1 Pet. iv. 19.) which I have, with Gr., Sch., and Wordsw., retained. I have also now admitted the ἐκ before τῶν, found in many MSS. (I add Lamb. 1186, Mus. 1, 2, 3), and confirmed by the several ancient Versions, and some Fathers.—αὐτ θάνατον should be rendered 'unto death,' 'ad mortem,' as the Pesch. Syr. and Æth. Versions, and even the Vulg., for 'in interm' was only low Latin for ad mortem. Etheridge and Murdock, indeed, render by 'to death,' but the Syr. original, ܡܪܬܝܬ, calls for ad mortem, as both Trost and Schaaf render. Thus the term θάνατον is qualified in sense by the αὐτ; and, though that may seem forbidden by the strong term ἐσφαγμ., yet even that does not always denote death, but sometimes no more than 'being dangerously wounded,' 'gashed,' as we say, here expressed by as it were unto death. Something of this peculiar use may be recognised at v. 6. But a certain proof of it occurs in Eurip. Iph. Aul. 1515-17, βαλεῖν αἰματορρόντος βαρυῦσαν, εὐφυῖ τι σώματος δίρην σφαγεῖσαν, 'graviter vulneratam,' 'hacked, or gashed,' where δίρην stands for αὐτ δίρην, 'at the neck, or throat,'—θαύμασας—θηρίον. Here we have a blending of two forms of expression; the full sense being, 'the whole world surveyed the Beast with admiration, and went after him.' Comp. John xii. 19, ὁ κόσμος [ἄλος, added in many MSS. and Versions] ὀπίσω αὐτοῦ ἀπέπλησεν.

4. τῷ δράκοντι, instead of t. rec. τὸν ἀράκοντα, has been, on strong authority (I add Lamb. and Mus. 1, 2, 3), received by all the Editors.—For ὅς many MSS. have ὅτι, which has been edited by all the recent Editors. I have thought proper to retain, with Wordsw., the t. rec., the other being evidently a mere alteration, to obtain an easier sense.—τῷ δίδωστί, found in B and 30 cursives (with the Lamb. and Mus. copies), is another mode of alteration.—For t. rec. τὸ θηρίον, I have, with all the recent Editors, adopted τῷ θηρίῳ, from B, C, with many cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2). I have now, on further consideration, prefixed τῇν τοῖς ἐξουσίαις, for which there exists strong external authority, confirmed by internal evidence. As to the καὶ, which all the recent Editors insert after θηρίῳ, there is strong external authority for it.—A, B, C, and 14 cursives; but internal evidence is against it. We may suppose it to have been inserted by Critics, who thought it required,—not perceiving the force of the asyndeton.

ὅμοιοι τῷ θηρίῳ; τίς δύναται πολεμῆσαι μετ' αὐτοῦ; <sup>5</sup> * Καὶ ἐδόθη αὐτῷ στόμα λαλοῦν μεγάλα καὶ βλασφημίας· καὶ ἐδόθη αὐτῷ ἐξουσία [πόλεμον] ποιῆσαι μῆνας τεσσαράκοντα δύο. <sup>6</sup> καὶ ἤνοιξε τὸ στόμα αὐτοῦ εἰς * βλασφημίας πρὸς τὸν Θεόν, βλασφημῆσαι τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ καὶ τὴν σκηνὴν αὐτοῦ, [καὶ] τοὺς ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ σκηνοῦντας. <sup>7</sup> * Καὶ ἐδόθη αὐτῷ πόλεμον ποιῆσαι μετὰ τῶν ἁγίων καὶ νικῆσαι αὐτούς· καὶ ἐδόθη αὐτῷ ἐξουσία ἐπὶ πᾶσαν φυλὴν καὶ λαὸν καὶ γλῶσσαν καὶ ἔθνος.

<sup>8</sup> * Καὶ προσκυνήσουσιν † αὐτῷ πάντες οἱ κατοικοῦντες ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, ὧν οὐ γέγραπται * τὸ * ὄνομα ἐν † τῇ βίβλῳ τῆς ζωῆς τοῦ Ἀρνίου [τοῦ] ἐσφαγμένου ἀπὸ καταβολῆς κόσμου. <sup>9</sup> <sup>h</sup> Εἰ τις

5. στόμα—βλασφημίας] Formed on Dan. vii. 8, and iii. 29, with which comp. 1 Macc. ii. 6. For βλασφημίας, the MS. B, and 30 cursives (with Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2) have βλασφημίας, which is adopted by Gr., Matth., and Tis.; while Sch. retains βλασφημίας, which I still continue to prefer, as supported by Dan. iii. 29, and undoubtedly read by the Pease. Syr. Translator. La., indeed, and Wordsw. edit βλάσφημα, from the MS. A, and a few cursives; but that is against both external authority and internal evidence, having every appearance of being a mere alteration of Critics, introduced for the purpose of removing a harshness, and suggested by Acts vi. 11, 13, ῥήματα λαλῶν βλάσφημα, though in the former passage βλασφημίας has place in two, but only two, MSS. Bezae, the phraseology of St. Luke and that of St. John widely differ.—πόλεμον ποιῆσαι. On carefully reconsidering the state of the evidence for and against πόλεμον, I am now inclined to agree with Sch., La., Tis., and Wordsw. in cancelling πόλεμον; for, although the external authority is but slender, it is strongly confirmed by internal evidence.

6. ἤνοιξε τὸ στόμα α. εἰς βλασφ.] namely, for the utterance of blasphemy. See note on Acts vi. 11, and infra xvi. 9. However, I now read, on competent authority, and with La., Tis., and Wordsw., have adopted εἰς βλασφημίας, 'for profane and wicked speeches.' See note on Mark ii. 7. At the close of the verse the words καὶ τὴν σκηνὴν αὐτοῦ are absent from MS. C, and the καὶ before τοῦ from A, C, and 23 cursives (I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3), and cancelled by Matth., Gr., La., and Wordsw., though they retain the foregoing words. But this is introducing stark nonsense. I quite agree with Sch. and Tis. in retaining the t. rec., since internal evidence is quite in its favour; for it was the repetition of καὶ that caused the loss of the first words, and of the second καὶ. Of course by σκην. is meant the abode of God—Heaven, as often in the Old Test.

8. προσκ. αὐτῷ] MSS. A, B, C, and 25 cursives (with Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3) have πρ. αὐτόν, which was adopted by Wets., Matth., and Gr., and more recently by Sch., La., Tis., and Wordsw., to whose united judgment I should be ready to defer, did I not consider the reading an open question. In editing, for τὰ ὀνόματα, τὸ ὄνομα, I have followed all the best Editors, who, in so reading, are borne out by strong external authority, confirmed by internal evidence. After ὄνομα the word αὐτοῦ is inserted in MSS. A, C, and one or two cursives, and it has been received by La. and Tis., though not by Sch. and Wordsw.; rightly, since the authority is quite insufficient, though internal evidence is in favour of the word. For τῇ βίβλῳ, the recent Editors all receive τῷ βιβλίῳ, also subjoining τοῦ before ἐσφαγμ. The former may seem called for by strong authority of MSS., confirmed by Andr., Areth., and Theodotion's Vers. of the passage of Dan. xii. 1, and another at ch. xxi. 27, ἡ μὴ οἱ γεγραμμένοι ἐν τῷ βιβλίῳ (in all the copies) τῆς ζωῆς. But internal evidence is in favour of t. rec. It might seem that the words τῆς ζωῆς (not found in the passage of Daniel) were subjoined by way of accommodating the passage to the present use. But the words τῆς ζωῆς are in the Sept. implied in the word σωθήσεται. And so, I doubt not, wrote Theodot., though our copies have, through an error on the part of the scribes, ὠψωθήσεται. The Hebrew should be rendered, 'shall be saved,' not 'shall escape,' as most Translators render, because the twofold sense requires σωθῆς, and the βιβλ. there mentioned is regarded as the book of God's fore-knowledge from the beginning. Strange is it that so many Commentators should have doubted the reference in the words ἀπὸ καταβολῆς κόσμου: the most judicious Expositors have been agreed that it is not, as the position would suggest, to ἐσφαγμ. (which would involve an intolerable harshness, and yield a sense here unsuitable), but to γέγραπται, as is required by the kindred passage at xvii. 8, ὧν οὐ γέγραπται τὰ ὀνόματα ἐπὶ τὸ βιβλίον τῆς ζωῆς ἀπὸ καταβολῆς κόσμου. For this reason the τοῦ, found in A, B, C, and many cursives, and received by all the recent Editors,—but absent from the great bulk of the MSS.,—is better away; otherwise it would go far to fix a false reference. Indeed, I suspect that the ancient Critics brought in the τοῦ (though it is quite true that Christ was in the designation and decree of God from the beginning so slain), as thinking it necessary to make out the reference to ἀπὸ καταβ. κ. But there

1 Gen. 9. 6.
Isa. 53. 1.
Matt. 26. 62.
oh. 14. 12.

ἔχει οὖς, ἀκουσάτω. 10<sup>1</sup> Εἴ τις αἰχμαλωσίαν συνάγει, εἰς αἰχμαλωσίαν ὑπάγει· εἴ τις ἐν μαχαίρᾳ ἀποκτενεῖ, δεῖ αὐτὸν ἐν μαχαίρᾳ ἀποκτανθῆναι. ὧδέ ἐστιν ἡ ὑπομονὴ καὶ ἡ πίστις τῶν ἁγίων.

is no need to incur the harshness thus arising. If the τοῦ be rejected, then the words may be rendered, 'whose names are not written (as those) from the creation of the world in the book of life of the Lamb slain;' or 'in the book of life of the slain Lamb;' for it seems intended that the expression should be taken as a Title of the Redeemer.

10. εἴ τις αἰχμαλωσίαν, &c.] meaning, that he (this power) that leadeth into captivity shall go into captivity: he that killeth with the sword must be killed with the sword (Isa. xxxiii. 1), which, it is added, is a theme for the faith and patience of THE SAINTS. (Lec.) The sense, however, will depend on the true reading of the text, which is not a little disputed. La. edits εἴ τις εἰς αἰχμ. συν. εἰς αἰχμ. ὑπάγει, Tis. εἰς τις εἰς αἰχμ. λωσίαν, εἰς αἰχμ. ὑπάγει. But the former rests on very slender authority, and the latter on what is any thing but strong. Sch. and Wordsw. retain the t. rec., which I am disposed still to do, at least in preference to both of the above new texts. And yet so very small is the authority for the t. rec., that little dependence can be placed on its genuineness. The true text can only be attained by a more careful collation of MSS. Meanwhile, I think it will turn out to be what is found in a few cursive MSS., confirmed by the Pesch. Syr. and Vulg. Versions, as also Irenæus and Primas., εἴ τις αἰς αἰχμαλωσίαν ὑπάγει, εἰς αἰχμ. ὑπάγει, q. d. 'If any man leadeth [any] into captivity, into captivity goeth he off [himself],' i. e. will go. This does not differ materially from Lachmann's text; only it rests on firmer authority, since the very reading of the most ancient MSS., B and C, εἴ τις ὑπάγει, confirms it, since the letters α and υ are often confounded. As respects the reading of MS. A, εἴ τις εἰς αἰχμαλωσίαν, εἰς αἰχμαλωσίαν ὑπάγει, which Tia. edits, it is, I suspect, corrupt, but only from the scribes' inadvertently omitting ὑπάγει, which, I doubt not, was in the archetype from which that MS. was copied; and I am fully persuaded that that was the original reading of St. John. However, I am now inclined to think that the original reading was εἴ τις ἀγει εἰς αἰχμ., which is confirmed by Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1 and 2; and many others (18 of which are specified by Scholz), εἴ τις ἔχει εἰς αἰχμ. ὑπάγει, for there ἔχει is manifestly corrupt, and an error of the scribes for ἀγει; no wonder, since the verbs ἀγειν and ἔχειν are often confounded by the scribes. The word was, I doubt not, omitted by the scribe of the Alex. MS. because he found in his original two readings, one above the other, thus — ὑπάγει (or ἔχει) ἀγει — and, not knowing which to take (as is often done in such a case) took neither. I prefer to read ἀγει rather than ὑπάγει, since internal evidence is in its favour; for ἀγ. might well arise from a gloss on ἀγ., or from a false correction, as in Acts xxiii. 10, ἀγειν εἰς τὴν παρεμβολήν, where MSS. A and B read ἀπάγειν, which was wrongly received into the text by La., and by Tia. in his 1st Ed. But ἀγει is entitled to preference on another account, since of ἀπάγειν εἰς αἰχμ. I cannot find a single ex., but of ἀγειν εἰς αἰχμ. several; e. gr. Ezek. xi. 24, ἡγάγέ με εἰς τὴν αἰχμ.; Jer. xv. 2 (which seems to have been in St. John's mind), ὅσοι εἰς θάνατον εἰς θάνατον, ὅσοι εἰς μάχαιραν εἰς μάχαιραν, ὅσοι εἰς αἰχμαλωσίαν εἰς αἰχμαλωσίαν, 'such as are (destined) to go into captivity, to captivity let them go!' This, I have no doubt, is the true reading, and was, I suspect, in the archetype of MS. B, though the scribe, through carelessness (occasioned by the recurrence of the phrase εἰς αἰχμ.), omitted the intermediate word ἀγει. In fact, the very reading above adduced I find in Lamb. 1186; Mus. 1 and 2; Andr. in MS., and not a few others (including the celebrated No. 2 (Paris x.), and 14 (the Leicr. MS.)), is, I doubt not, that of MS. B; for so it is laid down in Dr. Bentley's Collection (generally the best); which makes it easy to understand how the corruption arose, namely (from an ordinary and perpetual cause of omission), the repetition of a word, or words, as will thus appear, εἴ τις ἔχει αἰχμαλωσίαν ἔχει, [εἰς αἰχμαλωσίαν] ὑπάγει. Thus we attain to the reading of the archetype of those MSS., εἴ τις εἰς αἰχμ. ἔχει, εἰς αἰχμ. ὑπ. Nevertheless, ἔχει cannot be right; and we may suppose the true reading to be ἀγει; and the phrase ἀγειν αἰχμαλωσίαν = ἀγειν αἰχμαλωτίζοντες, occurs in the Sept. The next clause, of which the words seem formed on those of our Lord Matt. xxvi. 52, as our Lord's probably were on some such proverbial saying. Here, again, the MSS. exceedingly vary; and Tia. edits, from about 12 cursive MSS., εἴ τις ἐν μαχαίρᾳ, δεῖ, &c., thus omitting ἀποκτ. But I agree with La., Sch., and Wordsw. in retaining the t. rec. (confirmed by the Pesch. Syr. Version); for the other rests on but slender authority, involves great harshness, and is not at all in the manner of St. John. The reading of C is not noted; but I suspect that it is the same as that of A, which has εἴ τις ἐν μαχαίρᾳ, ἀποκτανθῆναι, — namely, by the omission of the words ἀποκτενεῖ, δεῖ αὐτόν, which were lost by reason of the repeated phrase ἐν μαχαίρᾳ. In Lamb. 1186 the reading is εἴ τις ἐν μαχαίρᾳ δεῖ αὐτόν ἀποκτανθῆναι, exactly as in the 15 cursives followed by Tia., and manifestly by an omission, through carelessness of scribes, of ἀποκτενεῖ. There is every reason to think that in the ancient archetype from which those three MSS. arose (either mediately or immediately) there was the identical reading represented in the Pesch. Syr. and Vulg. Versions, and found in the t. rec., which also I find in Mus. 1, 2, 3, and Cov. 2. — ὧδέ ἐστιν ἀγίων, meaning, 'Herein, in this matter, in resisting this enemy (see ver. 7), there is scope for the exercise of faith and patience in holy men.' In ἡ ὑπομονὴ καὶ ἡ πίστις, there is a hendiatres for ἡ πίστις ἡ ὑπομονή, constantissima fiducia, 'the thorough-enduring faith,' the πίστις καὶ μακροθ. of Heb. vi. 12. This use of ὧδέ, 'herein,' recurring infr. v. 18. xiv.

11 <sup>k</sup> Καὶ εἶδον ἄλλο θηρίον ἀναβαῖνον ἐκ τῆς γῆς, καὶ εἶχε <sup>k ch. 11. 7.</sup> κέρατα· δύο ὅμοια ἀρνίῳ, καὶ ἐλάλει ὡς δράκων· <sup>12</sup> <sup>l</sup> καὶ τὴν <sup>1 ver. 8. ch. 10. 20.</sup> ἐξουσίαν τοῦ πρώτου θηρίου πᾶσαν ποιεῖ ἐνώπιον αὐτοῦ· καὶ ποιεῖ τὴν γῆν καὶ τοὺς κατοικοῦντας ἐν αὐτῇ, ἵνα προσκυνήσωσι τὸ θηρίον τὸ πρῶτον, οὐ ἑθεραπεύθη ἡ πληγὴ τοῦ θανάτου αὐτοῦ.

13 <sup>m</sup> Καὶ ποιεῖ σημεῖα μεγάλα, † καὶ πῦρ ἵνα ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ <sup>m Matt. 24. 2. 2 Thess. 2. 9. ch. 16. 14. n ch. 16. 14. & 19. 20.</sup> καταβαίῃ εἰς τὴν γῆν ἐνώπιον τῶν ἀνθρώπων. <sup>14</sup> <sup>a</sup> καὶ πλανᾷ τοὺς κατοικοῦντας ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, διὰ τὰ σημεῖα ἃ ἐδόθη αὐτῷ ποιῆσαι ἐνώπιον τοῦ θηρίου, λέγων τοῖς κατοικοῦσιν ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, ποιῆσαι εἰκόνα τῷ θηρίῳ, † <sup>δ</sup> † ἔχει τὴν πληγὴν τῆς μαχαίρας καὶ ἔζησε· <sup>15</sup> <sup>o</sup> καὶ ἐδόθη αὐτῷ * πνεῦμα δοῦναι τῇ εἰκόνι· <sup>o ch. 19. 20. & 16. 2.</sup> τοῦ θηρίου, ἵνα καὶ λαλήσῃ ἡ εἰκὼν τοῦ θηρίου, καὶ ποιήσῃ ὅσοι ἂν μὴ προσκυνήσωσι † τὴν εἰκόνα τοῦ θηρίου, ἵνα ἀποκτανθῶσι.

16 <sup>p</sup> καὶ ποιεῖ πάντας, τοὺς μικροὺς καὶ τοὺς μεγάλους, καὶ τοὺς <sup>p ch. 19. 20. & 20. 4.</sup> πλουσίους καὶ τοὺς πτωχοὺς, καὶ τοὺς ἐλευθέρους καὶ τοὺς δούλους, ἵνα * δώσω αὐτοῖς χάραγμα ἐπὶ τῆς χειρὸς αὐτῶν τῆς δεξιᾶς, ἢ ἐπὶ * τὸ μέτωπον αὐτῶν· <sup>17</sup> <sup>q</sup> καὶ ἵνα μὴ τις δύνηται <sup>q ch. 14. 11. & 16. 2.</sup> ἀγοράσαι ἢ πωλῆσαι, εἰ μὴ ὁ ἔχων τὸ χάραγμα, [ἡ] τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ θηρίου, ἢ τὸν ἀριθμὸν τοῦ ὀνόματος αὐτοῦ. <sup>18</sup> <sup>r</sup> Ὡδε ἡ <sup>r ch. 17. a.</sup> σοφία ἐστίν ὁ ἔχων [τὸν] νοῦν, ψηφισάτω τὸν ἀριθμὸν τοῦ θηρίου· ἀριθμὸς γὰρ ἀνθρώπου ἐστὶ, καὶ ὁ ἀριθμὸς αὐτοῦ χξϞ'.

XIV. <sup>1</sup> <sup>a</sup> Καὶ εἶδον, καὶ ἰδοὺ τὸ Ἄρνιον † ἐστηκὸς ἐπὶ τὸ <sup>a ch. 5. 6. & 7. 4.</sup>

12. xvii. 9, is an idiom peculiar to the Scriptures.

11, 12. Ἄλλο θηρίον] This is supposed to be emblematical of the Romish hierarchy: the two horns denoting the regular and the secular clergy. Many points of similarity in the following verses with the Romish hierarchy and ecclesiastics have been traced, with more or less probability, by Commentators.

13. καὶ πῦρ ἵνα—καταβαίῃ] Tis. edita ἵνα καὶ πῦρ ποιῇ—καταβαίῃ, from MSS. A, C, and a few cursives; while Wordsw. retains, with Gr. and Sch., the t. rec., supported by MS. B, and the great body of the MSS. (with the Lamb. and Mus. copies); rightly; for the other reading savours of critical emendation to get rid of a harshness of position.

14. For δ, La., Tis., and Wordsw. read δ, from A, B, C, and 5 cursives, which has internal evidence in its favour; but needs more external authority, which I cannot supply, except by Lamb. 1186. The very reverse holds good of εἶχε for ἔχει, edited by Tis., from B, and 30 cursives,—being evidently a critical correction. The τὴν, just after, not found in B, and a few cursives (I add Lamb. 1186, Mus. 1, 2, 3), was omitted by carelessness of scribes.

15. I now read, with La. and Tis., πν. δ. for t. rec. δ. πν., from B and 20 cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1186, Mus. 1, 2, 3), confirmed by internal evidence.—For τὴν εἰκόνα, MS. A and not a few others have τῇ εἰκόνι, which has been adopted by Scholz and Wordsw.; while La. and

Tis. retain τὴν εἰκ.; rightly; since internal evidence, as well as external authority, is in its favour.

16. The readings δώσω and τὸν μέτωπον, for t. rec. δώσω and τῶν μετώπων, I have on strong authority, external and internal, adopted, with Sch., La., Tis., and Wordsw. The ἢ, which I placed within double brackets, has been cancelled by all the recent Editors. Wordsw. well renders, 'that they should give to themselves;' intimating compulsion under the semblance of choice.

17. καὶ ἵνα μὴ τις δύν. ἀγορ.] 'and that no one should have the power to buy;' simply denoting a deprivation of political privileges. So Thucyd. v. 34, ὥστε μήτε πριαμίνοις τι ἢ πολούρταις κυρίως εἶναι.—The δύναται, for t. rec. δύνηται, edited by Tis. (alone), from B and a few cursives, is plainly a blunder of scribes.—τὸν ἀριθμὸν τοῦ ὀν., meaning, 'the number which the letters of the name make up.' 'This passage (says Heintz.) is to be explained from the Cabala of the Jews. It means "the number which is made up, by reducing the numeral power of each of the letters of which the name is composed, and bringing it to a sum total." That art, now held in merited contempt, was, in the time of the Apostle, in great honour, not only among the Jews, but also the Greeks, as we may collect from Artemid. On. i. 12.'

18. ὥδε ἡ σοφία ἐστίν.] meaning, 'Herein is wisdom to be shown,' herein is a test of wisdom, or sagacity, 'a fit occasion for exercising it;' see v. 10, and note.

δρος Σιών, καὶ μετ' αὐτοῦ ἑκατὸν τεσσαρακοντατέσσαρες χιλι-άδες, ἔχουσαι τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ, καὶ τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ Πατρὸς αὐτοῦ γεγραμμένον ἐπὶ τῶν μετώπων αὐτῶν <sup>2</sup> καὶ ἤκουσα φωνὴν ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ὡς φωνὴν ὑδάτων πολλῶν, καὶ ὡς φωνὴν βροντῆς μεγάλης· καὶ ἡ φωνὴ ἦν ἤκουσα ὡς κιθαριδῶν κιθαριζόντων ἐν ταῖς κιθάραις αὐτῶν <sup>3</sup> καὶ ἄδουσιν [ὡς] ψῆδὴν καινὴν ἐνώ-πιον τοῦ θρόνου, καὶ ἐνώπιον τῶν τεσσάρων ζώων καὶ τῶν πρεσ-βυτέρων καὶ οὐδεὶς ἠδύνατο μαθεῖν τὴν ψῆδὴν, εἰ μὴ αἱ ἑκατὸν τεσσαρακοντατέσσαρες χιλιάδες οἱ ἡγορασμένοι ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς.
<sup>4</sup> Οὗτοί εἰσιν οἱ μετὰ γυναικῶν οὐκ ἐμολύνθησαν, παρθένοι γάρ εἰσιν οὗτοί εἰσιν οἱ ἀκολουθοῦντες τῷ Ἀρνίῳ ὅπου ἂν ὑπάγῃ. οὗτοι ἡγοράσθησαν ἀπὸ τῶν ἀνθρώπων ἀπαρχὴ τῇ Θεῷ καὶ τῷ Ἀρνίῳ <sup>5</sup> καὶ ἐν τῷ στόματι αὐτῶν οὐχ εὐ-ρέθη *ψεύδος· ἄμωμοι γάρ εἰσιν [ἐνώπιον τοῦ θρόνου τοῦ Θεοῦ].

<sup>6</sup> Καὶ εἶδον ἄλλον ἄγγελον πετόμενον ἐν μεσουρανήματι, ἔχοντα εὐαγγέλιον αἰώνιον εὐαγγελίσαι [εἰ] τοὺς *καθημένους

XIV. 1. ἑκατὸν τεσσαρακοντατέσσαρες χιλιάδες, &c.] These represent the true members of Christ's Church. Comp. supr. vii. 4. They are, as Mede calls them, the legitimate and undegenerate offspring of the twelve Apostles. (Abp. Newc.) With this whole passage comp. that at Heb. xii. 22—24. On the several disputed points, as to particulars, see the Notes of Scott, Woodhouse, and Lee. The τὸ, not found in the t. rec., has been inserted by all the recent Editors, on the authority of A, B, C, and many cursives (to which I add the Lamb. and Mus. copies). For t. rec. ἱσθητός, La. and Wordsw. edit ἱστός, from MSS. A, C; but Tia. ἱστός, from MS. B and several others; while Sch. retains ἱσθητός. Internal evidence is against the t. rec.; but, as to the other two readings, there is an open question; though external authority would rather incline the scales in favour of ἱστός. Yet it is rather a matter of dialect as regards the terminations -ος and -ος, on which I have more than once treated in my notes on Thucyd. The words αὐτοῦ—τὸ ὄνομα, which I have inserted, are also adopted, on the strongest authority, by La., Tia., and Words.

2. φωνὴν ὑδ. πολλῶν.] Formed on Ezek. xliii. 2.—ἡ φωνὴ—ὡς κτθ. This reading, for t. rec. φωνὴν ἤκουσα κιθαριδῶν, I have, with all the recent Editors, received, on the strongest authority, confirmed by internal evidence.

3. οἱ ἡγορασμένοι ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς.] This peculiar expression is tantamount to that in the next verse, ἡγοράσθ. ἀπὸ τῶν ἀνθρ. Thus the full sense intended is, 'out of those upon the earth,' i. e. the sons of men, so as to form a little flock rescued from perdition, redeemed from all sin, and thus forming what is called, v. 4, an ἀπαρχὴ τῷ Θεῷ καὶ τῷ Ἀρνίῳ. The ὡς before ψῆδὴν, which I placed within single brackets, has been cancelled by Sch., Tia., and Wordsw., but retained by La. External authority is rather in its favour (I find it in Lam. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3), but internal evidence equally balanced.

4. ἂν ὑπάγῃ] 'he may go.' The ὑπάγει, adopted by La., from A, C, and 2 cursives, is a mere itacism, or error of scribes. I have still retained the same punctuation, though Editors differ not a little; who ought to have seen that the persons in question—the 144,000, sealed on their foreheads, and redeemed from the earth and sin—are here meant to be marked out, so as to be known by their principal characteristics; (1) that of spotless purity; (2) that of universal devotedness to their Master.—following his holy example in all things, and following his Word, Spirit, and Providence, for their guidance in all the duties that may be laid on them, and the difficulties they may encounter in the discharge of them.—The next words, οὗτοι εἰσιν, &c., do not present another characteristic of them, but point at their reward through grace, as being the Lord's 'choice ones,' 'the first-fruits of the great spiritual harvest, rescued by redeeming mercy out of a world of sin and misery.'—The next words (v. 5) seem a resumption of the thought at the first clause of v. 3, so as to further develop the idea, extending it from sexual purity to general spotlessness,—in short, the absence of wickedness of any kind; for such is the force of ψεύδος, which I have, with all the recent Editors, adopted, on the strongest grounds, for t. rec. δόλος—a sense of ψεύδ. recurring at xxi. 27. xxii. 15, also in Sept., Hoa. vii. 3. xii. 11, 12. The next words, ἐνώπιον—Θεοῦ, have been cancelled by all the recent Editors, and with reason; since external authority and internal evidence are alike against them.

6. εἰχ. εὐαγγέλιον αἰώνιον εὐαγγελίσαι.] Render: 'having an universal Gospel to preach.—καθημένους, for t. rec. κατοικεῦντες, has been, on competent authority (confirmed by the Lamb. and Mus. copies), introduced by the Editors. La., Tia., and Wordsw. prefix εἰ before καθημ., as also before πάν· while Sch. prefixes it before the latter, not before the former. There is indeed strong authority (to which I add ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, καὶ [ἐπὶ] πᾶν ἔθνος καὶ φυλὴν καὶ γλῶσσαν καὶ λαὸν, 7 * λέγων ἐν φωνῇ μεγάλῃ "Φοβήθητε τὸν Θεὸν καὶ <sup>g Gen. 1. 1. Ps. 33. 6. & 134. 3. & 146. 6. Acts 14. 14. & 17. 34.</sup> δότε αὐτῷ δόξαν, ὅτι ἦλθεν ἡ ὥρα τῆς κρίσεως αὐτοῦ καὶ προσκυνήσατε τῷ ποιήσαντι τὸν οὐρανὸν καὶ τὴν γῆν καὶ τὴν θάλασσαν καὶ πηγὰς ὑδάτων!" 8 <sup>h Isa. 51. 9. Jer. 51. 5. ch. 18. 2. & 10. 31. & 16. 19. & 17. 2. & 18. 2.</sup> Καὶ ἄλλος ἄγγελος ἠκολούθησε, λέγων "Ἐπεσεν, [ἔπεσε] Βαβυλῶν [ἡ πόλις] ἡ μεγάλη! * ἡ ἐκ τοῦ οἴνου τοῦ θυμοῦ τῆς πορνείας αὐτῆς πεπότικε πάντα τὰ ἔθνη! 9 Καὶ * ἄλλος ἄγγελος τρίτος ἠκολούθησεν αὐτοῖς, λέγων ἐν φωνῇ μεγάλῃ "Εἴ τις * προσκυνεῖ τὸ θηρίον καὶ τὴν εἰκόνα αὐτοῦ, καὶ λαμβάνει χάραγμα ἐπὶ τοῦ μετώπου αὐτοῦ ἢ ἐπὶ τὴν χεῖρα αὐτοῦ 10 <sup>i Ps. 78. 8. Isa. 51. 17. Jer. 25. 16. ch. 16. 19. & 19. 20. & 20. 10.</sup> καὶ αὐτὸς πίεται ἐκ τοῦ οἴνου τοῦ θυμοῦ τοῦ Θεοῦ, τοῦ κεκρασμένου ἀκράτου ἐν τῷ ποτηρίῳ τῆς ὀργῆς αὐτοῦ, Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3) for the ἐπὶ before πᾶν, and hence it would be quite admissible before καθ. ἰ. τ. γῆς, were there competent authority for it; but there is not, there being only A, C, and 3 cursives (though I can add Mus. 1, 2, 3), while the bulk of the MSS. (including Lamb. 1186) have it not.

7. λέγων] This, for t. rec. λέγοντα, has been received by all the recent Editors, on competent external authority, confirmed by internal evidence.—For Θεόν, MS. B. and 20 cursives (with Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3), have Κύριον; but it is inadmissible, as will appear from supr. xi. 13, and note. At any rate, Heinr. wrongly refers to John ix. 24, in illustration of the force of the expression here, δόξα Θεῷ; though it may be true that there is here, as he observes, a 'solemnis formula apud Judæos, quæ interpretantur secus sentientes agentesque, quos ad rectum Jovæ cultum revocare volebant.' However, τὸν Θεόν is emphatical; and the full sense is, 'Fear ye God, and give glory to Him (alone), and not any portion to the Beast, nor to any image whatever; this is implied in the subsequent words, τῷ ποιήσαντι τὸν οὐρανὸν—ὑδάτων, as distinguishing God, the Creator of the universe, from idols, the mere works of men's hands.—The words ὅτι ἦλθεν ἡ ὥρα τῆς κρίσεως αὐτοῦ must be explained according to the view taken of the reference, and of the whole passage. They may, however, be taken as words not of consolation only, but of warning.

8. By Βαβυλῶν is meant, as the best Expositors are agreed, the mystical Babylon, ROME, the metropolis of apostasy. In ἐκ τοῦ οἴνου—ἔθνη there is an almost lyrically bold expression of mad and unbounded idolatry, which is compared to a harlot alluring to lasciviousness. Heinr. compares a similar image in the Tabula Cebetis: ἀπάτῃ καλεῖται, ἡ πάντας τοὺς ἀνθρώπους—ποτίζει τῇ ἑαυτῆς οὐδαμῇ. Comp. Rom. i. 24, 26, 28.—After ἄλλος, Matth., La., Tis., and Wordsw. insert δεύτερος, from MSS. A, B, and 25 cursives (to which I add the Lamb. and Mus. copies), confirmed by the Syr. Vers., Andr., and Aréth. But, considering that internal evidence is against the insertion, I still, with Gr. and Sch., reject it. It was, I suspect, introduced by the Critics, to correspond to the ἄλλος τρίτος at v. 9, init. I have now received, with La., Tis., and Wordsw., ἡ, for the t. rec., from A, C, and 10 cursives, confirmed by the Syr., Vulg., and Æth. Versions. The ὅτι was plainly a marginal scholium. This I prefer to cancelling the ὅτι, with Gr. and Matth. Some word is indispensable; and here the omission arose (as in very many other cases) from the double reading. After πάντα, I have now, with La., Tis., and Wordsw., inserted τὰ, from MSS. A, B, C, and 20 cursives (with the Lamb. and Mus. copies), since internal evidence is in favour of the words. The words τοῦ θυμοῦ were cancelled, on insufficient authority, by Bengel, Gr., and Heinr.,—not aware that the ancient Critics removed the words from ignorance of their force, as pointing at the causes of the thing (just as at xviii. 3, where no MS. omits); q. d. in the words of Bp. Hall, 'and thereby hath caused them to drink of that cup of God's wrath and vengeance, which belongs to those grievous offences.'

9. ἄλλος ἄγγελος τ.ρ.] This, for t. rec. τρίτ. ἄγγ., I have admitted, with all the recent Editors, on very strong grounds (to which I add all the Lamb. and Mus. copies). They all edit, from very many of the best MSS., προσκ. τὸ θηρ., for t. rec. τὸ θηρ. πρ., which I have now adopted.—λαμβάνει χάραγμα, &c. Vide supr. v. 17.

10, 11. The heaviest punishments here and hereafter are now threatened. (Abp. Newc.) 'There, indeed, is not,' as observes Wesley, 'in all Scripture another threatening so terrible as this.'

10. In καὶ αὐτὸς πίεται there is, as Heinr. remarks, an antianacrasis; q. d. 'He had before a cup of inebriating sweetness, but now he will drink the cup of Divine wrath in full draught.' See Jer. xxv. 15. Isa. li. 17, 22.—κεκρασμ. ἀκράτου. The best Commentators are agreed that this denotes pure wine made yet stronger by a mixture of powerful ingredients. Comp. Lowth on Isa., ch. i., and Woodhouse in loc. For δύναν ἄγγ. La. editis ἄγγ. δγ., from MS. C and two or three cursives; and Tis. cancels δγ., from MS. A and one cursive. But I can approve of neither reading. The omission plainly arose, as is often the case, from the change of position in the words; καὶ βασανισθήσεται ἐν πυρὶ καὶ θείῳ ἐνώπιον τῶν ἁγίων ἀγγέλων καὶ ἐνώπιον τοῦ Ἀρνίου. <sup>11</sup> καὶ ὁ καπνὸς τοῦ βασανισμοῦ αὐτῶν ἀναβαίνει εἰς αἰῶνας αἰώνων, καὶ οὐκ ἔχουσιν ἀνάπαυσιν ἡμέρας καὶ νυκτὸς οἱ προσκυνῶντες τὸ θῆριον καὶ τὴν εἰκόνα αὐτοῦ, καὶ εἴ τις λαμβάνει τὸ χάραγμα τοῦ ὀνόματος αὐτοῦ.”

1 ch. 12. 10. <sup>12</sup> Ὡδε ἡ ὑπομονὴ τῶν ἁγίων ἐστίν [ὥδε] οἱ τηροῦντες τὰς ἐντολὰς τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ τὴν πίστιν Ἰησοῦ. <sup>13</sup> Καὶ ἤκουσα φωνῆς ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ λεγούσης [μοι]. Γράψον Μακάριοι οἱ νεκροὶ οἱ ἐν Κυρίῳ ἀποθνήσκοντες ἀπάρτι. Ναί, λέγει τὸ Πνεῦμα, ἵνα † ἀναπαύσωνται ἐκ τῶν κόπων αὐτῶν † τὰ δὲ ἔργα αὐτῶν ἀκολουθεῖ μετ’ αὐτῶν.

14 <sup>n</sup> Καὶ εἶδον, καὶ ἰδοὺ νεφέλη λευκὴ, καὶ ἐπὶ τὴν νεφέλην n Ezek. 1.

25.
Dan. 7. 13.
ch. 1. 12.
8 & 9.

and there is too little authority to warrant even the change of position in the words, adopted by some recent Editors.

12. Ὡδε ἡ ὑπ. τ. ἀγ.] I have now, with Matth., La., Tia, and Wordsw. inserted ἡ, from MSS. A, B, C, and above 20 cursives, with Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3, espec. since internal evidence is in its favour. On the force of the Ὡδε, with ἰστί, expressed or understood, see note supr. xiii. 10. Here the words may be rendered, ‘Herein [is] the patient endurance (constancy in faith and duty) of the saints;’ intimating that their state of suffering for conscience sake is to be the test and trial of their constancy unto the end; the fit occasion for evincing their possession of the quality of mind in question. This sense of the phrase Ὡδε ἰστί is, I believe, quite peculiar to St John, and was, perhaps, a provincialism of Syrian Greek. The second Ὡδε is, on strong external authority (to which I add the Lamb. and Mus. copies), cancelled by all the recent Editors. But I cannot do more than place it within single brackets, since internal evidence, properly weighed, is rather in its favour.

13. ἀπάρτι.] I am still of the same opinion as to the construction and force of this word. Render: ‘Blessed are they from henceforth who die in the Lord,’ meaning that their blessedness commences then, and continues uninterruptedly. Dr. Wordsw. points, ἀποθνήσκοντες ἀπάρτι ναί, λέγει, &c. But that, however specious, is doing violence to the construction, and there thus arises a strained, yet jejune sense. He would have done better to point, and read, ἀπάρτι λέγει: Ναί, from many MSS. But that reading so plainly arose from alteration for the purpose of removing a difficulty, that we are not warranted in receiving it. What is said at ναί λέγει τὸ Πν. was meant to confirm what was just said by, as it were, the HOLY SPIRIT himself attesting its truth. Moreover, the ἀπάρτι is intended to further develop and strengthen the sense in μακάριοι—ἀποθνήσκοντες, q. d. ‘happy, I say, peculiarly happy from henceforth, lit. “now onward” (i. e. from the period of their dying in the Lord [even for ever]).’ As respects the et just after, for this one should have expected ἀπὸ found in one or two MSS.; nay, even the use of a Preposition at all is rather rare, the simple Genit. being more usual. Yet instances are found even in the Class. writers of et, e.g. Aristoph. Ran. 1531, ἐκ μεγάλων δάκρυων παύσαιμ’, and Eurip. El. 1108. The reading ἀναπαύσονται for t. rec. -νται is deserving of attention, and is not improbably the true one. Exx. of ἵνα with Fut. Ind. are not unfrequent in this Book; e.g. iii. 9 (ἔχουσιν La. and Tia) xiii. 12, προσκυνῶσιν (La. and Tia), xiii. 16, δόξουσιν, in some MSS.; xiii. 14, ἵνα ἰστί, in all the copies, though the Subjunct. ἀναπαύσωνται follows in the same clause. As respects ἀναπαύσονται, edited by La. and Tia, it is evidently a mere slip of the pen by the scribes of the two MSS. A and C. Vain were it to plead the well-known Canon for a barbarism. On the term δυστ. to denote ‘resting from the labours and troubles of life by death,’ see other exx. in Job x. 2. Micah iv. 4. Deut. v. 14. Esth. ix. 16. Ælian, Var. Hist. iv. 7.—At the next clause there is a disputed reading. For τὰ δὲ ἔργα, La., Tia. (Ed. 1), and Wordsw. edit τὰ γὰρ ἔργα, from MSS. A, C, and 3 cursives, with the Syr. and Vulg. Versions. But in his 2nd Ed. Tia. has restored δέ; rightly; since the other was a mere alteration of Critics, ignorant of the force of δέ, which should not be rendered ‘and,’ since ‘but’ (used by Tyndale) will better express the sense, denoting, as in Mark vii. 26. Luke xxiii. 17. John vi. 17. xi. 2. xix. 23 (and often in the Class. writers), that a fresh circumstance is added; q. d. ‘happy are they! not merely because they shall rest from their labours and trials, escaping the impending calamities,—but because their works (their labours of love in Christ) are to follow them in their fruits,—to go along with them (when admitted to the inheritance of the saints in light), as it were, receive with them the reward which God has promised should attend them.’

14—20. Here again the judgments of God upon [Babylon and] the adherents of the beast are foretold, and graphically represented under the figures of harvest and vintage, which are often, both in the Scriptural and Classical writers, symbolical of destruction. See Joel iii. 13. Isa. xvii. 5. Hom. II. xi. 67. Virg. Æn. x. 513. The Messiah is represented under the similitude of a husbandman committing the work of reaping to his labourers, and holding in his own hand a sickle, as a symbol of punishment, the execution of the judgment committed to him by the Father, John v. 22. The figure in ἐπὶ τὴν νεφ. καθ. is found

† καθήμενος † ὅμοιος Τίῳ ἀνθρώπου, ἔχων ἐπὶ τῆς κεφαλῆς αὐτοῦ
 στέφανον χρυσοῦν, καὶ ἐν τῇ χειρὶ αὐτοῦ δρέπανον ὀξύ. <sup>15</sup> * Καὶ <sup>o ch. 14. 17.
 Joel 3. 13.
 Matt. 12. 30.
 Jer. 51. 33.</sup>
 ἄλλος ἄγγελος ἐξῆλθεν ἐκ τοῦ ναοῦ κράζων ἐν μεγάλῃ φωνῇ τῷ καθιμένῳ ἐπὶ τῆς νεφέλης Πέμψον τὸ δρέπανόν σου καὶ θέρισον, ὅτι ἦλθέ [σοι] ἡ ὥρα [τοῦ] θερίσαι, ὅτι ἐξηράνθη ὁ θερισμὸς τῆς γῆς. <sup>16</sup> καὶ ἔβαλεν ὁ καθήμενος ἐπὶ τὴν νεφέλην τὸ δρέπανον αὐτοῦ ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν, καὶ ἐθερίσθη ἡ γῆ.

<sup>17</sup> Καὶ ἄλλος ἄγγελος ἐξῆλθεν ἐκ τοῦ ναοῦ τοῦ ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ ἔχων καὶ αὐτὸς δρέπανον ὀξύ. <sup>18</sup> * καὶ ἄλλος ἄγγελος ἐξῆλθεν <sup>p ch. 14. 2.
 Joel 3. 13.</sup> ἐκ τοῦ θυσιαστηρίου ἔχων ἐξουσίαν ἐπὶ τοῦ πυρὸς, καὶ ἐφώνησε κραυγῇ μεγάλῃ τῷ ἔχοντι τὸ δρέπανον τὸ ὀξύ, λέγων Πέμψον σου τὸ δρέπανον τὸ ὀξύ, καὶ τρύγησον τοὺς βότρυας τῆς ἀμπέλου τῆς γῆς, ὅτι * ἤκμασεν ἡ σταφυλὴ † αὐτῆς. <sup>19</sup> * Καὶ ἔβαλεν ὁ <sup>q ch. 19. 14.</sup> ἄγγελος τὸ δρέπανον αὐτοῦ εἰς τὴν γῆν, καὶ ἐτρύγησε τὴν ἀμπε-λον τῆς γῆς, καὶ ἔβαλεν εἰς τὴν ληνὸν τοῦ θυμοῦ τοῦ Θεοῦ * τὸν μέγαν. <sup>20</sup> * Καὶ ἐπατήθη ἡ ληνὸς * ἔξωθεν τῆς πόλεως, καὶ <sup>r Isa. 63. 2.
 Lam. 1. 15.
 Ob. 11. 3.
 & 12. 14.</sup> ἐξῆλθε αἷμα ἐκ τῆς ληνοῦ ἄχρι τῶν χαλινῶν τῶν ἵππων, ἀπὸ σταδίων χιλίων ἑξακοσίων.

also in Dan. vii. 13, and Virg. Æn. ix. 640. (Heinr.)—For καθήμενος ὅμοιος, all the recent Editors receive καθήμενος ὅμοιος, from many MSS. (to which I could add), Versions, and Fathers,—perhaps rightly, at least internal evidence is rather in its favour.

15. ὅτι ἦλθε, &c. ὅτι ἐξηράνθη] It is well observed by Bp. Jebb, Sac. Lit., p. 387, that these two clauses are not [as they may seem] synonymous in sense; the reasons for reaping being distinct and progressive: 1. the proper season for reaping is come; 2. the harvest of the earth is withered, and therefore demands the sickle. At ver. 17—ult. there is, as Heinr. observes, the other part of the image; q. d. 'Not only is the harvest ripe, but the vintage is ready:' the image being similar to that at Isa. lxiii. 3, and Jer. vi. 9. It may seem strange that a sickle should be mentioned for the vintage; but it seems that grapes were sometimes not gathered by the hand, but cut off by a hooked knife, of a sickle-like form.—τοῦ θερίσαι. La., Tis., and Wordsw., on the authority of MSS. A, B, C, and 20 cursives, cancel τοῦ, which I have, with Matth., Gr., and Sch., retained. I am, however, now induced to bracket the word; though, as external authority is not against, and internal evidence is quite in its favour, I can go no further. It is in its favour,—for this use of the simple Infinit., after the phrase ὁ καιρὸς, or ἡ ὥρα ἐστίν, is the pure Class. use found in the best writers from Homer, Hdtot., and Æschyl., downwards; while that of the Infinit. preceded by τοῦ is scarcely ever found in the earlier and pure writers; though occasionally in the later, as Dion. Hal., Joa., Arrian, and Dio Cass.; and it perpetually occurs in the Sept., and frequently in the N. Test.; though sometimes the Infinit., without τοῦ, even when denoting purpose, is found in the N. Test.; e. gr. Luke vi. 12. John xiv. 2; but this is a rare case; for passages where purpose is not indicated come not under this category. And this use in the Apocalypse is, I think, almost unexampled, except xvi. 19. xx. 8, since v. 1. Internal evidence is quite in its favour; and thus the harshness of the ellipse will be somewhat lessened; and the ellipse, is not ἦσαν, which would require τῷ π., but ἐξῆλθεν, to be supplied from the subject-matter. Comp. ch. vi. 2, καὶ ἐξῆλθε νικῶν, &c. The Genit. τοῦ before θεοῦ, is confirmed by Matt. xiii. 30, ἐν καιρῷ τοῦ θερισμοῦ, 'for the harvesting'; xxi. 23, ἡγγισεν ὁ καιρὸς τῶν καρπῶν, 'for the fruits'; so Mark xi. 13, καιρὸς τῶν σικκῶν.

16. τὴν νεφέλην] La. and Wordsw. edit τῆς νεφέλης, from MS. A and 3 cursives (to which I can only add Mus. 2). But I still retain, with all the other Editors, τὴν νεφέλην, as supported by the strongest external authority, and confirmed by the parallel expression, supra v. 14.

18. [ἔχων] La. and Tis. prefix ὁ, from MSS. A, C, while Wordsw. rejects it; rightly; since internal evidence is against it.—αὐτῆς. La. and Tis. edit τῆς γῆς, from MS. B and 25 cursives. But Sch. and Wordsw. retain αὐτῆς; with reason; since internal evidence is not decidedly in favour of τῆς γῆς. I have now, with Matth., Tis., and Wordsw., adopted -σαν ἡ σταφυλὴ, from B and many cursives, with the Lamb. and Mus. copies, for t. rec. -σαν αὐτῇ, which prob. arose from itacism. The Sing. is taken generically for the Plur.

19, 20. The readings τὸν μέγαν, for t. rec. τὴν μεγάλην, and ἔξωθεν, for ἔξω, have been, on ample authority (to which I could add), adopted by all the recent Editors.

20. In ἐξῆλθε αἷμα ἐκ τῆς ληνοῦ there is, as often, a blending of the thing itself with the thing thereby signified; and, indeed, αἷμα might be used of the juice as figuring the blood of the grape. See Gen. xlix. 11. In ἀχρι τῶν χαλιν.

a ch. 12. 1, 2.
 & 14. 10.
 & 16. 1.

b ch. 4. 6.
 & 5. 8.
 & 13. 10, 17.
 & 14. 2.
 & 21. 10.
 Matt. 2. 11.

c Exod. 15. 1.
 Ps. 111. 2.
 & 120. 14.
 & 145. 17.

d Isa. 66. 23.
 Jer. 10. 7.

e Num. 1. 60.
 ch. 11. 10.
 f ch. 1. 12.
 Exod. 28. 6.
 & 28. 17.
 Ezek. 44. 17.
 & 44. 17.

XV. 1<sup>a</sup> Καὶ εἶδον ἄλλο σημεῖον ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ μέγα καὶ θαυμαστόν, ἀγγέλους ἑπτὰ ἔχοντας πληγὰς ἑπτὰ τὰς ἐσχάτας, ὅτι ἐν αὐταῖς ἐτελέσθη ὁ θυμὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ. 2<sup>b</sup> Καὶ εἶδον ὡς βάλασσαν ὑαλίνην μεμυγμένην πυρί· καὶ τοὺς νικῶντας ἐκ τοῦ θηρίου καὶ ἐκ τῆς εἰκόνος αὐτοῦ καὶ ἐκ τοῦ [χαράγματος αὐτοῦ, ἐκ τοῦ] ἀριθμοῦ τοῦ ὀνόματος αὐτοῦ, ἐστῶτας ἐπὶ τὴν θάλασσαν τὴν ὑαλίνην, ἔχοντας κιθάρας τοῦ Θεοῦ. 3<sup>c</sup> καὶ ᾄδουσι τὴν ᾠδὴν Μωϋσέως δούλου τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ τὴν ᾠδὴν τοῦ Ἀρνίου, λέγοντες· Μεγάλα καὶ θαυμαστά τὰ ἔργα σου, Κύριε ὁ Θεὸς ὁ παντοκράτωρ, δίκαιαι καὶ ἀληθινὰ αἱ ὁδοί σου, ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν * ἐθνῶν. 4<sup>d</sup> τίς οὐ μὴ φοβηθῇ σε, Κύριε, καὶ δοξάσῃ τὸ ὄνομά σου; ὅτι μόνος ὁσῖος· ὅτι πάντα τὰ ἔθνη ᾄξουσιν καὶ προσκυνήσουσιν ἐνώπιόν σου ὅτι τὰ δικαιώματά σου ἐφανερώθησαν. 5<sup>e</sup> Καὶ μετὰ ταῦτα εἶδον καὶ [ἰδοὺ] ἡγοίη ὁ ναὸς τῆς σκηπῆς τοῦ μαρτυρίου ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ· 6<sup>f</sup> καὶ ἐξῆλθον οἱ ἑπτὰ ἄγγελοι, there is a noble hyperbole, of which exx. are adduced by the Commentators.

XV. Up to this Chapter we have proceeded, under the guidance of past events, with more or less of satisfactoriness; but here that important direction almost wholly fails us. Destitute of this, we need not wonder at the evident inability of Expositors to make any regular or consistent application of the subsequent Chapters, except as coincident with those things which have been already considered. The present Chapter introduces the seven Vials, all of which fall under the seventh Trumpet, as the seven trumpets were included under the seventh seal; for they contain the seven last plagues, in which the wrath of God is filled up, or accomplished, on the persecuting idolatrous power assuming the name of Christian. These plagues must, therefore, be coincident with the last woe-trumpet, in great measure, at least. Before he sees the effects of the ministry of the seven angels, who had it in charge to inflict the seven last plagues, the Apostle records an introductory vision, representing the joy and triumph which the Church would express on that occasion. (Scott.) Dr. Wordsw., with some reason, regards the matter in this Chap. as a further enlargement of the foregoing, containing a Prophetic vision of the future triumph over the Beast; and then representing the seven Angels holding the seven Vials to be poured out on the empire of the Beast.

1. ἔχοντας] 'having the charge of,' 'having committed to them to deal out;' a use of ἔχειν very rare; though it is found also in Demosth. 1153. 4, διατετην ἔχοντων τὰς δίκας.—Πλ.—τὰς ἐσχάτας, meaning 'the last,' for the reason then subjoined, and, by implication, 'the worst;' a sense of ἐσχ., frequent in the best Gr. writers.—ἑτελέσθη, 'has been fulfilled.'

2. θάλασσαν ὑαλίνην] i. e. a large crystalline laver, like a pellucid pavement, similar to the brazen sea in Solomon's Temple. The five in it (also part of the temple-furniture) is supposed to denote the anger of God about to be displayed.—τοὺς νικῶντας ἐκ τοῦ θηρ., &c. The full sense of this brief but strong expression is: 'those who came off victors from (i. e. after) [contest with] the beast,' &c. The words χαράγματος αὐτοῦ, which I placed within brackets, have been cancelled by Sch., Tis., and Wordsw., from A, B, C, and many cursives (to which I add the Lamb. and Mus. copies). I should have double-bracketed them, were not internal evidence quite in their favour, since they might easily have been omitted from the repetition of ἐκ τοῦ, which might cause the intermediate words to be lost.

3, 4. ᾠδὴν Μωϋσ. ] i. e. a song of triumph similar to that sung by Moses on the children of Israel being delivered from Egyptian bondage, Exod. xv. (Heinr.), and formed chiefly from phrases in Ps. lxxvi. 9. cxi. 2. cxxix. 14. Dent. xxxii. 4. Jer. x. 7. The ᾠδὴ τοῦ Ἀρνίου is generally supposed to designate the 'new song' above mentioned, in honour of the Lamb.

3. ἰδοὺ] This, for t. rec. ἀγίως, has been, on the strongest authority (to which I could add), received by all the recent Editors—rightly, since it is confirmed by the next verse. The t. rec. was prob. a mere alteration proceeding from some Critic, who was thinking of several similar expressions in the Old Test. See note on 2 Pet. i. 21.

4. The σε is cancelled by La., Tis., and Wordsw., but retained by Gr. and Sch., from A, B, C, and 5 cursives. Besides the insufficient authority for its removal, such Pronouns as σε are occasionally passed over by the scribes, and hence it must be retained.

5. ἰδοὺ is, on strong grounds, cancelled by all the recent Editors, who have also, on competent authority, inserted ὁ before ἔχοντες.—Σκηπῆς τοῦ μαρτ. See note on Heb. ix. 2.

6.—8. The seven angels coming forth from the tabernacle of God in the Temple showed that these judgments would be executed on the enemies of the Church, in mercy to the people of God; while the white clothing and golden girdles worn by these ministers of vengeance represented their holiness, and the righteousness and excellency of these awful dispensations. The living creature, an emblem of the Gospel ministry οἱ ἔχοντες τὰς ἑπτὰ πληγὰς, ἐκ τοῦ ναοῦ, ἐνδεδυμένοι λίνον καθαρὸν [καὶ] λαμπρὸν καὶ περιεζώσμενοι περὶ τὰ στήθη ζώνας χρυσᾶς ἡ καὶ ἐν ἐκ τῶν τεσσάρων ζώων ἔδωκε τοῖς ἑπτὰ ἀγγέλοις ἑπτὰ φιάλας χρυσᾶς, γεμούσας τοῦ θυμοῦ τοῦ Θεοῦ τοῦ ζῶντος εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας τῶν αἰώνων. <sup>8</sup> Καὶ ἐγεμίσθη ὁ ναὸς <sup>a Exod. 40.</sup> καπνοῦ ἐκ τῆς δόξης τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ ἐκ τῆς δυνάμεως αὐτοῦ καὶ <sup>b Kings 8.</sup> οὐδεὶς ἠδύνατο εἰσελθεῖν εἰς τὸν ναὸν, ἄχρι τελεσθῶσιν αἱ ἑπτὰ <sup>c Isa. 6. 4.</sup> πληγαὶ τῶν ἑπτὰ ἀγγέλων. <sup>d 2 Thess. 1. 9.</sup>

XVI. <sup>1</sup> Καὶ ἤκουσα φωνῆς μεγάλης ἐκ τοῦ ναοῦ, λεγούσης τοῖς ἑπτὰ ἀγγέλοις· Ὑπάγετε [καὶ] ἐκχέετε τὰς ἑπτὰ φιάλας τοῦ θυμοῦ τοῦ Θεοῦ εἰς τὴν γῆν! <sup>2</sup> Καὶ ἀπῆλθεν ὁ πρῶτος καὶ <sup>a Exod. 9. 9</sup> ἔξεχε τὴν φιάλην αὐτοῦ ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν καὶ ἐγένετο ἔλκος κακὸν <sup>—11.</sup> καὶ πονηρὸν εἰς τοὺς ἀνθρώπους τοὺς ἔχοντας τὸ χάραγμα τοῦ <sup>b ch. 13. 14.</sup> θηρίου, καὶ τοὺς τῇ εἰκόνι αὐτοῦ προσκυνούντας. <sup>3</sup> Καὶ ὁ δεύ- <sup>c Exod. 7.</sup> τερος ἄγγελος ἔξεχε τὴν φιάλην αὐτοῦ εἰς τὴν θάλασσαν καὶ <sup>17, 20.</sup> ἐγένετο αἷμα ὡς νεκροῦ καὶ πᾶσα ψυχὴ [ζῶσα] ἀπέθανεν ἐν <sup>d ch. 8. 9.</sup> giving the vials to the angels, implied that the preaching of the truth would be instrumental in bringing the judgments which were written upon antichristian opposers; and the Temple being filled with smoke showed the darkness of those dispensations, and the horror which would envelop the enemies of God whilst these plagues were executing. (Scott.)

6. καθαρὸν καὶ λαμπρὸν] namely, as those who had purified themselves were accustomed to do. So J. Pollux, i. 25, τὸ δὲ προσίαι—ὕπὸ νεουργῶ στολῇ, ὑπὸ νεοπλαυεῖ ἰσθῆτι.—The καὶ is, on the strongest external authority, confirmed by internal evidence, cancelled by all the recent Editors.

7. φιάλας] Render, not vials, but bowls. See my Lex. in v.

8. ἐγεμίσθη—καπνοῦ] Tia. prefixes ἐκ τοῦ to καπνοῦ, on the authority of B and 25 cursives (I add Lamb. 1186 and Mus. 1, 2); but in this he stands alone, and indeed recedes from the truth. I more than suspect that the words crept in from the following context.

XVI. Here there is described the pouring out of the seven vials, on which the opinions of Commentators are, as usual, very various; but, after all, Bp. Newton's view seems to be the best founded, because the most sober,—namely, that 'as the trumpets were so many steps and degrees of the ruin of the Roman empire, so are the vials of the ruin of the Roman church.' See also Dean Woodh. and T. Scott. Prof. Lee, however, is of opinion, that these plagues of the vials seem to be nothing more than a repetition of, and partly a supplement to, those.

1. ἐκχίαι τὰς ἑπτὰ φιάλας] A metonymy of the container for that which is contained. By the pouring out of these vials Dean Woodh. and Dr. Burton understand generally the punishments inflicted upon the enemies and persecutors of the Church.—ἐκ τοῦ ναοῦ. These words are cancelled by Tia. (alone), on the authority of MS. B and 25 cursives, and the Syr.; but internal evidence is quite in favour of them, they were prob. omitted by carelessness of scribes. The ἐκτὰ before φιάλ. has been inserted, on strong authority, by all the recent Editors, though internal evidence is rather against it. I have now bracketed the καὶ, which has been cancelled, but on slender authority, by Tia., because internal evidence is quite against it, and also a similar passage, supr. x. 8. See note on Mark vi. 38.

2. ἐγένετο ἔλκος κακὸν, &c.] intimating that the calamity would resemble that inflicted on Egypt, as recorded in Exod. ix. 8—11, said, perhaps, in allusion to Deut. xxxviii. 35, πατάξαι σε Κύριος ἐν ἔλκει πονηρῷ. By κακὸν is meant malignum, letumum, κακοῦς. The epithet is applied to a disorder in Hom. II. i. 10, νοῦσον ὥρεα κακὴν, but it is no where else, I believe, applied to ἔλκος except in Hom. II. ii. 723, ἔλκει μοχθίζοντα κακῷ.

3. καὶ ἐγένετο αἷμα ὡς νεκ.] Comp. Exod. vii. 18—21. Here, by a strong figure, the vision portends great effusion of blood, and destruction of the human race.—ζῶσα. This word, which I heretofore placed within brackets, is cancelled by Sch. and Wordsw., while La. and Tia. edit ζῶν, from MSS. A, C, and the Syr. Version. But the authority for this change is insufficient, and requires to be confirmed by some proof that the phrase ψυχὴ ζῶν was ever in use. I have suspected that ζῶν was a mere error of the scribes, who, having ζῶσα in their original, mistook it for ζῶν; or St. John may have written ζῶσα, and that some Critics, stumbling at the expression, cancelled ζῶσα, while others altered it to ζῶν. However, on reconsideration of the question, it would seem that there was nothing likely to occasion stumbling in the expression ζῶσα, however unusual it may be. Internal evidence is quite in favour of ζῶν, the difficulty of which reading might easily lead to its change into ζῶσα by Critics who had in mind Gen. ii. 7, καὶ ἐφύσησεν ἐν τῷ πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ πνεῦν ζῶν, καὶ ἐγένετο ἄνθρωπος ἐν ψυχῇ ζῶσαν, and Gen. i. 24. ii. 19. What confirms this suspicion, τῇ θαλάσῃ. <sup>4</sup> Καὶ ὁ τρίτος [ἄγγελος] ἐξέχεε τὴν φιάλην αὐτοῦ εἰς τοὺς ποταμοὺς καὶ εἰς τὰς πηγὰς τῶν ὑδάτων καὶ ἐγένετο αἷμα. <sup>5</sup> Καὶ ἤκουσα τοῦ ἀγγέλου τῶν ὑδάτων λέγοντος Δίκαιος [Κύριε] εἰ, ὁ ὢν καὶ ὁ ἦν, [καὶ] [ὁ] Ὁσιος, ὅτι ταῦτα ἔκρινας. <sup>6</sup> ὅτι αἷμα ἀγίων καὶ προφητῶν ἐξέχεαν, καὶ αἷμα αὐτοὺς ἔδωκας πιεῖν ἄξιοι [γάρ] εἰσι! <sup>7</sup> Καὶ ἤκουσα [ἄλλου ἐκ] τοῦ θυσιαστηρίου λέγοντος· Ναὶ, Κύριε ὁ Θεὸς ὁ παντοκράτωρ, ἀληθινὰ καὶ δίκαια αἱ κρίσεις σου! <sup>8</sup> Καὶ ὁ τέταρτος [ἄγγελος] ἐξέχεε τὴν φιάλην αὐτοῦ ἐπὶ τὸν ἥλιον καὶ ἐδόθη αὐτῷ καυματίσαι τοὺς ἀνθρώπους ἐν πυρὶ. <sup>9</sup> καὶ ἐκαυματίσθησαν οἱ ἄνθρωποι καύμα μέγα· καὶ ἐβλασφήμησαν τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ Θεοῦ τοῦ ἔχοντος τὴν ἐξουσίαν ἐπὶ τὰς πληγὰς ταύτας· καὶ οὐ μετενόησαν, δοῦναι αὐτῷ δόξαν.

<sup>10</sup> Καὶ ὁ πέμπτος [ἄγγελος] ἐξέχεε τὴν φιάλην αὐτοῦ ἐπὶ τὸν θρόνον τοῦ θηρίου καὶ ἐγένετο ἡ βασιλεία αὐτοῦ ἐσκοτωμένη· καὶ ἐμασσωντο τὰς γλώσσας αὐτῶν ἐκ τοῦ πόνου, <sup>11</sup> καὶ

c ch. 1. 4. 8.
d 4. 8.
e 11. 17.

d 1sa. 40. 26.
Matt. 23. 34.

e ch. 9. 18.
d 13. 8.

f vv. 11. 21.
Dan. 6. 22.
23.
ch. 9. 20.

g ch. 13. 2.
d 9. 1.
e 11. 10.

h ch. 8. 21.

as to the origin of ῥωσα, is, that the very same maah change was made in this same Book by the same class of Critics, supra. vii. 17, ὁδηγήσαι αὐτοὺς ἐπὶ ζωῆς πηγῆς ὑδάτων, where that ζωῆς, not ζώσατ, is the true reading, all Critics are now agreed.—After ἀπώσαν Tia and Wordsworth insert τὰ, from MSS. A, C, without any curative. But that is an authority insufficient to establish a reading which is scarcely capable of any sense. I suspect it to have arisen from a marginal scholium, though one wrongly read.

4. ἄγγελος has been on good grounds cancelled by Sch., La., and Tia.; as also the kai just after.—πηγὰς τῶν ὑδ., 'water-springs or fountains.' The expression occurs also at vii. 17. xxi. 6. John iv. 14, and Eschin. Soc. Dial. iii. 20.

5. ἄγγελον τῶν ὑδ.] From the Rabbinical writers it appears that the Jews were accustomed to assign to every part of creation its peculiar angel.—ὅτι ταῦτα ἔκρινας, 'because thou hast thus decreed and executed judgment.' (See note on Acts xvi. 4.)—Δίκαιος—Ὁσιος is well rendered by Abp. Newcome, 'Just art thou—the Being that is and that was,—the Holy One.'—I have now bracketed the ὁ before Ὁσιος, which is absent from most of the MSS., and is cancelled by all the recent Editors. Supposing, however, the ὁ to be spurious, of which I am not fully persuaded, I would not point, with La. and Tia., ὁ ὢν καὶ ὁ ἦν Ὁσιος, which punctuation destroys the spirit of the passage, and frustrates the intention of the writer, which was to designate the ὁ ὢν, &c., by the title of 'the Holy One,' which Ὁσιος even without the Article will denote. The ὁ ἰσόμενος of the t. rec. is of so slender authority, as perhaps not to be found in any one MS.

6. αἷμα αὐτῶν ἔδωκας πιεῖν] q. d. 'thou hast ordained, that they shall have enough of that which they so much loved.' So Queen Tomyris, after defeating and taking prisoner Cyrus, ordered his head to be cut off and thrown into a vessel full of human blood, with the words, 'Satisfy thyself with the blood thou thirstedst after.' The same figure of drinking blood, for shedding it, is found not only in the Prophets of the Old Test., but in the Class. writers. So Soph. Elect. 783, τοῦμόν ἐκπίουσ' αἶψ' Ψυχῇ ἐκράτον αἶμα—The γάρ is, on strong grounds, cancelled by all the recent Editors; and rightly; for the αἶμα δεῖον, harsh as it may here seem, is quite in the manner of St. John, and is, as used in the Apocalypse, generally intensive.

7. The words ἄλλου ἐκ are, on good grounds, cancelled by the recent Editors; yet they may have been accidentally left out by careless scribes.

8. The word ἄγγελος is justly cancelled by the recent Editors.

9. ἐβλασφήμησαν] MS. B and 30 cursives (with Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 5) subjoin αἱ ἀνθρώπων, which words are confirmed by several Versions and Areth., and received by Sch. and Tia., while La. and Wordsworth reject them, perhaps rightly; though their genuineness may be considered an open question. The full sense of ἔχοντος just after is, that of both 'having and exercising by act' the power of inflicting the plagues in question. To ἐξουσίαν MSS. A and B, and 10 cursives (I add Lamb. 1186) prefix τὴν, which is received by La., Tia., and Wordsworth; rightly; since internal evidence is quite in its favour, and the Article is very appropriate, q. d. 'to exercise the power of inflicting the plagues.' Tregelles testifies that B has not the τὴν, which is also absent from Mus. 1, 2, 3, which usually go with B. But Lamb. 1186, its almost fellow copy, has the τὴν, which I doubt not was at least in the archetype from which B and Lamb. 1186 were derived.

10. ἰγένετο ἡ βασιλεία α. ἐσκ.] This is strongly emblematical of distress, calamity, and destruction. See supra vi. 12—15. viii. 12, and Exod. x. 21.—καὶ ἐμασσωντο τὰς γλ. A lively and even graphic description of desperate and rabid fury.—ἐκ τοῦ πόνου, lit. from the torment (they endured). Πόνος is so used in the Sept., in Job iv. 5, and in 4 Macc. i. 9, ἵνα θανάτῳ πόνου, and sometimes in the Class. writers, especially the Poets, as Homer, and the Tragedians.

ἐβλασφήμησαν τὸν Θεὸν τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ἐκ τῶν πόνων αὐτῶν καὶ ἐκ τῶν ἐλκῶν αὐτῶν καὶ οὐ μετενόησαν ἐκ τῶν ἔργων αὐτῶν.

12<sup>1</sup> Καὶ [ὁ] ἔκτος [ἄγγελος] ἐξέχεε τὴν φιάλην αὐτοῦ ἐπὶ τὸν ποταμὸν τὸν μέγαν τὸν Εὐφράτην καὶ ἐξηράνθη τὸ ὕδωρ αὐτοῦ, ἵνα ἐτοιμασθῇ ἡ ὁδὸς τῶν βασιλέων τῶν ἀπὸ ἀνατολῶν ἡλίου.

13<sup>2</sup> Καὶ εἶδον ἐκ τοῦ στόματος τοῦ δράκοντος, καὶ ἐκ τοῦ στόματος τοῦ θηρίου, καὶ ἐκ τοῦ στόματος τοῦ ψευδοπροφήτου πνεύματα τρία ἀκάθαρτα, * ὡς βάτραχοι. 14 (ἵ ἐισὶ γὰρ πνεύματα † δαιμόνων ποιοῦντα σημεῖα,) ἃ ἐκπορεύεται ἐπὶ τοὺς βασιλεῖς τῆς [γῆς καὶ τῆς] οἰκουμένης ὅλης, συναγαγεῖν αὐτοὺς εἰς τὸν πόλεμον τῆς ἡμέρας ἐκείνης τῆς μεγάλης τοῦ Θεοῦ τοῦ παντοκράτορος. (15<sup>m</sup> Ἰδοὺ, ἔρχομαι ὡς κλέπτης· μακάριος ὁ γρηγορῶν καὶ τηρῶν τὰ ἱμάτια αὐτοῦ· ἵνα μὴ γυμνὸς περιπατῇ, καὶ βλέπωσι τὴν ἀσχημοσύνην αὐτοῦ) 16<sup>n</sup> καὶ συνήγαγεν αὐτοὺς εἰς τὸν τόπον τὸν καλούμενον Ἑβραϊστὶ * Ἀρμαγεδών. 17<sup>o</sup> Καὶ ὁ ἑβδομος [ἄγγελος] ἐξέχεε τὴν φιάλην αὐτοῦ * ἐπὶ τὸν αέρα· καὶ ἐξῆλθε φωνὴ μεγάλη ἀπὸ τοῦ ναοῦ [τοῦ οὐρανοῦ] ἀπὸ τοῦ θρόνου λέγουσα· Γέγονε! 18<sup>p</sup> καὶ ἐγένοντο † φωναὶ καὶ

1 ch. 9. 14.
Jer. 50. 38.
Isa. 41. 2, 25.

k 1 John 4.
1, 2.
ch. 12. 3, 9.
2 Cor. 6. 2.
1 Thim. 4. 1.
2 Thess. 2. 9.
James 5. 15.
ch. 12. 13, 14.
ch. 17. 14.

m Matt. 22.
24.
Luke 12. 30.
2 Cor. 5. 2.
1 Thess. 5. 2.
2 Pet. 3. 10.
ch. 3. 3, 4, 18.
ch. 12. 19.
o ch. 21. 2.

p ch. 4. 8.
2, 3, 5.

12. ἵνα ἐτοιμασθῇ—ἡλίου] The Euphrates is the great natural barrier to Syria, Palestine, and Mesopotamia, against any hostile attacks from the more eastern countries of Persia and others.—Here ὁ before ἱστ. ἄγγελος has been cancelled by all the recent Editors. See note on Matt. iii. 3.

13. τοῦ ψευδοπ.] meaning, the θηρίου described at xiii. 11—17.—ὡς βάτραχοι. These seem to designate persons falsely pretending to miracles, and characterized by vain-glory and impudence. So Artemid., ii. 15, says, βάτραχοι ἀνδρας γόητας καὶ βωμολόχους προσημαίνουσι. Ὡς βάτραχοι. So, for ὅμοια βατράχοις, all the recent Editors read, on competent authority.

14. δαιμόνων] The recent Editors all read, from A, B, and 25 cursives, δαιμονίων. But internal evidence is rather in favour of δαιμόνων, the term δαίμων being elsewhere in this book used, where we should expect δαιμόνιον.—Γῆς καὶ. These words are, on strong authority, cancelled by all the recent Editors; yet internal evidence is in their favour, considering that they may have been omitted in consequence of the recurrence of the τῆς.—The τὸν before πόλεμον has been, on the strongest grounds, inserted by the recent Editors. The sense is, 'to the warfare of (= at) that great day of God Almighty,' i. e. when he will evince his supreme power. Comp. supr. vi. 17.

15. Ἰδοὺ, ἔρχομαι ὡς κλέπτης—αὐτοῦ] The predictions are here suspended, in order to inculcate a suitable and weighty ἀπομνημόνιον,—reminding those whom it concerned,—and, in some measure, all others,—that, in times of such great temptation, the professed servants of Christ are called upon to be more than ordinarily watchful (for watching is their duty, and prayer their strength),—expecting his second coming; that they may be found in the garments of salvation, and not be surprised naked, as apostates or hypocrites, and so be put to shame by rejection. See Luke xii. 39, compared with 1 Thess. v. 2, 2 Pet. iii. 10, also Matt. xxiv. 50, xxv. 13. The Apostle seems here to have had in mind Gen. ix. 22, where Aquila and Symm. render, εἶδε τὴν ἀσχημοσύνην τοῦ πατρὸς αὐτοῦ. Comp. also Gen. ix. 22. The usual prophetic formula, λέγει ὁ Κύριος, is here omitted, as easy to be supplied.

15. καὶ τηρῶν] The full sense is, 'who keepeth hold of, so as to preserve a thing.' So Philem., Στρατιωτ., frag. i. 12, ὁρνεὶ ὁπόταν ἀπάσῃ τι, περιτρέχει τηροῦσα τούτο.

16. Ἀρμαγεδών] This has been variously interpreted; either 'the mountain of Megiddo,' מגידו מגידו, denoting, figuratively, the mountain of destruction, with allusion to the great slaughter there (Judg. v. 19. 2 Kings xxiii. 29); or 'the dry mountainous tract,' such as the Jews supposed to be the abode of demons. Here the narrative breaks off, to be resumed at xix. 19.

17. ὁ ἑβδ. ἐξίχει τὴν φιάλην ἰ. τ. δ.] On noticing this pouring out of the seventh, last, and worst vial, it may be the fittest place to remark, that no scheme for applying the vials, as yet propounded, seems quite satisfactory. The course pursued by Dean Woodhouse, who regards the pouring forth of the vials as commencing the continued and universal punishment of the followers of Antichrist, without attempting any positive application, would seem, at the present stage of our Apocalyptic inquiry, as the safest course; so that we need not, as in so many other cases, have to retrace our steps.—The ἄγγελος has been, on the strongest authority, cancelled by all the recent Editors.—The reading ἔειπεν, for ἔειπε, adopted by them, rests on strong grounds.—By γέγονε is meant, as Infr. xxi. 6, βρονταὶ καὶ ἀστραπαὶ, καὶ σεισμοὶ ἐγένετο μέγας, οἷος οὐκ ἐγένετο ἀφ' οὗ †οἱ ἄνθρωποι ἐγένοντο ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, τηλικούτος σεισμός οὕτω μέγας. <sup>19</sup> * Καὶ ἐγένετο ἡ πόλις ἡ μεγάλη εἰς τρία μέρη· καὶ αἱ πόλεις τῶν ἐθνῶν * ἔπεσαν καὶ Βαβυλὼν ἡ μεγάλη ἐμνήσθη ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ, δοῦναι αὐτῇ τὸ ποτήριον τοῦ οἴνου τοῦ θυμοῦ τῆς ὀργῆς αὐτοῦ. <sup>20</sup> * Καὶ πᾶσα νῆσος ἔφυγε, καὶ ὄρη οὐχ εὐρέθησαν <sup>21</sup> * καὶ χάλαζα μεγάλη ὡς ταλαντιαία καταβαίνει ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ἐπὶ τοὺς ἀνθρώπους· καὶ ἐβλασφήμησαν οἱ ἄνθρωποι τὸν Θεὸν ἐκ τῆς πληγῆς τῆς χαλᾶξης, ὅτι μεγάλη ἐστὶν ἡ πληγὴ αὐτῆς σφόδρα.

XVII. <sup>1</sup> * Καὶ ἦλθεν εἰς ἐκ τῶν ἑπτὰ ἀγγέλων τῶν ἐχόντων τὰς ἑπτὰ φιάλας, καὶ ἐλάλησε μετ' ἐμοῦ, λέγων [μοι]. Δεῦρο δείξω σοι τὸ κρίμα τῆς πόρνῃς τῆς μεγάλης, τῆς καθημένης ἐπὶ

q ch. 14. 8.
10. & 18. 8.
Isa. 51. 22.
23.
Jer. 25. 16.
16.

r ch. 6. 14.

s ch. 11. 19.
8. 14. 9. 11.

t vv. 8. 11.

a Jer. 51. 12.
Nab. 5. 4.
ch. 16. 12. 8.
18. 8.

'actum est'; q. d. 'the thing is brought to a thorough consummation'; the work being considered, by anticipation, as done.

18. φωναὶ—ἀστραπαὶ] The recent Editors, on strong, but scarcely competent authority, read ἀστρ. καὶ φων. καὶ βρ.; besides, internal evidence is opposed. The Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, have καὶ ἀστρ. καὶ βρ. καὶ φων. Thus the variation of position caused the omission. That the original of B had καὶ βροντ. I doubt not.—ἀφ' οὗ οἱ ἄνθρ. ἐγένοντο. MS. A, and one cursive, with the Copt. and Armen. Versions, have ἀνθρώποι, which is adopted by La. and Tis.; insufficient authority, though internal evidence is in favour of the reading. And this generic use of ἀνθρώποι oft. occ. in the Sept. Wordsw. edits. from MS. B and four cursives, ἀνθρώποι ἐγένοντο,—a manifest gloss on ἀνθρώποι ἐγένετο.

19. For ἔπεσαν, I now read, with La. and Tis., ἔπεσαν, from A and 4 cursives; to which I add Cov. 2 (omitted by Mill), Mus. 2, and Lamb. 1186. Gr. passes it over, and Sch. reports it as if occurring in one copy only.—ἐμνήσθη, 'was remembered [for visitation and punishment]'. See xviii. 5, and 3 John 10.

20, 21. Id poculum, quum bibisset, en, summa imis miscebantur. (Heinr.) The words are strongly figurative, to denote the sweeping effect of the Divine judgments, and, accordingly, the total destruction of the enemies of Christ. The expression τ. νῆσος ἔφυγε is a poetic one,—of lyric boldness,—an enlargement on the parallel one supr. vi. 14, πᾶν ὄρος καὶ νῆσος ἐκ τῶν τόπων ἐκίνησαν, ἐποτα σεδίβη; as Pliny, Ep. vi. 16, says of an earthquake. The strong figure is resorted to only to intimate, that, even places which seemed by natural situation the most secure, would be overwhelmed on the universal convulsion of nature. The words of the next verse are meant to further develop the thought and finish the picture. The words match with the foregoing, inasmuch as in great earthquakes (such as those in South America Humboldt testifies), hail, pouring down hailstones of enormous size and weight, either comes concurrently with the convulsion, or immediately after. Comp. Diod. Sic. xix. 45, where, speaking of the awful convulsion of nature at Rhodes, he says, καταρραγόντων ἱεραίων μεγάλων δμβρων, καὶ χαλᾶξιν ἐπίστον τὸ μέγιστον μνηαῖαι ἐπίπτον. Here, however, ταλ. is to be taken hyperbolically, of 'vast in size'; and so, but metaph., we have in Alcæus, ap. Pollux. Onom. iv. 53, νοστήματα πολ. 'gravissima.' What is meant generally is, that 'there is no place of security to be found'; for if from the earthquake men fled into the fields, there they would be crushed under the vast stones. At the next clause (which points at the result of this awful penal judgment) the καὶ is for καὶ τότε, 'and yet,' 'but nevertheless' (as elsewh. in N. T., see my Lex.). The full sense intimated, though not expressed, is, 'And yet men did not repent, but reviled the God who put the plague,—reviled him because he sent, denoting incidental cause, or occasion; as in John iv. 6. James iv. 1. Rev. viii. 11, 14. xvi. 10, 11, 21.

XVII. This and the next Chapter may either be considered, with some, as a continuation of the prophetic description of the events under the seventh vial; or, with others, as a kind of recapitulation of what concerns 'the judgment of the great whore that sitteth upon many waters,' which judgment might be to take place previously. In this latter view Prof. Lee coincides, comparing a similar recapitulation, for illustration, in Dan. ch. xi. He does not, however, with the great majority of Commentators, consider Βαβυλὼν to designate the great Western Apostasy, POPERY; neither does he, with most foreign Commentators, take it to regard the Roman empire only, but heathen Rome, considered in its political as well as religious character; and this he endeavours to prove at large, with considerable ability, though not correspondent success.

1. After λέγων the μοι is omitted in A, B, and several cursives (I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2), confirmed by several Versions and Fathers, and it is, with reason, cancelled by all the recent Editors.—καθημένη ἐπὶ τῶν ὁδ. τῶν πολλ. The sense seems to be, 'at or near much water,' as that of the sea, or a mighty river, like the Euphrates. The expression seems derived from Jer. li. 13, where Babylon is so described. By this sitting upon many waters, however, τῶν ὑδάτων τῶν πολλῶν, <sup>2</sup> <sup>b</sup> μεθ' ἧς ἐπόρνευσαν οἱ βασιλεῖς <sup>b</sup> Jer. 51. 7. <sup>c</sup> ch. 14. 8. & 13. 8.

 τῆς γῆς, καὶ ἐμεθύσθησαν ἡ οἱ κατοικοῦντες τὴν γῆν ἐκ τοῦ οἴνου τῆς πορνείας αὐτῆς. <sup>3</sup> <sup>c</sup> καὶ ἀπήνεγκέ με εἰς ἔρημον ἐν πνεύματι, <sup>c</sup> ch. 12. 1. & 17. 3. καὶ εἶδον γυναῖκα καθήμενην ἐπὶ θηρίον κόκκινον, γέμον * ὀνόματα βλασφημίας, ἔχον κεφαλὰς ἑπτὰ καὶ κέρατα δέκα. <sup>4</sup> <sup>d</sup> καὶ <sup>d</sup> ch. 13. 13, 14.
 ἡ γυνὴ ἦν περιβεβλημένη * πορφυροῦν καὶ κόκκινον, καὶ κεχρυσωμένη * χρυσίῳ καὶ λίθῳ τιμῇ καὶ μαργαρίταις, ἔχουσα * πο-τήριον χρυσοῦν ἐν τῇ χειρὶ αὐτῆς γέμον βδελυγμάτων, καὶ * τὰ ἀκάθαρτα τῆς πορνείας αὐτῆς. <sup>5</sup> <sup>e</sup> καὶ ἐπὶ τὸ μέτωπον αὐτῆς <sup>e</sup> 3 Thess. 2. 7. ch. 11. 8. & 14. 8.
 ὄνομα γεγραμμένον Μυστήριον! ΒΑΒΥΛΩΝ Ἡ ΜΕΓΑΛΗ, would seem, from the angel's own explanation at ver. 15, to be meant 'ruling over many peoples and nations,' sitting in the seat of rule; and that, it appears, as derived from the power and influence over many nations, which the commanding situation of Babylon, as the Great Emporium of the world, must have given her. I have retained, with Sch., Tis., and Wordsw., the τῶν—τῶν, bracketed by Gr. and cancelled by La., from A and 5 cursives; but wrongly; since internal evidence, confirmed by overpowering external authority (to which I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3), is in favour of the words. The Article points at the notoriety and celebrity of the waters; and the epithet πολλῶν is used because there is reference both to the Euphrates and the Tigris, which, together with their tributary streams, water Babylonia: and it is the country, not the capital only, Babylon, that is here meant.

2. μεθ' ἧς ἐπόρν. ] i. e. 'imitated her fornication,' or spiritual uncleanness. By οἱ κατοικ. τὴν γῆν seem to be meant those sojourners of all nations, whom the commerce of the world brought in great numbers to Babylonia. That these should be intoxicated and maddened with her furious idolatries, was to be expected. I have, with all the recent Editors, adopted the variation of position here from the t. rec., because founded on the strongest authority, confirmed by the Lamb. and Mus. copies.

3. Prof. Lee takes the description here to designate 'regal pomp;' at the same time teeming with the doctrines of error and resistance to the true God. By the seven heads and ten horns he understands great wisdom and power. See xii. 3. In ver. 4 he thinks we have the wealth and abomination of this state symbolically depicted; while in ver. 5 its character is so given, as to leave no doubt that the great Head of idolatry is meant; and at ver. 6 the insatiate rage of this state against Christ's followers is intimated. The Prof. seems right in the main. At any rate, that Rome is meant in this Chapter is next to certain;—and that, not Pagan, but Papal Rome, can scarcely be doubted; and therefore the 'regal pomp' of the Prof. seems to be unfounded; however it be, that Rome Papal obtained and long preserved an ascendancy over even crowned heads. For εἶδον is edited by La. and Tis., εἶδα from the ἴδα of A, but wrongly; for that was merely an error of the scribe for ἴδον, found in B, and often occurring in the more ancient MSS., and prob. the genuine reading. Whether the form εἶδα ever existed is a matter of doubt.—For t. rec. ὀνομάτων, MSS. A, B, and many ancient cursives (with Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2), have ὀνόματα, while A and 4 cursives also prefix τὰ, and the reading is adopted by Tis. and Wordsw., but without sufficient authority. I have now, with some hesitation, adopted, with La., ὀνόματα, which may seem confirmed by internal evidence. Nevertheless it may have arisen from error of scribes, who mistook the abbreviated form of termination.

4. περιβεβ. πορφυροῦν καὶ κόκκινον] Such is the reading of many of the best MSS. and some Fathers, for the t. rec. περ. πορφόρα καὶ κοκκίνα. And this reading is adopted by all the principal Editors, to whose authority I have deferred. But after all it may be questioned whether that reading be not an alteration of the Critics to introduce purer Greek. The construction with the Dat., though not found in the Class. writers in the sense to clothe, occurs several times in the Sept. (see my Lex. N. T.); though in 1 Kings xi. 29, MS. A (as here) has the Accus. Nay, there is some reason to think that it was not unknown to the early Attic writers. So in Cratin. Archil. frag. viii. (p. 9, Frag. Com. Meineck) we have Ὀμόλινος κομῇ, (read κόρη) sub. περιβεβλημένην. For χρυσῶν, the recent Editors, whom I have followed, read χρυσίῳ, and for χρυσοῦν ποτήριον, they read, on strong authority, ποτήριον χρ.—To turn from words to things, the golden cup in the hand of the woman has reference to the gauds and allurements to idolatry; the allusion being taken from the golden cups, which were used in the worship of the false gods, and consecrated to their service. See Jer. li. 7, and 1 Cor. x. 21.—τὰ ἀκάθαρτα τῆς. The t. rec. ἀκαθάρτητος τῆς, has scarcely any authority from MSS., while the reading adopted by all the recent Editors, on the other hand, would seem to offend against grammatical construction; but, in reality, τὰ ἀκάθαρτα is not governed of what immediately precedes, but of ἔχον a little before: or rather the Accus. here is in apposition with the Accusatives preceding; the sense being, 'even (καὶ) the impure produce of her fornication.'

5. ἐπὶ τὸ μέτωπον—γεγραμ.] After the custom of harlots, to have their name written on their forehead.—μυστήριον. It is justly observed by Heinr., that this is not a part of the inscription, but is put in apposition with, and is to be construed, in an Adjective sense, with ὄνομα, as if it were ὄνομα μυστικόν or μυστηριώδες. The name BABYLON, inscribed on her forehead, is not to be understood, properly, of Babylon itself,

Ἡ ΜΗΤΗΡ ΤΩΝ ΠΟΡΝΩΝ ΚΑΙ ΤΩΝ ΒΛΕΑΤΤΜΑf ch. 18. 24. ΤΩΝ ΤΗΣ ΓΗΣ. <sup>6</sup> Καὶ εἶδον τὴν γυναῖκα μεθύουσαν ἐκ τοῦ αἵματος τῶν ἁγίων, καὶ ἐκ τοῦ αἵματος τῶν μαρτύρων Ἰησοῦ καὶ ἑθαύμασα, ἰδὼν αὐτήν, θαῦμα μέγα. <sup>7</sup> Καὶ εἶπέ μοι ὁ ἄγγε-λος· Διατί ἑθαύμασας; ἐγὼ σοι ἐρῶ τὸ μυστήριον τῆς γυναίκος, καὶ τοῦ θηρίου τοῦ βαστάζοντος αὐτήν, τοῦ ἔχοντος τὰς ἑπτὰ
f ch. 11. 7. &
12. 1, 2, 4, 10. κεφαλὰς καὶ τὰ δέκα κέρατα. <sup>8</sup> Τὸ θηρίον δ' εἶδες, ἦν καὶ οὐκ ἔστι· καὶ μέλλει ἀναβαίνειν ἐκ τῆς ἀβύσσου, καὶ εἰς ἀπώλειαν ὑπάγει· καὶ θαυμάσονται οἱ κατοικοῦντες ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, ὧν οὐ γέγραπται τὰ ὀνόματα ἐπὶ τὸ βιβλίον τῆς ζωῆς ἀπὸ καταβολῆς κόσμου, * βλεπόντων τὸ θηρίον ὅτι ἦν, καὶ οὐκ ἔστι, * καὶ πάρ-
h ch. 12. 1,
15. εσται. <sup>9</sup> Ὡδε ὁ νοῦς ὁ ἔχων σοφίαν· αἱ ἑπτὰ κεφαλαὶ ὅση εἰσὶν ἑπτὰ, ὅπου ἡ γυνὴ κάθηται ἐπ' αὐτῶν <sup>10</sup> καὶ βασιλεῖς f ch. 1. 2. ἑπτὰ εἰσιν οἱ πέντε ἔπесαν, [καὶ] ὁ εἰς ἐστίν, ὁ ἄλλος οὐπω ἦλθε, καὶ ὅταν ἔλθῃ, ὀλίγον αὐτὸν δεῖ μέναι· <sup>11</sup> καὶ τὸ θηρίον, ὃ ἦν, καὶ οὐκ ἔστι, καὶ αὐτὸς ὄγδοός ἐστι, καὶ ἐκ τῶν ἑπτὰ ἐστι, h Dea. 7. 20, 21.
ch. 12. 1. καὶ εἰς ἀπώλειαν ὑπάγει. <sup>12</sup> καὶ τὰ δέκα κέρατα ἃ εἶδες δέκα βασιλεῖς εἰσιν, οἵτινες βασιλείαν οὐπω ἔλαβον, ἀλλ' ἐξουσίαν ὡς βασιλεῖς μίαν ὥραν λαμβάνουσι μετὰ τοῦ θηρίου.
<sup>13</sup> οὗτοι μίαν γνώμην ἔχουσι, καὶ τὴν δύναμιν καὶ τὴν ἐξουσίαν αὐτῶν τῷ θηρίῳ * διδώσιν. <sup>14</sup> οὗτοι μετὰ τοῦ Ἀρνίου πολεμήσουσι, καὶ τὸ Ἀρνίον νικᾷ αὐτοὺς, ὅτι Κύριος κυρίων ἐστὶ καὶ Βασιλεὺς βασιλέων, καὶ οἱ μετ' αὐτοῦ κλητοὶ καὶ ἐκλεκτοὶ m Isa. 2. 7. καὶ πιστοί. <sup>15</sup> Καὶ λέγει μοι· Τὰ ὕδατα ἃ εἶδες οὐ ἡ πόρνη κάθηται, λαοὶ καὶ ὄχλοι εἰσὶ καὶ ἔθνη καὶ γλώσσαι· <sup>16</sup> καὶ τὰ n Jerem. 50.
41, 42.
Ezek. 16. 26,
34.
ch. 12. 8. δέκα κέρατα ἃ εἶδες * καὶ τὸ θηρίον, οὗτοι μισήσουσι τὴν πόρνην, καὶ ἡρμηωμένην ποιήσουσιν αὐτήν καὶ γυμνήν, καὶ τὰς σάρκας o 2 Thess. 2.
11.
ch. 10. 7. αὐτῆς φάγονται, καὶ αὐτήν κατακαύσουσιν ἐν πυρὶ· <sup>17</sup> ὁ γὰρ Θεὸς ἔδωκεν εἰς τὰς καρδίας αὐτῶν ποιῆσαι τὴν γνώμην αὐτοῦ, but, mystically and figuratively (xi. 8), of another city, doubtless Rome. On μυστ. see note on 2 Thess. ii. 7.

6. μεθύουσαν ἐκ τοῦ αἵματος τῶν ἁγ.] meaning, 'being satiated to the utmost with the blood of, &c. So in Hdot. i. 214, we have σὲ δ' ἐγὼ — αἵματος κορίσω.

7. τὸ μυστήριον τῆς γυναίκος, &c.] i. e. 'the hidden meaning' couched under the representation in question.—τοῦ ἔχοντος—κέρατα. These words clearly point out ROME to be meant.

8. The τὸ before θηρίον has been, on weighty authority (which I could confirm), prefixed by all the recent Editors. For θαυμάσονται, La. and Tis. edit θαυμασθήσονται, from MS. A. The reading is worthy of attention, though not of reception. For τὰ ὀνόματα, La. and Tis. edit, from two uncials, and a few cursive MSS., τὸ ὄνομα; which may be the true reading; at least it has internal evidence in its favour.—βλεπόντων, for t. rec. βλίσκοντες is, on strong grounds, adopted by all the recent Editors;—as also is καὶ πάρεστι (for t. rec. καίπερ ἐστὶ), 'and yet he will be at hand,' present himself. I have now adopted both the readings.

9. ἡδε ὁ νοῦς—σοφίας] See note supra xiii.

18. The sense is indeed much disputed. Yet, when we consider that it contains the peculiar, and quite Johannean phrase ἡδε ἐστὶ (which I have fully explained supr. xiv. 12), we cannot doubt that the meaning here is, 'herein (in the explaining of the obscurities contained in the following visions) is to be the test of the sagacity of the enquirer.'

11. ὃ ἦν — ἐστὶ] meaning, 'that did exist under his former heads, and does not do so any longer, but exists under another form.'

13. διδώσιν] So, for t. rec. διαδίδουσιν, all the recent Editors read, on good grounds.

14. Βασιλεὺς βασιλέων, &c.] So in Æschyl. Suppl. 533, ἄναξ ἀνάκτων. Here is plainly asserted the Divinity of the Lord Jesus.

16. In this verse we have strong metaphors importing utter destruction.—καὶ τὸ θηρ. So, for t. rec. ἐπὶ τὸ θηρ., all the recent Editors, on good grounds, read.

καὶ ποιῆσαι μίαν γνῶμην, καὶ δοῦναι τὴν βασιλείαν αὐτῶν τῷ θηρίῳ, ἄχρι *τελεσθῆσονται *οἱ λόγοι τοῦ Θεοῦ. <sup>18 p</sup> Καὶ <sup>ch. 16. 19.</sup> ἡ γυνὴ ἣν εἶδες ἔστιν ἡ πόλις ἡ μεγάλη ἡ ἔχουσα βασιλείαν ἐπὶ τῶν βασιλείων τῆς γῆς.

XVIII. <sup>1</sup> [Καὶ] μετὰ ταῦτα εἶδον ἄλλον ἄγγελον καταβαίνοντα ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ἔχοντα ἔξουσίαν μεγάλην, καὶ ἡ γῆ ἐφωτίσθη ἐκ τῆς δόξης αὐτοῦ. <sup>2</sup> *καὶ ἔκραξεν ἐν ἰσχυρᾷ φωνῇ [μεγάλῃ], λέγων *Ἐπεσεν, ἔπεσε Βαβυλὼν ἡ μεγάλη! καὶ ἐγένετο κατοικητήριον δαιμόνων, καὶ φυλακὴ παντὸς πνεύματος ἀκαθάρτου, καὶ φυλακὴ παντὸς ὀρνέου ἀκαθάρτου καὶ μεμση-μένου. <sup>3</sup> ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ οἴνου τοῦ θυμοῦ τῆς πορνείας αὐτῆς πέπωκε πάντα τὰ ἔθνη καὶ οἱ βασιλεῖς τῆς γῆς μετ' αὐτῆς ἐπόρνευσαν, καὶ οἱ ἔμποροι τῆς γῆς ἐκ τῆς δυνάμεως τοῦ στρήνους αὐτῆς ἐπλούτησαν.

<sup>4</sup> *Καὶ ἤκουσα ἄλλην φωνὴν ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ λέγουσαν *Ἐξἔλθετε ἐξ αὐτῆς, ὁ λαὸς μου, ἵνα μὴ συγκοινωνήσητε ταῖς ἁμαρτίαις αὐτῆς, καὶ *ἐκ τῶν πληγῶν αὐτῆς ἵνα μὴ λάβητε, <sup>5</sup> ὅτι *ἐκολλήθησαν αὐτῆς αἱ ἁμαρτίαι ἄχρι τοῦ οὐρα-νοῦ, καὶ ἐμνημόνευσεν ὁ Θεὸς τὰ ἀδικήματα αὐτῆς. <sup>6</sup> *ἀπόδοτε

17. τελεσθῆσονται.] So, for t. rec. τελεσθῆσῶσι, Sch., La., Tis., and Wordsw. edit, on competent authority of MSS., confirmed by internal evidence. The t. rec. prob. arose from an alteration of τελεσθῆσονται by some grammarians.—οἱ λόγοι, for t. rec. τὰ ῥήματα, is, on strong authority (which I could confirm), adopted by all the recent Editors.

XVIII. In this Chapter we have nothing more than another revelation [rather a recapitulation of the former], given for the purpose, perhaps, of marking out with greater strength the certain fall of heathen [rather Papal] Rome. The terms are in many cases taken from the ancient Prophets. (Lee.)

1. The καὶ is, on competent authority, confirmed by internal evidence, cancelled by La., Tis., and Wordsw.—ἄλλος is subjoined, from nearly the same MSS., by the same Editors, and Sch.

2. ἔπεσεν, ἔπεσε, &c.] Comp. Isa. xxi. 9.
 The destruction of this spiritual Babylon is vividly represented by imagery derived from what usually accompanies utter destruction in great Oriental capitals; for in the East the desertion of the habitations by man soon makes them the resort of the wild animals of every kind, partly beasts, but chiefly birds, as the testimony of all travellers in Oriental countries attests; and not only of those, but, according to the notions of the Jews, of evil spirits, which were supposed to choose their habitation in all desert places. Comp.
 Isa. xlii. 20. xxxiv. 11.—φυλακὴ, 'haunt or lurking-place.'—μεμση-, 'hateful,' because the unclean birds were held in especial abhorrence by the Jews.—To advert to matters of reading.
 —ἐν ἰσχυρῷ φ., for t. rec. ἐν ἰσχυρί, φωνῇ μ., is edited from MS. A and 20 curatives, by Sch.,

La., Tis., and Wordsw. But I cannot, without stronger reasons, consent to part with an expression so Hellenistic, and quite in the manner of St. John as ἐν ἰσχυρί. I suspect that the Apostle wrote ἔκραξεν ἐν ἰσχυρί, and that the words ἰσχυρᾷ φωνῇ and φωνῇ μεγ. came from the Scholiasts.—δαιμόνων. Tis. edits δαιμονίων, from MSS. A, B, and Areth. But the authority for this change is insufficient.

3. Here is given the reason why this ruin has overtaken the city.—στρήνους. See note on 1 Tim. v. 11, and my Lex. in v. With this comp. a similar passage in Isa. xxiii. 8, with respect to Tyre.

4. ἐξέλθετε ἐξ αὐτῆς, &c.] The words are taken from the passages of Isa. and Jer. indicated in the margin. With ἵνα μὴ συγκοιν. ταῖς, &c. (of which the meaning is, 'partakers with those that sin with them,') (see Eph. v. 7, and note,) comp. Thucyd. i. 39, fin. ἡ γκλημάτων ἀμαρτόχου, οὕτω τῶν μετὰ πράξεις μὴ κοινωνούν. I have now adopted the change of position in the words of the last clause, as called for by very strong external authority (to which I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3), confirmed by internal evidence.

5. ἐκολλήθησαν.] So, for t. rec. ἠκολούθησαν, all the recent Editors read, on the strongest authority, and internal evidence, which I have already pointed out. And I would now refer to Deut. xxix. 20, and Baruch i. 14. iii. 2. Comp. also Ps. lxxii. 8, ἐκολλήθη ἡ ψυχὴ μου ὀπίσω σου, 'cleaveth unto in following thee.'—μνη-μόνηται ὁ Θεὸς τὰ ἀδικ. α. God is said to remember sin by punishing it. See note supr.
 xvi. 19.

6. Here the faithful are enjoined not only to avoid communication with Babylon, as accursed, but to avenge her fornications and seductions, αὐτὴ ὡς καὶ αὐτὴ ἀπέδωκεν [ὑμῖν], καὶ διπλώσατε αὐτὴ διπλᾶ κατὰ τὰ ἔργα αὐτῆς, ἐν τῷ ποτηρίῳ ᾧ ἔκεράσε κεράσατε αὐτῇ [Isa. 47. 7, 8. διπλοῦν ἡ ὕδα ἐδόξασεν * αὐτὴν καὶ ἐστρηνίασε, τοσοῦτον δότε αὐτὴ βασανισμὸν καὶ πένθος· ὅτι ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ αὐτῆς λέγει, † Κάθηνμαι βασίλισσα καὶ χήρα οὐκ εἰμὶ, καὶ πένθος οὐ μὴ ἶδω g 2 Thess. 2. 8 εἰ διὰ τοῦτο ἐν· μὴ ἡμέρα ἤξουσιν αἱ πληγαὶ αὐτῆς, θάνατος καὶ πένθος καὶ λιμός, καὶ ἐν πυρὶ κατακαυθήσεται, ὅτι ἰσχυρὸς Κύριος ὁ Θεὸς ὁ † κρίνων αὐτήν. 9 <sup>h</sup> Καὶ † κλαύσονται [αὐτήν] καὶ κόφονται ἐπ' * αὐτήν οἱ βασιλεῖς τῆς γῆς οἱ μετ' αὐτῆς πορνεύσαντες καὶ στρηνιάσαντες, ὅταν βλέπωσι τὸν καπνὸν τῆς πυρώσεως αὐτῆς, 10 <sup>i</sup> ἀπὸ μακρόθεν ἐστηκότες, διὰ τὸν φόβον τοῦ βασανισμοῦ αὐτῆς, λέγοντες· Οὐαὶ, οὐαὶ! ἡ πόλις ἡ μεγάλη, Βαβυλὼν ἡ πόλις ἡ ἰσχυρά, ὅτι [ἐν] μὲν ὥρα ἦλθεν ἡ κρίσις σου! 11 <sup>k</sup> Καὶ οἱ ἔμποροι τῆς γῆς κλαίουσι καὶ πενθοῦσιν ἐπ' αὐτῇ, ὅτι τὸν γόμον αὐτῶν οὐδεὶς ἀγοράζει οὐκέτι, 12 γόμον χρυσοῦ καὶ ἀργύρου, καὶ λίθου τιμίου καὶ μαργαρίτου, καὶ * βυσ-and that by a double retaliation (which is expressed in strong figures, found also in Jer. l. 15. xvi. 18).—διπλᾶ, denoting, 'full and ample retribution'; διπλᾶ being taken for διπλῶς, as in Æsch. Ag. 520. Comp. Soph. Œd. Tyr. 1328, διπλᾶ σε πειθεῖν, καὶ διπλᾶ φέρεω κακὰ.

7. ὅσα ἰδὼξασεν—πίσους]. Render: 'by how much soever she hath glorified herself, by so much give unto her torment and wailing.' There is much force in the term.—ιδὼξ. αὐτήν. La., Tis., and Wordsw. edit. from MS. A, and several cursives, αὐτήν; but the true reading, which I have now received, seems to be αὐτήν, the sense being, 'made much of herself,' 'held herself in glory.' See Heb. v. 5. Rom. xi. 13, and notes.—ἐστρηνίασε, 'hath played the lascivious wanton.' See note on 1 Tim. v. 11.—κάθηνμαι βασίλισσα—ἰδω, a form of expression, quite graphic, signifying, 'I am seated on a throne of regal authority, secure from all calamity.' See supr. xvii. 9, and comp. Isa. xlvii. 7, 8. Ezek. xxvii. 3. Zeph. ii. 13, with Ovid, Met. vi. 193—195, 'Sum felix—felixque manebo,—tutam me copia fecit. Major enim quam cui possit Fortuna nocere.' Here, then, we have an image of one who, feeling buoyed up with present majesty, takes his seat on a throne, serene in glory. To turn to a matter of various reading.—κάθηνμαι βασιλῆ. All the Editors retain κάθηνμαι, though evidently dissatisfied with it; no wonder; for if κάθ. issued from St. John, how came so plain and unobjectionable a reading, as far as regards sense, to be altered? Besides, the various readings κάθω, καθίω, and καθώς, are so little inviting, that Matth. showed prudence in defining nothing as to their respective claims. Hence κάθηνμαι has been retained by every Editor; and La. does not even notice the reading καθίω, found in B and No. 14 (Cod. Leicestr.), and confirmed by the erroneous readings κάθω and καθώς, found in but a few MSS. This, I am persuaded, is the true reading; and κάθηνμαι a gloss, or alteration, for plainness' sake. The ancient Critical Revisers would not have dismissed it so summarily had they perceived its true nature. It is the Fut. Indic. contract of καθίζω, which, in the Class., and in the Alexandrian Greek of the Sept. and of the N. Test., oft. means 'to seat (oneself),' 'to sit,' 'consideo.' So Isa. xxx. 8, καθίσας, 1 Sam. xx. 24, ἐκάθισεν ὁ βασιλεὺς, 1 Kings i. 46, ἐκάθισεν—ἐπὶ θρόνον, et al., and in the N. Test. It is true that the Fut., in this Intrins. sense, does not occur in the N. Test.; but it occasionally does in the Sept., and espec. in a passage which was, I doubt not, in St. John's mind, Isa. xlvii. 7, 8, καὶ εἶπας, Εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα ἰσμοὶ ἀρχοῦσα—νῦν δὲ ἄκουε ταῦτα,—ἡ πεποιθεῖα, ἡ λίγισσα ἐν καρδίᾳ αὐτῆς (read αὐτῇ), 'Ἐγὼ εἰμι, καὶ οὐκ ἔστιν αἰτία, οὐ καθίω χήρα, οὐδὲ γινώσκωμαι ὀρφανήν. This contract form is not Attic only, but Alexandrian. Thus the cognate forms καθιόμαι, καθιεύται, καθιόματα, oft. occur in the Sept.

8. For κρίνω Sch., La., Tis., and Wordsw. read κρίνας, from A, B, C, and 25 cursives (I add Lamb. and Mus. om.), confirmed by most of the ancient Versions; and it is prob., but not certainly, the true reading.

9. The recent Editors read, from B, C, and many cursives (I add Lamb. and Mus. om.), κλαύσονται for κλαύσονται, and cancel αὐτήν. The latter reading is certainly, and the former prob., true. They also edit αὐτὴν for αὐτῇ, on strong authority, but against internal evidence, the letters ν and ι adscript being oft. confounded.

10. The εἰ which I bracketed has been, on good grounds, cancelled by La. and Tis.

11. τὸν γόμον] The word signifies 'a freight,' or, as here, 'freighted merchandise.' With the whole passage comp. Ezek. xxvii.

12. Now follows a list of the various sorts of sumptuous merchandise: with which comp. a very similar one (introduced for the same purpose) in Isa. iii. 16—24. The importation of every kind of luxury from all countries into Rome is well known; inasmuch that what Pericles (Thucyd. ii. 38) said hyperbolically of Althos, σίνου καὶ † πορφύρας, καὶ σθητικοῦ καὶ κοκκίνου, καὶ πάν ξύλον θύινον, καὶ πάν σκεῦος ἐλεφάντινον, καὶ πάν σκεῦος ἐκ ξύλου τιμωτάτου, καὶ χαλκοῦ καὶ σιδήρου καὶ μαρμάρου, <sup>13</sup> καὶ κινά- <sup>1 Esak. 37. 12</sup> μωμον * καὶ ἄμωμον καὶ θυμιάματα, καὶ μύρον καὶ λίβανον, καὶ οἶνον καὶ ἔλαιον, καὶ σεμιδάλην καὶ σῖτον, καὶ κτήνη καὶ πρό-βατα, καὶ ἵππων καὶ ῥεδῶν καὶ σωμάτων, καὶ ψυχὰς ἀνθρώπων.

<sup>14</sup> Καὶ ἡ ὁπώρα [σου] τῆς ἐπιθυμίας τῆς ψυχῆς * ἀπώλετο ἀπὸ σοῦ, καὶ πάντα τὰ λιπαρὰ καὶ τὰ λαμπρὰ * ἀπώλετο ἀπὸ σοῦ καὶ οὐκέτι οὐ μὴ † εὐρήσῃς αὐτά. <sup>15</sup> Οἱ ἔμποροι τούτων, οἱ πλουτήσαντες ἀπ' αὐτῆς, ἀπὸ μακρόθεν στήσονται διὰ τὸν φόβον τοῦ βασανισμοῦ αὐτῆς, κλαίοντες καὶ πενθοῦντες, <sup>16</sup> [καὶ] λέ- <sup>m ch. 17. 4</sup> γοντες· Οὐαὶ, οὐαὶ! ἡ πόλις ἡ μεγάλη, ἡ περιβεβλημένη βύσσινον καὶ πορφυροῦν καὶ κόκκινον, καὶ κεχυρωμένη ἐν † χρυσῷ καὶ λίθῳ τιμῇ καὶ μαργαρίταις· ὅτι μιᾷ ὥρᾳ ἡρημώθη ὁ τοσοῦτος πλοῦτος. <sup>17</sup> Καὶ πᾶς κυβερνήτης καὶ πᾶς † ἐπὶ τῶν πλοίων <sup>n Isa. 23. 14</sup> <sup>Esak. 37. 39.</sup>

was literally true of ROME: ἐπιστρέφεται δὲ, διὰ μέγιστον τῆς πόλεως, ἐκ πάσης γῆς τὰ πάντα. For βύσσινον, Sch., La., Tis., and Wordsw. edit βύσσινον on strong authority (A, B, C, and many cursives, with the Lamb. and Mus. copies), prob. the true reading.—For πορφύρας MS. B and 25 cursives (with Lamb. 1186 and Mus. 1, 2, 3) have πορφυροῦν, adopted by Matth. and Wordsw., while Gr., Sch., La., and Tis. retain -ας; with reason; since here the sense must be 'purple cloth,' not 'a purple robe,' as infr. v. 16, and supr. xvii. 4.—θύινον, 'of citron,' or some other such odoriferous wood. See more in my Lex.

<sup>13</sup> καὶ ἄμωμον] A sort of aromatic perfume, on which see my Lex. The words are absent from MSS., but have been inserted, on strong authority, by all the recent Editors, no doubt omitted per homoteleuton. On the terms ἄμ. and σμῖδ. see my Lex.—καὶ κτήνη καὶ σώματα, &c. Of this use of σώμα, to denote slave, &c. occur both in the Sept. (as Gen. xxxvi. 6, and elsewhere.) and the Class. writers, espec. the later ones, as Polyb. Why the word was so employed was, Epiphanius says, in his treatise de Ancoratu, C. v. 9, 'because all the command a man exercises over his slaves is limited to the body, and cannot reach the soul [though it may oppress, it cannot quite depress, the soul. EDITOR.] and because bodily service was the thing chiefly looked for in a slave.' It may be added, that, to this idea of traffic, as respects the σώματα, or slaves, there seems an allusion in the next words, καὶ ψυχὰς ἀνθρώπων, which may be supposed intended to set forth the iniquitous nature of this traffic, by the consideration that it is exercised on their fellow-men, equally endowed with a rational soul! And so Heinr. aptly compares the expression in a strikingly similar passage of Ezek. xxvii. 13. πῶς πᾶς ἐνδοκίμοσός σοι ἐν ψυχαῖς ἀνθρώπων, adducing also in illustration the German word Seelen-verkäufer, 'a soul-merchant.'

<sup>14</sup> ἡ ὁπώρα] 'the rich fruits.' An emblem of luxury.—τῆς ἐπιθυμίας τῆς ψυχῆς, the best MSS. have σου τῆς ἐπιθ. τῆς ψυχ., which is edited by La., Tis., and Wordsw. But the reading may have sprung from a Critical Corrector.—ἀπώλετο, for t. rec. ἀπῆλθεν, is, on very strong authority, adopted by Sch., La., and Tis.—πάντα τὰ λιπαρὰ καὶ τὰ λαμπρὰ ἀπὸ σοῦ. Here λιπ. signifies opifera, opulenta; and λαμπρ., splendid, magnificent, as in Demosth. 564, Xen. Symp. p. 1. 4, λ. κατασκευῆ, and Hippag. i. 11, τὰ ἐν ἱππικῇ λαμπρὰ λέγων, and elsewhere. The expression τὰ λαμπρὰ (which is rare) occurs in Lucian, i. 473, ἀποδόμνοι τὰ λαμπρὰ ἐκείνα πάντα. Plato, 266, περὶ τὰ λαμπρὰ καὶ λαΐα. Heinr. takes τὰ λαμπρὰ as Adj. neut. for Subst. λαμπρότης. But that would require τὸ λαμπρόν, and would injure the sense, since, as observes Jelf, Gr. § 436, Obs. 2, 'the Sing. neut. Adject. with τὸ expresses abstract notion; but the Plur., the different elements, or particulars, which compose such a notion. Now this is the case here, the sense being, that 'all the particulars of luxury and splendour [in which she enjoyed herself] are perished and gone from her,—ἀπῆλθεν, as the t. rec. and some MSS. read,—but plainly from a gloss. Of the above particulars, luxury of the table is referred to in λιπαρὰ (comp. Isa. xxv. 6, 'to make a feast of fat things'); and by τὰ λαμπρὰ is denoted 'splendour in dress, furniture,' &c.—εὐρήσῃς. La. and Wordsw. read εὐρήσουσι, from MSS. A, C, confirmed by the Vulg. and Syr. Versions; while Tis. reads εὐρρη, from MS. B and 25 cursives. It is prob., but not certainly, the true reading; it has, at least, internal evidence in its favour.

<sup>16</sup> The καὶ before λέγοντες is, on good grounds, cancelled by all the recent Editors. There is less certainty in the reading χρυσῷ for χρυσῶ, adopted by them from A, B, C, and many cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1186 and Mus. 1, 2, 3), because internal evidence is rather in favour of the t. rec.—As to μαργαρίταις, edited by La. solely from A, C (to which I can add Mus. 3), it merely arose from the Sing. χρυσῶ and λίθῳ τ. just before. Besides, the t. rec. is confirmed by supr. xvii. 4, and 1 Tim. ii. 9, σῆς v. l.—ἡρημώθη, 'is come to nought,' a sense of the word very rare, but found also in Ecclus. xxi. 4, καταπληγμοί καὶ ὕβρις ἱρμώσουσι πλοῦτον.

[ὁ ὄμιλος], καὶ ναῦται, καὶ ὅσοι τὴν θάλασσαν ἐργάζονται, ἀπὸ μακρόθεν ἔστησαν, <sup>18</sup> καὶ ἔκραζον * βλέποντες τὸν καπνὸν τῆς πυρώσεως αὐτῆς, λέγοντες· Τίς ὁμοία τῇ πόλει τῇ μεγάλῃ; <sup>19</sup> Καὶ ἔβαλον χοῦν ἐπὶ τὰς κεφαλὰς αὐτῶν, καὶ ἔκραζον κλαίοντες καὶ πενθοῦντες, λέγοντες· Οὐαί, οὐαί! ἡ πόλις ἡ μεγάλη, ἐν ᾗ ἐπλούτησαν πάντες οἱ ἔχοντες τὰ πλοῖα ἐν τῇ θαλάσῃ ἐκ τῆς τιμιότητος αὐτῆς! ὅτι μᾶ ὦρα ἡρμώθη. <sup>20</sup> Εὐφραίνου ἐπ' * αὐτῇ, οὐρανέ, καὶ οἱ ἄγιοι καὶ οἱ ἀπόστολοι καὶ οἱ προφῆται, ὅτι ἔκρινεν ὁ Θεὸς τὸ κρίμα ὑμῶν ἐξ αὐτῆς.

<sup>21</sup> Καὶ ἤρην· εἰς ἄγγελος ἰσχυρὸς λίθον ὡς μύλον μέγαν, καὶ ἔβαλεν εἰς τὴν θάλασσαν, λέγων· Οὕτως ὁρμήματι βληθήσεται Βαβυλὼν ἡ μεγάλη πόλις, καὶ οὐ μὴ εὑρεθῇ ἔτι. <sup>22</sup> καὶ φωνὴ κυβαρδῶν καὶ μουσικῶν καὶ αὐλητῶν καὶ σαλπιστῶν οὐ μὴ ἀκουσθῇ ἐν σοὶ ἔτι· καὶ πᾶς τεχνίτης πάσης τέχνης οὐ μὴ εὑρεθῇ ἐν σοὶ ἔτι· καὶ φωνὴ μύλου οὐ μὴ ἀκουσθῇ ἐν σοὶ ἔτι·

17. πᾶς κυβερν.] On the exact force of the term κυβερν. see my note on Thucyd. vol. i. 163; ii. 126, and my Lex. N. T.—The words ὁ ὄμιλος have but slender authority, and are with reason cancelled by the recent Editors, who also, for t. rec. ἐπὶ τῶν πλοίων, read, from A, B, C, and many cursives (I add Lamb. 1186, Mus. 1, 2, 3), ἐπὶ τὸν τόπον πλίων. But the words are not susceptible of any but a very jejune sense. Accordingly I still retain t. rec. ἐπὶ πλοίων, scil. ὧν, meaning, as I have shown on Acts xxvii. 11, 'the master or ship-owner.' However, I suspect that the true reading is ἐπὶ πλοίων. As to the readings πλίων or ὄμιλος, they arose from mistaken marginal glosses.

18, 19. βλέποντες, for t. rec. ὁρῶντες, is, on very strong authority (I add Lamb. 1186 and Mus. 1, 2, 3), confirmed by internal evidence, adopted by all the recent Editors.—ἔκραζαν, in each v., is adopted by Wordsw. (alone), from A, C, and 2 cursives (to which I can only add Lamb. 1186), but on insecure grounds; as will appear from note on Matt. xx. 31.—The τὰ before πλοῖα is adopted, with all the recent Editors, from A, B, C, and 25 cursives (I add Lamb. 1186 and Mus. 1, 2), confirmed by internal evidence. The next words may be rendered, 'in which all who had the vessels (employed) at sea became rich by her costliness (expensiveness) (in purchasing the sumptuous articles imported from all parts); a sense of τιμ. of which I know no other ex. It was prob. a provincialism. The words of v. 20, εὐφραίνου ἐπ' αὐτῇ, represent strongly the holy exultation of the inhabitants of heaven, and their compeers the Apostles and Prophets, over the fall of the idolatrous, mystical Babylon, is in strong contrast to the deep and heartfelt wailing of worldly gold seekers, seeing the hope of their further gains will be gone for ever. To advert to some matters of reading.—αὐτῇ, for t. rec. αὐτῶν, is adopted by Matth., Gr., Sch., and Tis., from B, C, and very many cursives; to which I add Lamb. 1186 and Mus. 1, 2, 3. The reading ἐν αὐτῇ, edited by La. from MS. A alone, is one of the errors of scribes which abound in that copy.—The καὶ oi has been inserted by all the recent Editors on the strongest authority (I add Lamb. 1186 and Mus. 1, 2, 3), confirmed by internal evidence. The next words contain the grounds of the exultation,—'seeing that God hath avenged you,' ἐξ αὐτῆς, lit. 'out of her,' 'at her hands.' The best comment is the parallel construction and sentiment at infr. xix. 2, ἐξιδίκασι τὸ αἷμα τῶν ἐθνῶν αὐτοῦ ἐκ χειρὸς αὐτῆς, where remark the hyperallage.

21. λίθον—ἔβαλεν εἰς τὴν θάλ.] So in Jer. li. 63, 64, the fall of Babylon is signifi. in symbol by a stone cast into the Euphrates. See note supr. viii. 9.

22. φωνὴ κιθ.] Render: 'a sound of lute-players.' Of the terms μουσικῶν καὶ αὐλ. the second is easy to be understood; while the exact import of the former is indistinct and uncertain. It might seem that its sense is saxgers, which meaning the word bears in Artemid. iii. 49, where it is said of the cixodæ, 'grasshoppers,' that in dreams they mean μουσικοὺς; and also τοῦτε οὐδὲν ὀφθαλμοῦντες; for, adds he, 'grasshoppers are of no force,' πλὴν φωνὴν ἔχουσι. Hesych., however, explains μουσικοὶ by ψάλται, for which he had, I doubt not, good authority; and this I apprehend to be the sense intended in the present passage;—namely, 'the sound of lyrists and katavers, of pipers and trumpeters.' By φωνὴ μύλου I understand the 'sound of the mill-songs.' See my Lex. N. T. in μῶλος. That there were certain songs appropriated to that use is shown by Wilke in his Dissert. on the φωνὴ μύλου. The passage seems formed on Jer. xxv. 10, and perhaps Jer. vii. 34. xvi. 9. xxxiii. 11, in all which passages there is allusion to the wedding festivities, when the bride was brought to the bridegroom's house, and the cavalcade was met by maidens carrying lighted lamps. See Matt. xxv. 1—8.

—πᾶς τεχνίτης πάσης τέχ.] meaning, by sing. taken generically, 'artificers of every sort.'

23 <sup>1</sup> καὶ φῶς λύχνου οὐ μὴ φανῇ ἐν σοὶ ἔτι, καὶ φωνὴ νυμφίου <sup>1</sup> 1. Isa. 22. 2. Jer. 7. 34. & 16. 9. & 26. 10. καὶ νύμφης οὐ μὴ ἀκουσθῇ ἐν σοὶ ἔτι· (ὅτι οἱ ἔμποροί σου ἦσαν οἱ μεγιστάνες τῆς γῆς) ὅτι ἐν τῇ φαρμακείᾳ σου ἐπλανήθησαν πάντα τὰ ἔθνη· <sup>24</sup> <sup>2</sup> καὶ ἐν αὐτῇ * αἵματα προφητῶν καὶ ἁγίων <sup>2</sup> u ch. 17. 6. εὐρέθη, καὶ πάντων τῶν ἐσφαγμένων ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς.

XIX. <sup>1</sup> Μετὰ ταῦτα ἤκουσα † ὡς φωνὴν ὄχλου πολλοῦ <sup>1</sup> a ch. 7. 10. & 12. 10. μεγάλῃν ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ, * λεγόντων· Ἀλληλουῖα! ἡ σωτηρία καὶ ἡ δόξα [καὶ ἡ τιμὴ] καὶ ἡ δύναμις [Κυρίου] † τῷ † Θεῷ ἡμῶν! — <sup>2</sup> <sup>2</sup> b Deut. 32. ch. 18. 2. & 12. 50. ὅτι ἀληθινὰ καὶ δίκαιαι αἱ κρίσεις αὐτοῦ—ὅτι ἔκρινε τὴν πόρνην τὴν μεγάλην, ἣτις ἐφθείρε τὴν γῆν ἐν τῇ πορνείᾳ αὐτῆς, καὶ ἐξέδικοσε τὸ αἷμα τῶν δούλων αὐτοῦ ἐκ [τῆς] χειρὸς αὐτῆς·

23. φῶς λύχνου—σοὶ ἔτι] This is meant to intimate that there will be an utter end to all the gaieties and luxuries of life; see Bp. Jebb's Sacr. Lit., p. 387, q. d. 'not only the arts that adorn life (and form the entertainment of the rich), but even those ordinary employments, without which society cannot subsist, will cease for ever'—an image of utter and eternal desolation. The φωνὴ νυμφίου καὶ νύμφης seems to be, not the voice of the bridegroom, &c., but the sound or noise occasioned by the cavalcade accompanying the bridegroom, and making up the κραυγὴ spoken of in Matt. xxv. 6. The words ὅτι ἐν τῇ—τὰ ἔθνη suggest the cause of the judgments.

24. For t. rec. αἷμα, MS. B and many cursives (with all the Lamb. and Mus. copies), with several Versions, have αἵματα, which is edited by Sch. and Tis.; very properly; since internal evidence, arising from its strongly Hebraic character, is quite in favour of the reading; which I have now received. La. and Wordsw., indeed, retain αἷμα: the former, with more than his usual caution; the latter, with less than his usual judgment, since internal evidence is adverse.

XIX. 1.—10. These verses are a song of triumphant congratulation by the redeemed saints in heaven, and angelic beings, in consequence of the just overthrow of the mystic Babylon.

1. The καὶ has been, on strong grounds, cancelled by all the recent Editors, whom I have followed. — ὡς φωνὴν ὄχλου π. μεγάλῃν. Matth. Gr., Sch., La., and Tis., on very weighty authority (which I could confirm), read ὡς φ. μεγ. ὄχλ. πολ. But internal evidence is adverse, for I doubt whether this be not a correction of the Critics, to remove a harshness of phrasing. I have now, with Matth. Gr., Sch., La., and Tis., adopted λεγόντων, from A, B, C, and many cursives (to which I add Lamb. 1186, and Mus. 1, 2, 3), espec. since internal evidence is in its favour.—The words καὶ ἡ τιμὴ are, on strong grounds, cancelled by all the recent Editors, and καὶ ἡ δύναμις—καὶ ἡ δόξα is adopted, from the great body of the MSS., by La. and Tis.; while Wordsw. retains, with me, the t. rec., καὶ ἡ δόξα καὶ ἡ δ., which is more agreeable to the usage of Scriptural language. At Κυρίου τῷ Θεῷ, the recent Editors all read, on strong authority (to which I add Lamb. and Mus. om.), τοῦ Θεοῦ, and cancel Κυρίου. As regards the latter, I agree with them; but not the former, which would involve a harshness insufferable, and one capable of no tolerable sense; unless, indeed, we insert (with Abp. Newc.) 'now is,' which is quite inadmissible. If the Genitives be adopted, we must suppose that the words are spoken with exclamation,—the outcry of souls under the altar for avengement being changed into acclamation, soon subsiding into a song of praise; and thus we may render, 'Hallelujah!' = 'O of our God!' as if ὦ had preceded; and then it would be similar to Rom. xi. 33, ὦ βάθος γνώσεως Θεοῦ. Render: 'O the salvation and the glory, the honour and the glory!' there being reference to the foregoing matter, in which our Lord's salvation, &c., are treated on, as also his power and glory, and the honour due to his holy name. On attentive reconsideration of this matter, it seems to me that this latter method is not only admissible, but introduces the sense intended by St. John; though it was quite unperceived by the Pesch. Syr., Vulg., and other ancient Translations, who render at least as if they read τῷ Θεῷ, which, indeed, is equally suitable.

2. The words ὅτι ἀληθ.—αὐτοῦ are semi-parenthetic, to show the general ground of praise; while the next words point at the particular one.—ὅτι ἔκρινε—ἐφθείρε. Render: 'because he hath brought to judgment (and condign punishment) the great Harlot, that did corrupt.' The διέφθειρε of B, and most of the cursives, is a mere gloss, though edited by Heinr.; and the ἔκρινε of A is a mere error of the scribes.—ἐξεδίκασε—ἐκ τ. χειρὸς αὐτῆς, a signif. phrase; q. d. 'I will so seek, as to avenge it at their hands'; a Hebr. Comp. Ezek. iii. 20, 'his blood will I require at his hand.' Comp. supr. vi. 10, and a similar phrase in Lycophron, Casaub. 1397, ἀδελφὴς αἷμα τιμωρομένης. The Art. τῆς is, on strong authority, cancelled by the recent Editors; but internal evidence is adverse, and propriety of language calls for the Article, which may have been left out by accident. Besides, it is confirmed by Ezek. iii. 20, Sept., τὸ αἷμα αὐτοῦ ἐκ τῆς χειρὸς σου ἐκζητήσω. At the next words I have pointed as I have, with Abp. Newc. and Wesley, because it seems called for by propriety, and by the touch of graphic inherent in the passage. I have received, with all the recent Editors, τῷ θρόνῳ, for t. rec. τοῦ θρόνου, on very strong authority, confirmed by the Lamb. and Mus. copies, though the other is

<sup>c</sup> Iam. 24. 10.
<sup>c</sup> ch. 14. 11.
<sup>c</sup> 14. 12.
<sup>d</sup> ch. 4. 4, 6.

<sup>3</sup> καὶ δεύτεραν εἶρηκαν, Ἀλληλούϊα· καὶ ὁ καπνὸς αὐτῆς ἀναβαίνει εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας τῶν αἰώνων! <sup>4</sup> Καὶ * ἔπесαν οἱ πρεσβύτεροι οἱ εἴκοσι [καὶ] τέσσαρες καὶ τὰ τέσσαρα ζῶα, καὶ προσεκύνησαν τῷ Θεῷ τῷ καθήμενῳ ἐπὶ τῷ θρόνῳ, λέγοντες Ἀμήν Ἀλληλούϊα! <sup>5</sup> Καὶ φωνὴ * ἀπὸ τοῦ θρόνου ἐξηλθε, λέγουσα· Αἰνεῖτε * τὸν Θεὸν ἡμῶν, πάντες οἱ δούλοι αὐτοῦ, καὶ οἱ φοβούμενοι αὐτὸν, [καὶ] οἱ μικροὶ καὶ οἱ μεγάλοι! <sup>6</sup> Καὶ ἤκουσα ὡς φωνὴν ὄχλου πολλοῦ, καὶ ὡς φωνὴν ὑδάτων πολλῶν, καὶ ὡς φωνὴν βροντῶν ἰσχυρῶν, * λέγοντες Ἀλληλούϊα! ὅτι

<sup>e</sup> ch. 11. 15.
<sup>e</sup> 17. 3, 12, 13.

<sup>f</sup> Matt. 22. 2.
<sup>f</sup> 22. 10.
<sup>f</sup> Luke 14. 10.

<sup>7</sup> ἐβασίλευσε Κύριος ὁ Θεὸς ἡμῶν ὁ παντοκράτωρ· <sup>7</sup> χαίρωμεν καὶ ἀγαλλιώμεθα, καὶ δῶμεν τὴν δόξαν αὐτῷ ὅτι ἦλθεν

<sup>g</sup> Ps. 65. 14.
<sup>g</sup> 12.
<sup>g</sup> Ezek. 10. 10.

<sup>8</sup> ὁ γάμος τοῦ Ἀρνίου, καὶ ἡ γυνὴ αὐτοῦ ἡτοίμασεν ἑαυτήν. <sup>8</sup> Καὶ ἐδόθη αὐτῇ ἵνα περιβάλληται βύσσινον καθαρὸν καὶ λαμπρὸν (τὸ γὰρ βύσσινον τὰ δικαιώματά ἐστι τῶν ἁγίων.)

<sup>h</sup> Matt. 22. 2.
<sup>h</sup> Luke 14. 10.
<sup>h</sup> ch. 11. 15.

<sup>9</sup> Καὶ λέγει μοι· Γράψον· Μακάριοι οἱ εἰς τὸ δεῖπνον τοῦ equally suitable, and more frequent in Hellenistic Greek.

<sup>5</sup> For ἐκ La. and Tis. edit ἀπὸ, from A, B, C, and many cursive MSS., while Sch. and Wordsw. retain ἐκ; rightly, considering that internal evidence is in its favour; this use of ἐκ for ἀπὸ being Hellenistic, and quite in the style of St. John, while the other is purely Classical.—For τὸν Θεόν, MSS. A, B, C, and several cursives, have τῷ Θεῷ, adopted by La., Tis., and Wordsw.; while Matth., Gr., and Sch. retain τὸν Θεόν, rightly; since the other would be a mere barbarism; and the reading merely arose from error of scribes, who perpetually confound the α adscript with ν. Whether τὸν Θεόν is in the Vat. B, I doubt. It is not in the collections heretofore made; and Tischendorf's was far too hasty to be relied on. It is not in those MSS. which almost invariably agree with the MS. B, —namely, the Cor. 2, and Mus. 1, 2, 3. The Lamb. 1186 is here wanting. It appears in 7 cursives; for as to the alii multi of Gr., repeated by Sch., they are, I suspect, little more than imaginary. The 4 MSS. of Matth., k, l, p, r, added by Gr., arose from his blunder,—those 4 MSS. belonging to the καὶ before οἱ μικροὶ. As to the Complut. Ed., alleged by Gr., it has τὸν Θεόν. As to the Syr. and other Versions alleged, the Translators must all have had τὸν Θεόν, except, indeed, the Vulg.; and it is prob. that Jerome had τὸν Θεόν in his copies, and only rendered laudem dicite Deo by a free version. The καὶ before οἱ μικροὶ is, on strong authority, cancelled by all the recent Editors. Yet it was more likely to have been left out by accident, or even expunged intentionally, for the purpose of removing an unpleasant repetition of καὶ (just as the latter of the two ὦς at ver. 6), than to have been inserted.

<sup>6</sup> λέγοντες] So I have edited for τ. rec. τῶν, with Matth., Gr., La., and Tis., from B and 20 cursives (to which I add Mus. 1, 2), confirmed, as it would seem, by internal evidence; though (so harsh is the barbarism) it arose, I suspect, from careless scribes mistaking the abbrevations for τῶν and τῆς, which are very oft. confounded. I have now admitted, with Matth., Gr., Sch., La., and Tis., ἡμῶν, from MS. B, and many cursives and Versions; though internal evidence is equally balanced.—To turn from words to things. The language of this whole passage may be considered, with Mr. Simeon, as an outpouring of confident anticipation; for the mystical Rome is not yet destroyed, and the Alleluia is uttered only in prospect of that event.

<sup>7</sup> ἦλθεν ὁ γάμος—ἑαυτήν] A most sublime representation, formed on imagery elsewhere occurring in the New Test. (as 2 Cor. xi. 2, and Eph. v. 22—32), of the spiritual union between Christ and his Church, consisting of his faithful disciples of every age.—For ἀγαλλιώμεθα La. and Tis. read, from MS. A and 4 cursives, ἀγαλλίωμεν, while Sch. and Wordsw. retain ἀγαλλιώμεθα; rightly; since external authority, confirmed by the Sept. in Ps. cxviii. 24, is quite in its favour. And the letters ν and the termination -εθα, written in abbreviation, are very similar; and the latter might easily be taken for the former on account of the χαίρωμεν, and the δῶμεν just before and after.—τὴν δόξαν should be rendered 'the glory and honour' (i.e. that are justly due unto him). For τ. rec. δῶμεν, La. and Tis. read δῶσομεν, from MS. A and 2 cursives. But the authority for this reading is insufficient; and Sch. and Wordsw. retain, as I have done, the τ. rec.

<sup>8</sup> καθαρὸν καὶ λαμπρὸν] Sch. and Wordsw. read λαμπ. καὶ καθ., from very many MSS.; La. and Tis. read λαμπ. καθ., from MS. A and a few cursives. But if any change be called for (which is not the case), the former reading is preferable.—For τὰ δικ. ἱστ. τῶν, La., Tis., and Wordsw. read τὰ δικ. τῶν ἁγ. ἱστ., from MS. A and many cursives, with the Comp. Ed., Andr., and Areth., while Sch. retains, as I have done, the τ. rec.; though I am now inclined to prefer the other reading.—δικαιώματα. Reader: 'justifications,' i.e. justificatory robes. See note on Matt. xvii. 12.

γάμου τοῦ Ἀρνίου κεκλημένοι. καὶ λέγει μοι· Οὗτοι οἱ λόγοι οἱ ἀληθινοὶ εἰσι τοῦ Θεοῦ. <sup>10</sup> <sup>1</sup> Καὶ ἔπεσον ἔμπροσθεν τῶν ποδῶν αὐτοῦ προσκυνῆσαι αὐτῷ καὶ λέγει μοι· Ὅρα μὴ—σύνδουλός σου εἰμὶ, καὶ τῶν ἀδελφῶν σου τῶν ἐχόντων τὴν μαρτυρίαν τοῦ Ἰησοῦ τῷ Θεῷ προσκυνήσου· ἡ γὰρ μαρτυρία τοῦ Ἰησοῦ ἐστὶ τὸ πνεῦμα τῆς προφητείας.

<sup>11</sup> <sup>κ</sup> Καὶ εἶδον τὸν οὐρανὸν ἀνεφγμένον, καὶ ἰδοὺ ἵππος λευκός, καὶ ὁ καθήμενος ἐπ' αὐτὸν καλούμενος Πιστός καὶ Ἀληθινός, καὶ ἐν δικαιοσύνῃ κρίνει καὶ πολεμεῖ. <sup>12</sup> <sup>1</sup> οἱ δὲ ὀφθαλμοὶ αὐτοῦ ὡς φλόξ πυρός, καὶ ἐπὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν αὐτοῦ διαδήματα πολλὰ· ἔχων ὄνομα γεγραμμένον ὃ οὐδεὶς οἶδεν εἰ μὴ αὐτός. <sup>13</sup> <sup>κ</sup> καὶ περιβεβλημένος ἱμάτιον βεβαμμένον αἵματι· καὶ † καλεῖται τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ· Ὁ ΛΟΓΟΣ ΤΟΥ ΘΕΟΥ. <sup>14</sup> <sup>κ</sup> Καὶ τὰ στρατεύματα τὰ ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ ἠκολούθει αὐτῷ ἐφ' ἵπποις λευκοῖς, ἐνδεδυμένοι βύσσινον λευκὸν [καὶ] καθαρὸν. <sup>15</sup> <sup>κ</sup> καὶ ἐκ τοῦ στόματος αὐτοῦ ἐκπορεύεται ῥομφαία ὀξεῖα, ἵνα ἐν αὐτῇ * πατάξῃ τὰ ἔθνη καὶ αὐτὸς ποιμανεῖ αὐτοὺς ἐν ῥάβδῳ σιδηρᾷ· καὶ αὐτὸς πατεῖ τὴν ληνὸν τοῦ οἴνου τοῦ θυμοῦ καὶ τῆς ὀργῆς τοῦ Θεοῦ τοῦ παντοκράτορος. <sup>16</sup> <sup>κ</sup> καὶ ἔχει ἐπὶ τὸ ἱμάτιον καὶ ἐπὶ τὸν μηρὸν αὐτοῦ [τὸ] ὄνομα γεγραμμένον· ΒΑΣΙΛΕΥΣ ΒΑΣΙΛΕΩΝ ΚΑΙ ΚΥΡΙΟΣ ΚΥΡΙΩΝ.

<sup>17</sup> <sup>κ</sup> Καὶ εἶδον ἓνα ἄγγελον ἐστῶτα ἐν τῷ ἡλίῳ· καὶ ἔκραξε

9. MS. A, and a few cursives, prefix οἱ to ἀληθινοί, which is adopted by L<sup>a</sup>, Tis., and Wordsw., but has been rejected by Sch. I am now induced to receive it, considering that internal evidence is in its favour, inasmuch as the Article is required by propriety of language; the sense being, 'these sayings are the true sayings of God.'

10. προσκυνῆσαι αὐτῷ] Intending merely an act of civil honour, or homage. But the angel declined it with humility, and with a wise and prophetic caution. (Abp. Newc.)—ἡ γὰρ μαρτυρία—τῆς προφητείας. The best interpretation I have seen of this variously explained passage is that of J. F. & Stade, given by Wolfius, which supposes the angel to say, 'Do not offer me the worship due to God; I am unworthy of the honour, since I am not superior to yourself, but exercise the same function. We both testify of Christ; you to the present generation, I to posterity. Wherefore, love me as a brother and fellow-labourer, but do not worship me as God.' If this be the meaning of a text which has created much dispute, and nothing, I think, can be more clear and satisfactory, we have here a convertible proposition. 'Ἡ μαρτυρία τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, the office of an Apostle which you fill, says the angel, and τὸ πνεῦμα τῆς προφητείας exercised by me, are not different in value or dignity, but are one and the same thing.' (Bp. Middl.) See note on John xvi. 13, and John v. 39.

11—21. Here our Lord is introduced as enabling his followers to triumph in their last combat with the anti-christian powers, and is described in various characters, which respect both his attributes and his Atonement.

11. καλούμ. Πιστός καὶ Ἀληθ.] I write Πιστός καὶ Ἀλ., since the words are nearly equiv. to proper names, amounting to the same as ὁ πιστός and ὁ ἀληθ. Comp. supr. iii. 14.

12. ἔχων ὄνομα γεγραμμένον] Between ἔχων and ὄνομα Tis. inserts, from the MS. A, and several cursives, ὀνόματα γεγραμμένα καὶ, while Sch., L<sup>a</sup>, and Wordsw. retain the t. rec.; rightly; since the other reading seems to have arisen merely from a blending of two readings, τὸ ὄνομα γεγραμμένον and τὰ ὀνόματα γεγραμμένα, of which the former is far preferable, considering that the singular is much more suitable to the occasion than the plural, it being the intent of the writer to intimate the incomprehensibility of the Logos as God.

13. καλεῖται] L<sup>a</sup>, Tis., and Wordsw. edit. on strong, but scarcely competent authority of MSS., though confirmed by internal evidence, αἰκλήται.

14. The καὶ, which I placed within brackets, is, on good grounds, cancelled by all the recent Editors.

15. Between ῥομφαία and ὀξεῖα, the MS. B, and 36 cursives, with the Vulg. and Syr. Versions, and some Fathers, insert διότομος, which is adopted by Sch. and Wordsw.; but wrongly; since internal evidence is quite against it. The epithet was doubtless introduced from the parallel passages. For t. rec. πατάσσει, Sch., L<sup>a</sup>, and Tis. edit. on competent authority, to which I must now defer, πατάξῃ. The καὶ after θυμοῦ is, on very strong authority, cancelled by the recent Editors.

φωνῇ μεγάλῃ, λέγων πᾶσι τοῖς ὀρνέοις τοῖς πετομένοις ἐν μεσου-ρανήματι· Δεῦτε [καὶ] * συνάχθητε εἰς τὸ δεῖπνον * τὸ μέγα τοῦ Θεοῦ. <sup>18</sup> ἵνα φάγητε σάρκας βασιλέων, καὶ σάρκας χιλιάρχων, καὶ σάρκας ἰσχυρῶν, καὶ σάρκας ἵππων καὶ τῶν καθημένων ἐπ' αὐτῶν, καὶ σάρκας πάντων ἐλευθέρων τι καὶ δούλων, καὶ μικρῶν τε καὶ μεγάλων. <sup>19</sup> Καὶ εἶδον τὸ θηρίον καὶ τοὺς βασιλεῖς τῆς γῆς, καὶ τὰ στρατεύματα αὐτῶν συνηγμένα ποιῆσαι τὸν πόλεμον μετὰ τοῦ καθημένου ἐπὶ τοῦ ἵππου καὶ μετὰ τοῦ στρατεύματος αὐτοῦ. <sup>20</sup> καὶ ἐπιάσθη τὸ θηρίον, καὶ [ὁ] * μετ' αὐτοῦ ὁ ψευδοπροφήτης ὁ ποιήσας τὰ σημεῖα ἐνώπιον αὐτοῦ, ἐν οἷς ἐπλάνησε τοὺς λαβόντας τὸ χάραγμα τοῦ θηρίου, καὶ τοὺς προσκυνούντας τῇ εἰκόνι αὐτοῦ· ζῶντες ἐβλήθησαν οἱ δύο εἰς τὴν λίμνην τοῦ πυρὸς τὴν καιομένην ἐν [τῷ] θείῳ. <sup>21</sup> Καὶ οἱ λοιποὶ ἀπεκτάνθησαν ἐν τῇ ῥομφαίᾳ τοῦ καθημένου ἐπὶ τοῦ ἵππου, τῇ ἐκπορευομένῃ ἐκ τοῦ στόματος αὐτοῦ καὶ πάντα τὰ ὄρνεα ἐχορτάσθησαν ἐκ τῶν σαρκῶν αὐτῶν.

r Deut. 12. 1.
 Dan. 7. 11.
 Matt. 24. 24.
 ch. 12. 18.
 2 Co. & 14. 19.
 3. 10. 14.
 & 20. 10.

a ch. 1. 18.

b 3 Pet. 2. 4.
 ch. 12. 9.
 c ch. 10. 14.
 16.
 & ver. 2. d Dan. 7. 9.
 22. 27.
 Matt. 19. 23.
 Luke 22. 30.
 Rom. 8. 17.
 1 Cor. 6. 2. &
 3 Tim. 2. 12.
 ch. 2. 16.
 & 5. 10.
 & 6. 9. 10.
 11. & 12. 12.
 &c.

XX. <sup>1</sup> * Καὶ εἶδον ἄγγελον καταβαίνοντα ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ἔχοντα τὴν * κλεῖν τῆς ῥάβδου, καὶ ἄλυσιν μεγάλην ἐπὶ τὴν χεῖρα αὐτοῦ. <sup>2</sup> * καὶ ἐκράτησε τὸν δράκοντα, τὸν ὄφιν τὸν ἀρχαῖον, ὃς ἐστὶ Διάβολος καὶ ὁ Σατανᾶς, καὶ ἔδησεν αὐτὸν χίλια ἔτη, <sup>3</sup> * καὶ ἔβαλεν αὐτὸν εἰς τὴν ἄβυσσον, καὶ ἔκλεισεν [αὐτὸν] καὶ ἐσφράγισεν ἐπάνω αὐτοῦ, ἵνα μὴ † πλανᾷ † τὰ ἔθνη ἔτι ἄχρι τελεσθῇ τὰ χίλια ἔτη [καὶ] μετὰ ταῦτα δεῖ αὐτὸν λυθῆναι μικρὸν χρόνον. <sup>4</sup> * Καὶ εἶδον θρόνους, καὶ ἐκάθισαν ἐπ' αὐ-

16. The τὸ before ὄνομα is of little authority, and has been with reason cancelled by the recent Editors.

17, 18. By the image of a supper, and eating, &c., is represented a great slaughter of, and a complete victory over, his enemies; and in vv. 19—21, the nature of that victory, together with the advantages resulting from it. See Heintz.

18. I have, with all the recent Editors, inserted τὴν on very strong authority, confirmed by internal evidence.

20. ἐπιάσθη] 'was apprehended and captured.' As regards μετ' αὐτοῦ for t. rec. μετὰ τούτου, it is adopted, on very strong grounds, by all the recent Editors. Just after Wordsw. well renders, 'his false prophet,—he who wrought the miracles before his face.'

XX. 1—3. In the foregoing Chapter the termination of all open opposition to the Gospel, and the dreadful punishment of all those who had introduced, supported, or concurred in the idolatrous corruptions before described, are most clearly predicted. But while the instruments of mischief had been cut off, the great agent was still at liberty; and he would surely excite fresh disturbances, or produce new delusions, if not prevented. The Apostle had, therefore, a vision emblematical of the restraints which would be laid on Satan himself. (Thos. Scott.)

1. For t. rec. κλεῖδα the recent Editors all read κλεῖν, from almost all the best MSS. (to which I add Mus. 1, 2, 3).—ἐπὶ τὴν χεῖρα is put for ἐν τῇ χεῖρι, a very unusual idiom. For t. rec. τὸν ὄφιν τὸν ἀρχαῖον, Tis. edits ὁ ὄφιν ὁ ἀρχαῖος, from one MS. (A); an authority, however, too slender to justify the introducing of a mere barbarism.

3. The αὐτόν, which I bracketed, has been cancelled, on strong authority (which I could confirm), by all the recent Editors. At καὶ ἐσφρ., the ἐσφρ. stands for ἐπισφρ., which seems to have had place in the archetype of MS. 40 (for ἐπισφράγισεν must have been a blunder of the scribe for ἐπισφρ.). but by gloss. The sense is: 'put a seal upon!' For πλανῶν, all the recent Editors read, on very strong grounds (which I can confirm from Mus. 1, 2, 3), πλανῶν, an Alexandrian form. And the sense of ἵνα μὴ πλανᾷ is, as Dr. Wordsw. well points out, 'in order that he may not deceive [not, should not deceive, as μὴ πλανῶν would mean];' and this rendering is confirmed by the Vulg. and Peach. Syr. Versions. For t. rec. τὰ ἔθνη ἔτι, all the recent Editors read ἐν τὰ ἔθνη, and cancel the καὶ before μετὰ. I see no cause for the last change, nor sufficient for the first.

4. εἶδον—τὰς ψυχὰς] 'The vision here is not of bodies, but of souls, as in ch. v. 9, where the souls are represented as crying out to a loud voice. The orig. Greek has there εἶδον τὰς ψυχὰς τῶν ἐσφαγμένων . . . καὶ ἐκράζον.'

ταῖς, καὶ κρίμα ἐδόθη αὐτοῖς· καὶ τὰς ψυχὰς τῶν πεπελεκισμένων διὰ τὴν μαρτυρίαν Ἰησοῦ καὶ διὰ τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ οἵτινες οὐ προσεκύνησαν † τῷ θηρίῳ * οὐδὲ τῇ εἰκόνι αὐτοῦ, καὶ οὐκ ἔλαβον τὸ χάραγμα ἐπὶ τὸ μέτωπον [αὐτῶν] καὶ ἐπὶ τὴν χεῖρα αὐτῶν. καὶ ἔζησαν καὶ ἐβασίλευσαν μετὰ Χριστοῦ χίλια ἔτη. <sup>5</sup> * Οἱ λοιποὶ τῶν νεκρῶν οὐκ [ἀν]έζησαν * ἄχρι τελεσθῇ τὰ χίλια ἔτη. Αὕτη ἡ ἀνάστασις ἡ πρώτη. <sup>6</sup> * Μακάριος καὶ ἅγιος ὁ ἔχων μέρος ἐν τῇ ἀναστάσει τῇ πρώτῃ ἐπὶ τούτων ὁ θάνατος ὁ δεύτερος οὐκ ἔχει ἐξουσίαν ἀλλ' ἔσονται ἱερεῖς τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ τοῦ Χριστοῦ, καὶ βασιλεύσουσι μετ' αὐτοῦ χίλια ἔτη.

o Ism. 61. 6.
1 Pet. 2. 9.
ch. 1. 6.
2. 11.
2. 10.

<sup>7</sup> Καὶ ὅταν τελεσθῇ τὰ χίλια ἔτη, λυθήσεται ὁ Σατανᾶς ἐκ τῆς φυλακῆς αὐτοῦ, <sup>8</sup> καὶ ἐξελεύσεται πλανῆσαι τὰ ἔθνη τὰ ἐν ταῖς τέσσαρσι γωνίαις τῆς γῆς, τὸν Γόγγ καὶ τὸν Μαγῶγ, συναγαγεῖν αὐτοὺς εἰς τὸν πόλεμον, ὃν ὁ ἀριθμὸς αὐτῶν ὡς ἡ ἄμμος τῆς θαλάσσης. <sup>9</sup> Καὶ ἀνέβησαν ἐπὶ τὸ πλάτος τῆς γῆς, καὶ † ἐκύκλωσαν τὴν παρεμβολὴν τῶν ἁγίων καὶ τὴν πόλιν τὴν

Isak. 22. 2.
3. 10. 1.
ch. 18. 14.

The expression here is very similar: εἶδον—τὰς ψυχὰς τῶν πεπελεκισμένων—καὶ ἔζησαν. . . . The spiritual sense of the former passage confirms the spiritual sense of the latter. (Wordsw.) —τῷ θηρίῳ. The recent Editors all read, from most of the best MSS., τῷ θηρίῳ, as also just after τὴν εἰκόνα for τῇ εἰκόνι, prob. but not certainly the true readings. At καὶ τὰς ψυχὰς repeat εἶδον.—Καὶ οἵτινες οὐ προσεκύ. The words are well rendered by Prof. Scholef., 'and whosoever worshipped not.'

5. The reading here is disputed. The t. rec. οἱ δὲ λοιπ. is found in nearly all the cursives; but of the uncials, B (and Mus. 1, 2) has καὶ οἱ, which is adopted by Matth. and Wordsw.; while Gr. and Sch. retain the t. rec., as I have heretofore done. But an obvious Critical reason now inclines me to adopt, with La. and Tis., the reading of A.—To advert to other matters of Critical discussion as to reading. For νεκρῶν, MS. B, and 2 cursives, have ἀνθρώπων, which Dr. Wordsw. thinks is deserving of remark,—but only, I apprehend, on the ground that it presents an instance of a marginal solutum having in the earliest ages expelled the textual reading, νεκρῶν, of which ἀνθρώπων is only a filling up of the construction by some grammarian. Further on, the t. rec. ἀνέζησαν has, on strong grounds of external authority, confirmed by internal evidence, been changed to ἔζησαν by all the recent Editors. The other probably arose from a marginal gloss, the sense being lived, for came to life. The reading ἔχει for ἰσχυρ., which I have adopted, with all the recent Editors, rests on the strongest evidence. The other was prob., as on several occasions, no more than a marginal gloss.

6. ὁ ἔχων μέρος (for μερίδα) 'who is a partaker,' 'has a share in.' Comp. Dan. xii. 13, 'and thou shalt stand upon,' 'occupy thy lot' (Sept. κληρόν σου), 'the portion allotted to thee at the end of days,' i.e. 'thou shalt be a partaker thereof.' Comp. Acts xxvi. 18, τοῦ λαβεῖν—κληρὸν ἐν τοῖς ἁγιασμένοις, i.e. τὴν μερίδα τοῦ κλήρου τῶν ἁγίων, with Col. i. 12, 'at the end of days,' i.e. 'of all things connected with the Messianic Dispensation.' See Ezek. xvi. 53.—ὁ θάνατος ὁ δεύτ. All the recent Editors read, from A, B, and most of the cursive MSS., ὁ δεύτερος θάνατος, but that is at variance with their decision at ver. 14, and infra xxi. 9. For βασιλεύσουσι, MS. A has βασιλεύουσι, which is edited by Wordsw., who thinks that it is thus intimated that the millennial period had begun in St. John's age. But the evidence of one incorrect MS. is insufficient ground on which to rest so important a sense. I doubt not that it was one of the very numerous mistakes committed by the writer of that MS.; and the error might the more easily arise in this instance, considering that the terminations -σουσι and -ουσι are continually confounded by the scribes.

8. τὸν Γόγγ καὶ τὸν Μαγῶγ. An allusion, it is supposed, to Ezek. xxxviii. and xxxix. What nations are here meant, Expositors are wholly unable to ascertain. It is, however, prob. that no particular nations are meant; but that these are only names designating certain classes of men, inimical to the Gospel.—τὸν before πόλεμον is, on the strongest grounds, received by all the Editors, from Matth. and Gr. down to Tis. The reference, though latent, is traceable, namely, 'the war which had been stirred up by the artful deceit of Satan between Gog and Magog.' The αὐτῶν, just after, is admitted, on competent grounds, by all the recent Editors.

9. καὶ ἀνέβησαν ἐπὶ τ. πλ. τ. γ. Aorist for Fut. prophetic, the thing being viewed in the mind of the Prophet as if past. By τὸ πλάτος is meant, as in Hab. i. 6, and Isa. viii. 8, 'the breadth,' 'wide expanse,' of an extensive region, similar to the vast table-lands and steppes of Central Asia, the Scythia of the ancients.—ἐκύκλωσαν. La., Tis., and Wordsw. edit ἐκύκλευσαν, from MSS. A, B, and 20 cursives (to which I add Mus. 1). But Sch., Matth., and Gr. retain the t. rec., with reason, for the other g Dan. 7. 11. ἡγαπημένην * καὶ κατέβη πῦρ ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ [ἀπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ] ch. 19. 20. καὶ κατέφαγεν αὐτούς. <sup>10</sup> καὶ ὁ Διάβολος ὁ πλανῶν αὐτούς & 14. 10. 11. ἐβλήθη εἰς τὴν λίμνην τοῦ πυρός καὶ θείον, ὅπου καὶ τὸ θηρίον καὶ ὁ ψευδοπροφήτης, καὶ βασανισθήσονται ἡμέρας καὶ νυκτὸς εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας τῶν αἰώνων.

h 3 Pat. 8. 10. <sup>11</sup> Καὶ εἶδον θρόνον * μέγαν λευκόν, καὶ τὸν καθήμενον ἐπ' † αὐτοῦ οὐ ἀπὸ προσώπου ἐφυγεν ἡ γῆ καὶ ὁ οὐρανός, καὶ τύπος οὐχ εὗρέθη αὐτοῖς. <sup>12</sup> καὶ εἶδον τοὺς νεκρούς, μικροὺς καὶ μεγάλους, ἐστῶτας ἐνώπιον τοῦ * θρόνου, καὶ βιβλία * ἠνοιχθησαν καὶ * βιβλίον ἄλλο * ἠνοιχθή, ὃ ἐστὶ τῆς ζωῆς καὶ ἐκρί-θησαν οἱ νεκροὶ ἐκ τῶν γεγραμμένων ἐν τοῖς βιβλίοις, κατὰ τὰ ἔργα αὐτῶν. <sup>13</sup> Καὶ ἔδωκεν ἡ θάλασσα τοὺς † ἐν αὐτῇ νεκρούς, καὶ ὁ Θάνατος καὶ ὁ * Αἰδὼς ἔδωκαν τοὺς † νεκρούς τοὺς ἐν αὐτοῖς καὶ ἐκρίθησαν ἕκαστος κατὰ τὰ ἔργα αὐτῶν. <sup>14</sup> καὶ ὁ Θάνατος καὶ ὁ * Αἰδὼς ἐβλήθησαν εἰς τὴν λίμνην τοῦ πυρός οὗτος † ὁ δεύτερος θάνατός ἐστι, ἡ λίμνη τοῦ πυρός. <sup>15</sup> Καὶ εἴ τις οὐχ εὗρέθη ἐν τῇ βίβλῳ τῆς ζωῆς γεγραμμένος, ἐβλήθη εἰς τὴν λίμνην τοῦ πυρός.

seems only to have arisen from an error on the part of the scribes. The verb κατέβη is indeed of very doubtful authority. The words ἀπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ are, on good grounds, cancelled by all the recent Editors. They are retained by Sch., Tia. Ed. 1, and Wordsw., but placed after ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, which I prefer. Yet the state of the evidence is such as to discountenance them altogether; and they have been cancelled by Tia. in his 2nd Ed., for though the authority is but slender—A and 3 or 4 cursives (to which I add Mus. 2).—yet it is confirmed by internal evidence. They were prob. introduced here from xxi. 2, καταβαίνουσας ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ἀπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ.

10. The καὶ has been, on very strong authority (to which I add Mus. 1, 2, 3), inserted by the recent Editors. The same applies to the change of position at v. 11; but not to the αὐτῶν, for αὐτοῦ, edited by Gr., Matth., Sch., Tia., and Wordsw., though confirmed by Mus. 1, 2. Considering the perpetual confusion of εἰς ἀδριπτορ, by the scribes, external authority has not its usual force; and internal evidence draws two ways; and hence La., with unusual prudence, retains the τ. rec.

12. μικροὺς καὶ μεγ. [La., Tia., and Wordsw. read, from A, and 15 cursives, τοὺς μεγ. καὶ τοὺς μικ., while Sch. retains the τ. rec.; perhaps rightly; for the latter reading seems to have arisen from grammatical emendation.—θρόνον, for Θεοῦ, has been, on strong authority (to which I add Mus. 1, 2, 3), received by all the recent Editors; rightly; since Θεοῦ prob. came from a marginal scholium.—At the words εἶδον—ἰστώτας δ. τ. θρ. there is something quite graphic, which is further developed at the dread announcement in the words following, καὶ βιβλία ἠνοιχθήσαν (intimating in the presence of the assembled multitude),—as Wesley says, a strong term, for 'How many hidden things will then come to light! How many will have quite another appearance than they had before in the sight of men! It is not said (he adds) "the books will be read;" no! the light of that day will suffice to make them visible to all. Then will be the first time, full and impartial Universal History.—βιβλίον ἄλλο—[ὡς, 'another book,' wherein are enrolled all that are accepted through the Beloved; all who lived and died in the "faith that worketh by love." To advert to matters of reading. I have, with all the recent Editors, adopted, on strong authority, confirmed by all the Mus. copies βιβ. ἄλλ. for ἄλλ. βιβ. On the same grounds I have adopted the Alexandr. form ἠνοιχθ. for ἠνοιχθ.

13. ἐν αὐτῇ νεκ. [Sch., La., and Tia. edit, on strong authority, νεκροὺς ἐν αὐτῇ. So also just after for ἐν αὐτοῖς νεκροῦς, they read νεκ. ἐν αὐτοῖς. But this is no case for change, espec. considering that internal evidence is equally balanced.—The reading αὐτοῦ, for αὐτῶν, found in B and 13 cursives (I add Mus. 2, 3), arose from critical alteration.

14. ὁ Θάνατος καὶ ὁ * Αἰδὼς. Render: 'Death and hades; in other words, 'the death which consists in the separation of the soul from the body, and the state of souls intervening between death and judgment, shall be no more.' To the wicked these shall be succeeded by a more terrible death, the second death, the damnation of Gehenna, hell, properly so called. Indeed, in this sacred Book, the commencement, as well as the destruction, of this intermediate state, are so clearly marked, as to render it almost impossible to mistake them. In vi. 8, we learn that Hades follows close at the heels of death; and from this passage that both are involved in one common ruin at the universal judgment. (Campb.)—οὗτος ὁ δεύ. θάνατός ἐστι. The recent Editors all read, on strong but scarcely competent authority, οὗτος ὁ θάνατος ὁ δεύ. ἐστι. See supr. v. 6, and note; and see infr. xxi. 9. The words ἡ λίμνη τοῦ πυρός are, on strong authority, subjoined by the recent Editors. But since internal evidence is adverse to their

XXI. <sup>1</sup> *Καὶ εἶδον οὐρανὸν καινὸν καὶ γῆν καινὴν ὁ γὰρ πρῶτος οὐρανὸς καὶ ἡ πρώτη γῆ † παρῆλθε, καὶ ἡ θάλασσα οὐκ ἔστιν ἔτι. <sup>2</sup> *Καὶ [ἐγὼ Ἰωάννης] εἶδον τὴν πόλιν τὴν ἁγίαν, Ἱερουσαλὴμ καινὴν, καταβαίνουσαν *ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ἀπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἡτοιμασμένην ὡς νύμφην κεκοσμημένην τῷ ἀνδρὶ αὐτῆς· <sup>3</sup> *καὶ ἤκουσα φωνῆς μεγάλης ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, λεγούσης· Ἰδοὺ, ἡ σκηνὴ τοῦ Θεοῦ μετὰ τῶν ἀνθρώπων, καὶ σκηνώσκει μετ' αὐτῶν καὶ αὐτοὶ *λαὸς αὐτοῦ ἔσονται, καὶ αὐ-τὸς ὁ Θεὸς † ἔσται μετ' αὐτῶν Θεὸς αὐτῶν <sup>4</sup> *καὶ ἐξ-αλείψει [ὁ Θεὸς] πᾶν δάκρυον ἀπὸ τῶν ὀφθαλμῶν αὐτῶν καὶ ὁ θάνατος οὐκ ἔσται ἔτι, οὔτε πένθος οὔτε κραυγὴ οὔτε πόνος οὐκ ἔσται ἔτι, ὅτι τὰ πρῶτα † ἀπῆλθον. <sup>5</sup> *Καὶ εἶπεν ὁ καθήμενος ἐπὶ † τοῦ θρόνου Ἰδοὺ, *καὶ αὖ ποιῶ πάντα. Καὶ authenticity, I have adopted them, but in smaller characters, and within brackets.

XXI. In this and the following Chapter is described in glowing imagery (formed on that of the Prophets of the Old Test.) the bliss of the righteous in heaven, after the resurrection and judgment; unless, with some Expositors (espec. those who maintain a literal resurrection at the beginning of the Millennium, and the personal reign of Christ on earth for a thousand years), we understand these concluding Chapters of the state of the Church during the MILLENNIUM. The best Expositors, however, are, in general, agreed that the only passage of Scripture which speaks of this Millennium (namely, xx. 4—6) is to be taken in a figurative acceptance; and, consequently, the present Chapters are to be understood of time subsequent to the general judgment. This has been proved by several Interpreters, but by no one more ably than by Thos. Scott. Thus, as Abp. Newc. observes, 'the new heaven and earth, and the new Jerusalem, are emblematical of the glory and happiness which will be the reward and happiness of good men for ever.' —καὶ σὺν, a phrase of introduction, as supr. xix. 11, bringing forward several representations in the order in which they followed each other, and introducing a vision reaching even unto eternity.

1. παρῆλθ[η] Sch., Ia., and Wordsw. edit, on strong external authority, ἀπῆλθον, while Tia. edita. from MS. A. ἀπῆλθου, which has internal evidence in its favour, as far as regards the form, but not the use of the Plural, where one should expect the Sing. That St. John used the Sing. I do not doubt. But whether he wrote παρ. or ἀπ., I would not pronounce for certain. The more ancient authority goes for ἀπῆλ. but internal evidence is rather in favour of παρ., which oft. occ. in the Gospels; also in 2 Cor. v. 17. James i. 10. 2 Pet. iii. 10, and in the Sept.; and ἀπῆλ. may have been brought in here to match the ἀπῆλ. at v. 4; though the Apostle prob. intended the stronger term (comp. ἰφθυγ, xvi. 20) to come in at the latter v.; not to say that παρ. is the more suitable term at v. 1. The Plur. reading may, however, have arisen from the scribes mistaking παρῆλθου (undoubtedly the ancient orthography) for -ou or -av.—Kai ἡ θάλ. οὐκ ἔστιν ἔτι. Render: 'and the sea is no longer in being;' narrative Pres. for Past tense. Comp. sup. x. 6, χρόνος οὐκ ἔτι ἔσται, or, as in the best MSS., οὐκέτι ἔσται.

2. The words ἰσὺν 'Iwáv. are, with reason, cancelled by all the recent Editors.—ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανῶν ἀπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ. So, for t. rec. ἀπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐκ τοῦ οὐρ., all the recent Editors read, on the strongest evidence, (which I could confirm). Comp. sup. xx. 9. and see note there.

3. αὐρανοῦ] MS. A and one cursive, with the Vulg., Iren., Ambr., and August., have θεοῦ, which is edited by La. and Tis. (2nd ed.); while Matth., Gr. Sch., and Wordsw. retain αὐρανοῦ; with good reason; since external authority for the other is insufficient, and internal evidence is against it, from its having every appearance of being an alteration suggested by some other passages of this Book, in which the voice is said to come from the throne of God. Moreover, thus δὲ, not καὶ, would be required. The words following, δοξ., ἡ σκηνή—Θεοῦ, are formed on Ezek. xxvii. 26, 27. For t. roc. λαοί, the reading λαοὶ is, on strong grounds (B and 30 cursives, with Mss. 1, 2, 3), adopted by Sch., La., Tis., and Wordsw.—For ἵσταται μετ' αὐτῶν, Sch., La., and Tis. read, on considerable, but not competent, authority, μετ' αὐτῶν ἵσταται.

4. Comp. supr. vii. 17, which passage, like the present, is formed on Isa. xxv. 8; and with both we may comp. 1 Cor. xv. 26.—The words  $\delta$   $\Theta$   $\delta$   $\epsilon$   $\varsigma$  are, on strong external evidence—B and 30 cursives—cancelled by Sch. and Tia; while they are retained by Wordsw. quite justifiably, since external and internal evidence are equally divided; so that the reading is an open question.—For  $\alpha\eta\lambda\theta\omicron\nu$ , MS. B and 15 cursives have  $\alpha\eta\lambda\theta\alpha\nu$ , which is edited by Wordsw.; while T. edits  $\alpha\eta\lambda\theta\alpha\nu$ , from one MS. (A), but Scholz retains the t. rec., which I still continue to do, though, if any change were made, I should prefer  $\alpha\eta\lambda\theta\alpha\nu$ .  $\Delta\eta\lambda\theta\alpha\nu$  is in opposition to internal evidence, being prob. a critical correction.—By  $\tau\acute{\alpha}$   $\pi\rho\omega\tau\acute{\alpha}$  is meant, 'the first or former state.' See Matt. xii. 45, and 2 Pet. ii. 20.

δ. ὁ καθημέριος ἐπὶ τοῦ θρόνου] meaning, f Isa. 12. 3.

 & 41. 4.
 & 44. 6.
 & 55. 1.
 John 4. 10,
 14. & 7. 37.
 ch. 1. 8.
 & 16. 17.
 & 22. 13, 17.
 & Zech. 8. 8.
 Heb. 8. 10.
 1 Cor. 6. 9.
 Gal. 5. 21.
 Eph. 5. 5.
 1 Tim. 1. 9.
 Heb. 12. 14.
 ch. 20. 14, 15.
 & 22. 15.

1 ch. 15. 1, 6,
7. & 19. 7.

λέγει [μοι] Γράψον, ὅτι οὗτοι οἱ λόγοι *πιστοὶ καὶ ἀληθινοὶ εἰσι.
<sup>6</sup> καὶ εἶπέ μοι, † Γέγονε ἐγὼ εἰμι τὸ Α καὶ τὸ Ω, ἡ ἀρχὴ καὶ τὸ τέλος. ἐγὼ τῷ διψῶντι δώσω αὐτῷ ἐκ τῆς πηγῆς τοῦ ὕδατος τῆς ζωῆς δωρεάν. <sup>7</sup> ὁ νικῶν κληρονομήσει * ταῦτα καὶ ἔσομαι αὐτῷ Θεός, καὶ αὐτὸς ἔσται μοι [ὁ] υἱός. <sup>8</sup> * τοῖς δὲ δειλοῖς καὶ ἀπίστοις, καὶ ἁμαρτωλοῖς καὶ ἐβδελυγμένοις, καὶ φονεῦσι καὶ πόρνοις, καὶ * φαρμακοῖς καὶ εἰδωολάτραις, καὶ πᾶσι τοῖς ψευδέσι, τὸ μέρος αὐτῶν ἐν τῇ λίμνῃ τῇ καυομένῃ πυρὶ καὶ θείῳ, ὃ ἐστὶ * ὁ θάνατος ὁ δεύτερος.

<sup>91</sup> Καὶ ἦλθεν πρὸς με εἰς τῶν ἑπτὰ ἀγγέλων τῶν ἔχοντων τὰς ἑπτὰ φιάλας [τὰς] γεμούσας τῶν ἑπτὰ πληγῶν τῶν ἐσχάτων, καὶ ἐλάλησε μετ' ἐμοῦ, λέγων· Δεῦρο, δεῖξαι σοὶ τὴν νύμφην, either the FATHER, or his great Representative.—ἰδοὺ, καὶ αὐτὸς πάντα. See note on Matt. xvii. 11.—To advert to a matter of disputed reading. For τοῦ θρόνου, all the recent Editors read τῷ θρόνῳ, from very strong authority.—I have, in deference to all the recent Editors, adopted κ. τοῖς πάντα, from A and several ancient cursives; the reading πάντα καὶ αὐτὸς is, perhaps, more likely to be genuine, being founded on stronger authority, since it is found in B and very many cursives, to which I add Mus. 1, 2, 3, and Cov. 2, omitted by Mill. The change in position at the end of the verse is adopted by all the recent Editors, on the strongest authority.—The μοι is, on strong, but not paramount evidence, cancelled by La., Tis., and Wordsw.—For ἀληθ. καὶ πιστοί, all the recent Editors read, on considerable external authority, πιστοὶ καὶ ἀληθ. But internal evidence, and the parallel passages, are rather in favour of the ordinary position.

6. Comp. Chaps. i. and ii.—γίγναι. Equiv. to παραίσταναι, 'all things are brought to a consummation.'—γίγναι. Τία and Wordsw. edit γίγναι (an Alexandrian form for γίγναι), meaning, all those things that the Prophets have spoken. But the authority for this reading is insufficient, being only that of MS. A and one cursive. Perhaps the true reading is γίγναι, found in two copies, which might be easily mistaken by the scribe for γίγναι.—ἡς πηγῆς τοῦ ὕδατος,—a forcible and most appropriate figure,—a perennial spring of running water being a striking emblem of everlasting felicity. Comp. John vii. 39, and note.—Εγὼ—δίδωμι. The Εγὼ is very emphatic; q. d. 'It is I who will give to every one who thirsteth.'

7. ταῦτα] This reading, for πάντα, is, on good grounds, adopted by all the recent Editors.

8. ποῖς δὲ δειλοῖς καὶ ἀν.] With this comp. a similar passage at xxii. 15. By δειλὸς καὶ ἀπιστ. are denoted those who, from a base fear, want of faith to overcome, fall away from the Faith in time of persecution. St. John seems to have had in mind such passages of the O. T. as Judg. vii. 3, τίς οὐ φοβούμενος καὶ δειλός; and Deut. x. 8, τίς οὐ ἀνθρ. οὐ φοβούμενος καὶ δειλὸς τῇ καρδίᾳ; The words καὶ ἀπιστ., found in B and 30 cursives (with Mus. l. 2, 3), and adopted by Matth., Gr. and Sch., seem, Heintz. suspects, to have been ejected from the text by some over-nice Critic, who liked not, in a portion containing an enumeration of special and particular vices, to find a generic term denoting vices and sins of all kinds. Yet exx. of this sort of peculiarity do occasionally present themselves in the N. T., e. gr. in 1 Tim. i. 9. Heb. xi. 37; though the words might even be lost by reason of the kai—καί. If adopted as genuine, the words καὶ ἁμαρτ. καὶ ἁβήδ. may be taken, per hendiadys, to denote 'sinners of the worst kind, even abominable ones;' and so this may be regarded as a generic expression, followed up by some special ones introduced by way of exemplification, as is often the case in passages of this kind. Moreover, as here φονεῖς is followed by πόρνοι, so in a similar enumeration at 1 Tim. i. 9, the terms ἀντροδόφονοι and πόρνοι are placed in juxtaposition, as also in Rev. xxii. 15, καὶ οἱ πόρνοι καὶ οἱ φονεῖς. The terms φαρμακ. and εἰδωλολ. are here combined, as in a similar enumeration at Gal. v. 20, we have εἰδωλολατρεία and φαρμακεία conjoined, and coming immediately after sins of uncleanness as here after πόρνοι. And the force of the two terms, φαρμ. and εἰδ., here, is precisely the same as in the above passage, where see note. In πᾶσι—ψυῖδι we have a very strong expression, which is not well rendered 'by all liars;' nor is it quite equiv. to ψεύσταις at 1 Tim. i. 9. The word here must have the same sense as the one employed in the parallel passages at xxi. 27, τοῖν ψεύδοις, and xxii. 15, οὓ φιλῶν καὶ ποιῶν ψεύδος, and in each passage seems meant to be conveyed a designation of idolatry. On carefully reconsidering this puzzling Critical question, I am inclined to more than doubt the genuineness of the words. They seem very much like a marginal scholiasm, such as φαρμακικοῖς in the t. rec. just after, for φαρμακοῖς, which latter I have received, with all the recent Editors, on the strongest authority.—ὁ θάνατος ὁ δεινός. So all the recent Editors, from the best MSS., for t. rec. δεινός θάν.

9. The words πρὸς μὲ are, on the strongest grounds, cancelled by all the recent Editors.—τὴν νόμφην, τοῦ Ἀποστόλου τὴν γυναῖκα. Here there exist not a few varieties of readings, and accordingly the texts of the different Editors are diverse. Sch. and myself retain the t. rec., while La. and Wordsw. read τὴν νόμφην τὴν γυν. τοῦ Ἀποστόλου, and Tis. τὴν γυν. τὴν νόμφ. τ. Ἀ. The

† τοῦ Ἀρνίου τὴν γυναῖκα. <sup>10</sup> <sup>k</sup> καὶ ἀπήνεγκέ με ἐν πνεύματι ἐπὶ <sup>k Gal. 4. 28.</sup>
 ὄρος μέγα καὶ ὑψηλὸν, καὶ ἔδειξέ μοι τὴν πόλιν [τὴν μεγάλην] <sup>Heb. 12. 22.</sup> τὴν ἁγίαν Ἱερουσαλὴμ, καταβαίνουσιν * ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ἀπὸ <sup>ch. 1. 10.</sup> τοῦ Θεοῦ, <sup>11</sup> ἔχουσιν τὴν δόξαν τοῦ Θεοῦ. [καὶ] ὁ φωστὴρ <sup>2. 12.</sup> αὐτῆς ὅμοιος λίθῳ τιμιωτάτῳ, ὡς λίθῳ ἰάσπιδι κρυσταλλίζοντι <sup>21. 2.</sup> <sup>12</sup> * ἔχουσα [τε] τεῖχος μέγα καὶ ὑψηλὸν, ἔχουσιν πυλῶνας <sup>1 Ezech. 48.</sup> δώδεκα, καὶ ἐπὶ τοῖς πυλῶσιν ἀγγέλους δώδεκα, καὶ ὀνόματα <sup>81.</sup> ἐπιγεγραμμένα, ἃ ἐστὶ τῶν δώδεκα φυλῶν [τῶν] υἱῶν Ἰσραὴλ.
<sup>13</sup> ἀπὸ * ἀνατολῶν πυλῶνες τρεῖς, καὶ ἀπὸ βορρᾶ πυλῶνες τρεῖς, καὶ ἀπὸ νότου πυλῶνες τρεῖς, καὶ ἀπὸ δυσμῶν πυλῶνες τρεῖς.
<sup>14</sup> <sup>m</sup> καὶ τὸ τεῖχος τῆς πόλεως ἔχον θεμελίους δώδεκα, καὶ * ἐπ' <sup>m Matt. 16.</sup> αὐτῶν δώδεκα ὀνόματα τῶν δώδεκα ἀποστόλων τοῦ Ἀρνίου. <sup>15.</sup> <sup>15</sup> <sup>n</sup> Καὶ ὁ λαὸς μετ' ἐμοῦ εἶχε [μέτρον] κάλαμον χρυσοῦν, ἵνα <sup>Eph. 2. 10.</sup> μετρήσῃ τὴν πόλιν, καὶ τοὺς πυλῶνας αὐτῆς, καὶ τὸ τεῖχος <sup>n Ezech. 40. 2.</sup> αὐτῆς. <sup>16</sup> <sup>o</sup> καὶ ἡ πόλις τετράγωνος κεῖται, καὶ τὸ μήκος αὐτῆς <sup>Zech. 2. 1.</sup> [τοσοῦτόν ἐστιν] ὅσον καὶ τὸ πλάτος· καὶ ἐμέτρησε τὴν πόλιν <sup>o Eph. 3. 18.</sup> τῷ καλᾷ ἐπὶ σταδίῳ δώδεκα χιλιάδων τὸ μήκος καὶ τὸ πλάτος καὶ τὸ ὕψος αὐτῆς ἰσά ἐστι. <sup>17</sup> καὶ ἐμέτρησε τὸ τεῖχος αὐτῆς ἑκατὸν τεσσαρακοντατεσσάρων πηχῶν, μέτρον ἀνθρώπου, reading of La. rests on very slender authority, and is opposed by internal evidence, which is quite in favour of the t. rec. The reading τὴν γυν. τὴν νύμφ. τ. 'A. rests on considerable authority—(B and 25 cursives, with Mus. 1, 2, 3), but evidently arose from alteration on the part of certain Critics, who stumbled at the peculiar sense here of νύμφη. Had St. John placed γυναῖκα first, he would surely not have subjoined νύμφη; but, supposing him to have placed νύμφη first, he would be likely so to do for perspicuity's sake.

10. ἀπήνεγκέ με ἐν πνεύματι.] The same words occur supr. xvii. 3, where see note. The words τὴν μεγάλην are on strong grounds cancelled by all the recent Editors.

11. τὴν δόξαν τοῦ Θεοῦ] meaning, 'the Shechinah.' On the description which follows, see Bp. Newton, Dean Woodh., and Bp. Lowth on Isa. liv. 11.—The καὶ, which I have bracketed, has been cancelled by all the recent Editors, from A, B, and 30 cursives, to which I add Mus. 1, 2, 3, and Cov. 2, passed over by Mill.

12. For ἔχουσα τε all the recent Editors read, on strong authority (to which I have now deferred), ἔχουσα. After ἃ ἐστὶ some ancient MSS. subjoin τὰ ὀνόματα, others ὀνόματα. The former reading is adopted by La. and Wordsw.; the latter, by Tia. I should give the preference to the former, did I not suspect that it came from a marginal scholium. The τῶν before υἱῶν is absent from A, B, and 20 cursives (I add Mus. 1, 2, 3, and Cov. 2), and is cancelled by La., Tia., and Wordsw.; and internal evidence is against it.

13. For ἀνατολῆς all the recent Editors read, on strong grounds (which I can confirm from Mus. 1, 2, 3, and Cov. 2), ἀνατολῆς. They also, on competent authority, prefix καὶ before ἀπὸ βορρᾶ, and ἀπὸ νότον and ἀπὸ δυσμῶν.

These readings I have now, though with some hesitation, adopted.

14. θεμελίους] meaning foundation courses of stone-work. Comp. Aristoph. Av. 1136, θεμελίοι λίθοι. So Hódot., describing the mode of building the walls of Babylon, i. 179, says: οὐρύσσονται—διὰ τριήκοντα δόμων πλίνθων—ἰδαιμαν πρώτα μὲν τῆς τάφρου τὰ χεῖλα, δεύτερα δὲ αὐτὸ τὸ τεῖχος. In the present passage, for ἐν αὐτοῖς, the recent Editors are agreed in reading, on strong authority, to which I have deferred, ἐν αὐτῶν. Yet I suspect that St. John wrote ἐν αὐτοῖς, in which we may recognize an allusion to the custom of inscribing characters on bricks, while yet in a raw state, by stamps. The recent Editors prefix δώδεκα to ὀνόματα on very strong external authority (to which I add Mus. 1, 2, 3), confirmed by internal evidence; so that I have now thought fit to adopt it.

15. εἶχε μέτρον] The second word has been adopted by all the recent Editors, on very considerable external authority, unsupported, however, by internal evidence, which is rather against the word. The doubt I have intimated.

16. I have now double-bracketed τοσ.—ἐστι, which have been on strong grounds (which I can confirm from Mus. 1, 2, 3) cancelled by the recent Editors.

17. μέτρον—ἐστιν ἀγγέλου] Render: 'the measure of a man, that is, of an angel;' meaning, however, not any angel, but the angel before mentioned; though ἀνθρώπου is said because, as Wesley observes, St. John saw the measuring angel in a human shape. 'The reed therefore (continues he) was as great as was the stature of that human form in which the angel appeared.'—ἐμέτρησε is absent from B, and 22 cursives (to which I add Mus. 1, 2, 3), and has been cancelled εἰ μὴ οἱ γεγραμμένοι ἐν τῷ βιβλίῳ τῆς ζωῆς τοῦ Ἀρνίου.

XXII. 1<sup>a</sup> Καὶ ἔδειξέ μοι [καθαρόν] ποταμὸν ὕδατος ζωῆς, <sup>a</sup> Ezech. 47. 1
λαμπρόν ὡς κρύσταλλον, ἐκπορευόμενον ἐκ τοῦ θρόνου τοῦ Θεοῦ <sup>1</sup> Zech. 14. 8.
καὶ τοῦ Ἀρνίου. <sup>2</sup> <sup>b</sup> ἐν μέσῳ τῆς πλατείας αὐτῆς καὶ τοῦ <sup>b</sup> Gen. 2. 9.
ποταμοῦ, ἐντεῦθεν καὶ ἐκεῖθεν, ξύλον ζωῆς, ποιοῦν καρποὺς δώδεκα, <sup>c</sup> Ezech. 47. 13
κατὰ μήνα [ἓνα] ἕκαστον ἀποδίδουν τὸν καρπὸν αὐτοῦ, καὶ τὰ <sup>d</sup> Gen. 2. 7.
φύλλα τοῦ ξύλου εἰς θεραπείαν τῶν ἐθνῶν. <sup>3</sup> <sup>e</sup> καὶ πᾶν *κατὰ <sup>e</sup> Zech. 14. 11.
θεμα οὐκ ἔσται ἔτι, καὶ ὁ θρόνος τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ τοῦ Ἀρνίου ἐν αὐτῇ ἔσται καὶ οἱ δούλοι αὐτοῦ λατρεύσουσιν αὐτῷ, <sup>4</sup> <sup>d</sup> Matt. 8. 8.
καὶ <sup>1</sup> Cor. 13. 12.
ὁψονται τὸ πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ, καὶ τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ ἐπὶ τῶν μετ-ώπων αὐτῶν <sup>5</sup> <sup>1</sup> John 3. 2. καὶ νῦν οὐκ ἔσται [ἐκεῖ] καὶ χρεῖαν οὐκ ἔχουσι <sup>e</sup> Ps. 36. 10.
λύχνου καὶ φωτὸς [ἡλίου,] ὅτι Κύριος ὁ Θεὸς *φωτίζει <sup>f</sup> Isa. 60. 19.
ἐπ' <sup>g</sup> Zech. 14. 6. αὐτοὺς, καὶ βασιλεύσουσιν εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας τῶν αἰώνων. <sup>g</sup> ch. 21. 32.

27. κοινόν] So, for t. rec. κοινόν, all the recent Editors read on strong external authority, confirmed by internal evidence, since the common reading plainly arose from a marginal scholium, or grammatical alteration made for the purpose of better adapting the word to ποιοῦν, or, as the recent Editors read, on very weighty authority (A and 20 cursives; I add Mus. 1, 2, 3, and Cov. 2), ὁ ποιών, to which there is no objection on the score of its gender, since κοινόν, with which it is associated, is neut. for masc. I have now received it, with Tis., not expunging the ὁ with Wordsw., because it is called for by propriety of language. At ψεύδος must be repeated ποιών, and the phrase ποιών ψεύδος is equiv. to ἔργαζόμενος ψεύδος in Ecclesi. li. 4.

XXII. 1. καθαρόν is absent from all the best copies, and is cancelled by all the most eminent Editors. Λαμπρ., lit. 'sparkling bright.'—On ποταμὸν see note supr. xxi. 6.

2. ξύλον [ζωῆς] Prof. Scholef. follows Bp. Middl. in rendering 'was a tree of life [in the Paradise of God] (mentioned supr. ii. 7);' and this, as he observes, to avoid the inconsistency of saying that the ONE tree was on each side of the river. 'Another interpretation, however (continues he), has been advanced by Dr. Owen, which is entitled to some consideration: "And the river being on either side of it." And this might be carried even further, thus: "In the midst of the street of it and of the river, being (viz., both the street and the river being) on either side of it" [the tree].—For t. rec. καὶ ἑνταῦθεν, MSS. A, B, and 25 cursives (to which I add Mus. 1, 2, 3) read καὶ ἐκεῖθεν, which is edited by La., Tis., and Wordsw., to whom I now accede. The ἔνα is, on strong, but not paramount authority, cancelled by the recent Editors, internal evidence being rather in its favour.

3. In this verse Abp. Newcome and Dr. Burton with no reason suppose an allusion to the curse connected with the tree of life in the garden of Eden; the general sense being: 'the fatal effects of the first curse, pronounced in consequence of the first transgression, shall cease; the displeasure of God will be here unknown.'—For t. rec., καταδάμα, I have, with all the recent Editors, adopted κατάδαμα, VOL. II.

from A, B, and many cursives (I add Mus. 1, 2, 3, and Cov. 2); and internal evidence confirms external. See note on Matt. xxvi. 71.

4. καὶ ὄψονται τ. πρ. α.] meaning, 'they shall have the nearest access to Him;' denoting, in Scriptural language of the highest significance (see Matt. v. 8. 1 John iii. 2), that perfect felicity reserved for the heavenly state. The next words, τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ—αὐτῶν is a forcible figurative mode of expressing that 'they shall be openly recognized as God's own property,' and whatever else that ownership implies.

5. οὐκ ἔσται ἐκεῖ] So I continue to read, since Iri., though admitted by Sch., Tis., and Wordsw., from MS. A and three cursives, is not certainly genuine. Indeed, I suspect that both Iri., and t. rec. ἐκεῖ (for which there is but slender authority) came from marginal scholia: indeed, Tis. in his 2nd Ed. rejects the Iri. For t. rec. χρεῖαν οὐκ ἔχουσι, MS. A, with the Syr., Arab., Copt., and Vulg., and also Andr. and Primas., have χρ. οὐχ ἔχουσι, which is adopted by La. and Wordsw.; while Sch., Tis., and Wordsw. edit (as I have done) φωτίζει, which is prob., but not certainly, the true reading, and the others glosses thereon; the former, on οὐ χρεῖα (ἦν); the latter, on οὐ χρεῖα (ἔσται). Just after, the state of the evidence is such as to warrant, though not to call for, the cancelling, with Tis., of ἡλίου. If retained, I should prefer to read, with La. and Wordsw., φωτὸς λύχνου καὶ φωτὸς ἡλίου. For t. rec. φωτίζει, La. reads φωτισίαι, from MS. A and two others; while Sch., Tis., and Wordsw. edit (as I have done) φωτίζει, from MS. B and several others. The ἐπ' before αὐτοὺς is prefixed by Sch. and Tis., but not by La. and Wordsw.; though it is favoured by internal evidence, as existing in the uncommonness of the expression φωτ. ἐπ' αὐτοὺς, 'will shed light over them,' which uncommonness affords strong grounds for supposing it genuine. I have pointed αὐτῶν at v. 4, and αὐτοὺς, here, because the words καὶ βασιλ.—αἰώνων seem to connect with v. 4; the words καὶ νῦν—αὐτοὺς being parenthetic, and reiterating what was said supr. xxi. 23. Thus 'the saints reigning for ever' will well match with the other circumstances, and the words καὶ νῦν, &c., be only an incidental illustration of them.—βασιλ. εἰς—αἰώνων, i.e. in heaven, of which the

f ch. 1. 1.
g 10. 2.
h 21. 2.

g ch. 1. 2.
h 2. 11.

h Acts 10. 26.
i 14. 14.
ch. 19. 10.

i Dan. 2. 28.
j 12. 4.
ch. 1. 2.

k 2 Tim. 2.
22.

l Isa. 40. 10.
m 62. 11.
ch. 20. 12.

6<sup>f</sup> Καὶ εἶπέ μοι Οὗτοι οἱ λόγοι πιστοὶ καὶ ἀληθινοί· καὶ Κύριος ὁ Θεὸς τῶν πνευμάτων τῶν [ἀγίων] προφητῶν ἀπέστειλε τὸν ἄγγελον αὐτοῦ δεῖξαι τοῖς δούλοις αὐτοῦ ἃ δεῖ γενέσθαι ἐν τάχει· 7<sup>g</sup> καὶ ἰδοὺ ἔρχομαι ταχύ· μακάριος ὁ τηρῶν τοὺς λόγους τῆς προφητείας τοῦ βιβλίου τούτου. 8<sup>h</sup> Καὶ ἐγὼ Ἰωάννης ὁ ἀκούων † καὶ βλέπων ταῦτα· καὶ ὅτε † ἤκουσα καὶ ἔβλεψα, ἔπεσα προσκυνῆσαι ἔμπροσθεν τῶν ποδῶν τοῦ ἁγγέλου τοῦ δεκνύντός μοι ταῦτα. 9 Καὶ λέγει μοι Ὁρα μὴ—σύνδουλός σου [γάρ] εἰμι, καὶ τῶν ἀδελφῶν σου τῶν προφητῶν, καὶ τῶν τηρούντων τοὺς λόγους τοῦ βιβλίου τούτου τῷ Θεῷ προσκύνησον. 10<sup>i</sup> Καὶ λέγει μοι Μὴ σφραγίσῃς τοὺς λόγους τῆς προφητείας τοῦ βιβλίου τούτου· ὁ καιρὸς [γάρ] ἐγγύς ἐστιν· 11<sup>k</sup> ὁ ἀδικῶν ἀδικησάτω ἔτι, καὶ ὁ ῥυπαρὸς ῥυπαρευθήτω ἔτι· καὶ ὁ δίκαιος δικαιωθήτω ἔτι, καὶ ὁ ἅγιος ἁγιασθήτω ἔτι. 12<sup>l</sup> [Καὶ] ἰδοὺ,

New Jerusalem is a type. 'For ever and ever' is (Abp. N. thinks) opposed to the millenary reign. Here terminates the propheatic portion of the Apostle's sublime representation of the destinies of the Church, from its origin to its consummation in the eternal felicity of the faithful, which endures unto the end. The remainder of the Book is confirmatory and hortatory, demanding a due attention to its sublime contents, and conformity in their practice.

6. 'Here commences the conclusion of the Book, exactly agreeing with the Introduction (particularly vv. 6, 7, 10, with ch. i. 1, 3), and giving light to the whole book, as this book does to the whole Scripture.' (Wealey.) Reader: 'Then he said, Those sayings (that you have heard, and the things you have seen) are certain (worthy of entire credit) and true (absolute verities) to be fulfilled and accomplished in due time.'—πνευμάτων τῶν. So all the recent Editors read, for t. rec. ἀγίων, which is of very little authority, and prob. derived from Luke i. 70. The words were prob. removed, from being misunderstood. Their sense is well cleared up by Bengel.

7. καὶ ἰδοὺ] The καὶ has been on strong authority (to which I add Mus. 1, 2, 8) prefixed to ἰδοὺ, by all the recent Editors.

8. For t. rec. ὁ βλέπων καὶ ἀκούων ταῦτα, the recent Editors all read, on strong authority (to which I add Mus. 1, 2, 3, and Cov. 2), ὁ δὲ καὶ βλέπων τ. I have acceded, though internal evidence is rather unfavourable. At the next words, the Critics have exercised much license. Thus, for ὅτι ἤκουσα καὶ ἔβλ., Tis. and Wordsw. read καὶ ὅτι ἤκουσα καὶ ὅτι εἶδον, on considerable authority (to which I could add); while La. retains the t. rec. rightly, the other originating in a grammatical scruple.

10. μὴ σφραγίσῃς τοὺς λόγους, &c.] i. e. thou must not 'keep them back, like things that are sealed up.' For t. rec. ὅτι ὁ καιρὸς, La. reads ὁ καιρὸς γάρ, from A, B, and many cursives (I add Mus. 1, 2, 3, and Cov. 2); while Sch., Tis., and Wordsw. read ὁ καιρὸς ἐγγύς ἐστιν (meaning, 'nigh at hand, the events begin to take place'); and on grounds worthy of attention, though I cannot but suspect that both readings are alike supposititious.

11. ὁ ἀδικῶν ἀδ.—ἀγίασθ. ἐτι] The exact sense here depends very much on the reading, which is not easy to be settled. In the first clause, for the t. rec. ὁ ῥυπαρὸς ῥυπαρευθήτω ἐτι, all the Editors, from Bengel downwards, on strong grounds, both of external authority (to which I add Mus. 1, 2), and internal evidence, read ὁ ῥυπαρὸς ῥυπαρευθήτω. The other prob. arose from a marginal scholium. At the second clause, for δικαιωθήτω, MS. A, and many cursives (to which I add Mus. 2), have δικαιοσύνην ποιησάτω, which is confirmed by the Syr., Arab., and some other Versions, and is adopted by all the recent Editors; to whose judgment I should be ready to defer, did I not see good reason to suspect that the reading in question arose from a gloss on δικαιωθήτω. If δικαιωθήτω be not the genuine reading, it may be regarded as having arisen from a false alteration of the early Critics, who thus purposed to make the term more exactly suit ῥυπαρευθήτω, though that is far less prob. than the other supposition; a view which I find confirmed by the suffrage of an able Critic in the Edinburgh Review, No. 191, p. 18, who regards the δικαιοσύνην ποιῶν, as an explanation of the ambiguous δικαιωθήτω (justificatus). I would add, that the reading δικαιωθήτω is supported by the most ancient authority in existence (namely, of the second century), that of the Epistle of the Vienne and Lyons Martyr, sect. 15 (adduced by the Reviewer), which quotes the passage thus: ὁ ἀνομος ἀνομωσάτω ἐτι, καὶ ὁ δίκαιος δικαιωθήτω ἐτι. Now the Alex. and some other MSS. have not the clauses ὁ ῥυπαρὸς ῥυπαρευθήτω (or ὁ ῥυπαρὸς ῥυπαρευθήτω ἐτι), and the Reviewer is of opinion that it arose from a marginal gloss. In short, he regards the reading in the Epistle as the original genuine reading, and ὁ ἀδικῶν ἀδικησάτω as one explanatory gloss on ὁ ἀνομος ἀνομωσάτω, and ῥυπαρὸς ῥυπαρευθήτω, and δικαιοσύνην ποιῶν as an explanation of the ambiguous δικαιωθήτω. The expression ἀνομος (continues he) is somewhat vague, and the words ἀδικῶν and ῥυπαρὸς are explanations of its two phases, its bearing on the ἔρχομαι ταχὺ, καὶ ὁ μισθός μου μετ' ἐμοῦ, ἀποδοῦναι ἐκάστῳ ὡς τὸ ἔργον αὐτοῦ ἔσται. 13<sup>m</sup> Ἐγὼ [εἰμι] τὸ Α καὶ τὸ Ω, ἀρχὴ καὶ τέλος, ὁ πρῶτος καὶ ὁ ἔσχατος.

14<sup>a</sup> Μακάριοι οἱ †ποιοῦντες τὰς ἐντολὰς αὐτοῦ, ἵνα ἔσται ἡ ἐξουσία αὐτῶν ἐπὶ τὸ ξύλον τῆς ζωῆς, καὶ τοῖς πυλῶσι εἰσέλlaw of justice and the law of purity. There was a reason for their finding a place (probably one after the other) in the margin, as explanatory glosses. But if the next transcriber (of the MSS. containing those marginal scholia) took the marginal notes not for glosses, but in the aggregate for an alternative reading, he would be struck by the defect of the antithesis in the sentence as it stood, and would add (likewise probably in the margin) the words wanting to complete the rounded phrase, καὶ ὁ ἀγίος ἀγαθότης ἐστίν. This sense the Reviewer evidently thinks was admitted into the text by the next transcriber; but such a transcriber must have been a reviser also: and, on the whole, this view of the learned Reviewer takes too much for granted to be safely adopted. The omission of the words ὁ βυκ. ῥυπαρότης ἐστίν in MS. A, and 4 cursives (to which I add Mus. 2), may well be accounted for as having arisen from the carelessness of the scribe, whose eye, in copying, passed, it seems, from ἀδικησάτω ἐστίν to ῥυπαρότης ἐστίν, and perhaps the letters in large character formed the end of two consecutive lines in a very ancient MS. It is true that the reading ὁ ἀνομιος ἀνομήσας is somewhat confirmed by Dan. xii. 10, Sept., where the reading of all the copies but one is καὶ ἀνομήσας ἀνομοί, καὶ οὐ συνήσους πάντας ὁ ἀνομιος. That one MS. (the Alex.) has ἀνοήσουσιν for ἀνομήσας is certain, whence it is plain that in the Archetype was written ἀνομήσουσιν ἀνομοί, which is undoubtedly the true reading. It, moreover, was in the copy used by Theodor., and is required by the Hebr. original and the Pech. Syr. and Arab. Versions. However, this will not sufficiently justify a change of reading in the Apostle's text, founded on such slender authority, and at variance with every hitherto collated copy of the MSS., and all the Versions. Besides, it may be questioned whether the words in the Letter of the Martyrs be, properly speaking, a quotation at all, or not rather a Scripture allegatio in a lax sense, formed on the passage of Daniel and that of St. John. As to the objections of Bp. Jebb, Sacr. Lit., p. 329, that 'the reading ῥυπαρότης not only damages the parallelism, but introduces a word (ῥυπαρότης) which there is no reason to think ever existed,' the former objection has very slender weight; and the latter has even less, since such strong external authority as that which exists (confirmed by the ῥυπαρότης of two MSS. and Orig. bis) is quite competent to attest the existence of a word analogically formed; prob. a term of the ordinary, or provincial Greek, and changed, we find, by Critics into the Class. Greek, ῥυπαρότης. However, we must not omit to trace the logic and course of reasoning in the words, which seem meant both for warning, espec. to the evil-living persons above adverted to, and for admonition to the faithful, to lay to heart the sayings of this Book, as well as encouragement to all who were suffering persecution in the cause of the Gospel. To both parties is pointed the awful remembrancer, that the time would be shortly at hand when the former party would be irreversibly fixed in a state admitting no remedial change, even in hopes, for ever; and to the other when Christ would come, bringing recompense with him, as well for his foes, as for his people.

12. The καὶ is with reason cancelled by all the recent Editors. The Particle is peculiarly out of place here, because it interrupts the close connexion with the preceding context; q. d. ['Let each party mind], for I am quickly to come, and, &c. In framing the words, the Apostle prob. had in mind Isa. xl. 10, and xlii. 11; in the latter of which passages the words μετ' αὐτοῦ have been, from an obvious cause, lost, after ἔργον αὐτοῦ, and should be supplied from Symm., Theodot., and the Hebr., also from the Syr., Vulg., and Arab. Versions; and, what is more, from the parallel passage above cited,—xl. 10. Of course here μισθ. denotes retribution for either reward or punishment, and μετ' ἐμοῦ implies 'immediately on my coming,' as ταχὺς, παραχρ. in the passage of Crates, cited in my Supplementary Volume For αὐτοῦ ἔσται, La., Tis., and Wordsw. edit. on considerable external, though not paramount, authority, ἔστιν αὐτοῦ, which, however, is rather confirmed by internal evidence.

13. The word εἰμι is, on strong authority (to which I add Mas. 1, 2, 3), cancelled by all the recent Editors. Internal evidence is as much against it as is external; and there is more gravity and dignity in the omission of the Verb Subst.; q. d. 'It is I who say these things (who am) the Alpha and Omega,'—meaning, He of whom the Scripture saith that he exists 'from everlasting to everlasting,' hath 'neither beginning of days nor end of life' (Heb. vii. 3); or, He who is 'the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever' (Heb. xiii. 8): how clear and incontestable a proof of the Deity and Divine glory of our Lord!

14. μακαρ. οἱ ποιῶντες: These are, as we may infer from the matter of the next verse, the words of the Apostle (who here imitates the manner of his Lord in his Beatitude, Matt. v.); and by αὐτοῦ being meant of Him who saith, 'I come,' &c., and the terms ποιῶν τὰς ἐντολὰς there is implied the performing the commands of God and Christ, from Evangelical motives (founded on repentance from dead works) of faith in Christ, and unreserved obedience to his will. The 'right,' or 'privilege,' implied in the next words, ἵνα ἔσται ἡ ἐξουσία αὐτῶν, &c., is, of course, a covenant right, through free grace, to the enjoyment of the Tree of Life; meaning, that of which it was the emblem (as intimated in the next words), the fruition of all the blessings of salvation by Christ, and admittance into heaven, as an everlasting abode. The var. lect. occurring in MS. A and two ancient cursives,—No. 7 and No. 38,—with the Vulg., Armen., and

m Isa. 41. 4
& 44. 6.
& 45. 11.
ch. 2. 11.
& 31. 6.
n 1 John 2.
23.

ο 1 Cor. 4. 10. θωσω εἰς τὴν πόλιν. 15 ° Ἐξω [δὲ] οἱ κύνες καὶ οἱ φαρμακοί, καὶ οἱ πόρνοι καὶ οἱ φονεῖς, καὶ οἱ εἰδωλολάτραι, καὶ πᾶς [ὁ] φιλῶν καὶ ποιῶν ψεύδος.

16 ° *Ἐγὼ Ἰησοῦς ἐπεμψα τὸν ἄγγελόν μου μαρτυρῆσαι ὑμῖν ταῦτα [ἐπὶ] ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις· ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ ῥίζα καὶ τὸ γένος [τοῦ] Δαυὶδ, ὁ ἄστηρ ὁ λαμπρὸς [καὶ] * ὁ πρωϊνός.* 17 ° *Καὶ τὸ Πνεῦμα καὶ ἡ νύμφη λέγουσιν· Ἔρχου καὶ ὁ ἀκούων εἰπάτω * Ἔρχου. Καὶ ὁ διψῶν * ἐρχέσθω, [καὶ] ὁ θέλων † λαμβανέτω [τὸ] ὕδωρ ζωῆς δωρεάν.*

Æth. Versions, πλύνοντας στολάς αὐτῶν is a very remarkable reading, which, though received by Mill and Bentley, and edited by La. and Wordsw., (not Tis., in his second ed.) arose, I doubt not, from the marginal scholia, and originated in the wish of some Biblical student, who had in mind vii. 14, to intimate that to performing the commandments of God should be united the previous washing their vestments in the blood of the Lamb; with a reference to what was said, supr. i. 8, and vii. 14. I have said 'previous washing,' since, if adopted, the words should be rendered 'after having washed.'

15. ὁ φιλῶν καὶ ποιῶν ψεύδος Render: 'whosoever approveth, as well as he that maketh or forgeth a lie;' meaning, he who doth the thing from pleasure and purposely, because he prefers falsehood to truth. So Lucian, Philopseudes, § 1, speaks of those who prefer lying to truth, ἡδόμενοι τῷ πράγματι καὶ ἐνδιατρίβοντες ἐν ὁδῶν προφάσει. The δὲ after ἔξω is, on strong authority (I add Mss. 1, 2, 3), confirmed by internal evidence, cancelled by all the recent Editors; and undoubtedly no little force is comprehended in the Asyndeton. As respects the subjoined κύνες, it is not easy to fix the sense of the term; and hence it has been variously understood. Not a few Expositors interpret it impudentes, taking it to denote the same persons as the ἰβδολυγμῖνοι, supr. xxi. 8, 'impendi, canis sordibus conspuendi.' Others explain it to mean, in a general sense, 'profane, ungodly persons,' as in Matt. vii. 6, μὴ δότε τὸ ἅγιον τοῖς κυσὶ. But it should rather seem that here the two senses are conjoined, and that the term denotes, 1. profani, i. e. 'persons out of the pale of the Christian fold, who are so either from aversion to, or non-acquiescence in, the doctrines of the Gospel;' and so the Jews styled all those out of the Jewish Church dogs. 2. by implication, impii, i. e. 'peccatorum ac vitiorum sordibus contaminati, flagitiosi.' Commentators are not agreed whether the Verb. Subst. left understood should be expressed in the Present or in the Fut. Indic. There is more of simplicity in αἰοι, but more of spirit in ἔσονται, = ἔσταν, q. d. Procul sunt profani ac ecclesiæ! Comp. Virg. Æn. vi. 258, 'Procul, O procul este, profani.' Moreover, the sunt is supported by the most ancient of Expositors, Andr., who remarks, οὐ μόνον τοὺς ἀναιδέας ἀπίστους, ἀλλὰ καὶ τοὺς ἡταιρηκότας—ἀπὸ λαῶν, where I would read ἀναιδέας ἀπίστους, ὁ ἀναιδὲς, ἀπίστους, which confirms the twofold sense that I have shown to be inherent in the word. The δ before φιλῶν is, on considerable, but scarcely competent authority, cancelled by La., Tis., and Wordsw., but retained by Sch. The MS. B and 5 curves have ποιῶν καὶ φιλῶν, but wrongly, the sentiment (which that reading would at least mar) being, 'every one who lieth as well as maketh up (deviseth) a lie;' implying that the liar does it willingly and of set purpose; just as, by a not dissimilar idiom, it is said, in a passage of St. Paul, Rom. i. 32, οὐ μόνον αὐτὰ ποιοῦσιν, ἀλλὰ καὶ συνευδοκοῦσιν τοῖς πράσσουσιν.

16. Ἐγὼ Ἰ. ἐπεμψα, &c. Render: 'I Jesus (am) He who hath sent.' 'Hæc altera asseveratio est, quo magis animum admoneant et fidem habeant huic prophetiæ audidores Christi.' (Marlorat.) 'It was not deemed sufficient to represent the angel speaking in the person of Christ, but Christ himself also is here introduced, speaking in his own person, confirming the Divine authority of this Book, and attesting it to be properly his revelation.' (Bp. Newton.)—To advert to a matter of various reading. For ἔτι MS. A and 13 curves, confirmed by the Vulg. Version, and some Fathers, have ἐν, which is edited by La.; while Math., Gr., Sch., and Wordsw. retain the ἐτι, which undoubtedly is preferable to ἐν; though I am now inclined to suspect that both readings came from the marginis, and to regard as genuine the simple Dat., which is found in not a few cursive MSS., confirmed by Andr., Areth., Primas., and the Erasmus Editions. And so Tis. in his second edition. Thus ἐκκλησίαις will be a Dat. commodi for (the information of) the Churches.—'The next words, ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ ῥίζα seem meant (as Marlorat observes), to show "in quo et per quem universum omnino promissiones adimplentur." Of the two clauses, the first can need no explanation; of the second the sense will mainly depend on the reading. For the t. rec. ὁ πρωϊνός, all the recent Editors are agreed in reading πρωϊνός, from B and many curves (to which I add Mss. 1, 2, 3). They also, on strong grounds, cancel καὶ, and prefix δ to πρ. I have followed them, espec. since a better sense arises,—namely, 'the bright, the early morning-star am I;' q. d. 'chasing away the dark night of ignorance, sin, and sorrow, and ushering in the eternal day of light and joy everlasting.'

17. This verse contains the responses made to the promise of Christ, 'I come quickly,' v. 12; and the Holy Ghost and the Church, the spiritual bride of Christ, are represented as inviting all to participate in the blessings of the Gospel, and thereby accomplish the words of the prophecy.—To advert to some matters of various reading. For the t. rec. ἔλθι and ἔλθτω, all the recent 18 [Συμ]μαρτυροῦμαι ἐγὼ [γὰρ] παντὶ τῷ ἀκούοντι τοὺς λόγους τῆς προφητείας τοῦ βιβλίου τούτου· ἐάν τις ἐπι[τε]θῇ * ἐπ' αὐτὰ, ἐπιθήσει ὁ Θεὸς ἐπ' αὐτὸν τὰς [ἐπτά] πληγὰς τὰς γεγραμμένας ἐν τῷ βιβλίῳ τούτῳ. 19 Καὶ ἐάν τις * ἀφέλῃ ἀπὸ τῶν λόγων βιβλίου τῆς προφητείας ταύτης, ἀφαιρήσει ὁ Θεὸς τὸ μέρος αὐτοῦ ἀπὸ * ξύλου τῆς ζωῆς, καὶ ἐκ τῆς πόλεως τῆς ἁγίας [καὶ] τῶν γεγραμμένων ἐν βιβλίῳ τούτῳ. 20 Λέγει ὁ μαρτυρῶν ταῦτα· Ναὶ ἔρχομαι ταχύ· ἀμήν. Ναὶ ἔρχου, Κύριε Ἰησοῦ!

1. Exod. 32.
2. Deut. 4. 2.
3. & 12. 32.
4. Ps. 60. 20.
5. Prov. 30. 5.
6. & 12. 3.
7. & 17. 8.
8. & 20. 12.
9. & 21. 27.

21 Ἡ χάρις τοῦ Κυρίου [ἡμῶν] Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ μετὰ πάντων [ὑμῶν] τῶν ἁγίων. [Ἀμήν.]

Editors read, on strong authority (to which I add Mus. 1, 2, 3), what I now adopt, the reading ἔρχου and ἐρχίσθω. The καὶ before ὁ θέλων is, on strong but scarcely competent grounds, cancelled by the same Editors. Moreover, for λαμβάνω τὸ, they read λαβέτω, from almost all the best MSS.; perhaps rightly; though there is no cause for change.

18. For συμμαρτυροῦμαι, all the recent Editors, on good grounds, read μαρτυρῶ ἐγὼ, and cancel γὰρ, perhaps rightly, certainly so in prefixing τῷ to ἀκούοντι. Moreover, on very strong grounds they edit ἐπιθῇ ἐπ' αὐτὰ, for t. rec. ἐπιτιθῇ πρὸς τ., cancel ἐπτά before πληγὰς, and prefix τῷ before βιβλίῳ. All these emendations I have now adopted, except the first, at which I pause, because it somewhat weakens the force of the words which (as Wesley observes) the Apostle from the fulness of his heart utters: this testimony (in which his own heart fully accords) conveying a weighty admonition both to the Churches of Asia, and to all who should ever read this Book.

19. ἀφαιρήσει ὁ Θεός—ζωῆς] In this expression, containing the converse of the other, there seems a double allusion,—first to the keeping of an account-book, in which every one's μέρος, or 'portion,' is entered down, and crossed out when taken away; 2. to the βίβλος of a will, from which any one's name being removed, disinherits him. So Jos. Antt. xvii. 4, 2, τὸν νόμον αὐτῆς—ἐξήλειψε τῶν διαθηκῶν.—To advert to matters of reading. For t. rec. ἀφαιρῇ, I have, with the recent Editors, adopted, on strong authority, the reading ἀφελῇ; also the ξύλου for βιβλίου, which latter reading doubtless proceeded from certain Critics, whose purpose it was to introduce an easier sense. The καὶ has been, with reason, cancelled by all the Editors. With the sentiment comp. Plato, p. 394, εἰ προσκίτται τι γράμμα ἢ ἀφῆρηται.

20. ἔρχ. τ.] namely, to destroy her enemies, and establish her in everlasting happiness. In the next words, Ναὶ ἔρχου K. 'I., the Apostle expresses his earnest desire and ardent anticipation of their blessed results.

21. The ἡμῶν and the ὑμῶν are, on strong grounds, external and internal, cancelled by all the recent Editors; and the words τῶν ἁγίων are added by the same Editors from almost all the MSS. of any weight (to which I add Mus. 1, 2, 3), confirmed by almost all the Versions, except the Vulg., and even of that some MSS. have the words.

INDEX I.

PRINCIPAL GREEK WORDS AND PHRASES EXPLAINED.

A.

- 'Αβαδδών, ii. 824
 ἀβαρής, ii. 315
 'Αββᾶ, ii. 353. 'Αββᾶ ὁ Πατήρ, i. 347; ii. 64 ἄβυσσοι, i. 415; ii. 84. τὸ φρέαρ τῆς ἄβυσσου, ii. 822 ἀγαθοποιίᾳ, i. 793
 ἀγαθοποιῶν, ii. 725
 ἀγαθός, on the application of this word to God, and also to Christ, i. 149; distinguished from δίκαιος, ii. 40. 55. ἀγ. πρὸς οἰκοδομήν, ii. 387. τὸ ἀγαθόν, ii. 568 ἀγαθωσύνη, ii. 367.
 ἀγαλλίασι, i. 713; ii. 581 ἀγαλλιάω, i. 31. 370; ii. 702; distinguished from χαίρω, 603. 708 ἄγαμος, ii. 176
 ἀγαπᾶν, i. 323; opposed to μισῶ, 48. ἀγαπάτα τοῦτο ἔχθροῦς, 39 ἀγάπη, i. 197; ii. 70. 100. 113. 214. 367. 374. 414. ἀγ. τοῦ Χριστοῦ, ii. 70. ἀγ. τοῦ Θεοῦ, 621 ἀγαπητός for μονογενής, i. 21 Ἄγαρ, ii. 358
 ἀγαγαρεύω, i. 38. 237
 ἀγγελοι, i. 740; ii. 211. 450. ἀγγ. Κυρίου, i. 7. 776. ἀγγ. Σαταν, ii. 325.
 ἀγε νῦν, ii. 693
 ἀγιασματῶν, ii. 614
 ἀγιαζῶ, i. 44. 617. 668. 669; ii. 171. 177. 516. 586. ἁγιασμένοι, i. 840; ii. 404. 482. 635 ἀγιασμός, ii. 473. 493
 ἄγιος, i. 668; ii. 55. 444. ὁ Ἄγιος, 803. ὁ Ἄγιος καὶ Δίκαιος, i. 715. ὁ ἄγιος τοῦ Θεοῦ, 261. τὸ ἄγιον, 51. 705. ἡ ἀγία πόλις, 23. οἱ ἄγιοι, i. 756. 870; ii. 168. 444. ἐν ἀγίῳ τόπῳ, i. 198. τὰ ἄγια, ii. 627 ἀγιωσύνη, ii. 472
 ἀγκύρας ἐκταίνειν, i. 881. ῥίπτειν, 882 ἀνγίζω, i. 626. ἀνγίζομαι, 845. 860 ἀνγισμός, i. 845
 ἀνγούω, i. 784; ii. 17. 198. 238. 475. 599. 600. ἀνγούμενος, οὐκ ἔσται, 293 ἀνγούημα, ii. 599. 600. 625 ἀγνοία, i. 717; ii. 394 ἀγνόησι, ii. 292
 ἀγνῶσι, ii. 416
 ἀγνώσις, ii. 711
 Ἀγνώστῳ Θεῷ, i. 817
 ἀγορά, i. 82
 ἀγοραῖσθαι τιμῆς, ii. 174 ἀγοραῖοι, i. 812. ἀγοραῖαι, scil. ἡμέραι, 833 ἀγραμμάτων, i. 721
 ἀγραυλίω, i. 377
 ἀγραύω, i. 334
 ἀγρίλαιοι, ii. 92
 ἀγρός, i. 175. 724
 ἀγροπείω, ii. 669
 ἀγροπνία, ii. 292
 ἀγχειν, i. 145
 ἄγω, used as a pastoral term, i. 614; for ἐσάγω, 836. ἄγομαι, ii. 63 ἀγωγή for ἀναστροφή, ii. 346 ἀγων, ii. 464. 529
 ἀγωνία, i. 498
 ἀγωνίζομαι, i. 451; ii. 446. 529 ἀδελφός, i. 97; denoting 'my one,' 33; 'countrymen,' 39 ἀδελφότης, ii. 588
 ἀδελος φωνή, ii. 231
 οὐκ ἀδελῶς, ii. 196
 ἀδελμότης, i. 223; ii. 426 ἄδης, i. 83. 466; ii. 813. 860 ἀδιάλειπτος μυρία, ii. 535 ἀδιαλείπτως, ii. 461. 481 ἀδιαφορία, ii. 558
 ἀδικία, ii. 169. ἀδικούμενος, i. 738 ἀδικημα, i. 823
 ἀδικία, injury, ii. 327; denoting vice and iniquity in general, 11 ἀδικος, i. 475; ii. 495 ἀδόκιμος, ii. 14. 197. 330. 607 ἄδολος, ii. 707
 Ἀδραμνυτῶν, i. 875
 Ἀδρία, i. 881
 αἰῶνες, i. 153. 791; ii. 117. 605. 606 ἡμέραι τῶν αἰώνων, i. 774 αἰεμίτοι, i. 767
 αἰεσι, ii. 383
 αἰεσιμα, ii. 742
 αἰετιῶν, i. 294. 348; ii. 344. 473. 522 αἰετήσις, ii. 616. 631
 νομίμως ἀθλεῖν, ii. 538 ἀθλησις παθημάτων, ii. 640 ἀθῶσι, i. 232
 αἰγια δέρματα, ii. 652
 αἰγιαλός, i. 883
 αἰῶς, ii. 508. 665
 Αἰθίοψ δῆρ, i. 751
 αἶμα, 'kindred,' i. 819. αἶμα αἰῶν, 232. αἶμα τοῦ στενοῦ, ii. 444. ἡ σαλὴν εἰς αἶμα, i. 706. αἶμα καὶ πῦρ, ib. αἶμα καὶ πῦρ ἐξῆλθον, 681. 682. θρόμβοι αἱμάτων, 498. αἵματα, denoting droplets of consanguinity, 520. ἐν ῥύσει αἱμάτων, 288. αἶμα τῆς διαθήκης, ii. 629
 αἵματαυχυσία, ii. 630
 αἰνιγμα, ii. 229
 αἰνούστας, i. 713
 αἰρεσι, i. 727. 859; ii. 366. 669 αἰρετίζω, i. 88
 αἰρετικός, ii. 564
 αἶρω, i. 481. ἐπιχειρῶν ἀρῶσθαι, 23. ἀρᾶν τὸν ζυγόν μου, 85. ἀρᾶν τὸ σόν, 157. αἶρων τὴν ἀμαρτίαν, 525; 'to destroy a city or country,' 624; opposed to καθαίρω, 651; a nautical term, 877 αἰσθῆσι, ii. 414
 αἰσθητήριον, ii. 603
 αἰσχροκερδῶν, ii. 726
 αἰσχροσύνη, ii. 399
 αἰτεῖν εἰρήνην, i. 776. αἰτ. distinguished from ἀπειτεῖν, 402. αἰτέομαι, 716. 743 αἰτία, i. 147. 238
 αἰτιάομαι, ii. 27
 αἰτίας, i. 374; effector, ii. 602 αἰχμαλωτῶν, ii. 545. ῥήματα λεύτευσιν αἰχμαλωτῶν, 391 αἰών, i. 106. 320. ἐπ' αἰῶνος, 373. ἐκ τοῦ αἰῶνος, 607. κατὰ τὸν αἰῶνα τοῦ κόσμου, ii. 380. 408. οἱ αἰῶνες, 578. τὰ τέλη τῶν αἰώνων, 202. γενεὰ τοῦ αἰῶνος τῶν αἰώνων, 389. αἰὼν ὁ μέλλων, 379 αἰῶνισ, i. 214. 320. 652, 653; ii. 552. 643 ἀκαθαρσία, i. 190; ii. 13. 50. 398. 454. 464 ἀκαίριε, ii. 436
 ἄκακος, ii. 125. 618
 ἀκαρτος, ii. 401
 ἀκατάκρητος, i. 811
 ἀκατάπαυστος ἀμαρτίας, ii. 743

- ἀκαταστασία, i. 489. 491; ii. 237. 292. 328. 689 ἀκατάσχετος, ii. 687
 ἀκέραιος, i. 74; ii. 424 ἀκλήνεις, i. 637
 ἀκμήν, σοφία γὰρ, i. 122 ἀκοή, i. 26. 635, 636; ii. 86.
 ἀκοή πισταί, 345. ἀκοαί,
 i. 815. λόγος ἀκοῆς, 467.
 594 ἀκούω, i. 566. 755. ἀκούειν ἀκοῇ, 101. ἀκ. βαρίων, ib.
 ἀκρατής, ii. 544
 ἀκριβεία, i. 847
 ἀκριβίστατος, i. 869
 ἀκριβῶς περιπατεῖν, ii. 402 ἀκρίδες, i. 17
 ἀκροατήριον, i. 867
 ἀκροβυστία, ii. 23
 ἀκροβυστία τῆς σαρκός, ii.
 449. τὸ εὐαγγέλιον ἀκρο-βυστίας, 340
 ἀκρογωνία, ii. 384
 ἀκροθίνιον, ii. 613
 ἀκρον, ii. 648
 ἀλάβεστρον μύρου, i. 215 ἀλαζονίαι, ii. 694. ἀλαζονία τοῦ βίου, 758
 ἀλαζών, ii. 15. 544
 ἀλαλᾶξω, i. 290
 ἄλας τῆς γῆς, i. 81
 ἀλήθεια, i. 521. 645; ii. 165.
 409. ἡ ἀλήθεια τοῦ Θεοῦ,
 ii. 13. ἐν ἀληθείᾳ καὶ πίστει, 508. ἀληθεύω, ii. 356. ἀληθεύειν ἐν ἀγᾶτι, 393
 ἀληθής, i. 178. 594; ii. 435 ἀλιεῖτε ἀνθρώπων, i. 26 ἀλίχσομαι, i. 31. ἀλισθῆσθαι πυρὶ, 320
 ἀλισγήματα τῶν εἰδώλων, i.
 799 ἀλλά, hortative, i. 766; ii. 423;
pro neg., i. 798; ii. 67. 335.
 633; negative, i. 721;
utroque, ii. 170; but rather, 536; for si μή, i. 159. ἀλλά γὰρ, ii. 305. ἀλλά καί, 49 ἀλλὰ σσεῖν τὴν φωνήν, i. 734;
 ii. 357. ἀλλὰ σσεσμαι, 254
 ἀλληγοροῦμαι, ii. 358
 ἄλλος for ἄλλοι, ii. 207 ἀλλοτριοεπίσκοπος, ii. 724 ἀλλοφύλος, i. 767
 ἀλοῶς, ii. 192
 ἀλόη, i. 683
 ἐν ἀλόῃς, ii. 410
 ἀλυσιτελής, ii. 669
 ἄλυν, i. 20
 ἄνα πρωί, i. 155
 ἄνα δὲ καί, ii. 669
 ἀνασθῆναι, ii. 749
 ἀμαράντινος, ii. 726
 ἀμαρτανος, ii. 702
 ἀμαρτανός, i. 143. 598
 ἀμαρτία, i. 525. 592. 595. 600.
 601. μὴ στήσῃς τὴν ἀμ.,
 i. 745. ἀμαρτία νεκρά, ii. 54.
 714. χωρὶς ἀμαρτίας ὀφθῆσται, 599. 631. νεκροὶ ἐν ταῖς ἀμαρτ., ii. 880.
 ἀμάρτυρος, i. 733
 ἀμαρτωλοί, 'heathens', i. 66;
 ii. 502
 ἀμαχος, ii. 561
 ἀμελίω, ii. 618. 583. 621. 736 ἀμεμπτος, ii. 429. 466. 472.
 621 ἀμερίμνος, ii. 183. ἀμερίμνος ποιεῖ, i. 247
 ἀμετάθετον τῆς βουλῆς αὐτοῦ,
 ii. 611
 ἀμιτακίνητος, ii. 256
 ἀμιταμέλητος, ii. 94. 299 ἀμιτανόητος, ii. 17
 ἀμήν, i. 32; ii. 233. ὁ Ἀμήν, 805. ἀμήν ἀμήν λέγω ὑμῖν,
 i. 610
 ἀμιαντος, ii. 618. 666. 680. 702 ἀμύνομαι, difference of meaning when used with dat. or accusa.
 i. 738
 ἀμφίβληστρον, i. 26. 259
 ἀμφιέννυμι, i. 49
 ἀμφοδος, i. 528
 ἀμώμωτος, ii. 424
 ἀμωμον, ii. 688
 ἀμωμος, ii. 405. 444
 ἀνά, a-piece, i. 157. 418 ἀναβαθμός, i. 846
 ἀναβαίνω, i. 512. εἰς τὸ πλοῖον, 117. 125. 158. εἰς τὸν οὐρανόν, 542; ii. 392. εἰς καρδίας, 144
 ἀναβάλλω, i. 861
 ἀναβιβάζω, i. 107
 ἀναβλέπω, i. 311. 606. 848 ἀναβολὴν ποιεῖν, i. 866 ἀνάγειν, i. 344
 ἀναγγέλλω, ii. 121
 ἀναγιγνώσκω, ii. 701
 ἀναγινώσκω, i. 430. 751; ii.
 267 ἀναγκάζω, i. 115. 807; ii. 342.
 370 οἱ ἀνάγκαιοι φίλοι, i. 766. ἀναγκαιότερόν ἐστι, ii. 418 ἀναγκαστῆς, ii. 726
 ἀνάγκη for θλίψις, i. 490; ii.
 181 ἀνάγκη ἐσχον, ii. 782
 ἀναγνωρίζω, i. 737
 ἀνάγνωσις, ii. 518
 ἀνάγω, i. 805. ἀνάγειν θεσίαν, 741. ἀδήχθη ὑπὸ τοῦ Πιπύ-ματος, 21
 ἀναδείκνυμι, i. 701
 ἀνάδειξις, i. 374
 ἀναδέχομαι, i. 885; ii. 714
 ἀνάξω, i. 460
 ἀναζητῶ, i. 382
 ἀναζώννυμι, ii. 704
 ἀναζωπυρίω, ii. 535
 ἀναθάλλω, ii. 436
 ἀνύθημα and ἀνύθημα, ii. 885.
 ἀνύθημα εἶναι ἀπὸ τοῦ Χριστοῦ, 71
 ἀναθεματίζω, i. 854
 ἀναθεματῶ, i. 817; ii. 667 ἀνύθημα, i. 488. ἀνύθημα and ἀνύθημα, ii. 335
 ἀναίδια, i. 435
 ἀναίριωμα, i. 738
 ἀνακαινίζειν εἰς μετάνοιαν, ii.
 605—607
 ἀνακαινοῦμαι, ii. 454
 ἀνακαινώσις, ii. 526
 ἀνακάμψαι, ii. 647
 ἀνακαταλείπω, ii. 107. 376 ἀνακλίνω, i. 58. 376
 ἀνακόπτω, ii. 361
 ἀνακρίνω, i. 720. 776. 813. 858;
 ii. 156. 206.
 ἀνακρίσας, i. 868
 ἀνακόπτω, i. 492
 ἀναλαμβάνω, i. 741
 ἀνάληψις, i. 425
 ἀναλίσκω, i. 425; ii. 491
 κατὰ τὴν ἀναλογία τῆς πίστας, ii. 98
 ἀναλογίζομαι, ii. 540
 ἀναλόγῳ γενέσθαι, i. 31
 ἀναλύω, i. 444; ii. 418 ἀναμάρτητος, i. 592
 ἀναμίξις, ii. 463
 ἀνάμνησις, ii. 683
 ἀνανοῦμαι, ii. 395
 ἀνανήψωσις, ii. 543
 ἀνανήψω, ii. 543
 ἀνατινέριον, i. 766
 ἀναξίως, ii. 216
 ἀνάπτωσις, i. 84
 ἀναπαύω, i. 442; ii. 22. 260.
 299. 567
 ἀναπίπτω, i. 297
 ἀναπληρῶ, ii. 368
 ἀναπληροῦν τὸν τόπον, ii. 233 ἀναπολόγητος, ii. 12
 ἀνάναντες πυρῶν, i. 884 ἀνασις, i. 352. 813
 ἀνασκηνάζω, i. 801
 ἀνάστασις, i. 179. 380. 815;
 ii. 244. 605. 682
 ἀναστατός, i. 813
 ἀνασταυρώ, ii. 607
 ἀναστρέφω, i. 188; ii. 266. 640 ἀναστρέφω, ii. 336. 395. 518.
 688. 711
 ἀνατίλλω, i. 25; ii. 615
 ἀντιτίθειν τὸ εὐαγγέλιον, ii.
 358, 359
 ἀνατολή, i. 10. ἐξ ὕψους, 374 ἀνατρίπω, ii. 541. 556
 ἀνατρίψω. ἀναθεραπεύω πρὸς τοὺς πόδας, i. 848 ἀναφαίνω, i. 841
 ἀναφά, ἀμαρτίας, ii. 631 ἀναφάρω, ii. 618. 619. 684 ἀναψύχει, i. 717
 ἀναψύχω, ii. 557
 ἀναχυσίς, ii. 721
 ἀνδοπεποιτιστής, ii. 502
 ἀνδρίζω, ii. 259
 ἀνέγκλητος, ii. 444. 512. 555 ἀνεκδιήγητος δωρεά, ii. 312 ἀνεκλάλητος, ii. 706
 ἀνεκλειπτος, i. 444
 ἀνελεῖται, ii. 15
 ἀνελίσθαι, i. 738
 ἀνεμίζομαι, ii. 674
 ἀνεμοῖ, ii. 393
 ἀνεκδιήγητος ἐστι, i. 468 ἀνεξερεύνητος, ii. 95
 ἀνεξίκακος, ii. 642
 ἀνεξιχνίαστος, ii. 386
 ἀνεπλήρωτος, ii. 510. 521. 530 ἀνεσις, ii. 486. ἴχθυον ἀνεσις,
 i. 861, 862

- ἀνιτάξω, i. 850. 851
 ἀνιέσθαι, i. 877
 ἀνιέρω, i. 842
 ἀνίχω, i. 423; ii. 313. ἀνίχομαι, i. 137. 824; ii. 159. 817. τὰ ἀνίχοντα, ii. 399 ἀνίκω, ὡς ἀνίκα, ii. 456. 567 ἀνήμερος, ii. 544, 545 ἀνέρις, denoting persons of both sexes, i. 719. ἀνέρι πατέρες, 735 ἀνίστημι, i. 38; ii. 341 ἀνυμολογίωμα, i. 381
 ἀνυρκαία, i. 673
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 407
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 599
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 154 ἀνυρκαίρετος, 395. ἀνυρ. τοῦ Θεοῦ, 529. 548. ἀνυρ. τῆς ἀρετῆς, 532. ὁ ἰσὺς ἀνυρ., 388. κατὰ ἀνυρκαίρετον, 192. 335
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 779. 833
 ἀνίκα, i. 809. ἀνίκαται τὴν ἀνίκα, ii. 407 ἀνίσταμαι, i. 719; ii. 691. ἀνίσταται ἐκ τῶν νεκρῶν, 401 ἀνίσταται, i. 510; ii. 344. 561 ἀνίσταται, i. 29. 372. ἀνίσταται ὡς οὐρανός, 20. τάφος ἀνίσταται, ii. 27. ἀνίσταται τὸ στόμα, i. 29. ἐν ἀνίσταται, ii. 410
 ἀνίσταται, i. 399; ii. 555
 ἀνίσταται, ii. 50. 491
 ἀνίσταται, i. 707; ii. 491. 502
 ἀνίσταται, ii. 20
 ἀνίσταται, ii. 502. 544
 ἀνίσταται, ii. 658
 ἀνίσταται τοῦ Θεοῦ, ii. 30 ἀνίσταται, i. 133
 ἀνίσταται ἀνίσταται, ii. 445
 ἀνίσταται, ii. 90
 ἀνίσταται, ii. 486
 ἀνίσταται, ii. 78
 ἀνίσταται, i. 48; ii. 800. 555 ἀντί, ii. 694. ἀντί ὡν, i. 777 ἀντίβαλλω, i. 509
 ἀντιδιατίθεμαι, ii. 540, 541 ἀντιδικός, i. 34
 ἀντιτίθει τῆς ψευδομένου γνώσεως, ii. 532 ἀντικείμενος, ii. 490. 502. 523 ἀντικείμενος, i. 371. 841; ii. 431. 525 ἀντιλέγω, i. 380; ii. 559 ἀντιλήψαι, ii. 224
 ἀντιλογία, ii. 785
 ἀντιλήπτω, ii. 507
 ἀντιμισθία, ii. 13
 ἀντιπαρόχομαι, i. 431
 ἀντιπίπτω, i. 743
 ἀντιτάσσομαι, i. 822; ii. 104
 ἀντιτίθεμαι, ii. 630. 719
 ἀντιτίθεμαι, ii. 758. 759
 ἀντιλήπτω, i. 532. 549
 ἀντιπαρόχομαι, i. 878
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 785
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 501. 532
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 502. 555. 585
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 344
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 678; denoting 'from the earliest age,' 869. ἀνυρκαίρετος, 539
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 431
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 826
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 11. 504
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 232
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 228. 776; ii. 218
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 542
 ἀνυρκαίρετος and ἀνυρκαίρετος, distinction between, i. 402.
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 395 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 588. ἀνυρκαίρετος, ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 447. 828
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 394. 444
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 631. 664. 781. ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 437. 469
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 617
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 91. 259. ἀνυρκαίρετος, τῶν κτισμάτων, 677 ἀνυρκαίρετος τοῦ πλοῦτος, i. 279.
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 395. 448
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 614
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 557. 558
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 454. 595 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 547. ἀνυρκαίρετος τῇ ἀληθείᾳ, 19. ἀνυρκαίρετος τῇ λόγῳ, 714
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 561
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, followed by Infin., i. 721
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 721; ii. 66. 407
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 676
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 132. 360. 433. 719
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 449
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 448
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 830
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 180
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 402
 ἀνυρκαίρετος γενεαλογίας, ii. 500
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 184
 ἀνυρκαίρετος τῇ καρδίᾳ, i. 743
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 41; ii. 457. 516. 568.
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 347
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, 'deficiency of faith,' i. 138. 317; ii. 593
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 686. 687; ii. 177.
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 137
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 301. 813. ἀνυρκαίρετος κοινωνίας, 308. ἐν ἀνυρκαίρετος καρδίας, i. 713; ii. 407 ἀνυρκαίρετος ὀφθαλμός, i. 48
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 674
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ὡς ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 302; for ὡς, i. 689. 770; intensive, ii. 88; distinguished from ἐξ, 465; in composition i. 41; ii. 718
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 516. 641
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 91
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 375. 730
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 374. ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 663
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 189. 707; ii. 158
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 189; ii. 614
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 506
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 416. 711. 856 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 18; τοῦ, i. 737; ii. 551
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 788
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 313; ii. 660. 708.
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 517
 ἀνυρκαίρετος ὡς, ii. 205
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 719
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 20; distinguished from ταμίον, 442. 443
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 416; ii. 453.
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 111. ἀνυρκαίρετος, 664
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 88. 137. 271. 698
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 9—11. 432
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 230. 236. 377.
 ἀνυρκαίρετος τοῦ Κυρίου, 132. 703. ἀνυρκαίρετος τοῦ Κυρίου ἐν οὐρανῷ, 486
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 417
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 444
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 718
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 440. 550. 631
 ἀνυρκαίρετος τοῦ θανάτου ἔχειν, ii. 265 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ὡς ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 562; ii. 818 ἀνυρκαίρετος τὴν ἔχθραν, ii. 384
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 677
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 260
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 825
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 832. 868
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 190
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 171
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 492; ii. 442 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 7. 36. 123. 379. 802; distinguished from κρίσις and καταδικάζω, 403
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 393
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 491
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 468
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 843
 ἀνυρκαίρετος τῆς τῆς, ii. 677
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 498. 841
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 844; ii. 489. 490. 515 ἀνυρκαίρετος τὴν στίγαν, i. 265.
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 328. 719; ii. 170. 695
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 71; ii. 124. 426.
 ἀνυρκαίρετος ἐκκλησιῶν, ii. 304
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 440
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 663. ἀνυρκαίρετος τὴν ἀλήθειαν, ii. 537. 556
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 100
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 607
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 426. 456
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 87
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 556
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 424
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 703
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 803
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 452
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 491
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 860; ii. 208. 414
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 789
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 451, 452. 685
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 88
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 748; ii. 643
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 88
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 86. 370; ὡς ἀνυρκαίρετος, 541. ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 64.
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, ii. 77. 114. 478. 481
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 749
 ἀνυρκαίρετος, i. 94; ii. 522

ἀργύριον, i. 829. τὸ ἀργ. σου σύν σοι εἶη, 748
 ἀργυροκόπος, i. 829
 ἀρίσκια, ii. 441
 ἀρίσκω, ii. 464. μὴ ἀρίσκω θιῶ, 468
 ἀριστὸν, i. 774. οὐκ ἀριστὸν ἐστί, i. 732
 ἀρετὴ, ii. 435; derivation and meaning of, 733. ἀρεταί, ii.
 710. διὰ δόξης καὶ ἀρετῆς, 731 ἀριστῶν, i. 438. 690
 ἀριστον, i. 175. 690
 Ἀρμαγεδὼν, ii. 847
 ἀρμολογῶν, ii. 313
 ἀρπάζω, i. 716; ii. 539. 560 ἀρπαγμός, ii. 422
 ἀρπάξω, i. 753; ii. 477 ἀρπαξί, i. 54. 475; ii. 171 ἀρράβων, ii. 876
 ἀρρήτοι, ii. 324
 ἀρτέμων, i. 883
 ἄρτι, i. 20. 530. ἄρ' ἄρτι, 530 ἀντιγίνωσκος, ii. 707. 708 αὐτοί, denoting all the necessaries of life, i. 44. ἄρτοι τῆς προσβίαις, 86. ἄρτοι κριθινοί, i. 569. ἄρτον φαγίην, 452. τῇ κλάσει τοῦ δ., 711.
 τὸν ἱαντῶν ἀρ. ἱσθίου, ii.
 496 ἀρχαίοι, i. 33. ἀφ' ἡμερῶν ἀρχαίων, i. 797
 ἀρχὴ κτίσεως, i. 322. ἀρχὴν λαβών, ii. 473. ἀρχαί, i. 764;
 ii. 387. ἀρχαί καὶ ἰερούσαι,
 ii. 443. 378. 408. ἀπ' ἀρχῆς,
 i. 148. 363; ii. 493. κατ' ἀρχαί, 581. ἐν ἀρχῇ, 518 ἀρχηγός, ii. 540; φοιτᾷς, 586.
 ὁ ἀρχηγὸς τῆς ζωῆς, ii. 586.
 ἀρχ. καὶ σωτὴρ, 729; i. 716.
 ἀρχηγὸς τῆς πίστεως, 655 ἐκ γένου ἀρχιερατικῶν, i. 720 ἀρχιερεῖς, i. 828. ἀρχιερεῖς, 629. 728. 729. ἀρχ. καὶ γραμματεῖς, i. 9
 ἀρχισυνάγωγος, i. 287
 ἀρχιτέκτων, ii. 150
 ἀρχιτελώνης, i. 479
 ἀρχιτρίκλιτος, i. 532
 ἀρχομαι, i. 453. 697
 ὁ ἀρχων τοῦ κόσμου, i. 634. 663.
 ὁ ἀρχων τῆς ἰερωσύνης τοῦ δήμου, ii. 380. 381. ἀρχοντες,
 i. 808; ii. 142. ὁ ἀρχων τῶν βασιλείων τῆς γῆς, 648
 ἀσάλευτος, i. 884
 ἀσέβεια, ii. 11. 560
 ἀσεβής, ii. 502
 τὰ ἔργα ἀσεβείας ἀσεβεῖν, ii.
 645. ἀσέλγεια, i. 303; ii. 395. 721
 ἀσημος, i. 847
 ἀσθενία, ii. 325. ἀσθ. τῆς σαρκὸς, 355. ἀσθενεῖν, i.
 59; ii. 66. 600
 ἀσθενίω, i. 559; ii. 480
 ἀσθενήματα, ii. 116.
 ἀσθενής, i. 618; ii. 40. 158. 311
 τὸν ἀσθενούντα τῇ πίστει, ii.
 109

Ἀσιαρχαί, i. 831
 ἀστία, i. 880
 ἀστίτοι διατελεῖται, i. 882 ἀσκοί, i. 68
 ἀσφοτος, ii. 402, 403
 ἀσκῶ, i. 860
 ἀσταζομαι, i. 39. 73. 833. 842.
 866 ἀσπιλος, ii. 530. 680
 ἀσπυδοί, ii. 15. 544
 ἄσπον, i. 878
 ἀστατίω, ii. 159
 ἀστίαις, ii. 649. ἀστίαις τῇ Θιῶ, i. 738
 ἀσθήρικος, ii. 750
 ἀστοργος, ii. 15. 544
 ἀστοι, distinguished from ξίνοις,
 i. 818
 ἀστοχίω, ii. 501. 532.
 ἀστραπή, i. 438
 ἀστράπτω, i. 507
 ἀσύνητος, ii. 15. 87
 ἀσύνητος, ii. 15
 ἀσφαλές, ii. 428
 ἐν ἀσφαλείᾳ, i. 728; ii. 478 ἀσφαλῶς, i. 348
 ἀσχημονίω, ii. 227
 ἀσυντία, ii. 403. 555
 ἀσώτως, i. 458
 ἀτακτος, ii. 480
 ἀτάκτως, ii. 495
 ἀτιμίζω, i. 500. 698. 714 ἀτιμάω, i. 333. 851
 ἀτιμὴ καπνοῦ, i. 706; ii. 693.
 ἀτοπος, i. 505. 885; ii. 494 αὐθάδης, ii. 555
 αὐθιγνίω, ii. 509
 αὐλίω, i. 82
 αὐλή, i. 214. 228. αὐλή τῶν προβάτων, 610
 αὐξάνω, ii. 441
 αὐξάνει τὴν αὐξήσιν τοῦ Θεοῦ,
 ii. 394. 451
 αὐριον, i. 50
 αὐστηρός, i. 481
 αὐτάρκης, ii. 436
 αὐτοκατάκριτος, ii. 564 αὐτόματος, i. 281, 775
 αὐτότης and ἰσότητης, ii. 737 αὐτὸς for οὗτος, i. 7. 348. αὐ-τοῖ οὗτοι, 860. ἐπὶ τὸ αὐ., 712. 713. αὐτὸ τοῦτο, ii.
 413 ἀφαιρεῖν ἁμαρτίας, ii. 519 ἀφανίζω, i. 46. 787
 ἀφαντος γίνεσθαι, i. 511 ἀφανής, ii. 598
 ἰγγυε ἀφανισμοῦ, ii. 622 ἀφιδρών, i. 122
 ἀφιδία σώματος, ii. 452 ἀφελότης, i. 713
 ἀφισι, i. 389; ii. 375
 ἀφθαρσία, ii. 18. 411
 ἀφθαρτος, ii. 702
 ἀφίημι, i. 59. 449. 596. 600; ii.
 177. ἀφίημι ὀφειλήματα,
 i. 44. ἀφ. ἁμαρτίας, 64.
 ἀφ. φωνῆν, 354. ἀφήκε τὸ πνεῦμα, 241
 ἀφιλάγαθος, ii. 544. 545
 ἀφιλάργυρος, ii. 666
 ἀφίστημι, i. 413. 731; ii. 526 ἀφωρᾶν, ii. 655

ἀφωρίζω, i. 212. 341. 778; ii. 5.
 337 ἀφορμὴ, ii. 364. 523. ἀφ. ἐκκούπτειν, 316
 ἀφορσύνω, i. 303
 ἀφρων, ii. 250. 403
 ἀφνυπίζω, i. 414
 ἀφνυπνῶ, i. 414
 ἀφωμοιωμένος, ii. 614
 ἀφρων, ii. 231
 ἀφωρισμένος εἰς εὐαγγέλιον,
 ii. 5
 Ἀχαΐα, ii. 305
 ἀχλὺς, i. 780
 ἀχρεῖος, i. 212
 ἀχρεῖωδ, ii. 27
 ἀχρηστος, ii. 568
 ἀχρη, distinguished from μέχρη,
 i. 780; ii. 42. ἀχρη καιροῦ,
 i. 780
 ἀχρει, ὡλήκ, i. 834
 ὁ ἀψευδὴς Θεός, ii. 553

B.

Βααλ, ii. 88
 Βαβυλών, ii. 729. 841
 βαθμὸς καλός, ii. 512. 513 τὰ βάθη τοῦ Θεοῦ, ii. 145. 801 βαθύς, used with words denoting time, i. 507
 βατὰ τῶν φοινίκων, i. 629. 630 βάλλω for ἐμβάλλω, ἰνέω, i.
 68; for καταβάλλω, 211.
 βάλλω εἰς τὴν καρδίαν, 638.
 βάλλω ἔξω, 32. ἰβίβλητο, jacobai, 465. βάλλειν ἐπὶ κλίην, ii. 801
 βαπτίζω, i. 17. 697. 698. βαπ-τίζω ἐν Πνεύμ. ἁγίῳ καὶ ὕδατι, 19. βαπτίζεσθαι εἰς τὸν Ἰορδάνην, 255. ἐπὶ τῷ ὀνόμ. Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, 710.
 εἰς τὸν ὄνατον Χριστοῦ, ii.
 46. εἰς τὸν Μωϋσῆν, 199.
 ἔπι τῶν νικητῶν, 249
 βάπτισμα Ἰωάννου, i. 167.
 βάπτισμα μετανοίας, 256.
 827. βάπτισμα ἔχον βαπτισθῆναι, ii. 446
 βαπτισμοί, ii. 604
 ὁ βαπτιστής, a name of office,
 i. 15
 βάρβαροι, ii. 8. 231. 454, 455. οἱ βάρβαροι, i. 884
 βάρος, applied to laws, &c., i.
 801; ii. 368. βάρος δόξης,
 ii. 284. ἐν βάρει ἰναί, 465 Βαρτίαιος, i. 327
 βαρὺ, αὐτοκράτης, ii. 244
 βαρύνω, i. 216
 βασανίζωμαι, i. 57. 115. 261 βασανιστής, i. 145
 βασανιστὴς, i. 27. 467
 βασίλεια, denoting people, ii.
 792. ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ Θεοῦ,
 i. 16. 50. 492. 539. ὁ βασ.
 τοῦ Χριστοῦ καὶ Θεοῦ, ii.
 399. ὁ βασ. τῶν οὐρανῶν,
 i. 16. 33
 ὁ Βασιλεὺς τοῦ Ἰσραὴλ, i. 529.
 ὁ βασ. τῶν αἰώνων, ii. 504.

ὁ Βασ. τῶν βασιλευντων, 530. Βασ. δικαιοσύνης, 614.
 Βασ. ἰρήνης, 28.
 βασιλεύς, i. 14
 βασιλικός, i. 557; ii. 682 βασίς, i. 715
 βασκάζω, ii. 344
 βαστάζω, i. 19. 59. 157. 617. 627. 658. 684. 757. 846; ii. 117; for περιφέρω, ii. 368.
 371. βαστάζειν τὰ ὑποδήματα, i. 19. φορτίον βαστ., ii. 369 βάτραχοι, ii. 848
 βαττολογία, i. 43
 βδελύγμα τῆς ἐρημώσεως, i. 198. 464 βδελυσμένος, ii. 28
 βδελυκτός, i. 198; ii. 557 βίβαιοι, ii. 583
 βιβαιοῦσαι τὰς ἐπαγγελίας, ii. 119. βιβαιοῦν τὴν καρδίαν, 447. 667 βίβλος, ii. 502. 517. 659. 660 Βεελζεβούλ, i. 75
 Βελλιαρ, ii. 295
 Βιλτιον, ii. 537
 Βαρύκη, i. 866. 867
 Βηθαβαρά, i. 524
 Βηθανία πέραν τοῦ Ἰορδάνου, i. 524 Βηθεσδά, i. 558
 βῆμα, i. 735. 865
 βιέζομαι, i. 81
 βισταί, i. 81
 βιβλίον, i. 389
 βιβλος, i. 4. τῶν προφητῶν, 741. βιβλ. ζωῆς, ii. 434 βίος, means of living, i. 458 βίωσις, i. 869
 βλασφημία, i. 64; ii. 505. 561 βλασφημία, i. 303; ii. 398. τοῦ Πνεύματος, i. 91 βλάφμενος, ii. 544
 βλίπω, its signification, i. 748, for ἐπιβλίσκω, 35. 51; ii. 447. βλίσκω τὴν φωνήν, 650. βλίσκω ἐαυτοῦ, 428. βλίψ. μή τις, 447 βοάει, cattle, i. 534
 βοάω, i. 475
 Βουεργίς, i. 273
 βοήθεια, i. 878; ii. 599
 βοηθία, i. 845; ii. 588 βούνοσι, i. 121
 βολίζω, i. 880. 881
 βόσκω, i. 690
 βοτάνη, ii. 607
 βουλαί τῶν καρδιῶν, ii. 156 βουλή ὁρίσμενη, i. 707
 βούλομαι, i. 7; ii. 523 βραβύς, ii. 456
 βραδύς, ii. 513
 βραδυπλοῖα, i. 876
 βραδὺν τῇ καρδίᾳ, i. 510
 βραχύνω, i. 635. 636
 βρέφον, i. 477
 βρίχω, i. 39
 βροχή, i. 55
 βρόχος, ii. 184
 βρώματα καὶ πόματα, ii. 626.
 βοῶσις, i. 47

βυθίζω εἰς ὄλεθρον, ii. 528 βυρεῖς, i. 763

Γ.

Γαβριήλ, i. 366. 747, 748
 γάγγραινα, ii. 540
 χώρα τῶν Γαδαρηνῶν, i. 284. 890 γάζω, i. 751
 γάμος, i. 174. 530; ii. 666 γάρ, namque, i. 6. 424; ii. 579; although, 149; and, 585; for ὅτι, 618; for οὖν, 756; intensive, 590; resumptive, 612; why, 693; referring to a clause omitted, i. 87. 123. 236; ii. 401. 414. 417. 469. 496. 549. 561. 563. 568. 592. 595. 597. 661. οὐ γάρ, i. 811. τί γάρ, ii. 416
 Γέννα, i. 34
 Γεθσημανή, i. 223
 γενεά, i. 55
 γενεαλογίαι, ii. 564. ἀπέρωντοι, 500 γενίσις, i. 111
 γένισις, i. 6
 γένηματα, procreas, i. 442 γεννάω, used in genealogies, i. 5; to convert, ii. 567 γεννήματα ἐχιδνῶν, i. 18. τῆς δικαιοσύνης, ii. 306 γέννησις, i. 6
 γίνη γλωσσῶν, ii. 221. 224 γενομένος ἐν ἑαυτῷ, i. 775 χώρα τῶν Γεργεσηνῶν, i. 890 γερούσια, i. 728
 γενοῦμαι, i. 764. 836; ii. 452. 606. γυῖσθαι θανάτου, i. 134 γεώργιον, ii. 150
 ἡ γῆ, denoting Judaea, i. 401. τῇ Ἰούδα, 10. τῇ Ζαβουλόν, 25. τῇ Ναφθαλαίμ, 26.
 γίγνεσθαι, 'to become,' i. 720 γίνομαι for κτίζομαι, 517; for ποιῶμαι, 733. γίνεσθαι εἰς οὐδὲν, 740. γενομένοι, deceitful, ii. 5. γενομ. ἐκ γυναικός, 353 γινώσκω, i. 55. 616; ii. 415. 430 γλιεύκοι, i. 705
 γλώσσα πνεύσε, i. 703. λαλεῖν γλωσσαις, 703. 769 γλωσσόκομον, i. 628
 γραφεῖν, i. 314
 γνήσιον τέκνον, ii. 500. 553 γνησιότης, ii. 425. 434 γνόφος, ii. 661
 γνωρίζω, ii. 218. 238. 335. 375. 387. 418 γνώσις, ii. 220. 221. 441. 446 γνώστης, i. 869
 γνωστός, i. 779; used as a substantive, ii. 11 γογγυσμός, i. 581; ii. 424. 787 γογγυστής, ii. 786
 Γολγοθα, i. 238
 γόμος, ii. 852
 γράμμα, bond or contract, i. 462.

γράμματα, letters, learning, 582; an epistle, ii. 370 γραμματεῖς, i. 9. 108. 832; distinguished from νομικοί, 181 γραπτός, ii. 21
 γραφή, Scripture, i. 752; ii. 680; denoting the Holy Spirit, ii. 347. γραφὴ πάσα, 547. καθὼς γέγραπται, ii. 23 γραῶδη, ii. 517
 γρηγορίαι, i. 209; ii. 479. 617 γύναι, σπαντὸν πρὸς ἀνδρά, βίαια, ii. 517 γυνασία, ii. 517
 γυνή, a matron, i. 348. γύναι, used as a form of address, 531.
 ἀδελφὴ γυνή, ii. 191
 γυνῆαι τῶν πλατυῶν, i. 43.

Δ.

δαίμονιζομαι, i. 27
 δαιμόνιον ἔχειν, i. 70. 583; in the sense of δαίμων, 815. δαιμόνια, evil demons, ii. 205; the spirits of departed saints, 825. δαδασαλίαι δαιμονίων, 515 δαίμων, i. 815; distinguished from θεοί, ib.
 ἐν δακτύλῳ Θεοῦ, i. 436 Δαλμανουθά, i. 308
 δέ, imo vero, ii. 71; adversative, 546. δέ καί, 134; continuative, 689; though, 702 δεδομένος τῷ πνεύματι, i. 838 δέρισι, i. 699; ii. 413. 505. 601 δαί, i. 720. 844. Idem, ii. 630.
 δαί σὺν, i. 701
 δειγματίζω, ii. 450
 δαίνομαι, i. 24. 563. 617 δαίλος, ii. 862
 δέ σαιρα, i. 218
 δαίμωνιον Κυριακόν, ii. 214. & τὸ ἴδιον, ib. δεισιδαιμονία, i. 816
 δεισιδαιμονία, i. 867
 Δεκάπολις, i. 28
 δικτός for ἀριστός, i. 389; ii. 437 δολαζίζομαι, ii. 676
 δεξιολάβοι, i. 855
 δεξιὸν ὀφθαλμόν, i. 35. δεξιὸν δόναμι, ii. 341 δέσμενος τοῦ Θεοῦ, i. 762 δέρον, i. 207. δέρον αἶρα, ii. 197. δέρον εἰς πρόσωπον, ii. 317 δέσμιος Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, ii. 566. 567 Δεισιπότης, i. 380; ii. 782 δέτρο, i. 624
 δέυτε, i. 26
 δευτεραίος, i. 887
 σαββάτω δευτεροπρώτῳ, i. 398 δίχομαι, i. 81; ii. 467 δῖος, i. 131. δίδασαι γυναικί, ii. 181 δημαγογία, i. 777
 δῆμος, i. 777. 812

διά, prol. i. 860. διά τοῦ τεί-χους, 758. διά for διαγινω-μίνω, ii. 338
 διαβάλλομαι, i. 22. 461 διάβολος, i. 22; ii. 544. ἐπι-πτεῖν εἰς κρίμα τοῦ Διαβ., 512. παγίς τοῦ Διαβ., 512
 διαγινώσκω, i. 854. 861
 διαγινώσκω, i. 867
 διαγγίλλω, i. 845
 διαγογγύζω, i. 456
 διάγω, ii. 561
 διαδέχομαι, i. 742
 διαδίδωμι, i. 724
 διάδοχος, i. 863
 διαθήκη, i. 220. 719; ii. 348. 617.
 621. 628. διαθ. περιτομῆς, i.
 736. διαθήκη τῆς ἐπαγγελίας, ii. 383
 διαίρει, ii. 218
 διακαταλέγωμαι, i. 826
 διακονέω, i. 24. 59. 412. 732; ii.
 704 διακονέω, i. 702. 732. 773; ii.
 99. 218. 291
 διάκονος, i. 160. 363; ii. 105; distinguished from δούλος, i.
 160 διακοῦμαι, i. 856
 διακρίνω, i. 167. 176. 770; ii.
 38. 116. 216. 681. μὴδὲν δια-κρ., i. 766; ii. 674. οὐδὲν διακρ., i. 797. διακρινεσθαι πρὸς τινα, 770
 διακρίσεις πνευματικῶν, ii. 221 διακωλύω, i. 20
 διαλέγομαι, i. 812
 δάδακτος, i. 783
 διαλλάττομαι, i. 34
 διαλογισμός, i. 381. 512; ii.
 424. 508
 διαλύω, i. 730
 διαμαρτύρομαι, i. 467. 711.
 750. ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ, ii.
 524. 548
 διαμερίζομαι, i. 702, 703 διανέμομαι, i. 721
 διανύω, i. 366
 διάνοια καρδίας, i. 370; ii. 444 διανοίγω, i. 812. διαν. τῆν καρδίαν, 807
 διαπαύω, i. 762
 διαπλάω, i. 875
 διαπονέομαι, i. 719. 808.
 διαπορέω, i. 419. 704. 765. 841 διαπρίομαι, i. 729. 744 διασεισθε μνημόν, i. 385 διασκορπίζω, i. 370. 468. 461 διασπορά, i. 587; ii. 672. 701 διαστελλόμενος, i. 661
 διαστολή, ii. 29. 85
 διαστρέφω, i. 137. 779. 780.
 840 διαταγή, ii. 105. διαταγῇ τῶν ἀγγέλων, i. 744; ii. 366 διατάσσω, i. 78. 821. 861. 742;
 ii. 350
 διατηρῶ, i. 383
 διατίθωμι, i. 496. διατίθεσθαι διαθήκην, ii. 621. διαθεμένους, 629 διατροφή, ii. 526
 διαφέρωμαι, i. 881

διαφέρει, οὐδὲν μοι, ii. 339, 340.
 τὰ διαφέροντα, ii. 414
 διαφθείρομαι, ii. 283
 διαφθορὰν εἶδειν, i. 708 διαφόροι βαπτισμοί, ii. 626 διαφορώτερος, ii. 579
 διαχειρίζομαι, i. 729
 διακτικτός, ii. 511
 διδάσκω for διδάδαγμένος, i. 575 διδασκαλία, ii. 502. 518. 549. διδασκαλία δαιμονίων, 515 διδασκαλός, i. 778; ii. 392. ὁ διδάσκ., a title applied to Christ, i. 527: distinguished from προφήτης, ii. 224. διδ.
 ὑψηλόν, ii. 22
 διδάσκων, ii. 99
 διδάχθαι, i. 261. 583; ii. 604 τὰ διδάχμα, i. 138
 Δίδωμι, whether a cognomen,
 i. 620, 621
 δίδωμι, to suffer, i. 708; to inflict, ii. 324. δίδοναι καρ-πόν, 102. δὲ ἐργασίας, 447. δὲ τόπον, 396. δίδωναι ἑαυτόν, i. 831. δὲ τόπον τῇ ὁργῇ, ii. 103. δού-ναι ψυχῇ, i. 160. δίδωμαι μετανοῶν, 729. μὴ δοῦναι ἑαυτόν εἰς τὸ θάνατον, 831.
 δίδοναι τόπον τῷ Διαβόλῳ,
 ii. 396. δίδου νόμον, 621 διελίξω, i. 8
 διέξοδοι τῶν ὁδῶν, i. 176 διέρχομαι, i. 479; ii. 42. 598 διερωτάω, i. 766
 διατήρῶ, i. 13
 διδάσσω, i. 883
 δεικνύμενος, ii. 597
 διίσχυρίζομαι, i. 500. 776 δικαιοκρισία, ii. 18
 δίκαιος, i. 6. 77. 226, 237.
 457. 668; ii. 27. 413. 643;
 distinguished from εὐλα-βής, i. 379; from ἀγαθός,
 ii. 40. 55. ὁ Δίκαιος, applied to the Messiah, i. 743 δικαιοσύνη, i. 20. 29. 33. 373.
 658. 659; ii. 49. 138. 307.
 429. ἡ δικ. τοῦ Θεοῦ, i. 50;
 ii. 9. 83
 δικαίω, i. 464; ii. 25. 360. 515. δικαιοῦν τὸν Θεόν, i. 407 δικαίωμα, i. 364. δικ. τοῦ Θεοῦ, ii. 16. δικ. τοῦ νόμου, 23. 61.
 δικαίωμα λατρείας, 623
 δικαίωμα, 856
 δικαίως καὶ ὁσίως, ii. 486. 560 δικαίως, ii. 38. δικ. ζωῆς, 44 δικαστής, i. 739; distinguished from μεριστής, 441
 δική, i. 885; for καταδική, 866 δικτυόν, i. 26. 893
 δίλογος, ii. 512
 διό, ii. 17. 218. 423. 479. 567 Διοπατήρ, i. 832 διόρθωσις, ii. 626
 διορίζω, i. 47
 Διόσκουροι, i. 886
 διότι, πῆλυστος, ii. 11; ὅτι, ii.
 29 διπλός, ii. 674; for πολὺς, 823 διπλότερον, i. 188

 διατάξω, i. 116. 248
 μάχιρα δίστομος, ii. 597
 διυλίζω, i. 189
 διαίξω, i. 77
 διχοστασία, ἤλος, and ἔρις, distinction between, ii. 149.
 366 διχοτομέω, i. 206
 δίψωμος, ii. 674
 διωγμός, ii. 70
 διώκω, i. 31 bis; ii. 359. 429.
 451. 481. 528
 δόγμα, ii. 449
 δοκεῖ, ii. 238. 658. δ. εἶναι τι, ii.
 339 δογματίζω, ii. 451
 δοκέω, i. 18. 801; ii. 153. 158.
 186; never pleonastic, i. 327.
 414. 594. 638
 δοκιμάζω, ii. 14. 22. 97. 216.
 400. 414. 464. 482. 591 δοκιμασία, ii. 591
 δοκιμή, ii. 426. 673
 δοκιμῶν, ii. 673. 702
 δόκιμος, ii. 114. 124. 675. 856, 857 δοκός, i. 51
 δόλος, i. 303; ii. 464
 δόξα, i. 49. 666; ii. 18. 212.
 251; salvation, 856. ἀπὸ δόξης εἰς δόξαν, 279. δόξα Θεοῦ, i. 744; ii. 29. 415. 423.
 433. Κυρίου, i. 378. δόξα ἀνδρός, i. c. ἡ γυνή, ii. 210.
 διὰ δόξης καὶ ἀρετῆς, 732.
 δοῦναι δόξαν Θεῷ, 679
 δοξάζω, i. 32. 664, 665. 716; ii.
 224. 494
 δουλαγωγία, ii. 197
 δουλεύω, i. 838; ii. 463 δουλεύειν δι' ἀγάπης, ii. 364 δούλος, i. 57. 144; derivation of,
 ii. 5; distinguished from δίακονος, i. 160; used as adjective, ii. 50. δούλος Θεοῦ, i. 808;
 ii. 5. 552. μορφὴν δούλου λαβών, 422
 δουλοῦσθαι τῇ δικαιοσύνῃ, ii.
 50
 δύναι, i. 291. 815, 816; ii.
 441 δύναμις, i. 55. 365. 698. 723;
 ii. 378. 441; for ὁ Θεός, i.
 230. δυνάμεις, i. 109; ii. 70.
 224. 583. δυνάμεις τοῦ οὐρανίου, i. 202. δυνάμεις καὶ σμῆτις, i. 747. ἐν δυνάμει, ii.
 487. δυν. Θεοῦ, ib. δυνάμεις μέλλοντες αἰῶνος, ii.
 607 δυνάστης, i. 370. 751
 δυνάτις, ii. 329
 δυνατός, i. 201. 510. 708. 738.
 825. 826. δυνατός ἐργου, 738; ii. 93. 111. 116. δ. ἐν ἔργῳ καὶ λόγῳ, i. 510. ὁ Δυνατός, the Almighty, i. 370. οἱ δυνατοί, 864; ii. 117 δύο δύο, i. 291
 δυσεντέριον, i. 886
 δυσερμηνεύτος, ii. 602
 δυσκόλος, i. 152

δωδεκάφυλον, i. 869
 δῶμα, i. 764
 δωριά, i. 710; ii. 391
 δωριάν, i. 72. 118. 656; ii. 344 δῶρα καὶ θυσίαι, ii. 599. 620.
 625 δῶρημα, ii. 43
 δῶρον, i. 34. 118.

E.

εα, i. 260
 εἰν for εἰν, i. 73. 156; for εἴ' εἰν, 634. εἰν οὖν, now if, ii. 234 εἰσπερ, ii. 590
 εἰω, i. 794
 'Εβραῖος, i. 731, 732. 'Εβραῖος εἰς 'Εβραίων, ii. 318. 429; distinguished from 'Ισραηλι-ται, 318
 'Εβραῖστι, Syro-Chaldaic, i. 505
 ἐγγίζω τῷ Θεῷ, ii. 616
 ἐγγυος, ii. 617
 ἐγίρω, i. 8; ii. 401; to lift out,
 i. 87; to heal, 262. ἐγίρωμαι, applied to the birth of eminent persons, 80
 ἐγκάθετος, i. 485
 ἐγκαίρω, ii. 629
 τὰ ἐγκαίρια, i. 615
 ἐγκαλεῖσθαι ἄλλους, i. 833 ἐγκαταλείπειν, ii. 282. 637 ἐγκεντρῖζω, ii. 92
 ἐγκομβόμαι, ii. 727
 ἐγκόπτω, i. 856. 857; ii. 862 ἐγκράτεια, i. 863; ii. 367. 734, 735 ἐγκρατεύομαι, ii. 196
 ἐκαφίξω, i. 483
 εἰδραῖος, ii. 185. 256. 257. 445 εἰσλοθηρησκία, ii. 450. 451 εἶος, i. 809
 εἰ, i. 697; with Indicative, 148; imprecatory, i. 809; for πῶ-τερον, i. 450; καὶ? 499. 697;
 ii. 592; affirmative, 419;
 πῶ quidem, i. 720. 770. 870;
 for εἴ, i. 355; ii. 475. εἰ ἄρα, i. 749. εἰ δέ, 49; ii. 418.
 εἰ μὴ for ἄλλῃ, i. 86; ii. 334.
 εἰ τι for δ τι, ii. 299. εἴγε, since, 385. 395. εἴπωρ, πῶ modo, 64; εἰquidem, 485. 706 εἴγε, ii. 445
 εἰδος, ii. 492
 εἶδω, i. 209. 631. ἴδω θάνατον, 390. διαφθοράν, 709.
 περὶ τοῦ λόγου, 797; for εὐρίσκω, 10.
 εἰδωλεῖον, ii. 188
 εἰδωλόθυτα, ii. 188
 εἰδωλολατρεῖαι, ii. 721
 εἰδωλόλατρεν, ii. 167
 εἰδωλον, ii. 187. εἰδωλα τὰ ἄφωνα, 218
 εἰκῆ, i. 33; ii. 240. 845 εἰκών, ii. 253. 632. εἰκὼν Θεοῦ, applied to Christ, 396. 442.
 εἰκὼν καὶ δόξα Θεοῦ, i. α. ἀνθρ, 210
 εἰλικρίνεια, ii. 165
 εἰλικρινῆς, ii. 414. 746

εἶναι παρά τινος, 273. οὐκ εἶναι, 'to be dead,' 13 εἴπωρ, ii. 431
 εἰρηνέω, ii. 480
 εἰρήνη, i. 662. 759. 802; ii. 367.
 683. εἰρ. θμῖν, i. 687. ὁ Θεὸς τῇ εἰρήνῃ, ii. 482
 497. ὅπως εἰς εἰρήνην, i.
 289. σύνδεσμος τῇ εἰρ., ii.
 390. τὸ εὐαγγέλιον τῇ εἰρ.,
 409. εἰρ. καὶ ἀσφάλεια, 478.
 εἰρηκός, ii. 658
 εἰρηνοποιέω, ii. 444
 εἰρηνοποιός, i. 30
 εἰς for τίς, i. 60. 68. 149. εἰς καθ' εἰς, 344. εἰς τὸν ἴνα, ii.
 479. εἰν, denoting enumeration, i. 278; and or result, ii.
 425 εἰν, with adjectives of the comparative degree, i. 268. εἰς τὸ for ὅσος, ii. 301. 349
 εἰσάγω, ii. 580
 εἰσακούομαι, i. 364; ii. 601 εἰσδίδωμι, ii. 296
 εἰσέρχομαι, i. 225; ii. 42 εἰσῆλθε καὶ ἐξῆλθε, i. 759 εἰσοδος, denoting entrance on an office, i. 784; ii. 463 εἴτα; ὥστε? ii. 657
 εἰ for ἀπὸ or ἐπὶ, i. 573; ii.
 418. 501
 ἐμβαλλω, i. 69. 93. 108. 258.
 401. 744. 812; ii. 685. ἐκ-βάλλωμαι, i. 69. 634. ἐκβα-λὼν ἐξω, 762
 ἐκβασίς τῇ ἀναστροφῇ, ii.
 667 ἐκβολὴν ποιεῖν, i. 879
 ἐκγονα, ii. 520
 ἐκδανασκομαι, ii. 327
 ἐκδίδωμι, i. 559; ii. 217. 635.
 645 ἐκδημεῖν ἀπὸ τοῦ Κυρίου, ii.
 286 ἐκδίδωμαι, i. 171
 ἐκδίδωμι, i. 332
 ἐκδικήσεις, i. 200; ii. 496 ἐκδικος, ii. 105
 ἐκδιώκω, ii. 468
 ἐκδοτον λαβεῖν, i. 707
 ἐκδοχή, ii. 638
 ἐκδύω, i. 431
 ἐκαὶ for ἐκείνα, i. 14; ellipsis of,
 after verbs of motion, 864 ἐκζητέω, ii. 702. ἐκζητεῖν τὸν Κύριον, i. 799
 ἐκθαμβόμαι, i. 346
 ἐκθετα ποιεῖν, i. 738
 ἐκκαθαίρω, ii. 542
 ἐκκακίω, i. 473; ii. 369. 387, 388. 496
 ἐκκλησία, i. 130. 740; ii. 213.
 587. τῇ ἑνώμφ. ἐκ., i. 833 ἐκκομίζω, i. 406
 ἐκκόπτειν ἀφορμήν, ii. 816 ἐκκρεμδομαι, i. 484
 ἐκλήρωται, i. 697. 797; ii. 374 ἐκλείπειν, oscil. τὸν βίον, i. 463 ἐκλεκτὴ κυρία, whether a proper name, ii. 774. ἐκλεκτοί,
 i. 200; ii. 701. ἐκλ. ἀγγελοί, ii. 524. ἐκλεκτοί, distinguished from ἐλητοί, i.

 157. ἐκλεκτός, ii. 710
 ἐλλογῇ, ii. 89. 461
 ἐλύομαι, ii. 369
 ἐκράσσω, i. 627
 ἐκρίω, ἐκρίνω, i. 562 ἐκρήφω, ii. 250
 ἐκροῖς ἀμαρτάνων, ii. 605 ἐκτεράζω, i. 23. 430
 ἐκτετάνωμι, ii. 87
 ἐκτίπτω, i. 339; ii. 74. 228.
 360 ἐκτλέρωσι, i. 785
 ἐκτλεσόμενοι ἐπὶ τῇ διδασκῇ τοῦ Κυρίου, i. 780
 ἐκτύνω, ii. 356
 ἐκστασις, i. 395. 764
 ἐκστρέφω, ii. 664
 ἐκταράσσω, i. 808
 ἐκταρῆς, i. 722; ii. 774
 ἐκτίθημι, i. 826
 ἐκτιναξάμενοι τὰ ἱμάτια, i.
 823
 ἐκτός, ii. 247
 ἐκτρίψω, ii. 501
 ἐκτρομα, ii. 242. 243
 ἐκφύρω, i. 726; ii. 527 ἐκφοβος, i. 863; ii. 662 ἐκχίω, i. 534. 705
 ἐκψύχω, i. 725
 ἐλαττω, ii. 614
 ἐλαχιστος, i. 33. ἐλαχιστότερος, ii. 386
 ἐλεγχος, ii. 548
 ἐλίγγω, i. 143. 601. 657. 658;
 ii. 401. 549. 556. 560. 657. 700
 ἐλεῖν, i. 30; ii. 279. 426 ἐλεημοσύνη, i. 41. 714
 ἐλεος, i. 67. 86. 371. 374; ii.
 599. 701. ποιῆσαι ἐλεος, i.
 373 ἐλεοθερία, ii. 679. 712
 ἐλεός. ἡλεκμῶσι, i. 465 ἐλεύω, i. 574
 ἔλω, i. 807
 'Ελληνες, i. 304. 631; ii. 136.
 'Ελλ. καὶ Βέρβεροι, ii. 8
 'Ελληνισταί, i. 731. 771
 ἐλλογῇ, ii. 669
 ἐλπίζω, ii. 704
 ἐλπίς βλεπομένη, ii. 66
 ἐπ' ἐλπίδι, ii. 65. διὰ τὴν ἐλπ., 440. ἐλπ. τῇ δόξῃ, 445.
 ἐλπ. σωτηρίας, 478. ἐλπ.
 ᾧσα, 701
 'Ελῶμας, derivation and meaning of, i. 779. 780
 ἐμβαττω, ii. 451
 ἐμβαλέω, i. 49. 153. 698 ἐμβριμόμαι, i. 70. 264
 ἐμβαίνομαι, i. 871
 'Εμψόσος, i. 609
 ἐμνύνω, ii. 347
 ἐμοί for εἰς ἐμὴ, ii. 371 ἐμπαίγω, i. 12
 ἐμπαίκτην, ii. 787
 ἐμπτίπτω εἰς χεῖρά τινος, ii.
 638
 ἐμψύω, i. 754
 ἐμπορεύομαι, ii. 741
 ἐμπορος ἀνθρώπος, i. 107 ἐμφαίγω, i. 854; ii. 630 ἐμφοβος, i. 512. 863

λόγος ἡμῶντος, ii. 678

ὡν, by virtue of, 167; at or by, 428; for eis, 598; on the authority of, 728; for σύν, 737; de, 442; for διά, 622; in respect to, 247; ἐν τοῖς ποσίν, under foot, 51. ἐν ἰμοί, by or through me, ii. 336

ἐπαγκαλιζομαι, i. 318

ἐπαρχομαι, ii. 345. 413

ἐπιδείγμα, ii. 419. 485

ἐπιδεικνυμι, ii. 550. 551

ἐπιδήμιω, ii. 286

ἐπιδόξασθαι τι, ii. 486

ἐπιδυμο γάμον, i. 176. ἀπὸ τριχῶν καμήλου, 17. ἐπιδύματα προβάτων, 53 ἐπιδυναμῶ, ii. 436. 537 ἐπιδύω, i. 513; ii. 108. 455. 478 ἐπείργει, ii. 378. 386. 394. 433.

ἐν. πλάτης, 492

ἐπαργίω, i. 110. 467. 468. 491;

ii. 340. 878. 424. ἐπαργίωμα, 53. 283. 698 ἐπείργημα, ii. 218. δυνάμει, 221

ἐπεργή, ii. 258. 597

ἐπέχω, i. 293. 439; ii. 360 ἐπιθυμῶμαι, i. 7

ἐπιπύς, i. 755

ἐπιπύχον, i. 263

ἐπὶ τῇ πίστει, ii. 393.

ἐν. τοῦ Πενιμ., 390

ἐποχλῶ, ii. 660

ἐποχος, ii. 682. for ἐπιχόμενοι,

588. ἐποχος τοῦ σώματος καὶ αἰμάτων τοῦ Κυρίου, 216.

ἐποχος θαλάττης, i. 230. ἐποχος τῇ κρίσει, 33. 34

ἐπιδάματα ἀνθρώπων, i. 120;

ii. 451

ἐπιτάξις, i. 216. 683

ἐπιτιθεῖν καὶ ἐπιτιθεῖν, ii. 865 ἐπιταξίς, ii. 505. 506. 516

ἐπιτολή, i. 615; ii. 530

ἐπιτόπιος, i. 843

ἐπιτρέπω, i. 171; ii. 497. ἐπιτρέπομαι, ii. 559

ἐπιρριπόμενοι τοῖς λόγοις τῆς πίστεως, ii. 517

ἐπιρροή, i. 739

ἐπιρροπή, ii. 169

ἐπιρροχάω, ii. 743

ἐπιρροχάω, ii. 617. ἐπιρροχά-ωειν τι, i. 868; ii. 88

ἐπιρροχίω, ii. 638

ἐπιρροχίζομαι, ii. 784

ἐπιρροχίω, i. 705

ἐπιρροχίω, i. 459. ἐπιρροχίω τοῦ

Θεοῦ, i. 763; ii. 524. ἐν. τοῦ πλήθους, i. 732

ἐπιρριπίζομαι, i. 705

ἐξ, distinguished from ἐπὶ, ii.

465

ἐξαγγέλλω, ii. 710

ἐξαγοράζω, ii. 548. ἐξαγορα-ζῶμενοι τὸν καιρὸν, 403

ἐξαρτία, i. 872; ii. 334

ἐξαιτιομαι, i. 496

ἐξακολουθῶ, ii. 727

ἐξαλείφω, i. 717; ii. 449

ἐξάλλομαι, i. 715

ἐξαναστασι τῶν νεκρῶν, ii.

480 ἐξανίστημι, i. 796

ἐξαπατῶ, ii. 55

ἐξάτινα, i. 314

ἐξαπορίομαι, ii. 265

ἐξαποστῆλλω, ii. 353

ἐξαρτίζω ἡμῶν, i. 842

ἐαυτῆς for παραντίκα, i. 294

ἐξιγείρω, ii. 77

ἐξιλίγγω, ii. 787

ἐξίλκομαι, ii. 676

ἐξίραμα, ii. 745

ἐξερυνάω, ii. 703

ἐξίρχομαι. to be born, i. 10; to appear, 393. 412. ἐξίρχ. ἐπὶ,

400. ἐξελθεῖν δόγμα, 373.

ἐξίρχ. ἐκ τῆς οὐφύτος τινός,

ii. 614

ἐξιστάω, i. 11

ἐξηγῶμαι, i. 522

ἐξηρησιμένους, ii. 548

ἐξηχῶμαι, ii. 462

ἐξίτι, ii. 603

ἐξίστημι, i. 89. 510. 747; ii.

288 ἐξισχύω, ii. 888

ἐξοδος, i. 422

ἐξομολογῶ, i. 18. 84. 494; ii.

698 ἐξορκίζω, i. 229

ἐξορκισταί, i. 826

ἐξορῶσσω, i. 265

ἐξουθενῶ, i. 502; ii. 481

ἐξουσία, i. 56. 520; ii. 578.

πνευμάτων, i. 71. 291. τοῦ πληθῶς, ii. 79. τοῦ σκότους,

442. γυνὴ οὐραίου ἐξουσίας ἔχει ἐπὶ τῆς κεφαλῆς, ii.

210. ἐξουσία, i. 408; ii.

79. ἐπὶ ἐξουσίαν, i. 58. ἐξ.

ἐπὶ τῶν ἰδῶν, 843

οὐ ἐξω, ii. 474. οὐ ἐξωθεν, 512

ἐξωθεῖν τὸ πλοῖον, i. 883 ἐξορτή, i. 215

ἐπαγγελία, ii. 849. 876. 517.

855. διὰ τῆς ἐκ., 358

ἐπαγγελία, ii. 73. 614

ἐπαγγέλλομαι, ii. 509

ἐπαγγέλλομαι, ii. 732

ἐπαγγίω ἐπὶ τινα, i. 728

ἐπαγωνίζεσθαι τῇ πίστει, ii.

781 ἐπαίνο, ii. 24. 105. 156

ἐπαίρω, i. 883; ii. 508

οὐκ ἐπαισχύνομαι, ii. 9. 587.

647 ἐπακολουθῶ, ii. 522

ἐπακούω, ii. 291

ἐπαναγκάζω, i. 801

ἐπανάγω, i. 394

ἐπαναπαύεσθαι τῷ νόμῳ, ii.

22 ἐπανίστημι, i. 74

ἐπανόρθωσις, ii. 518

ἐπάρω, i. 481; for πλεῖον, ii.

241 ἐπαρκεῖν θλιβομένοις, ii. 522 ἐπαρχία and ἐπιτροπή, i. 864 ἐπαυλις, i. 701

ἐπαύριον, i. 766

ἐπαφρίζω, ii. 785

ἐπει, ii. 26. 632

ἐπειδὴ, i. 367. 723

ἐπεισαγωγή, ii. 616

ἐπείκεινα, i. e. μίρη, i. 742 ἐπείκειναι, ii. 431

ἐπειδὴ, ii. 799

ἐπιρροχῶμαι, i. 491

ἐπιρροχῶμαι, i. 126

ἐπιρροχῶμαι, ii. 719

ἐπείχω, i. 714; ii. 425. 519

ἐπείρω, i. 39

ἐπὶ, with adjectives of comparative degree, i. 288; force of,

in composition, 44; ἀγαθῶν, 499; concerning, 730; ii. 505; super, 409; quod attinet ad, 619; prout, 626. ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτό, i. 713. ἐπ' ἀληθείας for ἐν ἀληθείᾳ, 391

ἐπιβαίνω, i. 864

ἐπιβάλλω, i. 68. 458. ἐπιβάλλιν τὰς χεῖρας, 773. ἐπιβαλὼν ἔκλειε, 351

ἐπιβαρῶ, ii. 270

ἐπιβλήω, i. 370; ii. 681

ἐπιβλήω for ἐπιρροχῶμαι, i. 68 ἐπιγαμβριεύω, i. 179

τὰ ἐπίγεια, ii. 433

ἐπιγενομένου νότου, i. 887 ἐπιγινώσκω, i. 721; ii. 293.

506 ἐπίγνωσις, ii. 29. 414. 441. 454.

506. 543. 553. 638

ἐπιδημοῦνται, i. 704. 815

ἐπιδικάζω, ii. 348

ἐπιδίδωμι, i. 435. 802

ἐπιδιορδομαι, ii. 554

ἐπιείκεια, i. 858

ἐπιείκεια, ii. 434. 712

ἐπιείκεια, i. 50; ii. 457

ἐπιεικείας, ii. 158

ἐπιείκεια χεῖρων, i. 149; ii. 605

ἐπιεικείας, i. 35. 458. 465; ii.

704. ἐπιεικείας ἐπιεικείας, i.

494 ἐπιεικείας κακῶν, ii. 201

ἐπιεικείας, i. 35. 599; ii. 453.

542. 545. 560. 711; personified, 676. τῆς σαρκὸς, 758; τῶν ὀφθαλμῶν, 758

ἐπιεικείας, i. 758; ii. 542

ἐπιεικείας, ii. 35

ἐπιεικείας, i. 588

ἐπείκειτο φωναῖς μεγάλας, i.

503. ἐπείκειται, ii. 625

Ἐπικούριος, i. 814

ἐπικουρία, i. 872

ἐπικρίνω, i. 504

ἐπιλαμβάνω, i. 824; ii. 529.

621. ἐπιλαμβάνειν τῆς χειρὸς, i. 854. ἐπιλαμβάνομαι,

485. 588. 815

ἐπιλαμβάνομενοι, ii. 431

ἐπιλάττω, ii. 759

ἐπιλάττω, i. 282

ἐπιμείλια, i. 834. 870

ἐπιμείλομαι, i. 432; ii. 511

ἐπιμείνω, ii. 418. 445

ἐπιμείνω, i. 748

ἐπιμοιροῦμαι, i. 840

ἐπιμοιρῶ, i. 37; ii. 803

ἐπιούσιος, i. 44

ἐπιπύτω, i. 747

ἐπιπλήσσω, ii. 117

ἐπιπύτω ὕμῳ, ii. 414. 426.

ἐπιπ. πρὸς φθόνον, 691

- ἐπιτόδοτος, ii. 434
 ἐπιτοδία, ii. 122
 ἐπιτρόπτω, i. 268
 ἐπιτρόπος, ii. 727
 ἐπισκίπτωμαι, i. 372. 732. 858 ἐπισκιάω, i. 136. 368
 ἐπισκοπή, i. 701; ii. 510 ἐν ἡμέρᾳ ἐπισκοπῆς, i. 483; ii. 711 ἐπισκοπος, i. 773. 837; ii. 280, 412. ἐπισκ. and πρεσβύτερος, 554 ἐπισπάω, ii. 179
 ἐπιστάτης, i. 394
 ἐπιστίλλω, i. 799
 ἐπιστήμων, ii. 688
 ἐπιστολή Χριστοῦ, denoting the Gospel, ii. 274. ἐπιστολαὶ συνστατικάί, ib.
 ἐπιστήριον, i. 799. τὴν καρδίαν, 365; ii. 463 ἐπιστροφή, κοινοποίησις, i. 796 ἐπισυνάγω, i. 193
 ἐπισυναγωγή, ii. 488. 637 ἐπισύστασις, i. 859
 ἐπισωρεύω, ii. 549
 ἐπιταγή, ii. 500. 558. 561 ἐπιτελέω, ii. 345. 413. 728 ἐπιτίθημι, i. 431. 748. 886 ἐπιτιμάω, i. 61. 132. 161; ii. 549 ἐπιτροπή and ἐπαρχία, i. 864 ἐπιτροπος, i. 156. 411. 864; ii. 352; distinguished from ἡγμών, ii. 232 ἐπιφαινομαι, ii. 559
 ἐπιφάνεια, ii. 491. 536. 550. 560 ἐπιφαύω, ii. 401
 ἐπιφύω, ii. 416. ἐπιφέρειν αἵτας, i. 828. τὴν ὀργὴν, ii. 26 ἐπιφωτῶν τι, i. 850
 ἐπιφύσσω, i. 245. 507
 ἐπιχειρίω, i. 362
 ἐπιχέω, i. 452
 ἐπιχορηγῶ, ii. 393. 451. 732 ἐπιχωρηγία τοῦ Πνύματος Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, ii. 417 ἐποικοδομέω, ii. 447
 ἐποπτεύω, ii. 711
 ἐπόπτης and ἀπόπτης, ii. 737 ἐπουράνια, i. 542; ii. 374. 387. 423. δωρεὰ ἐπουράνιος, 606 ἐπτά, an indef. numb., i. 97 ἐπτεῖν λόγῳ, i. 57. ἐπτεῖν and λέγειν, 337. ὡς ἔπος ἐπτεῖν, ii. 614 ἐργάζομαι, i. 55. 571. 767; ii. 193. 370. ἐργάζεσθαι δικαιοσύνην, 651 ἐργασία, i. 808
 ἐργάτης, i. 451. 830; ii. 428. distinguished from τεχνίτης, i. 830 ἔργον τοῦ νόμου, ii. 21. τοῦ Θεοῦ, 114. τοῦ Κυρίου, 259. τῆς πίστεως, 487. ἔργα, miracles, ii. 591. ἔργα τῆς σαρκός, 365. ἔργ. ἀγαθόν, 413. ἔργ. τῆς ἀγάπης, 461 ἐρεῖδω, i. 883
 ἐρεῖν γομαι, i. 105
 ἐρευνάω, ii. 145
 ἐρημος τῆς Ἰουδαίας, i. 15 ἐριθεία, ii. 18. 366. 416. 421 ἐρις, ii. 366. 416, distinguished from ζῆλος and διχοστασία, ii. 149 ἐρημίαι γλωσσῶν, ii. 221 ἐρήϊσθαι ἐν ἀγάπῃ, ii. 388. 447 ἐρῶν, i. 856
 Ἐρυθρὰ θάλασσα, i. 740; ii. 650 ἐρχόμενος ἐπ' αὐτόν, i. 21. εἰς αὐτόν, 458. ἐρχόμενος ἐπίσω, 525. ὁ ἐρχόμενος, 78. 280; ii. 641. ἐρχομαι for φέρομαι, i. 521; for ἀνέρχομαι, 606 ἐρωτάω, i. 501; ii. 434. 498 ἑσπετρον, ii. 229 ἑσχατος, i. 593. ἔως ἑσχατοῦ τῆς γῆς, 698. ἑσχαται ἡλείραι, 705; ii. 543. 577. 605. 702 ἑταῖρα, i. 157
 ἑτεροδιδασκαλίω, ii. 590
 ἑτεροζυγίω, ii. 295
 ἐτοιμάζω, ii. 542. 647. ἐτ. τὴν ὁδόν, i. 16 εὐαγγελίζομαι, i. 785. εὐαγγελίζεσθαι εἰρήνην, 768; ii. 384 εὐαγγέλιον, i. 4. εὐαγγ. ἀκροβυστίας, ii. 340. τῆς σωτηρίας, 376 εὐαγγελιστής, ii. 392 εὐερίστος τῶ Θεῷ, ii. 114
 εὐγενέστερος, i. 813
 εὐδοκία, i. 21; ii. 444. 469 εὐδοκία, ii. 416. εὐδ. ἀγαθὸν σύντη, 466. κατὰ τὴν εὐδ. τοῦ θελήματος αὐτοῦ, 424 εὐεργεσία, i. 720
 εὐεργετής, i. 496
 εὐδοτεος, i. 426
 εὐθροδρμία, i. 805. 841 ῥύμι Εὐδοκία, i. 756
 εὐκαιρία, i. 816
 εὐκαιρος ἡμέρα, i. 293
 εὐκαιρος ἀκαίρως, ii. 549 εὐλάβεια, ii. 601
 εὐλάβιος, i. 853; ii. 644 εὐλαβής, distinguished from δέκατος, i. 379; from εὐσεβής, 703. 746 εὐλογία, i. 39. 420. 719; ii. 159. 374. εὐλ. ἐν πάσῃ εὐλογίᾳ, 374. εὐλογημένη ἐν γυναιξί, i. 369 ὁ Εὐλόγητος, eccl. Θεός, i. 349 εὐλογία, ii. 125. 374. ἐπ' εὐλογίας, 306 εὐμετάδοτος, ii. 531
 εὐνοχέω, i. 149
 εὐνούχος, i. 751
 εὐνοδοῦμαι, ii. 7. 258
 εὐνορίστατος, ii. 654. 655 εὐνοῖα, ii. 669
 εὐποροῦμαι, i. 773
 εὐπορία, i. 830
 εὐπροσεδρεύω, ii. 184
 εὐπροσώπῳ, ii. 370
 ἐυρίσκω, ii. 627; to κοινῶς ἀφιεῖται, i. 502. εὐρεῖν χάριν, 367. εὐρεθὲ ἐμφανῆ ἐγγινετο, i. 6. εὐσεβία, ii. 506. 517. 553 εὐσεβεῖν τινα, i. 819. εὐσεβεῖν τὸν οἶκον, ii. 520 εὐσεβὴς and εὐλαβής, i. 763 εὐσεβῶς, ii. 560
 εὐσημος for εὐδηλος, ii. 231 εὐσπλαγχνος, ii. 398
 εὐσχημόνως, ii. 474
 εὐσχημῶν, i. 355. 790; ii. 223 εὐτόνος, i. 502
 εὐτραπέλῳ, ii. 399
 εὐφορέω, i. 442
 εὐφραίνωμαι, i. 442. 708; ii. 359 ευχαρίσθησας, i. 220
 ευχαρίστῳ, ii. 232. 399. 404. 471. 505. 506 ευχάριστος, ii. 456
 ευχαρίστῳ, ii. 6. 413. 440. 441. 485
 εὐχομαι, i. 874; ii. 71 εὐχρηστος, ii. 568
 ευωδία, ii. 398. 437
 ἐφάλλομαι, i. 829
 ἐφάπαξ, ii. 618. 627. 634 ἐφαιρετής κακῶν, ii. 15 ἐφημερία, i. 363
 ἐφίστημι, i. 494. 719. 734 Ἐφραίμ, i. 626
 ἐφραθά, i. 306
 ἐφθάρ, ii. 366
 ἐχίδνα, i. 885
 ἔχον for ἀπείχον, i. 699 ἔχω for ἀπείχω, i. 699; for κατέχω, ii. 665; ἀγο. τραπέζης, i. 620. 621; 'to be united in conjugal union,' ii. 162; 'to have in mind,' i. 649. ἔχ. γαστρί, ἔχιν, 6. ἔχιν τέλος, 497. βρώσιν ἔχ., 554. ἔχ. ἡλικίαν, 607. ἔχ. ἀκαρτίαν, 610. ἔχ. ἰσχυρότερος, 287. ὁ ἔχω, 714. ἐτοιμῶς ἔχ., 843. ἔχουσιν σωτηρίαν, ii. 608. ἔχιν χάριν, 665. οὕτως ἔχει, i. 735 ἔως, i. 393. 845. ἔως τούτου, 499. ἔως οὖ, 8; the Indic. after ἔως, 10

Z.

- ζάω, i. 68. 549. 564. 648. 836; ii. 417. 471. ζῶν ἰαντῶ, 111. ζῶν Θεῷ, 344. ζῶν ὑμῶν, i. 549. ζῶν ὑμῶν, ζῶντων water, ii. 862
 ζῶντες τῇ σπουδῇ, ii. 101 ζυκτορία, i. 883
 ζῆλος, i. 727; ii. 366. 429; distinguished from ἐρις and διχοστασία, 149. ζῆλος Θεοῦ, 83. πυρὸς ζῆλος, 638 ζῆλῶν, i. 737. 812; ii. 224 ζῆλῶν τινα, 357
 ζῆλωτης νόμον, i. 844
 ζῆμία, i. 877; ii. 429
 ζῆμῶν, ii. 152

ζῆτις, to call a council, i. 493.
 ζῆτις τὴν ψυχὴν, 13. ζῆ-τῶν τὸν Κύριον, 819
 ζήτημα, i. 869
 ζήτησις, ii. 500. 564
 ζῆλῶς, i. 103
 ζυγόν, ii. 525
 ζυγὴ, i. 104; ii. 164, 165. ζυγὴ τῶν Φαρισαίων, i. 440
 ζωγράφω, i. 394
 ζωή, i. 441. 515. 727; ii. 283. ζωὴ ἐκ νεκρῶν, ii. 91. ἡ ζωὴ τοῦ Θεοῦ, 453. ἡ ζωὴ, applied to Christ, id.
 ζῶν, ii. 740. ζῶν ὅδε, i. 549.
 ζῶν καὶ ἐνεργῶν, 597
 ζῶσιν δερματίνῃ, i. 17. ζῶσαι, 72
 ζῶσα, ii. 808
 ζωοποιῶ, ii. 530

H.

ἡ for αἷ, αἷα? ii. 17. 690 ἡ μήν, ii. 610
 ὁ ἡγαπημένος, a title of our Lord, i. 375
 ἡγαμῶν and ἐπίτροπος, i. 233 ὁ ἡγούμενος τοῦ λόγου, i. 792.
 ἡγούμεν. ἄνδρες, 801. οἱ ἡγούμενοι, ii. 667. 669 ἡδὴ ποτὶ for ὅψι ποτε, ii. 7 ἡδοναὶ for ἐπιθυμίαι, ii. 690 ἡλικία, i. 49. 383; ii. 393 ἡλκωμένος, i. 465
 ἡμέραι, denoting time, i. 576; judgment, ii. 478. 638. ἡμέρα κρίσεως, i. 74. ἡμ. ὁργῆς, ii.
 18. μεγάλη ἡ ἡμ., 681.
 ἡ ἡμ. ὁ πονηρά, 402. 409.
 ἡ ἡμ. τοῦ Χριστοῦ, 415.
 ἐκείνη τὴν ἡμ., 536. ἡμ.
 δηλώσει, 151. ἡμ. ἐπισκο-πῆς, 711. ἡμέραν ἐξ ἡμέρας, 742. ἡμέρας καὶ νυκτός, 808.
 ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις = ἐν τούτῳ τῷ χρόνῳ, i. 15. ἀφ' ἡμερῶν ἀρχαίων, 797. ἡμ. Κυρίου, 706 ἡμίτερος, ii. 565
 ἡπιος, ii. 466
 ἡριμος, ii. 506
 ἡσυχάζω, ii. 474
 ἡσυχία, i. 848; ii. 496. 509 ἡσύχιος, ii. 506
 ἡττάσμαι, ii. 336
 ἡττημα, ii. 91. 170
 ἡχη σάλπιγγος, ii. 661

Θ.

θάλασσα ὑαλίνη, ii. 844 παρὰ θάλ., i. 767
 θάλασσα, ii. 466
 θάμβος, i. 326. 392
 θάνατος, ii. 427; denoting restitution, 813; θάνατος θεω-ρεῖν, i. 602. μέχρι θαν., ii. 427 θαρσύνω, i. 663
 θυμιάζω, i. 355. 583. θανμ.
 διά, 291. θανμ. αἰ—, 855.

θανμ. ἐπὶ—, 390. θανμ.
 πρόσσωπα, ii. 786
 θιάζομαι, i. 520; ii. 748 θαυμάζομαι, ii. 640
 θαῖον, ii. 545
 θαίστης, ii. 12
 θάλασσα, i. 143; ii. 185. θάλ.
 τοῦ Θεοῦ, i. 582; ii. 375.
 θαλάμματα τῶν διανοῶν, 381 θάλω, to delight, i. 289; ii. 501 ὁ θεμιλῶς τοῦ Θεοῦ, ii. 541.
 τεθμελιωμένοι ἐν ἀγάπῃ, 388. ταθ. τῇ πίστει, 445
 θεοδιδάκτος, ii. 474
 θεομαχίω, i. 855
 θεοπνευστος, ii. 547 Θεός, in what sense said to be πνεῦμα, i. 553. ὁ Θεὸς τῆς δόξης, 735. ὁ Θεὸς τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, ii. 377. κατὰ Θ. κτισθέντα, 396
 ὁ θεὸς αἰῶνος τούτου, ii. 290; distinction between θεοὶ and δαίμονες, i. 815
 θεοσβεία, ii. 509
 θεοστυγῆ, ii. 15
 Θεόφιλος, whether a feigned name, i. 363
 θαρραλέω, i. 819
 θαράκων, ii. 590
 θαρῶν, i. 555
 θείρε, i. 203
 Θεοῦς, i. 730
 θεωρίω, i. 428. 488. 844 θηριομαχίω, ii. 249
 θηρίον, i. 885
 θησαυρίζω, i. 47; ii. 18 θησαυρός, i. 11. 47; ii. 446 θλιβόμεν, ii. 522
 θλίψις, i. 200; ii. 70. 437. 640 θορυβίω, i. 69. 812
 θορῶν, i. 18. 660; ii. 448 θρησκεία, i. 869. θρησκεία τῶν ἀγγέλων, ii. 456
 θρησκῶν, ii. 680
 θριαμβεύω, ii. 450
 θρόμβος αἵματος, i. 496 θρόνος, ii. 443
 θροοῦμαι, ii. 488
 ἡ θυγάτηρ Σιών, i. e. Jerusalem, i. 164
 εἶλον θυῖνον, ii. 858
 θυμιατήριον, ii. 624
 θυμομαχίω, i. 776
 θυμοί, ii. 366. 454
 θύρα, i. 856. 611. θ. τ. πυλῶν, 775. θύρα πίστεως, 795
 θυρεός, ii. 410
 θυρίς, i. 758. 835
 θυρωρός, i. 840. 610. 673 θυρία, i. 67. 86; ii. 398. ὥρα καὶ θυρία, 437. 599
 θυσιастήριον, ii. 668
 θύω, i. 175. 460. 494. 765

I.

Ἰαννῆς καὶ Ἰαμβρῆς, ii. 545
 ἱασπις, ii. 807

ἱά, ii. 360
 ἱάα, i. 245
 ἱάσις, distinguished from ἰαεῖς,
 ii. 404. 468. 520. 521. οἱ ἱάοι,
 i. 722. τὰ ἱάα, 842
 ἱάωτης, i. 721; ii. 233, 234.
 814 ἱδοῦ, i. 7. 250. 780
 Ἰδομαία, i. 272
 ὁ ἱερεὺς, the High Priest, i. 728 ἱεροπρατής, ii. 557
 ἱεροσουλῶν, ii. 23
 ἱερόσουλός, i. 833
 ἱεροουργεῖν τὸ εὐαγγέλιον, ii.
 121 Ἰησοῦς, i. 6
 ἱκανός, i. 19; for ἀξιος, 57.
 ἱκανόν ἔστω, 497. ἱκανόν λαβεῖν, 813; ii. 337
 ἱκανός, ii. 441. 442
 ἱκετηρία, ii. 601
 ἱλασθητί μοι, i. 476
 ἱλάσκομαι, ii. 588
 ἱλασμός for ἱλαστής, ii. 754 ἱλαστήριον, ii. 29. 625 ἱλαῖς σοι, i. 182
 ἱλαῖς, i. 850
 ἱματίων, i. 200. 849; distinguished from χιτῶν, 88
 ἱματισμός, i. 840
 ἱμερόμαι, ii. 466
 ἱνα for ὥστε, i. 424; for ὅτι, 631. 652; eventual, 7. 635.
 672. 675. 680. 702; ii. 213.
 492
 ἱνατί, i. 65
 Ἰουδα, i. 105. 369; ii. 694
 ἡ Ἰουδαία γῆ, i. 544
 Ἰουδαῖζω, ii. 342
 Ἰουδαϊσμός, ii. 336
 Ἰσάγγελος, i. 487
 Ἰσκαριώτης, i. 72
 Ἰσοι, i. 157. 349. Ἰσα εἶναι Θεῷ, ii. 421, 422
 ἰσότης, ii. 457
 ἰσότης, ii. 731
 ἰσόφυκος, ii. 425
 Ἰσραὴλ κατὰ σάρκα, ii. 204 Ἰσραηλῖταις καὶ Ἑβραίοις, distinction between, ii. 318
 Ἰσάμ, Ἰσάμη, i. 217. 393. 701.
 721; ii. 409. 434. 471
 ἰστορεῖν τινα, ii. 837
 ἰσχύς εἰς οὐδέν, i. 31
 ἰσχυρός, ii. 158
 Ἰσχυς κατ' αὐτῶν, i. 829 ἰσως, i. 485
 ἰῶτα, i. 82

Κ.

καθαιρέω, i. 370. 784. 830 καθαιρῶ, i. 651
 καθάπτω, i. 885
 καθαρίζω, i. 56. 765; ii. 302.
 404. 560. 627. 630
 καθαρισμός, i. 532
 καθάρος, i. 651. καθαρὸς τῇ καρδίᾳ, 80. καθ. ἀπὸ τοῦ αἵματος, 839. καθαρὰ καρδία, ii. 542
 καθεξῆς, i. 368

καθιδύω, ii. 478
 καθηγητήν, i. 186
 καθήμαι, i. 25. 791
 καθίζω, i. 29. 679. 781. 782. 823; ii. 169. 201 καθίστημι, i. 378. 739
 καθ' ὅτι for καθὼς, ii. 238 καθωπλισμένος, i. 436
 καθώς, ut, i. 737; for ὡς, 799; quemadmodum, ii. 346. 367; now as, i. 737 καί, and yet, i. 662. 727; and then, 378; et sane, 372; yes, 228; scilicet, 735; and so then? 852; verily, ii. 418; for καί-πир, 381; for ἀλλά καί, 661; for ὅτι, i. 726 καίτοι, namque, ii. 595
 καινή ἐντολή, i. 642. καινή κτίσις, ii. 371. καινὸν ἄνθρωποι, ii. 395. ὄνομα καινόν, 800. αἰὲ καινή, 810 καιρός, distinguished from χρόνος, i. 698. κατά καιρόν, 560. καιροῖς ἰδίοις, ii. 507. 553. κ. ὑστέροις, 615 καίω, accendo, i. 32. καίομαι, 511 κακία, i. 51; ii. 15. 398. περισ-σία κακίας, 678
 κακοήθεια, ii. 15
 κακολογέω, i. 118
 κακόν, ii. 115
 κακοπάθεια, ii. 696
 κακοπαθῶ, ii. 537. 539
 κακός and πονηρός, distinction between, i. 206 κακούργος, i. 505
 κακοχούμενοι, ii. 666
 κακός, i. 790
 κακῶς, ii. 690
 κάκωσις, i. 739
 κάλαμος, i. 241
 καλέω, i. 7. 174; ii. 68. 206. καλέομαι, i. 31. 378. 701; ii. 645 καλοποιεῖν, ii. 496
 καλός, ii. 694. καλὰ ἔργα, 565 κάλυμμα τοῦ νοῦ, ii. 61 καλύπτομαι, i. 61; ii. 280. 281 καλῶς, i. 301; ii. 92. καλῶς ποιεῖν, i. 39 κάμῃλος, on the meaning of (at Matt. xxiii. 24), i. 189 κάμνυν, i. 101
 κάμπτειν τὰ γόνατα, ii. 388 κανόν, ii. 432
 Καπερναούμ ἡ παραθαλασσία, i. 25
 κατηλιεύω, ii. 273
 καρδία, i. 783. 797; ii. 435.
 καρδία τῆς γῆς, i. 95. ἡ κ. μία, 723. ἐστράφησαν ταῖς κ., 740. κατὰ τὴν κ., 783.
 καρδία ἀληθινή, ii. 636. ἐν καρδίᾳ καλῇ καὶ ἀγαθῇ, i. 413. μὴ εἴπῃ ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ, ii. 84. πλανῶνται τῇ καρ., 592. τιθίται ἐν τῇ κ., i. 726 καρδιογενεσις, i. 701. 797 καρπὸν ποιεῖν, i. 18. καρπὸς τοῦ Πνεύματος, ii. 367. καρπὸς τῆς δικαιοσύνης, 689

καρποφορέω, ii. 440, 441 καρτερίαι, ii. 650
 κάρφος, i. 51
 κατά, in composition, i. 409; secr to, 703; according to, ii. 378; similarly to, ib.; unto, 553. 621; because of, 535; inwardly, i. 750. 805; donec, 63; in, 769. καθ' ἑαυτὸν, 887 καταβάλλεσθαι, ii. 604
 καταβολή, i. 105. ἀπὸ κατα-βολῆς κοσμοῦ, 213; ii. 595.
 εἰς καταβολὴν σπέρματος, 645 καταβραβεύω, ii. 450
 καταγγέλλω, i. 719; ii. 215. 446 καταγγέλω, i. 69
 κατάγω, i. 394. 759
 καταδίδω, i. 431
 κατάδελον, ii. 615
 καταδικάζω, i. 50. 203; ii. 695 καταδιδῶ, i. 263
 καταδολῶ, ii. 339
 κακασχύνω, ii. 209. οὐ μὴ κακισχυνθῇ, 709
 κατακαυχάομαι, ii. 682
 κατακίμαι, i. 262. 559; ii. 188 κατακληρονομίω, i. 783
 κατακόπτω, i. 285
 κατακρημνίζω, i. 391
 κατακρίνω, i. 158; ii. 17. 116.
 κατακρίνομαι, as opposed to σάξομαι, i. 359 κατακυριεύω, i. 829; ii. 726
 καταλαλῶ, ii. 328. 692
 καταλαλῶ, ii. 15
 καταλαμβάνομαι, i. 721; ii. 431 καταλαμβάνω, ii. 478
 καταλείγομαι, ii. 521
 κατάλειμμα, ii. 81
 καταλείπω, ii. 469. 594 καταλλαγή, ii. 41. 91. 290 καταλλάττομαι, ii. 290 κατιλύω, i. 32. 193; ii. 285. 343 καταμανθάνω, i. 49
 καταναρκάω, ii. 315
 κατανοῶ, i. 739; ii. 589. 637. 678 καταντάω, ii. 393. 430
 κατανέωσις πνεύματος, ii. 89 κατανούσσομαι, i. 710 καταξιωθέναι, i. 487; ii. 485 καταπετίω, ii. 639
 κατάπτωσις, ii. 592. 594 καταπίσασμαι, i. 242; ii. 611. 636 καταπίνω, i. 190; ii. 727 καταπονούμενοι, i. 738; ii. 742 κατάρα, ii. 347. κατάρας ἐγγύς, 608. κατάρας τέκνα, 743 καταράσσομαι, i. 39
 καταργέω, i. 449; ii. 47. 52. 138. 142. 228. 276. 349. καταργαίνω τινα. 587. καταργεῖν θάνατον, 536. καταργεῖσθαι ἀπὸ τοῦ Χριστοῦ, 360 καταρτίζω, ii. 80. 331. 368. 471. 634 κατάρτισις, ii. 331

καταρτισμὸς τῶν ἀγίων, ii. 392 κατασίω, i. 776. 782
 κατασκάπτω, i. 799; ii. 88 κατασκινάω, ii. 590. 625 κατασκήνωσις, i. 60
 κατασκοπῆσαι, ii. 339
 κατασφισσάμενος τὸ γένος ἡμῶν, i. 737 κατατίλλω, i. 832
 κατάστημα, ii. 557
 καταστρηνιάω, ii. 522
 καταστροφῇ, ii. 540. κατ. κατα-κρίναι, 742
 καταστρόφω, ii. 200
 κατασύρω, i. 447
 κατασφραγίζω, ii. 808
 κατάσχεις, i. 742
 κατατίθεσθαι χάριτας, i. 863 κατατομή, ii. 426
 καταφάγω, ii. 833. καταφάγομαι, i. 534. καταφαγών τὸν βίον, 460
 καταφέρειν ψῆφον, i. 870. 871.
 καταφερόμενος ἔπνοον, 835 καταφιλέω, i. 226. 409
 καταφρονέω, i. 48; ii. 17. 518. 525 καταφρονητός, i. 787
 καταχθόνιος, ii. 423
 καταχρόμας, ii. 194
 κατεγνώσμενος, ii. 341
 καταίδωλον, i. 814
 καταίριζομαι, ii. 19. 40. 409. 424 κατεσθίω, i. 187; ii. 545 κατενύθηνον τὴν ὁδόν, ii. 471, 472. κατενόη. τὰς καρδίας, 495 κατεφίστημι, i. 823
 κατέχω, i. 883; ii. 11. 482. 568 τὸ κατέχον, ii. 490
 κατηγόρια, ii. 555
 κατηφία, ii. 692
 κατηχήω, i. 825; ii. 22. 369 κατιούμαι, ii. 694
 κατοικεῖν, ii. 588
 κατορθόω, i. 857
 κατόρθωμα, i. 857
 τὰ κατώτερα μέρη τῆς γῆς, ii. 392 εἰς καύσιν, ii. 608
 καύσω, i. 157. 446; ii. 675 καυτηριάζειν συνιδήσειν, ii. 515 καυχάομαι, ii. 371. 428. 485. 675. 694. καυχ. ἐν Θεῷ, 22 καύχημα, ii. 418. 425. κ. τῆς ἐλπίδος, 591 καύχησις, ii. 121. 265 Κέδρον, i. 671
 κίμαι, ii. 416. 470. 502. κί-σθαι ἐν τῷ, 772
 κίριαι, i. 624
 κικλίσμενος, i. 728
 κίλισμα, ii. 476
 κίλισμα, to counsel, argue, i. 729 κισσοδέξια, ii. 421
 κισσόδοξος, ii. 368
 κιστός, ii. 464; distinguished from ἀργός, ii. 36. κισσὸς λόγος, 400
 κισσοφάνης, ii. 533

καὶνός, ii. 422
 κεντρον, i. 755; ii. 256 κεραία, i. 32
 κέραι σωτηρίας, i. 372
 κέραιον, i. 458
 κέρδη, ii. 429
 κερδεῖν ὕμνῳ καὶ ζήμῳ, i. 880. κερδεῖν Χριστόν, ii. 417. 430 κέρμα, i. 534
 κερματιστής, i. 165. 534 κεφάλαιον, i. 851; ii. 619 κεφαλαιώ, i. 333
 κεφαλῇ, meaning of, thrice changed within three verses, ii. 209. κεφ. γωνίας, i. 172.
 κιφ. τῆς ἐκκλησίας, ii. 404.
 κειράμενος τὴν κ., i. 824.
 κρατῶν τὴν κ., ii. 451
 κεφαλὴς βιβλίου, ii. 634
 κήρυξ, i. 139
 κηπουρός, i. 684 κήρυγμα, the Gospel, ii. 551 κήρυξ δικαιοσύνης, ii. 742 κηρύσσω, i. 16. 72; ii. 348 κῆτος, i. 95
 Κηφᾶς, i. 129
 κιβωτός, ii. 645
 κινδυνεύω, i. 834
 κινέομαι, i. 845
 κλάσις ἄνθου, i. 114. 711 κλάσματα, i. 114
 κλᾶν ἄνθον, i. 713. 834. 835 κλείνει τὰ σπλάγχχνα ἀπὸ τινος, ii. 764 κλείπτει, distinguished from ληστές, i. 610 κλείπτω, i. 247
 Κλήμη, ii. 434
 κληρονομία, ii. 253. 399. 609
 κληρονομία, ii. 349. 378. 701
 κληρονομος, ii. 332. 645 κληῖρος, i. 702. 749; ii. 726 κληρώ, ii. 576
 κληῖσι, ii. 69. 390. 431 κλητός, ii. 5. κλητοὶ and ἐκ-λατοί, i. 157. κλητοὶ ἄγιοι, 128 κλίμα, ii. 123
 κλινῇ, i. 280. 727
 κλίνω used with ἡμέρα, i. 420 κλυδωνίζομαι, ii. 393
 κλυθόμενος τῇ ἀκοῇ, ii. 549 κοιλία, i. 587. 714; ii. 433. ἐκ κοιλίας μητρός, i. 365 κοιμάομαι, i. 498. 745; ii. 216. 475 κοινός, i. 712. 765; opposed to ἄγιος, 300. κατὰ κοινὴν πίστιν, ii. 553 κοινωνία, ii. 369 κοινωνία, i. 711; ii. 413. κοιν. τοῦ Ἰϋού, 152. κοιν. πνεύματος, 420. κοιν. τῶν παθῶν, 430 κοινωνός, ii. 569. 640 κοίνωσις τῆς πίστεως, ii. 567 ἡ κοίτη, i. 434; denoting marriage, ii. 666 κοκκίω and πορφύρεα, i. 237 κόκκος σιναπίτης, i. 138. 282 κολακεία, ii. 465
 κολαφίζω, ii. 159.
 VOL. II.

κολλόομαι, i. 458. 726. 751. 821; ii. 100 κολλυβιστής, i. 165
 κολοβός, i. 200
 κολυμβήθρα, i. 558
 κομίζω, i. 211; ii. 287. 648 κομψότερον, i. 558
 κονιάω, i. 190
 κοινορτόν βάλλων εἰς τὸν αἶρα, i. 849 κοπιᾶω, i. 117. 283
 κοπιᾶτός, i. 745
 κοπή, ii. 612
 κοπιᾶς, ii. 425. 446. 480. 523. 538 κόπος τῆς ἀγάπης, ii. 461. κόπος καὶ μόχθος, 466. κόπουτος παρέχειν, 371 κόπτομαι, i. 418. 504
 κορβανῶν, i. 233
 κοσμίω, i. 208. κεκοσμημένος, 97. τὸ Ἅγιον κοσμικόν, ii. 623. 624 κοσμοκράτωρ, ii. 408 κόσμος, i. 24. 525; ii. 36. 371. ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ ἦν, i. 519. παντὶ τῷ κ., ii. 440. κόσμ. τῆς ἐδικίας, 686 κοσμικαὶ ἐπιθυμίαι, ii. 560 κόσμιος, ii. 511
 κοῦμι, i. 290
 κονσταντία, i. 244
 κόφινος, i. 114
 κρέββατος, i. 265. 561. 727 κράξω, i. 808; ii. 81. κράξας φωνὴ μεγάλη, i. 241 κρατάειν, i. 69
 κρατεῖω, ii. 259
 κρατίς, i. 300. 315. 708. 715; ii. 451. 612. κρατεῖν προβάσαι, i. 887. κρατεῖν τὰς παραδόσεις, ii. 493 κρατίστη, i. 855
 κράτος τῆς λαοῦς, ii. 378. 408.
 κρ. ἱαντῶν, 216. κατὰ κρ., i. 829 κρείττω, ii. 579
 κρίμα, i. 609; ii. 105. ἐμπίπτειν εἰς κρίμα τοῦ διαβόλου, ii. 512. κρίμα αἰώνιον, 605 κρίνω, i. 38. 51. 403. 594. 637. 716. 735. 799; ii. 17. 168. 169. 204. 639 κρίσις ποιήσαι, ii. 787 κρίσις, i. 33. 594. κρίσις τοῦ κόσμου, 633; ii. 631 κριτής, i. 859
 κριτήριον, ii. 169
 κριτικός καρδίας, ii. 598 κρούσας τὴν θύραν, i. 52. 775 κρυπτή, στήλη, i. 437
 τὰ κρυπτά τῆς αἰσχύνης, ii. 279. τ. κρ. τῆς καρδίας, ii. 21 κρύπτω, i. 32; ii. 453 κτάομαι, i. 72. 700; ii. 473 κτήμα, i. 712
 κτήριον, i. 432
 κτίζω, ii. 443. 454
 κτίσις, i. 322; ii. 65. 71. 442. 627. 711. καινὴ κτ. 371 κτίσμα, ii. 516. 677.

κυβία, ii. 393
 κυβερνήτης, ii. 224
 κυλίσσας, i. 316
 κύλισμα βορβόρον, ii. 745 κυλλός, i. 124
 κύματα ἄγρια, ii. 785
 κύμβαλον, ii. 225
 κύμιον, i. 189
 κυνάριον, i. 123
 κυριακὸν δίδουν, ii. 214
 Κύριος, i. 182. 868. Κύριος ὁ Θεός, 365. ὁ Κύριος μετὰ σοῦ, 367. Κύριος πάντων, 767. Κύριος τῶν κυριονύτων, ii. 531. Κύριος ἰγγύς, 434. Κύριος κυρίου, 850 κυριότης, ii. 378. 443
 κύρω, ii. 348
 βλῆτε καὶ κύνας, ii. 428 κῶλον, ii. 593
 κῶλον, i. 769. 770
 κωμόπολις, i. 263
 κῶμος, ii. 367
 κῶνυψ, i. 190
 κωφός, i. 124. 305. 435

A.

λαγχάνω, i. 700
 λαλᾶν, i. 61. 283
 ἐλάκησι μίσος, i. 701
 λακτικός, i. 735
 λαλέω, i. 719. 807; ii. 396. 403. 522. λαλῶν εἰς αἶρα, 231 λαμβάνω τὸν σταυρόν, i. 77.
 λαμβ. ἱκανόν, 813. λαμβάνειν ἱαντῶν, ii. 600. λαμβάνειν αὐτοφάρμακον, i. 591 λαμβάνω, often εἰρηοποιεῖν deemed pleonastic, i. 714 Λαοαία, i. 876
 λατρεία, i. 656; ii. 73. 623 λατρεύω, i. 23. 581. 741; ii. 428. 627. 668 λαχάνω, i. 104; distinguished from δίδωμι, 231 Λαγών, i. 285
 Λίγω, το μεν, i. 539; for ἐπιτάσσω, ii. 233; distinguished from εἰπεῖν, i. 337. λέγω καὶ μαρτύρομαι, ii. 394. λέγειν ἀνάθεμα τινα, 218. λέγομαι, το δε ἐλετρεῖται, i. 238; for καλέομαι, i. 5 λειτουργία, i. 778
 λειτουργία, i. 366; ii. 425 λειτουργικά πνεύματα, ii. 582 λειτουργός, ii. 426
 λίμα, ii. 545
 λίγιον, i. 638
 λιπτός, i. 337
 λιυρός, i. 555
 ληστός, i. 170
 ληστές, i. 168. 238. 505; distinguished from κλέπτης 610 λίβανος, i. 11
 λιβατωτός, ii. 820
 ἡ συναγωγὴ τῶν Διβερτινῶν, i. 735 λοβοβολία, i. 744
 S L

λίθος προσκόμματος, ii. 709.
 λίθον βολή, i. 498. οἱ λίθοι κερδίζονται, 483
 λιθόστρωτον, i. 679
 λιμοὶ καὶ λοιμοί, i. 196 λίτρα, i. 683
 λογία, ii. 257
 λογιζομαι, ii. 30, 64, 435. 551.
 648 λογικὴ λατρεία, ii. 97
 λόγιον, i. 740. λόγια τοῦ Θεοῦ, ii. 25
 λόγος, i. 825; ii. 25
 λογισμός, ii. 309, 310
 ὁ λόγος, i. 514. ὁ λόγος τοῦ Θεοῦ, ii. 755. 666
 λόγος, denoting 'doctrine,' i.
 665; 'the Gospel,' 361; 'account,' 461; ii. 81; 'history,'
 i. 697; 'a complaint,' 833;
 'ground,' or 'purpose,' ii.
 238; 'prophecy,' 256. εἰς
 λόγ. δόξαις καὶ λήψεως, 437. λόγος ἀκοῆς, 467. λόγ.
 κολακίας, 463. τῆς ἀληθείας, 540. 677. λόγος καὶ γνώσις, 129. γνώσις, 219.
 δικαιοσύνη, 603. ἐλευθε-ρίας, 678. ἔμφυτος, ἰδ. τῆς καταλλαγῆς, 290. σοφίας, 219, 220. λόγ. κεινότης, ii. 400.
 λόγ. ζωῆς, 425. λόγ. ζωῆς, 537. λόγ. τοῦ Χριστοῦ,
 456. τοῦ σταυροῦ, 134. τῆς ὑπομονῆς, 804. τῆς χάρι-τος, 840. πιστὸς ὁ λόγος, 503. 510. 517. 539. 563. ἀνευ λόγου, 714
 τὸ λοιπὸν, ii. 423. 472
 διὰ λουτροῦ παλιγγενεσίας,
 ii. 562
 λούω, distinguished from νίπτω,
 i. 606. 639. ἔλουσαι ἀπὸ τῶν πληγῶν, 810. λελουμένος, ii. 636
 Λυκαονιστὴ, i. 791
 λύκοι βαρεῖς, i. 840
 λυμᾶνται, i. 746
 λυπώμαι, i. 112; ii. 113. 145 λύπη καταποθῇ, ii. 270. λύπη τοῦ κοσμοῦ, 299. λύπη ἐπὶ λύπη ἔχειν, 426
 λύτρον, i. 160. 614
 λυτρός, ii. 560
 λυτρώσει, i. 372, 627
 λύχους τοῦ σώματος, i. 48. ὁ λύχους ὁ καιόμενος, 565 λύω, to neglect or transgress, i.
 82; to permit, 131; to abrogate a law, 617; to remove, 708. λύσται, 884. λελυσθαι ἀπὸ γυναικός, ii. 181

M.

Μαγδαληνῇ, i. 411
 μαγεύω, i. 746
 μάχοι, i. 8. 779
 μαθητιώμαι, i. 108
 μαθήτρια, i. 761
 μαίνομαι, i. 872
 μακαρίζω, i. 370; ii. 697

μακρὸς Θεός, ii. 502, 503 μακρὰν, i. 62. οἱ εἰς μ., 710;
 ii. 383
 μακροθυμία, i. 145. 474; ii.
 696 μακροθυμία, ii. 455. 504. 549 μακροθύμως, i. 869
 μαλακία, i. 26
 μαλακός, i. 80
 μάλλον, intensive use of, i. 49; with comparative, 306; πολλῷ μάλλον κρείσσον, ii. 418 μαμωνᾶς, μαμμωνᾶς, i. 48; μα-μωνᾶς τῆς ἀδικίας, 463
 μαυθάνω, i. 108; ii. 425. 520. ἔμαθι τὴν ὑπακοήν, 602
 μάννα, i. 572. μάννα κεκρυ-μένον, ii. 800
 μαρὰν ἀθῶν, ii. 260
 μαργαρίτης, i. 109; ii. 508 μαρτυρία, i. 616. 803; ii. 360.
 466. 530. μαρτυρεῖν τι, i.
 390; ii. 83. 639. 797. 848
 μαρτυρία, reputatio, ii. 512 μαρτύριον, ii. 590. μαρτύριον καιροῖς ἰδίοις, 507
 μαρτύρομαι and μαρτυρέομαι,
 i. 839; ii. 394. 466
 μάρτυς ὁ Θεός, ii. 7
 μᾶστιξ, i. 272. 830
 ματαιολογία, ii. 501 ματαιολόγος, ii. 555
 μάταιος, ii. 706. τὰ μάταια,
 i. 793
 ματαιότης, ii. 63. ματ. τοῦ νοοῦ, 394
 ματαιός, ii. 12
 μάχαιρα, i. 76. 227. 672. ἀνέιλε μαχαίρα, i. 774. μαχ. τοῦ Πνεύματος, ii. 410
 μάχομαι, ii. 542
 μεγαλεῖα, i. 370
 μεγαλαυχίω, ii. 686
 μεγαλειότης, i. 423
 μεγαλύνω, i. 570. 727; ii. 417 μέγας, ii. 649. ἐνώπιον τοῦ Κυρίου, i. 565. ἀρχιερεὺς μέγας, 598
 μεγάλη οἰκία, denoting the visible Church, ii. 541
 μεγαλεῖα, i. 704
 μεγιστάνες, i. 293
 μέλαι, ii. 367
 μέθη, i. 492
 μεθίστημι, i. 462. 830; ii. 442 μεθόδια τῆς πλάνης, ii. 393.
 μεθ. τοῦ Διαβόλου, 408
 μεθόριον, i. 122. 304
 μεθύω, i. 532; ii. 214. 403 μεθύτερος, ii. 777
 μελετάω, i. 338. 722; ii. 519 μέλη, ii. 453
 μέλι ἄγριον, i. 17
 Μελέτιη, i. 884
 μεμύημαι, ii. 436
 μεμψίμοιροι, ii. 787
 μὲν οὖν, i. 711; ii. 426. 623 μενούργα, i. 436; ii. 78. 429 μένω, i. 526. 651. 838. μένιν εἰς διηνεκίαν, ii. 632
 μερίζομαι, i. 441; ii. 184 μέριμνα, i. 102
 μερινάω, i. 48; ii. 425. 435

μερίε, i. 433
 μερισμὸν Πνεύματος ἁγίου, ii.
 583 μεριστῆς, ii. 506. μ. and δικαστή, i. 441
 μέρος, denoting 'employment,'
 i. 830. ἀπὸ μέρους, ii. 122. 450 μεριστῆν ὄρεα, ii. 610. 611 μερίτης, ii. 350. 611. 620. 629
 μεσονύκτιον, i. 341 μεστότοιχος, ii. 383
 ἐκ μέσου γίνεσθαι, ii. 491 μεστός μοιχαλίδος, ii. 743 μετὰ, at, after, i. 5; ἀπὸ, 838; in the manner of, ii. 645;
 as well as, ib.
 μετάβασις, i. 637
 μετάγω, ii. 686
 μεταδιδόναι τί τινι, ii. 7. 99 μεταλαμβάνω, i. 713; ii. 538.
 μεταβαῖν καιρόν, i. 863
 οὐ μεταμίλωμαι, i. 169; ii. 298.
 616 μεταμορφῶμαι, i. 135; ii. 97
 μετανόει, i. 16. 710. 717. 821.
 μετανοεῖτε καὶ πιστεύετε, 259 μετάνοια, i. 457; ii. 298. 660. δοῦναι μ., i. 729
 μεταξὺ ἀλλήλων, ii. 21. εἰς τὸ μεταξὺ σάββατον, i. 788.
 ἐν τῷ μεταξὺ, 554
 μεταστρέφω, ii. 335
 μετασχηματίζω, ii. 156. 316.
 433 μετατίθεται, ii. 334. 615. 644.
 782 μετήνω, ii. 615. μετήναι ἐξ-ουσίας, 192. μετ. τραπίζῃ Κυρίου, 205
 μετιμωρῶ, i. 48. 443
 μετοικισία, i. 5
 μετοικίζω, i. 742
 μέτοικος, i. 815
 μέτοχοι τοῦ Χριστοῦ, ii. 592
 μετρητῆς, i. 532
 μετροπολίς, ii. 599
 εἰς μέτρον Χρ., ii. 393
 μέτροι, distinguished from εἰς, ii.
 780; ii. 42
 μή, i. 769; in an interrogative sentence, 67. 741; when commencing a dependent clause,
 ii. 471; instead of οὐκ—ἀλλὰ, ii. 508. μή γὰρ, i. 588.
 μή γίνωτο, ii. 25. 343. μή ποτε, ii. 541
 μηδὲ for μηδ' ὅμως, ii. 399 μηλωτή, ii. 653
 μήπως, with Indicative, ii. 355 μήτι, i. 654
 μικρὸν ὅσον ὅσον, ii. 641 μιμηταί, ii. 468
 μισθοποδοσία, ii. 583
 μίσθιος, used as a substantive,
 i. 459
 μισθός, i. 153
 μίσθωμα, i. 888
 μίσω, i. 48; ii. 788
 μυσταὶν μοιούμενος, ii. 377. 413 μυνημαίω, i. 246. 356
 μυνησέμενον, i. 217
 μυνηστούμαι, i. 367. 376

μογελάω, i. 805
μοιχαλῆς, i. 94; ii. 690 μοιχῶς, ii. 690
ἡ σκηνὴ τοῦ Μολόχ, i. 752 μολυσμός σαρκός, ii. 296 μοναὶ πολλαί, i. 644
ὁ μοιρογενής, ii. 375; added to ὁ Τίς Θεοῦ, 771. μονογ.
παρά, i. 520
μόνον, ii. 418
μόνος σοφός Θεός, ii. 126. 504 ἐν μορφῇ Θεοῦ, ii. 421, 422.
μορφὴ τοῦ φύσει, ἰδ.
μορφωθῇ Χρ. ἐν ὑμ., ii. 357 μορφώσαι, ii. 22. 645
μυῖομαι, ii. 436
μύθος, ii. 500
μυκτηρίζω, ii. 369
μύλος, ii. 854. μύλος ονικός, i.
141 μυριάδες, i. 448
μυστήριον, i. 100; ii. 93. 405.
514. μυστ. τοῦ θιλήματος Θεοῦ, ii. 375. τὸ μυστ. τῆς ἀνομίας, 491. μυστ. τῆς πίστεως, 445. 512
μύω, ii. 436
μυωπάζω, ii. 735
μυραίνωμαι, i. 31
μωρία, ii. 136, 137
μωρολογία, ii. 339
μωρός, i. 31, 34, 188; ii. 564

N.

Ναχωραῖος, i. 14. 707
ναί, derivation of, ii. 569. ναί, Κύριε, i. 123. ναί ναί, οὐ οὐ,
37; ii. 268. 697
ὁ ναός, the Sanctuary, i. 364.
ναοὶ ἀργυροὶ Ἀρτέμιδος, 829. ὁ ναός τοῦ Θεοῦ, ii.
828 ναυαγίω, ii. 505
ναύκληρος, i. 877
ναυαγίαι, i. 744
ναυαγισμός, i. 348. 726
νεκρός, i. 61. 460; ii. 380. 604.
684 νεκρώς, ii. 453
νεόφυτος, ii. 511
ναύω, i. 859
νεφίλη φωτεινή, i. 136. νεφ.
ἀνδρός, ii. 785
νεωκτικός, i. 832
νεωτερικός, ii. 542
νεώτεροι, i. 725; ii. 727. νεώ- τεροι, ii. 523
νήπιος, ii. 362
νηστία, i. 877
νηφάλιος, ii. 510
νήφω, ii. 478. 549. 704. 722 νικάω, to frustrate, i. 663 νίπτω, distinguished from λούω,
i. 606. 639
νόαω, i. 199
νόημα, ii. 310. νόηματα, 435 νομίζωμαι, i. 387; ii. 180 νομικοί, i. 9. 180, 181. 439 νομίμως, ii. 538
νόμισμα τοῦ κήνσον, i. 178 νομοδιδάσκαλος, ii. 501 νομοθεσία, ii. 73

νομοθετῶ, ii. 614. 620
νόμος, i. 634. 678; ii. 20. 23.
51. 233. 429. 502; meaning of, in the Gospels and in the Acts, i. 82; in the Epistles, 344. νόμος πίστεως, ii. 30.
νόμος βασιλικός, i. 52
νόσος, i. 26. 59
νοσσία, brood, i. 452
νοσφίζεσθαι ἀπὸ τῆς τιμῆς, i.
724 νοῦθεσία, ii. 406
νοῦθετῶ, ii. 480
νομφίος, i. 67
νομφών, i. 67
νῦν, now, profecto, i. 438; ii.
471; for τότε, 200
νυκτὸς καὶ ἡμέρας, ii. 466 νυκτάζω, i. 208; ii. 741 νυχθήμερον, ii. 319
νωθρός, ii. 609. νωθ. ταῖς ἀκο- αῖς, 602

Ξ.

Ξέναι, i. 888
Ξενίζω, i. 763. 766. 885; ii.
721. 724
Ξενοδοχίω, ii. 522
Ξίνος, distinguished from ἀστός,
i. 815; from πάροις, ii. 384.
467. οἱ Ξίνοι (Matt. xxvii.
7), who meant by the term,
i. 233
Ξίσται, i. 300
ξηραίνωμαι, i. 316
ξηρὰ χεῖρ, i. 87
ξηρός, i. 559
ξύλον, i. 723; distinguished from χόρτος, i. 49. ξύλα, αὐτά, 226

O.

ὄγκος, ii. 654
ὀδηγῶ, i. 751
ὀδηγός τυφλῶν, ii. 22
ὡ δόξας, used κατ' ἐξοχήν, i.
861; denoting 'way of thinking,' 754; for ὁδοποιός, 644, 645. ὁδὸς θαλάσσης, i. 25.
ὁδὸς δικαιοσύνης, 170. ὁδὸς τοῦ Κυρίου, 780. 825. ὁδὸς τῆς ἀληθείας, ii. 740. ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ, i. 34. 35
ὀδύνω, ii. 528
ὀδυρμός, ii. 298
ὀδῶν, i. 795
ὀδῶν, i. 764
οἶδαμιν, ii. 29
οἶδατε for potestis, i. 52 οἰκείος, ii. 370; distinguished from ἴδιος, 520, 521 οἰκίμα for δεσποτήριον, i. 775 οἰκτητήριον, ii. 285
οἰκία, house, i. 187
οἰκοδισποτίω, ii. 523
οἰκοδομῶ, i. 760; ii. 186. 188.
343 οἰκοδομή, ii. 397

οἰκονομία, ii. 375. 385. 445. 500 οἰκονομῶς, i. 461; ii. 352. οἰκ. μυστηρίων Θεοῦ, 150. οἰκ.
Θεοῦ, 555
οἶκος, i. 193. 480; ii. 520; distinguished from πατρίς, i.
376. οἶκος τοῦ Θεοῦ, 86.
οἶκος Ἰσραὴλ, 710. αἱ οἶκον, 264. κατ' οἶκον, 713. 731 πᾶσα ἡ οἰκουμένη, i. 375. ὅλη ἡ οἰκ., 197. 773. ἡ οἰκ. ἡ μέλλουσα, ii. 584
οἰκουρός, ii. 557
οἰκτιρῶς and ἔλεος, i. 374; ii.
420. 455
οἰσφάλλομαι, ii. 720
ὄστινας, 'quippe qui,' ii. 21 ὀκνηρὸν, ii. 428
μὴ ὀκνησαι, i. 761
περιτομή ὀκταήμερος, ii. 429 ὀλιθροὶ αἰώνιος, ii. 486 ὀλιγόψυχος, ii. 480
ὀλοθυεὺς, ii. 202
ὀλοκληρία, i. 717
ὀλόκληρος, ii. 482; distinguished from τέλειος and ὀλοταλής, 673 ὀλοταλής, distinguished from ὀλόκληρος and τέλειος, ii.
482. 673
ὀμνῶ, i. 509. 836
ὀμοίαις and ὁμ. ὄρκω, as applied to God, i. 709
ὀμοθυμαδόν, i. 702. 726. 776. ὁμοῦ. ἐν ἑνὶ στόματι, ii. 118 ὀμοιάζω, i. 350
ὀμοιοπαθής, i. 798
ὀμοίωμα, ii. 422
ὀμολογῶ, i. 55. 76. 523. 859;
ii. 556
ὀμολογία, ii. 589. ὁμολ. τῆς ἐλπίδος, 637
ὁμοφρονέω, ii. 716
ὁμνετε for ὁμοίως, ii. 230: quasi- eis, 348
ὄναρ, i. 236. κατ' ὄν., i. 7 μὴ ὀνειδίζω, ii. 674
ὀνειδισμός, ii. 640. ὀνειδ. τοῦ Χριστοῦ, 668
ὀνειδος, i. 367
μύλος ονικός, i. 141
ὄνομα, i. 667. 699. 720. 721;
title of authority, ii. 378. 423. καλέσουςι τὸ ὄν., i. 7, 8. ἐν τῷ ὄν., 715. ὀνόματα, per- sons, ii. 830
μὴ ὀνομαζίσθω ἐν ὑμ., ii. 899 ὄξος μετὰ χολῆς, i. 238 ὄποι τῆς γῆς, ii. 653
ὄπισθ μου ἴθω, i. 26. 132 ὄπλα ἀδικίας, ii. 49. δικαιο- σύνης, ἰδ. τοῦ φωτός, 108 ὀπλίζω, ii. 720
ὀποιος ποτε, ii. 339
ὄπου, whence, ii. 149 ὀπτανόμενος, i. 697
ὀπταί, i. 870. ὄφονται τὸν Θεόν, 30
ὄπων ἂν, i. 717
ὄραμα, i. 763. 805
ὄρασι, i. 705
ὄραν, i. 127. 522. 557. 598 δρῆγῃ, i. 18. 270; ii. 454. 463. 508 ὀργίζομαι, ii. 832

 ὀργισμός, i. 881
 ὀρθοπόδιον, ii. 342
 ὀρθοτομία, ii. 540
 ὀρθῆραι for ὀρθῆριον, i. 510 ὀρθρίζω, i. 493
 ὀρθρος, i. 507. 728
 ὀρίζω, i. 707. 768; ii. 5. 596 ὀρρίζω, i. 229. 285
 ὀρκομοσία, ii. 616
 ὀρμή, i. 791; ii. 686
 ὄρος, i. 29
 ὀρφανός, i. 648
 ὄ "Οσιος, i. 708
 ὄσιος, ii. 618. τὰ ὄσια τὰ πιστά, i. 786. ὄσαι χεῖρες,
 ii. 508
 ὀσίως and δικαίως, ii. 466 ὀσμὴ τῆς γνώσεως, ii. 271. εἰς ὀσμὴν εὐωδίας, 398. 437 ὄστος, used indefinitely, i. 724; with genitive, 719
 ἐν ὀστρακίνοις σκεύεσιν, ii.
 282 οὐ for οὐκ, i. 735
 οὐ μή, i. 33; ii. 636. οὐ γάρ,
 i. 811. οὐκ—ἀλλά, non tam
 —quam, 649
 οὐά, i. 354
 οὐαί ὑμῖν, i. 401. οὐαί σοι, 83;
 ii. 4
 οὐρανός for Θεός, i. 459. οὐρ.
 καὶ ἡ γῆ, 52. τὰ ἐν τ.
 οὐρανοῖς, ii. 376. οὐρανοί, denoting the aerial heavens,
 i. 706; ii. 747
 οὐτε—οὐτε, i. 487
 οὕτω, ii. 477
 οὕτως, i. 43; ἵκανο? εἰσίοις?
 225 ὀφειλίτης, i. 448; ii. 8. 63 ὀφειλήματα, i. 44
 ὀφειλόμεν ἐυχαριστεῖν, ii. 485 ὀφείλω, ii. 249
 ὀφθαλμοδουλεία, ii. 407. 456 ὀφθαλμός ἀπλούς, i. 48. 303.
 ὀφθ. ποιητός, 157. 303. ὀφθ.
 πτωχισμίνους, ii. 377
 ὀφρύς, i. 391
 ὀχλίσματα, i. 400
 ὄχλος, i. 733
 ὄχρυς, ii. 309
 ὀψάριον, i. 569. 690
 ὀψι σαββάτων, i. 245
 ὀψία, i. 59. 113
 κατ' ὀψιν, i. 584
 ὀψώνια, i. 385; ii. 51

Π.

παγιδεύω, i. 440
 παγίς, i. 493; ii. 512. 527 παθημάτων κοινωνία, ii. 430.
 446 παθῆνός, i. 873
 πάθος, ii. 454
 παιδαγωγός, ii. 351. 352 παιδάριον, i. 569
 παιδεία, ii. 406. 548. 657 παιδεύω, i. 738; ii. 217. 505.
 589 παῖδιον, a term of kindness, i.

 689; ii. 587. 775
 παιδίσκη, i. 808
 παῖς, ii. 201
 παῖς, a servant, i. 57; the Messiah spoken of under the name of, 88. 716. παῖδες applied to male children, 12; denot-ing 'friends' or 'officers of a court', 109
 πάλαι, i. 355; ii. 577
 παλαιός, ii. 622
 πάλη, ii. 408
 παλιγγενεσία, i. 153. 539; ii.
 563
 πάλιν, ii. 360
 πάντοθεν, ii. 624
 πανδοχείον, i. 432
 πανήγυρις, ii. 662
 πανουργία, ii. 280
 τὰ πάντα for τοὺς πάντας, ii.
 376 εἰς τὸ παντάλιν, i. 449; ii. 617 παντοκράτωρ, ii. 296
 πάντοτε, i. 473; ii. 423 πάντως, i. 390; ii. 195 παρά, propter, ii. 223
 παραβαίνω, i. 702
 παράβασις, ii. 349. 583
 παραβάτης νόμου, ii. 682 παραβιάζομαι, i. 807
 παραβολή, i. 122. 203. 453; ii.
 625. ἐν παραβολῇ, ii. 648 παραβουλεύεσθαι τῇ ψυχῇ, ii.
 427 παραγγέλλω, i. 820
 παραγγελία, ii. 501. 506 παραγινώσκω, i. 15. 434. 759.
 767. 837; ii. 626
 παράγω, i. 66; ii. 756
 παραδειγματίζω, i. 7
 παραδίδωμι, i. 506
 παραδιδρασκῶ, ii. 526
 παραδίδωμι, i. 24. 362. 801; ii.
 13. 163. 215. 493
 παράδοξος, i. 396
 παράδοσις, i. 118; ii. 336. 448.
 493 παραζηλώω, ii. 87. 91
 παραθεωρίω, i. 732
 παραθήκη, ii. 532. 537
 παραιτίομαι, i. 454; ii. 817 παρακαλέω, i. 30. 794. 811. 886;
 ii. 99. 446. 466. 470. 477. 479.
 493. 549. 555. 592. 638 παράκλησις, ii. 57
 παράκλησις, i. 781. 802; ii.
 360. 420. 493. 518. 611. 670. παράκλη. τοῦ Ἰσραήλ, i. e.
 the Messiah, i. 379
 παράκλητος, i. 647; ii. 7. 618.
 754 παρakoή, ii. 583
 παρακαλουθία, i. 363; ii. 517.
 546 παρακύντω, i. 508; ii. 679.
 704 παραλαβάνω, i. 7. 22. 282; ii.
 215. 435. 447. 467. 495 παραλίγομαι, 'to coast along,'
 i. 876
 παραλλαγή, ii. 677
 πασαλλογίζομαι, ii. 447

παρὰλύομαι, ii. 658
 παρὰμύω, ii. 679
 παρὰμυθία, ii. 467
 παρὰμυθία, ii. 420
 παρὰμυθίον ἀγαπῆς, ii. 420
 παρὰμυθισμός, ii. 591
 παρὰμυθισμός, ii. 605. 606
 παρὰμυθισμός for παρὰμυθισμός, ii. 426
 παρὰμυθισμός, ii. 587
 παρὰμυθισμός, i. 318
 παρὰμυθισμός, i. 559; ii. 90. 375
 παρὰμυθισμός, ii. 582
 παρὰμυθισμός, i. 886
 παρὰμυθισμός, i. 244. παρὰμυθισμὸς πάσχα, 679
 παρὰμυθισμός, ii. 305
 παρὰμυθισμός, i. 271. 398. 485.
 758; ii. 355
 παρὰμυθισμός, i. 471
 παρὰμυθισμός, i. 103. 795. 840; ii.
 537
 παρὰμυθισμός, ii. 284
 παρὰμυθισμός, ii. 667
 παρὰμυθισμός, ii. 318
 παρὰμυθισμός, i. 877; ii. 258
 παρὰμυθισμός, ii. 740
 παρὰμυθισμός, ii. 339
 παρὰμυθισμός, ii. 658
 παρὰμυθισμός, ii. 44. 339
 παρὰμυθισμός, ii. 732
 παρὰμυθισμός, i. 847; ii. 651
 παρὰμυθισμός, i. 799
 παρὰμυθισμός, ii. 647. 701
 παρὰμυθισμός, i. 224. 805
 παρὰμυθισμός, i. 405. 830; ii. 371 χεῖρες παρὰμυθισμός, ii. 658
 παρὰμυθισμός, i. 7
 παρὰμυθισμός, i. 366. 378. 697.
 722. 859; ii. 188. 405. 444.
 446. 551
 παρὰμυθισμός, i. 697
 παρὰμυθισμός, i. 509; ii. 645 παρὰμυθισμός, distinguished from εἶδος, ii. 384
 παρὰμυθισμός, i. 611. 661
 παρὰμυθισμός, ii. 511
 παρὰμυθισμός, ii. 227
 παρὰμυθισμός, i. 803
 παρὰμυθισμός, ii. 406
 παρὰμυθισμός, ii. 423. 491. 696
 παρὰμυθισμός, i. 313. 580. 626. 658.
 721. 791; ii. 276. 298. 387.
 450. 513. 567. 591
 παρὰμυθισμός, ἐπὶ τῇ Κο-ρίῃ, i. 790; ii. 464
 πάσα σάρξ, 705. πάντες, 728. 745. πάντες—μή
 for μηδεῖς, ii. 397. πάσα χάρις, 672
 πάσχα, i. 214. 774
 πάσχα, ii. 345
 πάσχα, i. 222. 775. 777. 831
 πάσχα for καταπατίς, ii. 828.
 πατίομαι, i. 491
 ὁ Πατήρ τῶν οὐρανῶν, ii.
 263. τῆς δόξης, 577. τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, 388. τῶν πνευμάτων, 657. τῶν φώτων, 677
 πατίομαι, denoting 'the Sanhodrim', i. 735; 'the Patri-archs', ii. 73; both parents, 649

πατραλάφας, ii. 502
 πατριά and οἶκος, i. 376; ii. 388 πατριά, i. 719. 736
 πατριαρχαί, i. 736
 πατριώτης Θεός, i. 859
 παχύς, i. 101
 πιδνός τότες, i. 400
 πιζεύω, i. 836
 πιζή, i. 113. 295
 πιθαρχίω, i. 729; ii. 561
 πιθός, ii. 141
 πιθω, i. 247; ii. 535. 608. πιθύνει τινα, i. 822
 πινάω, ii. 436
 πινώντες δικαιοσύνην, i. 30 τῇ ἀληθείᾳ πιθίσθαι, ii. 345 πείραν λαμβάνειν, ii. 652 πείραξ, i. 21. 126; ii. 470.
 676. 726. πειρ. τὸ Πνεῦμα Κυρίου, i. 726. πειρ. Θεόν, 797 πειρασμοί, ii. 673
 πείρασμα, i. 362
 πείλγος τῆς θαλάσσης, i. 141 πείθω, i. 30; ii. 162. 163 πείνω, denoting few, ii. 233 Πεινητοστή, i. 702
 πεποιθέναι, ii. 587
 πεπρωμένα βίβη, ii. 410
 ἐκ τῶν περάτων τῆς γῆς, i. 96.
 εἰς τὸ πέραν, 60. 321
 περιάγω, i. 26. 188. 780; ii.
 191 περιαιρῶ, i. 883
 περιβαλὼν αὐτὸν ἐσθῆτα, i.
 502 περιβάλλω, ii. 212. 581 περιγάζωμαι, ii. 496
 περιέρχομαι, i. 829; ii. 522 περιέρχομαι, i. 886
 περιέχω, i. 394; ii. 709 περιέωσθαι, i. 775; ii. 409
 περικάθερα τοῦ κοσμοῦ, ii.
 159 περικεῖσθαι ἀσθένειαν, ii. 600 περικυλῶ, i. 483
 περικρατῆς γενέσθαι, i. 878 περιλάμπω, i. 871
 περιλειπόμενοι, ii. 477 περιούσιος, ii. 560
 περιοχή, i. 751
 περιπατῶ, i. 580; ii. 390. 896.
 400. 402. 432. 447. 466. 474 περιπείρω, ii. 528
 περιπίπτω, i. 673. 883
 περιποιῶμαι, i. 840; ii. 512 περιποιήσιν, ii. 577. 479. 649.
 710 περιρρέγγνυμι, i. 809
 περισπᾶω, i. 432
 περισσεύω, ii. 301. περισσεύω κακίαν, 678
 περισσεύω, i. 33; ii. 26. 257.
 283. 301. 375. 447. 472. περ. τινί, 436
 περισσός, i. 37. 40. ἐκ περισ-σοῦ, ii. 389. 469
 περισσοτέρως, ii. 469. 582 περιστορά, i. 21
 περιτεμνόμενοι, i. 795; ii. 370 περιτίθημι, i. 680
 περιτομή ὁκταήμερος, ii. 429.
 σημῶν περιτομῆς, 35

περιτρέπω, i. 873
 περιφρονεῖν, ii. 561
 περίχως τῆς Γαλιλαίας, i.
 262. τοῦ Ἰορδάνου, i. 17
 περίψημα, ii. 159
 περπερεύωμαι, derivation and meaning of, ii. 226. 227 ἐπὶ δρύσει, ii. 302. 305 πετινά τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, i. 49
 πέτρα, i. 55
 Πέτρος, i. 129
 τὰ πετρώδη, scil. χωρία, i. 99 πηγὴ τοῦ αἵματος, i. 288.
 πηγὰς τῶν ὑδάτων, ii. 846.
 862 πηδάλιον, i. 883; ii. 686 πηλίκος, ii. 370
 πῆρα, i. 72
 πιδίω, i. 715
 πιθανολογία, ii. 447
 μὴ πικραίνεσθαι, ii. 456
 ῥίζα πικρίας, ii. 659. πικρ.,
 ii. 398
 πίμπρημι, i. 885
 πινκίδιον, i. 371
 πίνω, i. 112
 πίνειν ποτήριον Κυρίου, ii. 205.
 πίνειν αἶμα, 846
 πειραμῖνοι ὑπὸ ἀμαρτίαν, ii.
 56 πίπτω, ii. 111. 697
 πιστεύω, i. 557; ii. 454. 502.
 503 πιστικός, i. 341
 πίστις, i. 58. 221. 417. 598; ii.
 367. 430. 439. 546. εὐ πίστιν ἔχετε, 115. οἱ ἐκ πίστεως, 346. 347. ὑπομονὴ τῆς π., 485. ἀθετεῖν τὴν π., 522 πιστόσμαι, ii. 547
 πιστός, ii. 503. πιστὸν τῷ Κυρίῳ, i. 807. τέκνα πιστά,
 ii. 555
 πλάνη, ii. 464. 492
 πλάνος, i. 244; ii. 515
 πλανῶντες καὶ πλανώμενοι, ii.
 546. 561. 592. 599
 πλάσμα, ii. 78
 πλαστιά, i. 727
 πλατύνειν φυλακτήρια, i. 185 πλέγματα, ii. 508
 πλειονάζω, ii. 472
 πλιονεκτέω, ii. 473
 πλιονεκτής, ii. 171. 399
 πλειονεξία, i. 303. 441; ii. 14.
 306. 395. 398. 454. 465 πληθύνω, i. 501. 752. 798 πληθύνω, i. 731. πληθύνων πληθυνῶσα, ii. 701
 πληκτής, ii. 511
 πλημύρα, i. 404
 πλῆν, i. 83; for πλῆν ὅτι, ii.
 417. 452
 πλήρης Πνεύματος ἀγίου, i.
 732. πλήρ. πίστεως, 732.
 πλήρ. ἀγαθῶν ἔργων, 761 πληροφωρία, i. 362; ii. 551 πληροφωρία, ii. 446. 462. 609 πληρώω, i. 32. 795; ii. 437. ὅπως πληρωθῇ, i. 14. πεπληρωταί ὁ καιρός, 258. ἴδει πληρωθῆναι τὴν γραφὴν, 700. πεπληρωμένοι τὸ εὖαγγέλιον, ii. 121. πλ. τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ, 445. πληρωνόν τὴν καρδίαν τινός, i.

 724. πληρ. τὸν δρόμον, 784.
 πληρ. τὸν νόμον, 106.
 πληρ. τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ, 445. πληροῦσαι Πνεύματος ἀγίου, i. 780; ii. 403
 πληρώμα, i. 268. 521; ii. 91.
 353. 379. 389. 392. 444. πλῆρ. τῆς γῆς, 206. τοῦ Χριστοῦ, 393 ὁ πλησίον, i. 39. 181. 430 πληρομοή, ii. 452
 πλοιδόριον, ii. 272
 πλοῖον, i. 26. 874
 πλουσιώ, ii. 456
 πλούτος δόξης, ii. 377. πλ.
 τῆς χρηστότητος, 17. πλ.
 τῆς χάριτος, 457. πλ. ἀπλό-τητος, 301
 πλουτῶν εἰς Θεόν, i. 443 πνεῦμα, summary of the various senses of, in New Test., i. 6. πνεύματα ἀκαθάρτα, 273.
 τῆς ἀληθείας, 648. ἀσθε-νείας, 449. καταλύσεις, ii.
 89. τοῦ κόσμου, 145. τοῦ νοῦ, 395. τῆς πίστεως, 283.
 ἐν σοφίᾳ καὶ πν., i. 733.
 σοφίας καὶ ἀποκαλύψιν, ii.
 377. ἐν πνεύματι, οὐ γράμ-ματι, 24. χαρὰ ἐν πν., 367.
 τίθημι ἐν πν., i. 829. διδαμένος τῷ πν., 838. καρπὸς τοῦ Πνεύματος, ii. 367.
 Πνεῦμα ἀγίου, i. 368. μάχαίρα τοῦ πν., ii. 410. ἐν πν., ὁ Πνεῦμα αἰώνιον, 627.
 Πνεῦμα τῆς χάριτος, 639. γενέσθαι ἐν Πνεύματι, 376 πνευματικός, ii. 368. 441 πνευματικῶς, mystically, ii. 830 πνίγω, i. 145. 286
 τὸ πνικτόν, i. 800
 ποίω, to acquire by traffic, i.
 210; to appoint, 273; to suffer, 693; to pass, ii. 319. ἔγω ποιῶσαι, to remove, i. 729.
 ποιεῖν ἐν αὐτῷ, 157. ἀδ-ξεῖν, 394. τὴν ἀλήθειαν, 798, 799. ἰδικήσιν, 738.
 ἀληθεύουσιν, 860, 861.
 μυσίας, ii. 377. μόνῃ, i. 649.
 ὁδόν, 269. οὐδένος λόγον, 838. πάσχα, 217. ποιήσας χρόνον, 802
 ὁ πομπή, i. 613; ii. 392 ποίω, ii. 704; for τίς, i. 150 πόλις, ii. 554. π. ἀγία, i. 23 πολιτάρχῃ, i. 813
 πολιτεία, ii. 383
 πολιτεύω, ii. 419. 433
 πολιτεύομαι, i. 851; ii. 419 πολλαπλᾶσι, i. 478
 πολλοὶ for πάντες, i. 161. 221 πολυλογία, i. 43
 πολυμέρως καὶ πολυτρόπως, ii.
 577 πολυποικίλος, ii. 387
 πολὺς ὁ λόγος, ii. 602
 πορηρία, i. 178. 303; ii. 14 πορηρός, i. 813; distinguished

- from κακός, 211. ἡμέρα πον., ii. 402. 409. 546. τοῦ πονηροῦ, whether denoting evil, or the Evil one, i. 35. 45. 105
- πορεία*, ii. 675
- πορευόμενοι*, i. 72
- πορθῶ*, i. 758; ii. 336
- πορισμός*, ii. 526
- πορνεύω*, i. 36. 800; ii. 14. 161. 398. 454
- πορνείον*, ii. 201
- πόρνη*, ii. 651. 685
- πορφύρα* and κοκκίνη, i. 237
- πορφυρόπῳλις*, i. 807
- ποταπός*, i. 61
- ποτί*, ii. 339; for προτίαν, ii. 336
- ποτήριον τῆς εὐλογίας*, ii. 204
- πού*—; πού—; ii. 135
- πράγμα*, ii. 473; a νῆα, 167.
- πράγματα τοῦ βίου*, 538
- πραγματεύω*, i. 481
- πραιτώριον*, i. 237. 857; ii. 415
- πράκτωρ*, i. 447
- πρῶτος*, i. 30. 85
- πρόσθετος*, ii. 368. 390. 455. 529
- πρασινά*, i. 297
- πράσσω*, i. 717; ii. 435, to exact, i. 385. 482
- πράως*, i. 164
- πράυτης σοφίας*, ii. 688
- πρίπι*, ii. 585. 618
- πριβάνω*, ii. 410
- πριεβυτήριον τοῦ λαοῦ*, i. 501
- πριεβύτερος*, i. 132. 593. 720. 773; ii. 519. 523
- πριεβύτερης*, ii. 557. 567
- πριεβύτες*, ii. 557
- πριντής*, i. 233. 701
- πριν* ἢ for πριν, i. 6
- πρό πρόσωπον*, i. 784
- προράγω*, i. 774. 775; ii. 505
- προαιριεῖσθαι ἐν καρδίᾳ*, ii. 306
- προαιτιάομαι*, ii. 27
- προακούω*, ii. 440
- προβάλλω*, i. 831
- προβατικός*, i. 558
- πρόβατον*, i. 611. 612; ii. 70
- προβιβάζω*, i. 112. 831
- προγινώσκω*, ii. 68. 88
- πρόγνωσις*, deceit, i. 707; ii. 701
- προγράφω*, ii. 345. προγεγραμμένος εἰς κρίμα, 781
- πρόδηλον*, ii. 615
- πρόδρομος*, ii. 611
- προεπιζῶ*, ii. 376
- προεπαγγέλλομαι*, ii. 5
- προεισιμάχων εἰς δεξάν*, ii. 80
- προειπαγγέλλομαι*, ii. 847
- πρόειχω*, ii. 27
- πρόβασαι*, ii. 69. 76. 387. 546.
- πρόβ. τῆς καρδίας*, i. 772.
- πρόβ. τῶν ἁγίων*, ii. 624
- προθυσμία*, ii. 352
- προθυμία τοῦ θίλιν*, ii. 302
- προϊδούσα*, i. 347
- προϊσταμαι*, ii. 480. 511. 563
- προκρινύσσω*, i. 783; ii. 348
- προκόπτω*, i. 107; ii. 336. 546
- πρόκριμα*, ii. 524
- προλέγω*, ii. 367
- προλαμβάνω*, i. 884; ii. 214
- ποληφθῆ*, ii. 368
- πρόνοια*, i. 858
- προνοούμενος καλᾶ*, ii. 103
- προοράομαι*, i. 707. 708
- προορίζω*, ii. 68. 374. 376
- προπάσχω*, ii. 464
- προτίκτω*, i. 796; ii. 814
- προπετή*, i. 833; ii. 544. 545
- πρός*, respecting, i. 475; ii. 87. 580; used with nouns of time, i. 511
- προσάββατον*, i. 355
- προσαγορεύει*, ii. 602
- προσάγω*, ii. 718. προσάγειν αὐτοῖς χώραν, i. 881
- προσαγωγή*, ii. 387
- προσαιτῶν*, i. 327
- προσανατίθεμαι*, ii. 337
- προστατεῖν*, i. 722
- προσδιχομαι*, i. 456; ii. 560. 640
- προσδοκία*, i. 775
- προσεδρεύω*, ii. 184
- προσερχομαι*, i. 726. 727. 766; ii. 644. 661
- προσενυγῆ*, i. 399. 711. 732. 806; ii. 505. ἐπὶ τῶν προσ. μου, 377
- προσίχω*, i. 40. 746; ii. 500. 518. προσείχων ἀπὸ τινος, i. 53
- προσηλώσας*, ii. 449
- πρόσκαιρος*, i. 102
- προσεκαλῶ*, i. 711. 805
- προσεκαρτέρω*, i. 711. 712. 747. 763
- προσεκαρτέρησιν*, ii. 410
- τὸ προσκεφάλαιον*, i. 283
- προσεκκληρώθησαν τῷ Παύλῳ*, i. 812
- προσιώντος*, i. 876
- προσκλίνωμαι*, i. 730. 731
- κατὰ πρόσκλησιν*, ii. 524
- προσκολλάω*, i. 730
- πρόσκομμα*, ii. 115. 188
- προσκοπτω*, ii. 115
- προσκυνέω*, i. 9. 24. 56. 513. 766
- προσλαμβάνω*, i. 132. 825. 826. 884; ii. 118. 568
- προσμένω*, i. 771
- προσομιζῶ*, i. 299
- προσοφίλω*, ii. 569
- προσοχθίζω*, ii. 592
- πρόσπαινω*, i. 764
- προσπῆξαντες*, i. 707
- προσποιόμαι*, i. 511
- προστατίς*, ii. 123
- προστίθημι*, i. 280. 469. 774; ii. 29. 349. 375; with the Infinitive, i. 774. 775
- προσπάγειν*, i. 689
- πρόφασιν*, i. 187
- προσφάτω*, i. 822
- προσφέρω*, i. 11. 34. 656; ii. 599. 601. 648
- προσφιλέω*, ii. 435
- προσφορά*, i. 860; ii. 398
- πρόσχυσις τοῦ αἵματος*, ii. 650
- προσωποληπτῶν*, ii. 682
- προσωπολήπτης*, i. 767
- προσωποληψία*, ii. 20. προσωποληψία, 680
- πρόσωπον πρὸς πρόσωπον*, ii. 229. πρόσωπον τῆς γενέσεως, 678. πρ. τῆς γῆς, i. 446. πρ. ἑνὸς ἄνθρωπου ἐν λαμβάνει, ii. 340. πρ. ἐν σαρκί, 446. πρόσωπον, οὐ καρδία, 469
- προταίω*, i. 850
- πρότερον* used adjectively, ii. 639
- προτίθημι*, ii. 29
- προτρέπομαι*, i. 826
- ἐν προφάσει πλεονεξίας*, ii. 465
- προφητεία*, i. 705; ii. 221. 481. 505. 519
- προφητεύω*, i. 55. 843; ii. 209. 238. 705; a play on the double sense of, i. 230
- προφήτης*, i. 14. 52. 77. 191. 409. 772. 773; ii. 224. 392. 556
- προφήτης*, i. 381
- προχειρίζω*, i. 768. προχειρίζομαι, 872
- πρῶμην*, i. 881
- πρωτοκαθεδρία*, i. 185
- πρωτοκλήσια*, i. 185. 453
- πρῶτον for πρότερον*, i. 634
- πρῶτος*, the best, i. 459; most considerable, 805, 806; principal, 886; i. 504. πρῶτον, 'first of all', i. 50. πρῶτη ἐπιτολή, ii. 406
- πρωτοστάτης*, i. 858
- πρωτοτόκος*, i. 8; ii. 442. 579.
- πρωτοτόκος*, 663
- πταίω*, ii. 685
- πτοσθέντες*, i. 512
- πτιόγειν*, i. 23
- πτόσησι*, ii. 715
- πτύω*, i. 19
- πτύρομαι*, ii. 419
- πτωχοί*, i. 465. πτ. τῷ πνέματι, i. 29
- πυγμή*, i. 300
- Πύθων*, i. 808
- πύλαι ἔδων*, i. 130
- πυνθάνομαι*, i. 854
- πῦρ*, difference of meaning when used with and without the Article, i. 517. πυρὸς ἑλῶς, ii. 638
- πυρά*, i. 884
- πύργος*, i. 455
- πύρρετος*, i. 885
- πυρός*, ii. 545
- πυρῶμαι*, ii. 320. 321. βίλην πυρῶμενα, 410
- πύρρως* πρὸς πειρασμόν, ii. 724
- πῶλον*, i. 163
- πυρόσμος*, i. 298; ii. 89
- πῶρρως*, i. 271; ii. 394
- πῶς* for ὅτι, ii. 402

ῥαδιούργημα, i. 823

ῥαδιουργία, i. 779

ῥακά, i. 34

ῥαντίζω, ii. 627. 629. ἱρραντισμένος τὰς καρδίας ἀπὸ
"συνειδήσεως πονηρᾶς, ii. 636

ῥαντισμός, ii. 701

ῥαπίζω, i. 38; distinguished from κολαφίζω, 230

ῥαφίς, i. 162

ῤεμφάν, i. 741

ῤηγνύω, i. 316

ῤῆμα, i. 22. 143. 368. 378. 383.
748, 749; ii. 606. ἐν ῤήματι, 404

ῤῆτωρ, i. 857

ῤίξα, i. 19; ii. 659

ῤιζύσθαι ἐν ἀγῶνι, ii. 388

ῤιπίζομαι, ii. 674

ῤίπτω, i. 71. 849. 879

ῤοιχθῶν, ii. 748

ῤύμη, i. 455

ῤύμαι, ii. 463

ῤυτάρια, ii. 678

ῤυτάρος, ii. 680

Σ.

σαββατισμός, ii. 596

σαββάτου ὁδός, i. 699. τὰ σάββατα, denoting 'one sabbath,' 260

σαγήνη, i. 107

σαίνομαι, ii. 470

σάκκοι, i. 83

σαλεύω, i. 202. 708. 723. 813;
ii. 488

σάλλυγξ, ii. 476. 661

σαλπίζω, i. 41

Σαμαριίτης, i. 602

σαπρός, i. 54. 107; ii. 397

σάπφειρος, ii. 864

σαργάνη, i. 322

σάρδιος, ii. 807. 864

σαρκικός ἐπιθυμία, ii. 711

κατὰ νόμον ἐντολῆς σαρκικῆς,
ii. 616

σάρξ, ii. 366; denoting person, 251. 297. σάρξ μία, i. 147.

σάρξ καὶ αἷμα, 129; ii.
337. κατὰ σάρκα, 367.

406. καὶ ἐν σαρκί καὶ ἐν Κυρίῳ, 568. φάγεται εἰς τὰς σάρκας, 695. ἐν σαρκί, 309. τὰ ἔργα τῆς σ., 365.

ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις τῆς σαρκός, 601

Σατανᾶ, i. 132

μὴ ἐβλινντε τὸ Πνεῦμα, ii. 481

σίβασμα, ii. 490. 637

Σιβαστός, i. 866. 867

σιβόμενος τὸν Θεόν, i. 807 σιόμαι for κινέομαι, i. 165 σειραὶ ζῶφον, ii. 741

σεισμός, i. 61. 196. 245 σεληνιαζομαι, i. 27, 28. 187

σεμίδαλις, ii. 853

σεμνός, ii. 435

σεμνότης, ii. 506. 558

σημαίνω, i. 634. 772; ii. 791

σημειῶν, i. 203. 380. 533; ii.
826. σημ. περιτομῆς, ii. 85 σημιοῦμαι, ii. 496

σήμιρον, ii. 591. σήμ. καὶ αἰριον, i. 452

σήπω, ii. 694

σής, i. 47

σικάριος, i. 847

σίκιρα, i. 365

Σιλουανός, ii. 459

σιμικίνθον, i. 828

Σινᾶ, i. 739

σινάπι, i. 138

σινδών, i. 243. 348

σινιάζω, i. 496

σιτιστά, i. 175

σίτος, i. 737. 882

σκανδαλίζω, i. 35. 79. 102. 141;
ii. 115

σκάδαλον, i. 79. 106. 493

σκάπτειν περὶ, i. 449

σκεπάσματα, ii. 527

σκινή, i. 880

σκεῦος, i. 330. 757. 764. 878; ii. 79. 541; applied to woman, 715

σκηνή, i. 136. 742. 799; ii. 626. ἡ πρώτη σκηνή, 623. σκηνὰς αἰωνίου, i. 463

σκηνοπηγία, i. 580

σκηνοποιοί, i. 822

σκήνος, ii. 284. 285

σκηνώ, i. 520; ii. 818

σκήνωμα, denoting the human body, ii. 736

σκιὰ, ii. 450. 620. 632

σκιστάω, i. 369

σκληροκαρδία, i. 148

σκληρός, i. 211. 577. 755

σκληροτράχηλος, i. 748

σκληρύνω, ii. 77. σκληρύνωμαι, i. 827; ii. 591, 592

σκολίζω, i. 711; ii. 712

σκόλον τῆ σαρκί, ii. 325

σκοπία, ii. 368. 432. κατὰ σκοπὸν διώκει, ii. 431

σκορπίζω, i. 91; ii. 306, 307

σκοτία, i. 519

σκοτίζομαι, ii. 394

σκότος, i. 25; ii. 408. σνότος, τὸ ἑξώτερον, 58. 212. 400.

442 σκόβαλον, ii. 429

Σκύθης, ii. 454. 455

σκυθωπός, i. 46

σκούλλομαι, i. 71

σκούλλα, i. 71. 417

σκύλα, i. 436

σμάραγδος, ii. 864

σμέρνη, i. 683

Σολομώντος στοδ., i. 615

σορός, i. 406

σουδάριον, i. 481. 624. 625

σοφία, i. 82. 408. 733; ii. 163.
375. 446. 674; distinguished from σύνσις, ii. 441

εἰσοφισμένοι μῦθοι, ii. 737 σοφός, ii. 163. 402; distinguished from συνιστός, i. 84

σπαράσσω, i. 261

σπαργάνω, i. 376

σπαταλώ, ii. 520

σπείρα, i. 670. 762. 874

σπείρω, to besow, ii. 306

σπικουλάτωρ, i. 294

σπίνδομαι, ii. 425. 549

σπίρμα, i. 179; ii. 75. 348

σπέρμολόγος, i. 815

σπείδω, ii. 748

σπήλαια, ii. 653

σπιλάδες, ii. 785

σπίλος, ii. 405. 743

σπιλώω, ii. 686

σπλαγχνίζομαι, i. 71. 145

σπλάγχνα, ii. 414. 420. 455.
567, 568. σπλάγχνα ἑλέους,
i. 374

σπουδάζω, ii. 469

σπουδαιότερος, ii. 427

σπουδή, ii. 101. 302. 303

σταθύνει, i. 727

στάσις, i. 796. 834. στάσις ἔχειν, ii. 625

σταυρός, i. 237; ii. 370. 449

σταυρώω, ii. 371

σταφυλή, i. 54

στάχυν, i. 281

στίγμη, ii. 469

στίλλομαι, ii. 495

στιναγμοί, ii. 67

μὴ στενάζετε, ii. 696

στενοχωρία, ii. 282

στενοχωρία, ii. 19. 70. 326

στεριὰ τροφῆς, ii. 603

στερίωμα, ii. 447

στείφανος ἐξ ἀκαθῶν, i. 237.

στέψ. τῆς ζωῆς, ii. 673

στεφανός, ii. 585

στέκος, ii. 111

στηρίζω, ii. 7. 470. 472. 494

στήγματα, ii. 371

στιγμὴ χρόνου, i. 388

στοδ., i. 559

στοιβάς, i. 329

στοιχίω, i. 845; ii. 368. 371.
432 στοιχεῖα, ii. 748. στοιχεῖα τοῦ κόσμου, 352. 448. 451.

τῆς ἀρχῆς, 602

στολή, i. 336

στόμα μαχαίρας, i. 491; ii.
652 στράτευμα, i. 502. 853

στρατεύω, ii. 505

στρατηγοί, i. 494. 719

στρατιά τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, i. 741 στρηνιάζω, ii. 852

στρώνυμι, i. 761

στρυγγός, ii. 561

στυγνός, i. 126. 323

στόλος, ii. 341. στόλος καὶ ἰδραίωμα τῆς ἀληθείας, 513

Στωϊκοί, i. 814

συγγνώμη, ii. 175. 176

συγκατάθεσις, ii. 295

συγκατατίθεμαι, i. 507

συγκαταληψίς, i. 702

συγκερδύνωμαι, ii. 223. 594

συγκλείω, ii. 95. 351. 394

συγκοινωνεῖν τοῖς ἔργοις, ii.
400. 414

συγκομίζω, i. 746

συγκύπτω, i. 449

συγκυρία, i. 431

συγχύω, i. 845

συγχρόμαι, i. 549

συγχύομαι, i. 703

συζητεῖν αὐτῶν, i. 308

συζητήσει, i. 796, 797 συζητήτης τοῦ αἵματος τούτου, ii. 135 σύζυγος, ii. 434
 συζωοποιέω, ii. 449
 σύκα, i. 54
 συκάμινοι, i. 469
 συκομορία, i. 479
 συκοφαντία, i. 385, 480
 συλαγωγία, ii. 448
 συλάω, ii. 315
 συλλαμβάνομαι, i. 394
 συλλαμβάνω, i. 774
 συμβαίω, i. 326
 συμβάλλω, i. 378, 826
 συμβασιλεύω, ii. 539
 συμβιβάζω, i. 758, 905; ii. 147, 393, 446, 451 συμβούλιον ἰπποῦν, i. 271 συμμίτοχος, ii. 386, 400 συμμιμηταί, ii. 432
 συμμορφος, ii. 433
 συμμορφούμενος, ii. 430 συμπαράκαλομαι, ii. 7 συμπαθεῖν ταῖς ἀσθενείαις ἡμῶν, ii. 598. συμκ. τοῖς δεσμοῖς, 640 συμπεριλαμβάνω, i. 836
 συμπληροῦμαι, i. 424, 702 συμπιεσθέντες, ii. 726
 συμπόσιος συμπόσιος, i. 297 συμφίρω, ii. 302, 322
 σύμφημι, ii. 56
 συμφυλάτης, ii. 468
 σύμφυτος, ii. 47
 συμφύω, i. 412
 συμφωνία, i. 726
 συμφωνία, i. 460
 σύμψυχος, ii. 421
 σύν, 'through the instrumentality of,' ii. 463 συνέγω, i. 723
 συναγωγή, i. 26; ii. 680. συναγωγή τοῦ Σατανᾶ, 798 συναθλίω, ii. 434
 συναικμάτωτος, ii. 570
 συναλίζομαι, i. 697
 συναναμίγνυμι, ii. 496
 συναντιλαμβάνομαι, i. 432; ii. 66 συναπαγομαι, ii. 102, 342 συναρμολογέομαι, ii. 393 συναρπάζω, i. 415
 συνδείσμιος, i. 750; ii. 390, 455 συνδομή, i. 846
 συνίδριον, i. 74, 727
 συνίδριος, ii. 105, 207, 625, 627, 632. συνιδ. ἀγαθή, 501, 505. συνιδ. καθάρᾳ, 535, 556. συνιδ. πονηρά, 636. διὰ συνίδριον Θεοῦ, 712 συνιδω, i. 724, 775
 συνικήσας, i. 831
 συναλάω, i. 739
 συναργίω, ii. 684
 συναργός, ii. 469, 567
 συνελθεῖν αὐτούς, i. 6
 συνέρχομαι, i. 70
 συνεισώω, i. 382; ii. 167, 341, 456 σέβεις, i. 382; ii. 385, 446; distinguished from σοφία, 441 συνετός, i. 779; distinguished from σοφός, 84 συνευδοκῶν τῇ ἀναιρίσει, i. 745 συνέχω, i. 27, 446, 744, 822; ii. 418 συνεζέγγυμι, i. 147

 συνεδομαι, ii. 58
 συνεηκτικότης, ii. 336
 συνεδρῶνται, i. 843
 συνεήμι, i. 102; ii. 27 συνίστημι, ii. 25, 41, 273, 291, 292, 312, 443 συνοικοδομῶ, ii. 385
 συνομορία, i. 823
 συνοχή, i. 491; ii. 270 συνταφίς ἐν βαπτίσματι, ii. 449 συντίλεια τοῦ αἵματος, i. 106, 108, 195. συντίλεια τῶν αἰώνων, ii. 630 συντηρίω, ii. 293
 συντιθεμαι, i. 606, 607
 συντόνω, i. 858
 συντρέβω, i. 341, 423
 σύντροφος, i. 778
 συντοκροῦμαι, ii. 341
 γέννη Συροφοίνισσα, i. 122 Σύρτις, i. 879
 σύρω, i. 746, 794
 σύσσημον, i. 348
 σύσσωμος, ii. 386
 συστατικά ἐπιστολαί, ii. 274 συστῆλιν, i. 726; ii. 181 συστοιχίω, ii. 358
 συστρατιώτης, ii. 426
 συστρίβω, i. 884
 συστρεφῆ, i. 834
 συσχηματίζομαι, ii. 97
 Συχάρ, i. 548
 σφάγιον, i. 741
 σφραγίζω, i. 244, 547, 571; ἐκ κεφαλῆς, ii. 827. σφραγίσαι τῷ Πνεύματι ἀγαπῶν, 576. σφραγισάμενος ἡμᾶς, 269 σφραγίς, ii. 35, 190, 541 σφυρος, i. 715
 τό σχῆμα τοῦ κόσμου, ii. 183 σχήματι εὐρεθεῖς ὡς ἄνθρωπος, ii. 422 σχίζομαι, i. 791
 σχίσμα, i. 615; ii. 133, 223 σχολάζω, i. 97
 σχολή Τυράννου, i. 828
 σῶζω, i. 7, 61, 69, 450, 713, 720; ii. 504 σῶμα τῆς ἀμαρτίας, ii. 47, 449 σώματα, denoting persons, ii. 96; αἵματος, 855 σωματικῶς, ii. 448, 517 σωρεύω, ii. 545
 σωσθῆναι, ii. 129
 Σωτήρ, i. 729; applied to God the Father, ii. 518 σωτηρία, i. 384, 720, 721, 738; ii. 9, 417, 479, 608 σωτήριος, ii. 559
 σωφρονίω, ii. 288
 σωφρονίζω, ii. 557
 σωφρονισμός, ii. 555

σωφροσύνη, ii. 508
 σώφρων, ii. 510
 σωφρόνως, ii. 560

T.

ταπῆ, i. 777
 ταλαυνία, ii. 848
 τάλαντον, i. 144
 ταμίαιος, i. 43, 201, 443
 τάξις, ii. 447
 ταπεινῶμαι, i. 384; ii. 436 ταπεινοφροσύνη, i. 838; ii. 390, 421, 450, 452 ταπεινῶσαι, i. 369; ii. 675 τάρσσω, i. 9, 298, 801; ii. 335 ταρταρώσαι, ii. 741 τάσσομαι, i. 787, 789, 888 τέχνη, ii. 513
 ταχέως, ii. 488, 524
 διὰ τοῦ τέχνητος, i. 758
 τεκμήριον, i. 697
 τεκνία, i. 642, 689, 801, 815; ii. 357 τέκνα, denoting 'inhabitants,' i. 193. τέκνα Θεοῦ, 520.
 τέκνα τῆς ἐπαγγελίας, ii. 75, 359. τέκνα ὁργῆς, 381.
 τέκνα ἀγαπητά, 598. τέκνα φωτός, 400. τ. ὑπακοῆς, 704 τεκνογονία, ii. 509
 τεκνοτροφία, ii. 522
 τίκτω, i. 109
 τίλειος, i. 40, 152; ii. 141, 393, 431, 603. τέλ. ἐν Χριστῷ, 446. τέλ. ταῖς φρεσίν, 233; distinguished from ὁλόκληροι and ὁλοτελείς, 673 τελειότης, ii. 455
 τελειώω, ii. 616, 635. τελειῶν τὸν δρόμον, i. 838. τελειῶν τινα, ii. 586. τελειοῦμαι, i. 304, 452; ii. 431, 602, 625, 635. τεταλειωμένοι, 619, 663 τελείωσις, ii. 704
 τελειώσιν, i. 369
 τελειωτός, ii. 604
 τελειοφρέμι, i. 413
 τελειοτέρη θεωρεῖται, ii. 118 τῆς τελειότητος, sc. τοῦ βίου, i. 11 τέλειος, denoting 'final punishment,' ii. 317. εἰς τέλος, i. 473. τέλος νόμου Χριστός, 83. τὸ τέλος, 247. τὸ τέλος Κορίνθ, 697 τέλος, ii. 51; distinguished from φόρος, 105. τέλη ἢ κῆσων, i. 139 τελώνιον, i. 66
 τετράδιον, i. 774
 τετρακόσια, i. 736
 τετράμοιρος, i. 555
 τετράποδος, i. 765
 τεχνίτης, ii. 854. τεχν. and ἐργάτης, i. 830 τελευτῶ, i. 311
 τηρέω, i. 862
 τηρεῖς, i. 727
 τίθημι, i. 653, 654; ii. 224; for ἀποτίθ., i. 638. τίθιναι, ψυχὴν, i. 613. τίθ. παρὰ —, 723. τίθισθαι ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ, i. 372. 724, 725. ἔθετο ἐν πνεύματι, 829. τίθιναι βουλήν, 877

τίκτω, i. 661
τίλλω, i. 85
τιμάω, i. 406; to support, 519. τιμάσθαι, 'to have a price set on one's head,' i. 234 τιμή, i. 724. 886; ii. 19. 101. 223. 523. 600. 709 τίμιος, ii. 151
τις, used for numeral, i. 406. τίς for ποῖος, 704; ii. 149. τίς αἱ; i. 523. τί οὖν ἵσθι; 844. τί ἔμοι καὶ σοί; 531. τί ἡμῖν καὶ σοί; 62. τί πρὸς αἱ; 692; intensive, 638 τίτλος, i. 679
τό, in reference to a sentence, i. 150. 317. 424. 493; a sign of vocative, 317 τοίχι κεκοισμημένοι, i. 852 τόκος, i. 211
τομότερος, ii. 597
τόπον ἀπολογία λαμβάνειν, i. 866. τόπος μετανοίας, ii. 660. πορευθῆναι εἰς τὸν ἴδιον τ., i. 701. 702. τόπον ἔχω, 122. τ. ὅσα, i. 453; ii. 396 τότε (Hebr. כֵּן), ii. 634 τοῦτο μὲν—τοῦτο δέ, ii. 640 τραπέζιται, i. 482. 534. 732
τραπέζιται, i. 211
τραχηλίζουσαι, ii. 598
τράφηλον ὑποτίθηναι, ii. 123 τραχέες τόποι, i. 881
Τρίτῃ ταβήρῃ, i. 887
τρίφαις τὰς καρδίας, ii. 695 τρίβολος, i. 54; ii. 607 τριζω, i. 316
τρίς, used of an uncertain number, ii. 325. ἐπὶ τρίς, i. 765 τρίστοιχοι, i. 835
σάκκος τρίχινος, ii. 814 τρώμος, ii. 424
τρώπη ἀποσκόλισμα, ii. 677 τρώπος, ii. 497; for ἦθος, 666 τροφή, i. 73; ii. 603
τροφοφορίω, i. 782
τροχὸς τῆς γυναικὸς, ii. 686 τρομακία, i. 324
τροφή, i. 407
τρώγων, i. 640
τυγχάνω, i. 828
τυμπανίζωμαι, ii. 652
τύπος, ii. 22. 462. τύπος τοῦ μίλλοντος, 42
τύπτω, ii. 189
Τυράννου σχολή, i. 828
τυρβάξω, i. 433
τυφλος, i. 389
τυφούμαι, i. 89; ii. 544. 545 ἀνιμὸς τυφωνικός, i. 877 ἐπιμαλίστα τυχαῖν, i. 875, 876

Υ.

ὁδίασσα ἑάλιν, ii. 844

ὕβρις, i. 877; ii. 326
ὕβριστής, ii. 15
ὕιός, i. 793
ὕγιαίνοντες λόγοι, ii. 502. 549 λόγοι ὕγιε, ii. 558, 559 ὕδρια, i. 531
ὕδατα πολλά, i. 545
ὕλοισια, ii. 72. 374
ὕλος Ὑψίστου, i. 367. ὕλος Θεοῦ, 22. 60. 117. 243. 675. ὕλος Δαυὶδ, 70. 88. ὕλος τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, 563, 564. ὕλος τοῦ ἀνθ., difference of meaning when used with Article, 86. ὕλος τοῦ ἀνθ. and ὁ Χριστός, whether synonymous terms, 634. ὕλος τοῦ Θεοῦ and ὁ Χριστός, distinction between the appellatives, 128. 579. ὕλος παρακλησισ, 724 ὕλος, 'a descendant,' i. 4. ὕλος Διαβόλου, 780. ὕλος γέννησις, 188. ὁ ὕλος τῆς ἀληθείας, 667. ὕλοι, denoting 'family in general,' 549. ὕλοι τῆς πνευματικῆς, ii. 381. ὕλοι τῆς βασιλείας, i. 58. ὕλοι τῆς διαθήκης, 719. ὕλοι φωτός καὶ ἡμέρας, ii. 478. ὕλοι τοῦ νυμφώντος, 67. ὕλοι τῶν προφητῶν, 719. ὕλοι τοῦ Ὑψίστου, 402. ὕλοι τοῦ Θεοῦ, 31. 59 ὕλη, ii. 686
ὕμνος, ii. 403
ὕμνον τὸν Θεόν, i. 809
ὕψω, i. 63. 152. 219. 417. 629. 654. 689; ii. 683 ὕπακοῇ τῷ Χριστῷ, ii. 310. 569. ἔμαθι τὴν ὑπ., 602. τίνα ὑπακοῇ, 704. εἰς ὑπακοὴν πίστει, 4 ὕπακοῦ, i. 732. 775; ii. 423. 496 ὕπαυρος, ii. 52
ὕπαυρις, i. 712; ii. 640
ὕπαναυτος, ii. 638
ὕπῃρ, for πλῆν, ii. 818; for μάλλον ἢ, 326; for περί, 488. ὑπὲρ ἐκ παρισσοῦ, 589
ὕπαιρσις, ii. 490
ὕπαιρσις, ii. 185
ὕπαιρσις, ii. 473
ὕπερβολή τῆς δυνάμεως, ii. 282. καθ' ὑπερβολὴν εἰς ὑπερβολήν, 284. καθ' ὑπερβολήν, for σφόδρα, 536 ὕπερβω, i. 820
ὕπερπερισσοῦ, ii. 471. 480 ὕπερπερισσῶς, ii. 312
ὕπερπερσις, i. 403
ὕπερπερσις, i. 648
ὕπερπερσις πάντα νοῦν, ii. 434
ὕπερπερσις, i. 303
ὕπερπερσις, ii. 15. 544. 691
ὕπερπερσις, ii. 314. 326
ὕπερπερσις, ii. 70
ὕπερπερσις, ii. 506
ὕπερπερσις, ii. 503
ὕπερπερσις, ii. 423
ὕπερπερσις, i. 43. 699
ὕπερπερσις, i. 786. 863

ὕπερπερσις, i. 35. 363. 390. 871
ὕπερπερσις, i. 734
ὕπερπερσις, ii. 713
ὕπερπερσις, ii. 620
ὕπερπερσις, i. 18
ὕπερπερσις, i. 432. 813; ii. 685
ὕπερπερσις, i. 19. 73. 257
ὕπερπερσις, i. 878
ὕπερπερσις, i. 184
ὕπερπερσις τὸ πλοῖον, i. 878
ὕπερπερσις, ii. 515
ὕπερπερσις, i. 41
ὕπερπερσις, i. 431. 698; ii. 88
ὕπερπερσις, i. 170
ὕπερπερσις, ii. 657
ὕπερπερσις, ii. 561. 736. 783
ὕπερπερσις, ii. 66. 461. 485. 495. 641. 657. 673. 735
ὕπερπερσις, ii. 526
ὕπερπερσις, i. 875
ὕπερπερσις, i. 877
ὕπερπερσις, ii. 505. 578. 592
ὕπερπερσις, ii. 642
ὕπερπερσις, ii. 341
ὕπερπερσις, ii. 643
ὕπερπερσις, i. 383; ii. 104. 404. 561
ὕπερπερσις, ii. 379. 585
ὕπερπερσις, ii. 517
ὕπερπερσις, i. 878
ὕπερπερσις, ii. 504. 536
ὕπερπερσις, i. 473; ii. 197
ὕπερπερσις, i. 680
ὕπερπερσις, i. 151; ii. 29. 188. 315. 594
ὕπερπερσις, ii. 445. 471
ὕπερπερσις καιροῖς, ii. 515 ἐν ὑψηλοῖς, ii. 579
ὕψηλότεροι τῶν οὐρανῶν, ii. 618 ὕψηλοφρονεῖν, ii. 531
ὁ ὑψηλός applied to the Deity, i. 285. ἐν τοῖς ὑψηλοῖς, 165. 378 ὕψω, i. 709. ὑψηλὸν τὸν ὕλον τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, 634

Φ.

φαγεῖν ἄρτον, i. 452
φαλίσθη or φιλόνη, ii. 550 φανερῶμαι, ii. 401. 453. 631 ἐν τῷ φανερῷ for φανερώ, ii. 24 φανερῶσαι, ii. 220
φανός, i. 670
φανταζόμενος, ii. 662
φαντασία, i. 867
φάντασμα, i. 116
φάρμακον, ii. 366
φάσις for φήμη, i. 846
φάτνη, i. 376
φιλόνη or φιλόνη, ii. 550 φίλομαι, i. 702. 878; ii. 629; used of inspiration, 740 φίρω, ii. 578
φθάνω, i. 91; ii. 312
φθαρτός στίφανος, ii. 196

φθινοπωρινός, ii. 785
 φθόνος, ii. 366
 φθορά, ii. 451
 φιάλα, ii. 845
 φιλάγαθος, ii. 555
 φιλαδελφία, ii. 101. 474. 666 φιλανθρωπία, ii. 561, 562 φιλάργυρος, ii. 544
 φίλαυτος, ii. 544
 φίλιω, κολο, i. 42
 φιλήδονος, ii. 544, 545 φίλημα ἄγιον, ii. 482, 483 φίλια τοῦ κόσμου, ii. 690 φιλοξενία, ii. 666
 φιλόξενοι, ii. 511
 φιλοπρωτεύω, ii. 778
 φιλοστόργος, ii. 101
 φιλοτιμouμαι, ii. 121. 286. 474 φισμός, applied to persons, i. 283 φλογίζω, ii. 686
 φλόξ, i. 466. 739. ἐν πυρὶ φλογος, ii. 486
 φλύαρος, ii. 522
 φοβερὰ ἐκδοχὴ κρίσεως, ii. 638 φοβία, i. 286; ii. 594
 φόβητρον, i. 489
 φόβος, i. 712; ii. 165. φόβος Θεοῦ, 404. μετὰ φόβου καὶ τρόμου, 424
 φοιτῆς, i. 877
 φονεύω, ii. 696
 φόνος, ii. 366
 φόρος distinguished from τίλος, ii. 105 φορτίον βαστάζειν, ii. 369 φραγγέλιον ἐκ σχοινίου, i. 534 φραγγέλλω, i. 237
 φραγγμός, i. 435
 φράττω, ii. 29. 316
 φρεναπατάω, ii. 368
 φρεναπάτης, ii. 555
 φρονείω, ii. 414. 453. φρονεῖν τά τινα, 61. φρον. 432.
αὐτό, ii. 102. 118. 421. 432.
 433 φρόνησις, ii. 375
 φρόνιμος, i. 74. 208
 φρουρίομαι, ii. 351
 φρουρούμενος, ii. 702
 φρυάσσω, i. 722
 φρύγανον, i. 884
 φυλακή, i. 775; ii. 718. 851 φυλακίζω, i. 849
 φυλακτήριον, i. 185
 φυλάσσω, ii. 750. φυλάσσει ἀπὸ—, i. 441
 αἱ φύλαι τῆς γῆς, i. 203 φύραμα, ii. 91. 164
 φυσικός, ii. 743
 φυσιοόμαι, ii. 161
 φύσις, ii. 212. 354. 686
 φυσισαί, ii. 328
 φυτεία, i. 121
 φωλός, i. 60
 φωνίω, i. 222. 766
 φωνή, i. 21. 611. 632. 784. ἀλ- λάξει τὴν φ. ii. 857
 φῶς, i. 25. 48; for πῦρ, 349.
τίκνα φωτός, ii. 400. φῶς οὐκ ἔστιν ἀπρόσιτον, 531. φῶς,

i. e. Jesus Christ, i. 636, 637. τὸ φῶς τοῦ κόσμου, 32. 573. 605. 619. 620. τὸ φῶς τῆς ζωῆς, 593. ὁ Πα- τήρ τῶν φῶτων, ii. 677. 732, 733. υἱοὶ φωτός, 478.
 φωστήρες ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ, ii.
 425 φωτίζω, ii. 156. 377. 386. 606.
 639 φωτισμός, ii. 281

X.

χαῖρα, i. 237. χαίρετε, 31.
 247. χαῖρ. ἐν Κυρίῳ, ii.
 428. χαῖρω, 101; distinguished from ἀγαλλιάω, i.
 31. χαίρειν, a form of salutation, 801; ii. 673
 χαλάω, i. 879. 881
 χαλεπός, i. 62; ii. 543 χαλκολίβανος, ii. 795
 χαλκός ἡχῶν, ii. 225
 Χανάν, i. 737
 γυνὴ Χανααῖα, i. 122
 χαρά, i. 367; ii. 421. 673 χαρμητήρ, ii. 578
 χάραξ, i. 483
 χαρίζομαι, i. 367. 865. 889; ii.
 349. 375. 419
 χάρις, i. 402. 724. 863; ii. 397.
 414. χάρις Θεοῦ, i. 331. 771.
 788; ii. 300. 567. 599. 659.
 665. 729. χάρις ἀντὶ χάρι- τος, i. 521. χάρις ζωῆς, 715 χάρισμα, i. 880; ii. 7. 43. 51.
 519. 723. ἐκπέτω τῆς χ., 360. χαρίσματα, 218—220. χαριτόμος, i. 367; ii. 875
 χάσμα, i. 467
 χεῖλος τῆς θαλάσσης, ii. 646 χεῖμαζομαι, i. 879
 χεῖμαρρος, i. 671
 χεῖμων, i. 880
 χεῖρ, handwriting, ii. 260. χεῖρ τοῦ Κυρίου ἐπὶ σέ, i. 780. ἐπιβάλλω τὰς χ., 773. ἐν
τῷ τῆν χ. σου ἐκτείνειν, 723. ἐπίθασιν χεῖρῶν, ii.
 605 χειραγωγία, i. 756
 χειραγωγός, i. 780
 χειροποίητος, i. 349. 742; ii.
 627. 630
 χειροτονία, i. 795; ii. 304 Χερουβὶμ δόξης, ii. 624 χήρα, ii. 520
 χιτὼν and ἱμάτιον, i. 38
 χλάμυς, i. 237
 χλευάζω, i. 821
 χλωρός, ii. 813
 χολάω, i. 584
 χολή, i. 238
 χορηγία, ii. 733 χορτάζομαι, i. 80; ii. 436 χορτάσμα, i. 737
 χόρτος, i. 49. 114. 281
 χρίαν ἔχω, i. 20. χρ., ii. 397.
χρίαν πληροῦν, 437
 χρημα, i. 724

χρηματίζω, i. 11. 379. 772; ii.
 620. 644. 663
 χρηματισμός, ii. 88
 χρησταύρομαι, ii. 226
 χρηστολογία, ii. 125
 χρυσός, i. 85; ii. 398
 χρυσότης, ii. 17. 367. 455. 562 χρίσμα, ii. 759
 Χριστιανοί, i. 772
 Χριστός, i. 6. 319. 757; distinguished from ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ, 128. 579. Χριστός and ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, whether synonymous, 634.
οἱ τοῦ Χρ., ii. 367. εὐρεθῶ
ἐν Χρ., 430
χρῖω, i. 389. 768; ii. 581 χροεῖν, ii. 641
χρόνος, distinguished from και- ρός, i. 698. ἰσχατοὶ χρόνοι, ii. 577. χρόν. αἰώνιος, 553.
διὰ τὸν χρόν., 602
χρυσόδακτυλοι, ii. 680
χρῶς, i. 791
χώρα for ἀγρός, i. 442. χώρα καὶ σκιά θανάτου, 25
χωρεῖν, i. 148. 598
κεχωρισμένοι ἀπὸ τῶν ἀμαρ- τωμένων, ii. 618
χωρία, αἰαίαι, i. 885
χωρὶς for διὰ, ii. 568; for ἐκ- τός, 684

Ψ.

ψάλλω, ii. 232. 697
ψαλμός, ii. 235. 403
ψευδάδελφος, ii. 319
ψευδολόγος, ii. 515
ψιδομαι, i. 31. 725; ii. 508.
ψεύδεσθαι κατὰ τῆς ἀλη- θείας, ii. 688
ψευδοπροφήτης, i. 197. 779 ψεύδος, ii. 13. 396
ψευσμα, ii. 26
ψηλαφάω, ii. 661
ψηφίζω, i. 455
ψήφον καταφέρειν, i. 871
ψιθυρισμός, ii. 328
ψιθυριστής, ii. 15
ψυχία, i. 123. 465
ψυχή, i. 76. 712; ii. 104. 252; for ζωή, i. 13. ψυχὴ καὶ πνεῦμα, ii. 482
ψυγικός, ii. 146. 252. 689 ψυχρός, ii. 805
ψωμίζω, ii. 226
ψωμίον, i. 641
ψάχω, ii. 398

Ω.

τα ὧς, ii. 458
ὧς, ἐν τῇ place, i. 757 ὧσαι πνευματικαί, ii. 403 ὧδιν, i. 196. λῶσαι τὰς ὧδιναι τοῦ θανάτου, 708
ὧδιναι, ii. 357
ὧρα, denoting time, i. 59. 204.

429. 494. 657. 661. 663. οὐδὲ ὥς, even as, i. 44; ii. 385. 423. ὥσαύτως, ii. 508 πρὸς ὥραν, ii. 339 for ὅτι, ii. 535; for ὥστε, i. ὥστε, so then, ii. 434; ἰσοποικῶς θύρα ἢ λιγομίνη Ὁραία, i. 391. ὥς δὲ, as soon as, ii. that, i. 727; ii. 490; for ἄτε 714 426. ὥς δὲ, ὥ.; for ὥσαι, or ὥσπερ, 356 ὥραιος, ii. 86 311. ὥς ἰάν, 122. ὥς ἐπί, ὥτιον, i. 227. θίσθαι εἰς τὰ ὠριμίην βουλή τοῦ Θεοῦ, i. i. 813. ὥς τε for καὶ ὥς, ii. ὥτα, 423 707 55. ὥς καί, 80 ἀφίλιος, ii. 547. 563 ὠρυόμενος, ii. 727 Ὁσαννά, i. 165

INDEX II.

MATTERS.

A.

Aaron, inferiority of his priesthood to that of Christ, ii. 618—622 Abaddon, derivation and meaning of, ii. 824
 'Abba, Father;' origin and force of the expression, i. 347; ii. 64. 353 Abel, on the faith of, ii. 643. How the Divine approbation of his gifts was manifested, ib.
 The blood of his sacrifice (Heb. xii. 24), 663 Abiathar, on the difficulty involved in the allusion to him, Mark ii. 26, i. 269
 'Abomination of desolation,' meaning of, i. 198 Abraham, on the difference between his behaviour and that of Zechariah, i. 366. Accepted as righteous in consequence of his belief, ii. 33. Promise to him of the heavenly inheritance, nature of, ii. 35. The constancy of his faith commended, 645. His inferiority to Melchizedek, 613. Observations on his faith, ib.
 Abrahamic covenant, its nature illustrated, ii. 348
 Achaia (2 Cor. ix. 2), the part of Greece so designated, ii. 305 ACTS OF THE APOSTLES, an appendix to the Gospels, and an introduction to the Epistles, i. 694; Author, date, and object, ib.; genuineness, and state of the text, 696; vast number of various readings, ib.
 'Adam, the First and Last;' import of, ii. 252 Adria, what part of the Mediterranean sea so called in Acts xxvii. 27, i. 881 Adultery, woman taken in, on the authenticity of the account of, i. 589—591 Æneas, cure of, by Peter, i. 760
 Agabus, i. 773
 Agape, i. 711, 712. 773; ii. 214
 Agar, what mount intended by this name, ii. 358 Agonistic contests, St. Paul's allusions to them, ii. 195, 196. 361 Agrippa, the question discussed, whether he was serious in his address to St. Paul, i. 874 Alabaster box of spikenard, remarks on, i. 215
Al. often employed in the sense of many, i. 358. 719. 745 Allegory and Type, difference between, ii. 358
 'Altar of incense,' meaning of the words so translated, Heb. ix. 3, ii. 624 Anacoluthon, exemplification of, i. 52. 288. 332. 336. 851; ii. 19. 292. 293. 593 Ananias and Sapphira, nature of the offence committed by, i. 724
 ———, of Damascus, i. 757
 'Anathema, let him be,' observations on, ii. 218. 260. 335
 Anchor, a symbol of Hope, ii. 611 Ancients, method of reference employed by the, ii. 595

'Angel of the Lord,' meaning of, i. 7 Angelic appearances, on the time of their ceasing, i. 364 Angelolatry condemned, ii. 451
 Angels, guardian, on the offices assigned them according to the tenets of the Jews, i. 141, 142. 775, 776. On their doxology, 378. 'Disposition of angels' (Acts vii. 53), 744. Judging the angels, what? ii. 169. 'Tongues of angels' (1 Cor. xiii. 1), 225; their inferiority to Christ, 577
 'Angry, be ye, and sin not,' meaning of the expression, ii. 396
 Anna, the prophetess, remarks on, i. 381
 Annas, on the tenure of the High-priesthood of, i. 384
Antanaclosis, example of, ii. 113
Antichrist, meaning of the term, ii. 758, 759
Aorist tense, frequently employed to denote custom, i. 21. 73. 350. 623. 652, 653. 707; ii. 280 Apollos succeeds St. Paul at Corinth, ii. 127 'Apostasy,' and 'Man of Sin,' opinions respecting, ii. 488. 545. Danger of Apostasy, 605. 745 Apostles. [See Disciples.]
 Apphia (Philem. 1), who supposed to be, ii. 567 Aquila, i. 821
 Archippus, ii. 567
 Areopagus, decline of its influence in the time of the Apostles, i. 815 Arias, their suspected corruption of Acts xvi. 7, i. 805 'Arm,' by a Hebrew figure, denoting power, i. 370 Armageddon, derivation and meaning of, ii. 847 Asia, how to be understood at Acts xvi. 6, i. 803, 804 Asiarcha, origin and nature of their office, i. 831 Assurance, doctrine of, untenable by the passage of 1 John ii. 3, ii. 755
Asyndeton, examples of, i. 283; ii. 618. 657. 692. 727 Athens, its excessive devotion to a plurality of gods, i. 816. On the altar there, adverted to by St. Paul, 817. Its tolerant character, 818 Atonement, Scriptural doctrine of, i. 160. 614; ii. 68, 69. 291 Auricular confession, groundlessly built upon James v. 16, ii. 698 Azotus, its site, i. 753

B.

Babylon, in what sense to be understood, ii. 729. 841
 Balsam, on the crime of, ii. 784 Baptism, its general use among the Jewish and Oriental nations, i. 15. Nature and Origin of, among the Jews, 17. 'Baptism' denoting affliction, 159. Baptism of repentance, 256. Infant Baptism, its analogy to circumcision, 249; mode of administering the rite, ib. 446. 753. 'I have a baptism to be baptized with,' meaning of, 446. Supposed allusion to the delay of administering the rite in early times, 753. Rarely administered by the Apostles, 769, 770. No visible token of pardon ordinarily vouchsafed, in the Apostolic times, until after baptism, 848. Applied by St. Paul, under the similitude of death and resurrection, to denote the cultivation of Christian virtue, ii. 46. Succeeded circumcision, 360. Allusion to the rite, 1 Cor. vi. 11, 171, 172. Followed in the Apostolic times by the laying on of hands, why? 605. Baptism of John, observations on the, i. 168, 524. Nature of it, 828, 829. Baptism with Fire, what? i. 19. Baptism of our Lord by John, nature and design of, 20.

Baptismal Regeneration, nature of, ii. 562.

'Baptized in Jordan,' meaning of, i. 256. 'Baptized into Moses,' the sense of the expression discussed, ii. 99. 'Baptized for the dead,' these words explained, ii. 249.

Barbarian, origin and import of the word, i. 884. 'Barbarian' and 'Scythian' (Coloss. iii. 11), ii. 454, 455.

Barnabas, the companion of Paul, ii. 340. Styled by the Greeks 'the fourteenth Apostle,' ib. His character, i. 772.

Bartimeus, i. 327.

'Bearing sins,' import of the phrase, i. 525; ii. 631.

Beatitudes, the Mount of, i. 29.

'Beautiful,' gate so called, discussion as to which it is, i. 714.

Beelzebub, signification of, i. 75. Our Lord blasphemously charged by the Pharisees with being in league with him, 91, 92.

Beholding, considered the most ignominious death among the Jews, i. 773, 774.

Belial, derivation and meaning of, ii. 295.

Bethany or Bethabara, situation of, i. 163, 524.

Bethesda, pool of, on the miraculous cures wrought there, i. 558.

'Bethlehem Ephrata,' i. 9, 10.

Bethphage, situation of, i. 163.

Bethsaida, i. 419.

Binding and loosing, the power of, granted to St. Peter, observations on, i. 129—131, 143.

Bishop, origin and import of the term, i. 803, 804, 836—838. Existence of the office in the Apostolic times, ii. 412. The three orders in the ministry inferred from 1 Thess. v. 12—14, 480.

Black, an emblem of woe, ii. 812.

Blasphemy, meaning of the term, i. 64, 229, 230.

How understood by the Jews, 733, 734. Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, nature of the sin, 91.

'Blood, born not of,' observations on this expression, i. 520. 'Blood of the Covenant,' meaning of the expression, ii. 638. 'The moon shall be turned into blood,' meaning of, i. 706. No redemption without shedding of blood, ii. 630.

Bloody sweat, on our Lord's suffering under it, i. 498.

Boanerges, derivation and meaning of, i. 273.

Body, 'whosoever eateth my body, and drinketh my blood,' whether alluding to the Eucharist,

i. 576. The body compared by the Pythagoreans to a habitation, and by the Platonists to a garment, ii. 285.

'Book' (βιβλος, Heb. ספר), Matt. i. 1, meaning of, i. 4. 'Book of the Prophets,' import of the term, 741. 'Names written in the book of life,' the allusion in these words, ii. 434.

'Born again,' import of the expression, i. 539, 540.

Bow, an emblem of victory, ii. 661.

Bread, by an Oriental figure, denoting the necessities of life, i. 44. 'Breaking bread,' whether to be understood of the Eucharist, 712, 836, 837.

'Bridegroom,' a title applied by the Hebrews to the Messiah, i. 67. Christ compared to a bridegroom by John the Baptist, 545, 546.

Brotherly kindness, recommended, ii. 733, 734.

Browne, Sir Thomas, on Col. ii. 8, ii. 448; on the last judgment, 631.

Burials, among the Jews and Heathens, outside of cities and towns, i. 406. The interval between death and burial short, 725, 726.

'Burn, did not our hearts?' remarks on, i. 511. 'Whose end is to be burnt,' the allusion explained, ii. 607.

Burning of incense in the Temple, the office determined by lot, i. 364.

C.

Cæsarea Philippi, how distinguishable from Cæsarea of Palestine, i. 759, 760.

Caiaphas, observations on his tenure of the High-priesthood, i. 384. On his prophetic declaration respecting the death of our Lord, 626.

'Called' and 'chosen,' sense in which these terms are employed, i. 157.

Calf, the golden, i. 740.

Calvinists, their interpretation of John vi. 37, i. 573. Their concession with reference to Eph. i. 5, ii. 374. On Heb. ix. 28, 631.

Camel's hair, girdle of, what? i. 17.

Cana of Galilee, i. 530.

Canaan, derivation and meaning of the word, i. 757. A woman of Canaan (Matt. xv. 22), her character and country, i. 122, 304.

Canaanites, called Phenicians by the Greeks, i. 122.

Catholic Epistles, why so called, ii. 671.

Cedron, the brook, i. 671.

Cenchreae, i. 824.

Cephas (Peter), ground of the attachment to him of the party at Corinth called by his name, ii. 133.

Cerinthus, nature of the heresy maintained by him, ii. 751.

'Chaff,' meaning of the word so rendered, i. 20.

Charity, its superiority to all other virtues, ii. 224, 225, 455, 733, 734.

Cherubim, symbolical emblems of the Divine nature, ii. 624.

'Child-bearing, she shall be saved in' (1 Tim. ii. 15), the meaning of the words, ii. 509.

CHRIST, signification and origin of the name, i. 6, 389. Why he condescended to be baptized by John, 20. Predicts his crucifixion, 158. His consummate wisdom in his replies to the Pharisees, 168, 169. Whether he celebrated the Passover before his crucifixion? 217, 218. His agony in the Garden, 223, 224. On the

- subornation of false witnesses against him, 229. His bloody sweat, 498. His exclamation when nailed to the cross, 240. His commission to his Apostles to evangelize the world, 248, 249. His Omnipresence, ib. God's testimony as to his being his Son, 136. Brought up to a handicraft occupation, 291. In what sense it is said (Mark vi. 5), that he 'could do no miracles,' ib. External actions used by him in the cure of diseases and infirmities, why? 306. Nature of his promise to his persecuted followers, 325. Probable meaning of his promise to the penitent malefactor, 306. His sudden disappearance from the disciples, who were journeying to Emmaus, 509. The way in which his disciples saw his glory, 520. On the number of Passovers attended by Christ during his ministry, 533. His conversation with Nicodemus, 537. His crucifixion typified by the brazen serpent, 542. Why he did not himself baptize, 544. Why he revealed himself more fully to the Samaritans than to the Jews, 556. His subordination to, and coequality with, the Father, 562; ii. 209. In what sense the Father is said to 'give men' to him, 572. Purpose of his journey to Jerusalem at the Feast of Tabernacles, 581. Reason assigned for his not accompanying his disciples to the Feast, ib. His Discourse on the last great day of the Feast, 585. Why he taught in Parables, 98. 610. Glory of Christ, in what it probably consists, 631. The purpose of his Passion, 614. His death voluntary, ib. His procession from God, 662. His union with the Father, 648. His prayer for his disciples, 663. Distinction between his proceeding from, and being sent by, the Father, 656. Appearances to his disciples, and conversations with them, after his resurrection, 697, 698. Parallel between him and Moses, 719. In what respect his intercession differs from that of the Holy Spirit, ii. 66. How said to be the Author of our Justification, Sanctification, and Redemption, 140. Resignation of his Mediatorial office, 245, 246. His humiliation and exaltation, 423, 583. 'Brought life and immortality to light,' 536. His titles, 577. In what sense he is said to be begotten, as the Son of God, 580. Said to be 'a little lower than the angels,' meaning of this, 584. Contrasted with Moses, 589. Shown to be the true High-Priest, 598, 599. 'Was heard in that he feared,' explained, 601. His priesthood superior to the Levitical, 614—617. In what sense he is to be called an 'Intercessor,' 606, 507. In what sense 'the Mediator of the New Covenant,' 663. The Expiation made by him neither requires nor admits of repetition, 634. His body typified by the Veil of the Temple, 635. Set forth as an example of suffering, 668. 'Preached to the spirits in prison' (1 Pet. iii. 19), 718. In what sense called our 'Shepherd,' 714.
- Christian Liberty, its nature and limits, ii. 712
- Christians, the early ones universally hated by the Pagans, i. 196. Origin of the name, 772. Obligated by their persecutors to pronounce certain forms, expressive of abuse of Christ, 871
- Church (ἐκκλησία), import of the term in the Apostolic age, ii. 712. Promise of the foundation being laid by St. Peter, i. 129, 130. Persecution of by Saul, 745. 'The Church in their house,' the meaning of the expression discussed, ii. 123, 260. In what sense called 'The pillar and ground of the truth' (1 Tim. iii. 15), 513
- Circumcision, its analogy to Infant Baptism, i. 249. Whether instituted before or after the Sabbath, 584. On the performance of the rite on the Sabbath, 583, 584. Put for the whole ritual law, 795. A seal, of what and how? ii. 85. Earnestly denounced by St. Paul, 493. Jewish traditions respecting it, 429
- Circumspection and prudence, remarkable terms in which these virtues are recommended to the Ephesians and Colossians, ii. 403
- Classical Greek contrasted with Hellenistic, i. 140, 205, 227, 248, 269, 287, 298, 406, 407, 773, 774, 813; ii. 6, 50, 193, 260, 302
- Clay, why used by our Saviour in restoring the sight of the blind man, i. 605
- Clement, mentioned Phil. iv. 3, whether Clements Romanus, ii. 434
- Clothing, emblematical of moral habits, ii. 727
- Cloud, a symbol of the Divine presence, i. 547; a small one looked on, in the East, as the forerunner of wind and rain, 446
- Cock-crowing, meaning of the expression, i. 222. Apparent discrepancy between the account in Matt. xxvi. 34, and Mark xiv. 30, ib.
- Coins, the most ancient, usually square, i. 534
- Coleridge, on the characteristics of the Epistle to the Ephesians, ii. 372; and on those of the Epistle to the Colossians, ib.
- Collections for the Saints, why made weekly, and on the Sabbath, ii. 257
- Colossians, Epistle to, date and design of it, ii. 438; whether written before, or after, the Epistle to the Ephesians, 372; its authenticity and genuineness, 439; its style and composition, ib.
- 'Cometh, he that,' a title of the Messiah, i. 19, 165, 193, 519
- 'Commandment, a new,' why so called, i. 642, 643
- 'Common,' the correlative word to 'Holy,' i. 300, 765, 766
- Communion with God, meaning of, ii. 753
- Conscience, a law to the Gentiles, ii. 21. Power of an evil one, 588. The Law unable to quiet it, 625
- Corban, meaning of, i. 119
- Core (Jude 11), 'the gain saying of,' ii. 784, 785
- Corinth, state of society there when visited by St. Paul, ii. 127. The Christian converts tainted with the Sadducean spirit, 238. Importance of the station, 305
- Corinthians, First Epistle to, date and design of, ii. 127
- Corinthians, Second Epistle to, date and design of, ii. 261. Effects produced by it, 261, 262
- Cornelius, whether a mere Gentile, or a proselyte of the gate, i. 762
- 'Creation of all things,' the phrase never used in Scripture in a moral sense, ii. 441
- Crete, probable period of the first preaching of Christianity there, ii. 552. Character of the inhabitants, 554—556
- Cross, on the form of the, i. 237. On the manner of inscription on, 238
- Crown of thorns, observations on, i. 237
- Crucifixion, nature of the punishment, i. 237, 238, 636. Nature and extent of the darkness during it, 239. Whether twice described by Mark as having taken place, 853. Discrepancy between him and John as to the hour, 853, 854

Cup, denial of it to the laity by the Church of Rome, a bold infraction of the ordinance of the Lord's Supper, i. 220
 'Cup, drink of the,' origin and force of this phrase, i. 159. 'Cup of blessing,' origin and import of the expression, ii. 204
 'Cut off the hand,' meaning of the expression, i. 35 Cyrene, situation of, i. 704

D.

Dalmanutha, situation of, i. 125. 806
 Damascus, i. 754
 Darkness at our Lord's crucifixion, nature and extent of it, i. 239. Darkness employed in Scripture as an image of ignorance, 544. An emblem of evil, ii. 400. Darkness, outer, the allusion to it explained, i. 58
 'David, son of,' a title of the Messiah, i. 70.
 Davidson, Dr., his able refutation of De Wette's arguments against the genuineness of the Epistle to the Ephesians, ii. 373. His character of the Epistle, and contrast of its style with that to the Colossians, ib.
 Day of Judgment, sublime description of it, i. 212
 'Day of the Lord,' meaning of the expression, ii. 489 Deaconesses, whether the same as widows in the primitive Church, ii. 516 Deacons, nature of their office, i. 732 Dead, the, on the custom of waiting for, i. 69
 'Dead works,' meaning of, ii. 627
 'Death, he shall never see' (John viii. 51), remark on the phrase, i. 602. On the expression, 'Ye shall not see me,' 660. 'Death of the righteous,' ii. 216, 217. 'Second Death,' how to be understood, 860 Decapolis, the coasts of, i. 28. 892
 Dedication of the Temple, feast of, its celebration not confined to Jerusalem, i. 615; of the Tabernacle, ii. 860
 Demoniical possession, preternatural character of it, i. 27, 28, 69, 70. 284. 808 Demoniacs, distinguished from the sick, i. 727 Desert, nature of the place so called in the Gospels, i. 15. Deserts of Judea described, 142, 143 Devil, origin and signification of the term, i. 22. Acknowledges the Messiah in order to impede his ministry, 393. 'Stood not in the truth,' 600. Called God (not Lord) of this world, why? ii. 230. Assumes the fairest appearance for the worst of purposes, 316, 317. His agency groundlessly questioned by recent Commentators, 408
 'Devour widows' houses,' the expression explained, i. 187
 Diana, her temple, image, and shrines, at Ephesus, i. 832 Didymus, i. 621
 'Died in faith,' meaning of the phrase, ii. 646 Disciples, their inquiry respecting the coming of Christ and the end of the world, i. 194, 195. Our Lord's warning respecting the sacrifices to which they who would become his disciples must necessarily be subject, 325. Their erroneous notions of the nature of the Messiah's kingdom, 660. 698. In what sense they are to be understood as having had 'all things common,' Acts ii. 44, 712

Disease and sin, the ideas of, connected by the Jews, i. 59, 60 Disobedience to parents, on the heinousness of the offence, ii. 544
 Divinity of Christ, facts and arguments in proof of it, i. 90. 116, 117. 128. 248. 364. 377. 424. 603, 604. 616, 617. 660. 662. 665, 666. 688. 706. 790; ii. 73. 86. 129. 201. 252. 281. 326. 333. 627
 Divorce, doctrines of, as maintained by the schools of Hillel and Shammai, i. 36. 147. Why permitted by Moses, 147, 148. Not permitted by the Divine law, 147. 322. Terms by which it was anciently expressed, ii. 176, 177 Docetae, their tenets, i. 681, 682; ii. 766. Fact recorded by St. John in refutation of them, i. 681, 682 Dogs and swine symbolical of profane persons, i. 51. Dogs (Phil. iii. 2), who meant by the term, ii. 428 'Door to enter in by the,' import of, i. 610 Doubt, often the consequence of very joyful and sudden events, i. 508 Dove, descent of the Spirit like, at the baptism of our Lord, i. 21 Doxology at the end of the Lord's Prayer, its genuineness disputed, i. 45. The angels' doxology, remarks on it, 378 Dreams, prophetic, a very ancient channel of Divine revelation, i. 7. Ceased after the time of Malachi, and restored in the prophetic dream of Joseph, the husband of Mary, ib. Pharaoh's dream, why doubled, 765, 766
 'Dry tree, what shall be done in the,' a proverbial expression, i. 504 Dying to oneself, import of the phrase (Rom. xiv. 7), ii. 111, 112

E.

Eagle, who meant by this term, i. 201
 'Ear, mine, hast thou opened,' this expression in the Hebrew equivalent to 'a body hast thou prepared me' (Heb. x. 5), ii. 633
 'Earthly things' (John iii. 12), import of the expression, i. 542 Ebionites, nature of the heresy maintained by them, ii. 767 Edinburgh Review, the existence of a Hebrew original of St. Matthew's Gospel disputed by a writer in the, i. 2 Egypt, its fitness as a place of refuge for our Lord in his infancy, i. 12. Its ancient reputation for wisdom, 740, 741. Its excessive devotion to idolatry, 815. The Philosophers acquainted with the doctrine of the unity of the Godhead, 818
 'Egypt, out of, have I called my son,' explained, ii. 12 Egyptian, an, Acts xxi. 38; account of the insurrection headed by him, i. 847 Egyptian hieroglyphic expressive of impossibility, i. 116
 Elder (πρεσβύτερος), import of the term, i. 836, 837 Election, on the doctrine of, i. 578; ii. 75, 76. 374. No allusion to particular election in Eph. i. 5, ib.
 Elias, the coming of, spoken of by the scribes, i. 81. 137. 365
 Elijah, a type of John the Baptist, i. 81, 82. 137. 365. Tonet of the Jews respecting him, 482

Elymas, derivation and meaning of, 779, 780
 Embalming, ancient mode of, i. 683 Emmaus, two places of this name, i. 509 Enemies, who so termed by the Jews, i. 39
 Engrafting, allusion to the ancient mode of, ii. 91, 92
 Enoch, translation of, ii. 644
 Enoch, on the Apocryphal Book of, ii. 766 Epaphroditus, brief account of him, ii. 426
Ephesians, Epistle to, date and design of, ii. 372.
 Its general character, ib. Its connexion with the Epistle to the Colossians, ib. Futile objections alleged by De Wette against its authenticity, 373
 Ephesus, reply of the disciples there to St. Paul's inquiry respecting their baptism, i. 827. Chief resort of astrologers, 831. Silver shrines of Diana at, 832 Ephraim, probable situation of, i. 626
 Epicureans, their religious tenets, i. 814; ii. 238
 Epimenides, quoted Tit. i. 12, ii. 556
 Episcopacy, origin of, i. 838; ii. 450
 Epistles and Gospels, their respective characteristics, ii. 1 Essenes, their general tenets, ii. 438. Their practices with respect to oaths, 697 Eucharist, on the origin of the term, and whence so named, i. 220. Probably alluded to in John vi. 51, 576. Considered as a feast upon Sacrifice, ii. 204, 205
 Eunuchs, on the offices anciently filled by, i. 750
 Euroclydon, derivation and signification of the word, i. 878 Eusebius, his testimony respecting a tradition that St. Matthew's Gospel was written originally in Hebrew, i. 2 Evangelists, in the primitive Church, their office and qualification, ii. 392 Evening, twofold sense assigned to the term, i. 59, 113 Evil, moral and natural, specimens of his power over both exhibited by our Lord while on earth, i. 27. 71. Classification of evil passions and habits, 303. 'Inventors of evil things,' meaning of the words, ii. 15 Excommunication among the Jews, first degree of it, i. 401. Second, 606, 607. 656. The notion of mourning connected with it, ii. 163, 164 Extreme Unction, not sanctioned by the passage of James v. 14, ii. 698 'Eye, right, pluck out the,' this expression illustrated, i. 35. 'Evil Eye,' meaning of the expression, 35. 46. 157. 302. 'Single Eye,' 46. 'Mote and beam in the eye,' remarks on these expressions, 51. 157. The word eye employed to denote what is most precious, ii. 356

F.

Face, falling on the, indicative of reverence and fear, i. 136. 'Setting the face,' import of the phrase, 424. 'Face to face,' ii. 229 Fair Havens, situation of, i. 876. Paul's visits to, ii. 554 Faith, description of, ii. 643. Inefficacy of it, when unaccompanied by works, 682. 'Justification by Faith,' i. 786, 787; ii. 346. 'From faith to faith,' import of the expression, ii. 10. Its efficacy deduced from the Old Test., 346, 347. The origin of all virtues, 643

False Christs and false Prophets, distinction between them, i. 201. On their giving signs and wonders, ib.
 False teachers, in the Apostolic times, their principles and conduct, ii. 415 Fast-days among the Jews, i. 476
 Feast, governor of the, nature of his office, i. 532
 Felix, his motives for dismissing St. Paul, i. 803 Festivals, the three great Jewish, periods at which executions of great malefactors generally took place, i. 215. Females not required to attend, 382
 'Few saved,' this question discussed, i. 450
 Fig-tree, the barren, observations on the cursing of it, i. 167. 329. Conversation, meditation, and prayer under fig-trees by the ancient Jews, 529
 Final Perseverance, on the doctrine of, ii. 642 Fire, baptism with, what? i. 19 Fire, an emblem of what, i. 445
 'First-born,' a title of the Messiah, ii. 578
 'Fishers of men,' this expression illustrated by citations from the Classical writers, i. 26. 394
 Five, meaning 'very few,' ii. 233 Flesh, works of the, ii. 365, 366
 'Flesh, ye judge according to the,' note on this, i. 595. 'Flesh and blood,' meaning of this expression, i. 129; ii. 557. 'Flesh in the,' 'according to the flesh,' meanings of these phrases, ii. 33, 309
 'Flesh and spirit' compared to fields, ii. 369
 'Follow me,' import of the expression, i. 528 Fornication, taken in a spiritual sense, i. 589. Why interdicted in the Decree of the Council of Jerusalem, 802
 'Fox, go tell that,' meaning of the phrase, i. 451
 'Fruits,' meaning of the term, i. 54 Fulfilled, Time, when said to be, i. 259

G.

Gabriel, meaning of the word, i. 366. 747 Gadara, situation of, i. 284. 890
Galatians, Epistle to, date and design of, ii. 332. In what sense said to be large (chap. vi. 11), 370 Galileans, whose blood Pilate mingled with the sacrifices, observations on this transaction, i. 447 Galilee, character of the inhabitants of, i. 25. Language of, whether different from that at Judea, 704
 'Galilee of the Gentiles,' meaning of, i. 25
 'Galilee, out of, ariseth no prophet,' this observation explained, i. 589 Gamaliel, the descent of, i. 729
 Garments, rending of, mode and intent of, i. 230
 Gehenna, derivation and meaning of the term, i. 34
 Gemara, its origin and contents, i. 118
 Genealogy of our Lord, apparent discrepancy between that given by Matthew and by Luke reconciled, i. 4 Gentiles, their admission into the Church, predicted, i. 614. 747, 748. 789; ii. 374. How discriminated in the Greek Test. from Jews, 627. The dictates of their consciences a law to them, ii. 21. St. Paul vindicates his divine commission to preach to them, 86. Their general conversion to follow the conversion and restoration of the Jews, 90
 Gergesa, situation of, i. 890

- German Neologists, their unwarrantable misinterpretation of passages of Scripture censured, i. 20, 21, 70, 242, 725, 726, 754, 755, 776, 777, 853
- Gothemane, derivation of the name, and situation of the place, i. 223. Our Lord's agony there, ib.
- Gifts and Offices in the Primitive Church, ii. 98, 216, 217, 301, 302, 391
- 'Son of Man to be glorified,' in what the glory probably consists, i. 631. To 'glorify God,' meaning of, ii. 12
- 'Glory of the Lord,' meaning of the expression, i. 378, 744. 'Give glory to God,' import of, 607
- Gnostics, their origin, and tenets, ii. 533. Their doctrine of the mediation of angels, ii. 451
- God, in what sense said to be a Spirit, i. 553. Not confined to place, 742. The different ways in which he has revealed himself to man, 673, 674. 'In the form of God,' the phrase explained, ii. 421. In what sense 'God the Father' is said (1 Tim. i. 1) to be 'our Saviour,' 498
- 'God of this world,' in what sense Satan is said to be such, ii. 281, 282
- Godliness, our need of, ii. 733, 734
- Gog and Magog, ii. 859
- Golden Calf, i. 740
- Golden censor, solution of a difficulty respecting it, ii. 624
- 'Golgotha,' derivation and meaning of the word, i. 238
- GOSPEL, signification and origin of the word, i. 4. Preached to the poor, 79. Its superiority to the Law, 522; ii. 274. Does not make void the Law, ii. 51, 52. Corruption of it by 'vain philosophy,' 447. Immortality brought to light by it, how? 536. Its different effect on different persons, 607
- GOSPELS, the Four, hypotheses with respect to their origin and order, i. 251. Coincidences and discrepancies between them accounted for, 251—253.
- Gospels and Epistles, their respective characteristics, ii. 1.
- 'Grace of God,' general import of the expression, i. 392. Not irresistible, 524. 'Grace for grace' (John i. 16), the phrase explained, 522. Grace and debt contrasted, ground of the allusion implied in the terms, ii. 51, 52. Human co-operation with it necessary to salvation, 424, 494. 'The throne of grace,' the allusion explained, 598
- Grecians, discussion as to who are meant by this term at Acts vi. 1, and xi. 20, i. 731, 771
- Greece, bipartite division of, by Augustus, ii. 305
- Greek Article, exemplifications of Bp. Middleton's canon respecting, i. 106, 110, 121, 123, 220, 368, 664, 723, 724, 792, 793, 833
- Greeks, Heathens sometimes called by the name of, i. 304
- Grief, excessive, its soporific tendency, i. 498
- 'Grieve the Holy Spirit,' meaning of the expression, ii. 397
- H.
- HADRES, opinions concerning, i. 466; ii. 718, 719
- Hand, the withered (Matt. xii. 10), nature of the affection, i. 87
- Hands, imposition of, a very ancient rite, i. 149, 311, 748; ii. 605. Import of it in the early Christian Church, i. 732, 748. And immediately after Baptism, why? ii. 605
- 'Have thou authority,' &c. (Luke xix. 17), this allusion explained and exemplified, i. 481
- Head, covering of the, enjoined upon women in public worship, ground of the precept, ii. 209.
- 'Head stone of the corner,' meaning of the allusion, i. 172
- Heathen, their distrust of Providence alluded to, i. 50
- Heaven opened at the baptism of Christ, observations on the circumstance, i. 20, 21. The heavens opened to dying Stephen, i. 744. The joys of heaven anciently represented under the image of a banquet, 57, 58. 'The kingdom of heaven suffereth violence,' meaning of this, 81. Jewish notions concerning heaven, ii. 598. To 'ascend into heaven,' import of the phrase, 84
- 'Heavenly things' (John iii. 12), import of the expression, i. 542; (Eph. i. 3) ii. 374
- Hebraisms in the New Testament, examples of, i. 143, 144, 147, 172, 198, 204, 236, 344, 370—372, 380, 389, 425, 432, 663, 814, 841; ii. 258
- 'Hebrew, a, of the Hebrews,' explained, ii. 318, 429
- Hebrews (Ἑβραῖοι), the Jews of Palestine, so called in the New Test., i. 730, 731. Distinction between 'Hebrews' and 'Israelites,' ii. 318
- Hebrews, Epistle to, date, design, and authorship of, ii. 571. To whom addressed, ib. Supposed by some to have been originally written in Hebrew, 571, 572; its canonical authority, 572
- Hebrew Scriptures, discrepancies between them and the Septuagint and the New Testament, i. 105, 120, 167, 221, 309, 389, 629, 655, 719, 735, 737, 742, 752, 786—788, 799; ii. 143
- Hell, meaning of the word thus rendered, i. 415. Opinions of the learned concerning, 731. Remarks on descent into, ii. 84
- Hellenists, opinions respecting them, i. 718, 719, 759
- 'Hem,' of the garment, meaning of the word so rendered, i. 69
- Herculaneum and Pompeii, disclosures there made, confirm the character which St. Paul has given of the wickedness of the heathen world, ii. 13
- Hersey, of the time of St. John, consisted in the denial not of the Divinity, but of the Humanity of Christ, ii. 765
- Herod, difficulty respecting the real force of the word rendered his birth-day (Matt. xiv. 6), i. 111
- Herod Agrippa persecutes the infant Church, i. 773
- Herodians, origin and principles of, i. 177
- High Priest, Jewish, the Mediator under the Mosaic Covenant, i. 613. Christ contrasted with him, ib.; ii. 598. In what sense the words in John x. 8 are to be understood of the High Priests, i. 613. Character of the High Priests under the second temple, ib.
- High priesthood, changes made in its power and mode of appointment, under the Roman government of Judaea, i. 334
- Hinnom, valley of, i. 34
- 'Holy and Just One,' a cognomen of the Messiah, i. 715, 716, 743

- 'Holy City,' Jerusalem why so called, i. 23
- HOLY GHOST, blasphemy against him, what? i. 91.
- Proofs of his Personality and Divinity, 648. 658, 659. 725. 778. 779: ii. 218. 376, 377. On the nature of the Spirit's operation, 765. Necessity and effects of his advent, i. 657. The allusion to him in Acts xvi. 7, sought to be destroyed by the Arians and Socinians, 804. His intercession different from that of our Lord, ii. 66, 67
- 'Holy kiss,' enjoined on the primitive Church, ii. 482
- Homicide, its prevalence in ancient times, ii. 367; referred to in Gal. v. 20, &c.
- Honey, wild, opinions respecting it, i. 17
- Honeycomb, anciently the food of such as aimed at abstemiousness of diet, i. 512
- 'Honour thy father and thy mother,' in what manner understood by the Jews, i. 119
- Hope and fear, their powerful influence upon human conduct, ii. 440
- Horeb and Sinai, whether the same mountain, i. 739
- 'Horn,' meaning of the term in the Old and New Testament, i. 372
- Hosanna, derivation and meaning of the word, i. 165
- House-top, the word thus translated, how explained, i. 75. 199, 200
- Hypallage, ii. 604
- Hyssop, nature and use of the plant, i. 241. 690; ii. 629
- I.
- Idol-meats, eating of, how far lawful and unlawful, ii. 193, 194
- Idols, notions of the heathen respecting, i. 830
- Idolatry, origin of it, ii. 13
- Idumaea, situation of, i. 272. 704
- 'I know you not,' import of the expression, i. 209. 451
- Imposition of hands, a very ancient rite, i. 149. 748; ii. 604. Import of, in the early Christian Church, i. 732, 733. 747, 748. Employed immediately after Baptism, ii. 604
- Impossibility, moral, its nature, ii. 606
- Infant Baptism, its lawfulness argued, and observations on, i. 149. 249
- Infidelity, the origin of all sins, ii. 593
- Intercommunity of goods in the infancy of the Christian Church, true extent of it, i. 712
- Isaac, persecution of him by Ishmael, ii. 357—359
- Iscariot, signification of the term as applied to Judas, i. 72
- Ishmael and Isaac, their cases contrasted, ii. 357—359
- Israel, a type of Christ, i. 11, 12
- 'Israelite, a true,' import of the expression, i. 529. Israelites in Egypt, i. 736. Distinction between the terms 'Israelites' and 'Hebrews,' ii. 318
- J.
- Jacob, his faith commended, ii. 648. Heb. xi. 21 explained, &c.
- James, St., account of him, i. 798; ii. 671. Style, date, and design of his Epistle, 671, 672
- James and Jambres, who were they, ii. 455
- Jeremiah, difficulties attending the citation from him in Matt. xxvii. 9, 10, i. 234, 235
- 'Jerusalem, those of,' meaning of the expression, i. 117
- Jerusalem, why called 'The Daughter of Sion,' i. 164. Testimony of Josephus to the completeness of its destruction, 194. 516. Prophecy of its destruction, 471—473. First Council there, 796. 'Jerusalem which is above,' ii. 358. 662. 668
- 'Jesus,' signification and origin of the name, i. 7
- Jews, division of their tribes into 'thousands,' i. 9. Their law and custom respecting retaliation, 39. Called all heathens their enemies, 40. Connected the ideas of sins and diseases, 55. Taught by our Lord in Parables, 100. Observations on their imprecation at the condemnation of our Lord, 237. Obligated by their law to learn some handicraft occupation, 290. 381. Their form of citing Scripture, 334. Their notions concerning heaven, 378; ii. 598. Their mode of instruction by interrogation, 383. Their customs respecting the reception of guests, 410. Their hatred of the Samaritans, 549. Correct ideas of the spirituality of God held by the wisest Jews, 552. Their custom of using apophthegms, 559. Species of learning cultivated by them, 721, 722. The interval short, with them, between death and burial, 620, 621. Discussion of the question, Whether, at the time of our Lord's crucifixion, the Jews had the power of inflicting capital punishment? 674. The hope of the resurrection held by all the Jews, except the Sadducees, 869. Their conversion to be followed by a renewal of the genuine spirit of Christianity, 90. Their mode of computing the duration of the world, 202. Their notions respecting the dominion exercised in the air by demons, 380. Their antisocial spirit towards other nations, 381. Nature of the literary pursuits of the young, 517. Two Dispensations; the Eastern and Western; extent of them, 673. 671. Languages respectively used by them, 672
- JOHN, the Evangelist, some account of, i. 514. Discrepancy between him and Mark, as to the hour of the crucifixion, 353. Records chiefly the discourses of Christ, 514. Design of his Gospel, 516. Date of it, 515. Genuineness of it, &c. Difficulties, &c. Style of it, 516. Proem, 517. Apparent discrepancy between him and the other Evangelists, chap. xviii. 12, 13, 673; again, chap. xix. 14, 679. Distinguished by the term 'That other disciple,' from Peter, 673. The design of his attraction, xix. 34, 682. Lived to witness the completion of Christ's judgments on the Jewish nation, 693, 694
- John, First Epistle of, v. 5, inconclusive reasoning respecting its genuineness, i. 45. Its date, design, and style, ii. 751, &c.
- John Second Epistle of, on the authenticity of, and that of the Third Epistle, ii. 774
- John, Third Epistle of, design of, ii. 777
- John, Apocalypse of, its authenticity, ii. 790. Date and design of it, &c. Whether originally written in Hebrew, &c. State of the common Text, &c. Difficulties of an exposition of it, &c.
- John the Baptist, design of his message to our Lord, Matt. xi. 3, i. 78. His resemblance to Elijah, 82. Circumstances connected with his birth, 364. On his abode in the wilderness, 374. On the nature of his baptism, 524. Supposed design of his removing to Ænon, 645. On the character of his ministry, 519

- Jonah in the whale's belly, i. 95
- Jubilee, the year of, allusion to it, i. 389
- Judas Iscariot, our Lord's designation of him as the traitor discussed, i. 219. Supposed by some to have entertained the opinion that our Lord would, after his apprehension, have delivered himself, 232. On his suicide, 232. 700. In what sense Satan is said to have entered into him, 493
- Jude, Epistle of, its authenticity, ii. 781. Account of the author, ib. Its date and design, ib.
- Judgment, the final, ii. 631
- 'Jupiter, the image that fell down from,' observations on, i. 832
- Justification by faith in Christ, fulness of it, i. 786, 787. Fruits of it, ii. 39. General remarks on it, 683

K.

- Keys, power of the, nature of it discussed, i. 131
- 'Kingdom of Heaven,' meaning of the expression, i. 16. 33
- Kings, often styled Shepherds by Homer and Æschylus, i. 613
- 'Kiss of peace,' origin and design of it, ii. 124. Early laid aside, ib.
- Knee, bowing of the, at the name of Jesus, ii. 423
- Knowledge compared to food, a frequent figure with the Jews, ii. 602. Knowledge and Virtue, ii. 734

L.

- 'Lamb of God,' import of the expression, i. 525
- Laodiceans, Epistle to, conjectures of the learned respecting it, i. 373
- Lazars, Acts xxvii. 8, probable situation of, i. 876
- 'Last days,' import of this expression, ii. 544
- Latinisms in the New Testament, examples of, i. 431
- 'Latter times,' in what sense to be understood, ii. 515
- Law, moral and ceremonial, fulfilled by and in Christ, i. 32. The ceremonial Law may be dispensed with in cases of necessity, 86
- Law, various meanings in which the word is used in St. Paul's Epistles, ii. 20. Design of the Mosaic Law, 44, 45. 357. Law contrasted with Grace, 49, 50. Not made void by the Gospel, 52. How 'weak,' 616. The true use of it, 500. Its abrogation inferred from the Scriptures by St. Paul, 614. Its inefficacy for salvation, 662, 663. Contrasted with the Gospel, 663. Its abolition predicted and accomplished, 707
- Lawyers, nature of their office, i. 9. 180. Whether, in dignity, superior to the Scribes and Pharisees, 439
- Lazarus, on the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, i. 464, 465
- Learning, species of, anciently cultivated in Judaea, i. 582, 721
- Left hand, placing at the, import of the expression, i. 212

- Legion, i. 285
- 'Lend, hoping for nothing again,' this precept illustrated by a reference to a heathen custom, i. 402
- Letters of introduction and recommendation in the Primitive Church, origin and nature of, ii. 273
- Levitical priesthood, its mutability, and inferiority to that of Christ, ii. 613—616
- Libertines, synagogue of, discussion as to who are meant by the term, i. 783
- Life and immortality brought to light by the Gospel, ii. 536
- 'Life from the dead,' meaning of, ii. 91
- 'Light and Life,' import of the terms in Scripture, i. 519. 606
- Light and darkness symbolical of good and evil, ii. 400
- 'Lighteth a candle' (Luke xv. 8), necessity for this in ancient times, i. 457
- 'Lion of the tribe of Judah,' on the application of this title to Christ, ii. 809
- Lions*, who are spoken of under this term, ii. 551
- Living to oneself, import of the phrase, ii. 111, 112
- 'Living water,' import of the phrase, i. 549
- Loaves, nature of them amongst the Jews, i. 114
- Locusts, permitted to be eaten by the Law, i. 17
- Logos, the, import and origin of the term, i. 518
- Long life, in what sense to be understood as the reward of filial obedience, ii. 406
- LORD, import of the term, i. 182; ii. 85
- Lord's Supper (Κυριακὸν δεῖπνον), 1 Cor. xi. 20), import of the expression, ii. 214. On the rite, and effect of it, 203—205
- Lots, ancient mode of casting, i. 702
- Love, Christian, on the Divine principle of, ii. 226—229. 367. 455
- Loving our neighbour as ourselves, extent of the precept, i. 181
- LUKE, Sr., his genealogy reconciled with that of St. Matthew, i. 4. Less observant of chronological order than Mark and Matthew, 161. 495. His Gospel believed to be prior to that of St. Mark, 251. Account of him, 359. Date of the publication of his Gospel, 361. Authenticity of the first two chapters groundlessly impugned, 525. Design of his Gospel, ib. Characteristics of it, ib.
- Luther, his confinement in the castle of Wartenberg providentially overruled to his observations on the corruption of human nature, ii. 563. The benefit of the Church, i. 862
- Lycania, language of, respecting its nature and character, i. 792

M.

- Macedonia, 'the first city of,' Acts xvi. 12, i. 805
- Magdalene, Mary, opinions respecting her, i. 411
- Magi, visit of the, its chronology discussed, i. 8. Origin and meaning of the word, ib.
- Malefactors crucified with our Lord, probable nature of their offence, i. 505
- Malta, where St. Paul was shipwrecked, not the Illyrian, but the African Malta, i. 884. Account of the voyage, 875
- Mammon, meaning of, i. 48
- 'Man, I speak as a,' meaning of this, ii. 26
- 'Man of God,' force of the expression, ii. 528

'Man of Sin,' observations on, ii. 488. 545
 Manaen, derivation of the name, i. 778
 Manger, import of the word so rendered, i. 376
 Manichæans, the Divine legation of Moses and the Prophets denied by, i. 611, 612 Manna, its nature, i. 572, 573. Derivation of the name, ib. In what sense said to be hidden, 799 MARK, ST., date and place of his Gospel, i. 251.
 254. Short account of him, 251. Whether he made use of St. Luke's Gospel, 252. Whether he made use of St. Matthew's, ib. Design of his Gospel, 253. He and St. Matthew more observant of chronological order than St. Luke, 161. 495 Marriage, doctrine of the Scripture respecting it, i. 147. Laws and customs of antiquity respecting the newly married, 454. Oriental marriage customs alluded to Ephes. v. 27, ii. 405
 Mary, the Virgin, on the perpetual virginity of, i. 97. Her song similar to that of Hannah, 370. Reason assigned for her attendance at Bethlehem to be enrolled, 576. Her conduct at the marriage in Cana, 530, 531 MATTHEW, ST., Gospel of, whether written originally in Hebrew, i. 2; ii. 517. Its date, i. 3. 253. Two Editions (in Hebrew, and in the Greek) believed to have been written by him, 1, 2. His genealogy reconciled with that of St. Luke, 4. Title, ib. Apparent discrepancy between his citation, chap. iv. 15, 16, accounted for, 24. He and St. Mark more observant of chronology than St. Luke, 161, 495. Apparent discrepancies between him and the other Evangelists, 161. 164. 252
 'Measure, given by,' import of, i. 500
 'Meat and Drink,' understood in a figurative sense, i. 554 Mediation of Christ, manner in which it was effected, ii. 506, 507 Melchisedek, 'priest after the order of,' ii. 601. Comparison of his priesthood with that of Christ, ib. His priesthood a type of that of Christ, 612. Conjectures respecting him, ib. His superiority to Abraham, 613, 614 Melita (see Malta).
 MESSIAH, the, opinions of the Jews concerning, i. 128. 229. 424. 585. On the term as applied to Christ, 678. Called the Vine by the Rabbins, 651. His dispensation acknowledged by the Jews to be of a higher order than that of Moses, i. 583 Metempsychosis, doctrine of, held by the Pharisees, i. 604. Impugned by our Saviour, 487 Miletum, distance of, from Ephesus, i. 837 Mill-stone (Matt. xviii. 6), meaning of, i. 140, 141 Millennium, remarks on the, ii. 861
 'Ministry,' import of the term, Rom. xii. 7; ii. 99 Ministry, the Christian, entitled to provision, ii. 522 Miracle, definition of, i. 532. Striking difference between the manner in which they were performed by Christ, and that by his Apostles, 714
 Mithra, its origin and contents, i. 118; ii. 500
 Mnevis, worshipped by the Egyptians, i. 741 Moloch, tabernacle of, i. 741
 Moses, prophesied of Christ, i. 510. Parallel between him and Christ, 719. Styled eloquent by St. Stephen, in what sense? 738. St. Paul's allusion to the veil on his face, ii. 276, 277. On the title of Mediator given to him by the Rabbins, 350. Nature of his commission, 589. Parallel between the state of the family of Moses (the Jews in the wilderness) and that of the family of Christ (Christians under the Gospel), ib. Grounds assigned by Josephus and Philo for the anticipations of his future eminence, 706. Contrast between him and Christ, 663

 'Moses and the Prophets,' import of the words, i. 467 Mountains in Judæa, places of refuge in times of public danger, i. 199. The tops of mountains, why selected as places for worship, 551
 Mustard seed, on the species of plant which springs from it, i. 281 Myrrh, nature and mode of collecting it, i. 683
 'Mystery,' meaning of the term, i. 100; ii. 93. 254. 'Mystery of iniquity,' import of the expression, ii. 491
 Mysia, province so called, Acts xvi. 8, i. 805

N.

'Nailing it to his cross,' Col. ii. 14, ii. 449
 'Names, your, are written in heaven,' this allusion illustrated and explained, i. 423 Nathanael, whether the same with Bartholomew, i. 528 Natural religion, duties deducible from, ii. 733 Nature, human, original corruption of, ii. 380, 381 Nazarites, usual among the Jews to participate with them in their vows, and pay their expenses, i. 824
 Neander, on the design of the Epistle to the Colossians, ii. 372 Negatives, intense accumulation of, i. 428, 429. Triple negative, 200 Neighbour, who are to be understood by the term, i. 39, 40. 430. Our duty to love him, measure of, ii. 103, 104 Neuter verbs used for Passive, i. 374. 392. 412. 746. Neuter adjectives used for masculine, ii. 614
 'Neck, laid down their,' import of the expression, ii. 123
 'New creature,' nature of the change implied by this expression, as respects the Jews and the Gentiles respectively, ii. 289. 'New commandment,' why so called, i. 642; ii. 755. 'New covenant,' 621. 'New Name,' 800 Nicodemus, our Lord's conversation with, i. 537. His character, ib. His motive for seeking a private interview, ib.
 Noah, in what sense he is said to have 'condemned the world,' ii. 645. Exposition of the words in 1 Pet. iii. 19 concerning him, 718, 719. The immense size of his ark, 645
 Nominative Case, used for Vocative, i. 84. 237. 417. 688

O.

Oath of adjuration, its nature, i. 229. Our Lord answers under the appeal, ib.
 Oath of God, Heb. vi. 17, ii. 610
 Oaths, doctrine of the Pharisees respecting them, i. 37. Prohibition of, 188; ii. 697 Obedience must be universal, ii. 482 'Offences, it must needs be that they come,' the nature of this necessity discussed, i. 141

Offices and gifts in the Primitive Church, ii. 99 Oil, anointing with, in what sense employed by the Apostles in healing the sick, i. 292; ii. 698
 'Old time, those of,' explanation of the phrase, i. 33 Ordination, ecclesiastical, in the time of the Apostles, i. 795. Extended to three distinct orders, ii. 479
Orymoron, instance of, i. 730, 731

P.

Palestine, state of the weather there in seed-time, i. 99. Fertility of the soil of, 100
 Papal supremacy, groundlessly inferred from Matt. xvi. 18, 19, i. 129—132 Papias, his testimony respecting a Hebrew original of St. Matthew's Gospel, i. 2 Parable, signification of the term, 99. Why used by Christ, ib. Why the Jews were addressed in, 101. Twofold nature of the parables, 99. 610. Rules for their interpretation, ib.
Paraclete, the, on the nature of his office, i. 646, 647
 Paradise, in what sense our Lord's promise of admission into it to the penitent thief is to be understood, i. 506
Paronomasia, instances of, i. 129. 321; ii. 601 Parr, Dr. S., his explanation of the phrase ἐξαγορεύει τὸν καιρὸν, ii. 402 Paschal Lamb, a type of Christ, observations on, i. 681, 682 Passive Voice used for Middle, i. 711
 Passover, whether our Lord celebrated it before his crucifixion, i. 217. The originally appointed posture (standing) altered by the Jewish doctors to the reclining, 218. The number of passovers attended by our Lord during his ministry, 533. Number of victims usually slain, ib. Two washings at the Paschal Supper, according to the Rabbins, 638 Patience, on our need of, ii. 734 Patriarchs, why so called, i. 736
 Patriarchal Sabbath supposed to have been on the first day of the week, i. 244
 PAUL, ST., on the conversion of, i. 756. On his blindness, 784. On his fasting, 755. Occasion of the change of his name from that of Saul, 779. In what sense he was enabled to call himself a Roman citizen, 850. Observations on his address to the Athenians, 815—821. Supposed allusion by him to a passage in Plato, 820. His interview with the elders of Ephesus at Miletum, i. 837. In what sense his ignorance of the presence of the High Priest (Acts xxiii. 5) is to be understood, 852. His address to Festus, 864. Reasons for his appeal to Cæsar, 866. His imprisonment at Cæsarea, 867. His voyage to Rome, 874. Lands at Malta, 884. His style similar to that of Thucydides, ii. 2. Peculiar character of his mind, ib. Style and phraseology of his Epistles generally, 3. Vindicates his Divine commission to preach to the Gentiles, 86. Impresses on the Jews the dignity of his apostleship, 120. Probably visited Spain, 122. His method of preaching the Gospel at Corinth, 141. In what sense his injunction concerning divorce (1 Cor. vii. 10, 11) is to be understood, as contradicting distinguished from the injunctions of our Lord, 176, 177. Necessary that he should see the risen Saviour, 190. 'Fought with beasts at Ephesus,' explained, 250. Confidence manifested by him in his Second Epistle to the Corinthians, 261. His allusions to his bodily infirmities, 281, 282. 311. His voluntary remission of his right to a maintenance, 315. On the dangers he underwent, 320. Apparent discrepancy between him and St. Luke, 321. His subjection to the passion of pride, 322. Conjectures respecting the thorn in the flesh, ib. His journey into Arabia not mentioned by St. Luke, 337. His ministry not wholly exercised among the Gentiles, 340. On his enumeration of human vices (Gal. v. 19—21), 366. Dictated his Epistles to a Scribe, why? 370. His earnest denunciation of circumcision, 360. His Epistle to the Colossians, 438. Whether he wrote an Epistle to the Laodiceans, 458. His views concerning the general resurrection, 474. Demonstrably the author of the Epistle to the Hebrews, 570—573. Arguments from Scripture in proof of the abrogation of the law, 614. Does not contradict St. James, on the doctrine of faith and works, 684.
Pavement, the, nature and origin of, i. 679 Pearls, precepts of wisdom so called by the Jews, i. 51. Their value in ancient times, 107 'Perfect, be ye,' meaning of this precept, i. 40, 41. 151 Perfect Tense often put for the Present, i. 667
 Persecution, religious, benefits resulting from, ii. 415 Perseverance, final, doctrine of, not deducible from Scripture, i. 616; ii. 642 Peschito Syriac Version of the New Testament, its authority, i. 45 ΠΕΤΡΑ, ST., no supremacy of dignity conferred upon him, i. 71. 130, 131. 357. On his words, 'Depart from me — O Lord,' 394. On his conduct when our Lord washed the disciples' feet, 639. His Sermon on the day of Pentecost, i. 705. His Speech before the Sanhedrim, 720. Cures Æneas, 760. His visit to Cornelius, 763—769. Date and place of his martyrdom and burial, ii. 700
Peter, First Epistle of, date, design, and style of it, ii. 700
Peter, Second Epistle of, its authenticity questioned in early times, ii. 730. Its date and design, ib.
 Pharaoh, illustration of the artful policy of, i. 738. Remarks on the hardening of his heart, ii. 77 Pharisees, their doctrines respecting oaths, i. 37; and respecting the resurrection, 178. 454. Their tenet respecting the baptism of Jews, and concerning the punishment reserved for self-murderers, 595, 596. Held the doctrine of Metempsychosis, 605
Philemon, character of, ii. 566—568. Epistle to, date and design of, ii. 566 Philip the deacon, i. 746. 753. Converts the Ethiopian eunuch, 750
Philippians, Epistle to, date and design of, ii. 505, 506. Origin of the Church at Philippi, 506 Phœbe, commended by Paul, to the Roman Christians, ii. 123 Phœnicians and Canaanites, these terms used promiscuously by the Greeks, i. 122 Phoenix, situation of, i. 877
 Phrygia, district so called, Acts xvi. 6, i. 804 Phylacteries, origin and nature of them, i. 185

- Pilate's wife's dream, observations on, i. 236.
Whether Pilate's washing his hands, upon our Lord's condemnation, was a Jewish or a Gentile custom? ib. Import of the action, ib. Mingles the blood of the Galileans with their sacrifices, 447. On his words, 'What is truth?' 676. Josephus' account of him, ib.
- 'Pinnacle' of the Temple, difficulty of assigning the sense of the word so rendered, i. 23
- Platonizers, in the early Christian Church, ii. 438.
- Pleroma* of the Gnostics, observations on, ii. 564
- Pluperfect tense Passive, in the Middle, or Dependent sense, i. 607
- Pot of manna, observations on, ii. 625
- 'Potters' Field,' remarks on, i. 233
- Prætorium, import of the term, i. 237; ii. 415. The same with the Pæcesent, John xix. 13, 678
- Prayer, the Lord's, remark on it, i. 43, sq. The genuineness of the Doxology questioned, 45. Prayer, usual time of, among the Jews, i. 763
- Praying for the dead, erroneously supposed to be sanctioned by St. Paul (2 Tim. i. 16), ii. 537
- Precepts, ritual, works performed by Divine virtue exempted from them, i. 56
- Predestination, doctrine of, passages supposed to countenance it, i. 213. 789; ii. 374
- Preahvter, remarks on the import of the term, i. 773; ii. 412. 519
- Presbyteriana, their vain gloss upon Titus i. 5, ii. 554
- Present Tense, peculiar use of it unperceived by Commentators, ii. 208. Use of the present for the Future, i. 193. 204. 660, 661
- Pride, its nature and tendency, ii. 734
- Priests, Chief, their office, i. 9. Named along with the 'Scribes,' in denoting the Sanhedrim, ib.
- 'Prisoner of Jesus Christ,' import of the expression, ii. 566
- 'Prodigal Son,' Parable of, i. 458
- Property, arbitrary disposal of it under the Jewish law, not permitted to a father, i. 458
- 'Prophecy, a more sure word of,' these words explained, ii. 738. 'Not of private interpretation,' 739
- 'Prophecy,' definition of the word, ii. 739. In what sense employed in the New Test., i. 119. 373. The gift of prophecy sometimes imparted even to bad men, 426
- Prophetic office in the primitive Church, nature of it, ii. 236, 237
- 'Prophets, there were until John,' sense of this passage, i. 81
- Propitiation, Scriptural import of the term, ii. 588
- Proseucha*, observations on, i. 806, 807
- Prudence and circumspection, remarkable terms in which these virtues are recommended to the Ephesians and Colossians, ii. 403
- Psalms lxxix. 5, erroneous rendering of, in the Authorized Translation, ii. 205. Psalm xvi., whether it has a double sense, i. 708. Psalm xxii., its acknowledged reference to the Messiah, 238. 636. 'Psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs,' these terms explained, ii. 403
- 'Psalms,' denoting the Hagiographia, i. 512
- Public worship, importance of, ii. 638
- Punishments, future, eternal in duration, i. 214. 319, 320. Description of them, 219, 220
- Purification, on the days of, i. 378, 379. Before the Paschal feast, observations on, 636
- Purple garments, why used by the noble and rich, i. 465
- Python, 'having a spirit of' (Acts xvi. 16), i. 807

R.

- Rabboni, i. 827.
- Rahab, on the true sense of the terms רַחַב and רָפָא, applied to her, i. 5; ii. 651
- Ravens, remarkable instinct in them, i. 443
- Reclining, the posture of, less ancient than that of sitting, i. 218
- 'Redeeming the time,' &c., meaning of the phrase, ii. 402, 403
- Redemption, universality of, i. 160; ii. 288. 518
- Red Sea, why so called, i. 740; ii. 650
- 'Reed shaken with the wind,' import of the expression, i. 79
- Regeneration, nature and necessity of, i. 153. Baptismal regeneration, its nature, ii. 562
- Remphan, i. 741
- Rent, most ancient mode of paying, i. 171
- Repentance, Scriptural, import of, i. 16. 710. 'Renew to Repentance,' Heb. vi. 6, observations on, ii. 607
- Rest, reserved for the people of God, its nature, ii. 593
- Resurrection, notions of the Sadducees and Pharisees respecting, i. 179. 869; and of the Jewish Rabbins, 179. Our Lord's arguments in proof of the Resurrection, 160. Resurrection of the saints at the Crucifixion, 242. St. Paul's argument from the Resurrection of Christ, 786; ii. 238. His views concerning the general resurrection, 475
- Retaliation, law and custom of the Jews respecting, i. 39
- Riches, danger of, i. 180, 151
- Righteousness, imputed, remarks on, with reference to Abraham, ii. 82
- 'Right hand, let not your, know what your left hand doeth,' remarks on, i. 41. 'Right hand, sitting on the,' import of the phrase, i. 182. Right hand, placing at the, import of the expression, 182. 'Giving the right hand of fellowship,' ii. 341
- 'Rivers of living water,' the phrase explained and illustrated, i. 587
- Rock. 'Upon this Rock I will build my Church,' in what sense to be understood, i. 129
- Romans*, Epistle to the, subject-matter of, ii. 1. Authenticity of, 3. Date and design of, 4. Contents of, ib.
- Romans, limitation of their principle of toleration, i. 809. Nature and extent of their privilege of appealing to Caesar, 865. Their custody of prisoners, its nature, 887
- Rome, Church at, supposed origin of, i. 822; ii. 4.
- Rome, Church of, its unwarrantable ascription of a supremacy of dignity to the Apostle Peter, i. 71. 129, 180. Passage upon which it grounds the practice of offering prayers and masses for the dead, ii. 551
- 'Root of bitterness,' the phrase explained and illustrated, ii. 660
- Rudders, two anciently used by the ancients with large ships of burden, i. 882, 883
- Rufus and Alexander, i. 353

S.

Sabbath, change of it to the first day of the week, i. 245. Patriarchal Sabbath, 270. 'The Son of Man is Lord of the Sabbath,' meaning of this, ib. 'The second Sabbath after the first' (Luke vi. 1), signification of the expression, 289. Works of mercy and necessity performed on the Sabbath by the Jews, 449. Anciently a day of feasting and entertainment with them, 452. Our Lord defends his performing works of mercy on it, 561. A type of the heavenly rest, ii. 596, 597. Whether instituted prior to circumcision? i. 584.

Sabbath-day's journey, distance of, i. 699.

Sacrilege, sense in which it is to be understood in the New Test., ii. 22. Punishment of, by the law, i. 849.

Sadducees, their tenets respecting the Resurrection, i. 178, 179, 869. Whence borrowed, ii. 238.

Salem, whether the same as Jerusalem, ii. 612.

Salt, its loss of savour, remarks on, i. 31. 'Seasoned with salt' (Col. iv. 6), ii. 457.

'Salted with fire', meaning of this expression, i. 320.

Salvation, how to be obtained, i. 374. A summary of the doctrines of, ii. 563.

Samaria, i. 746. Philip the deacon preaches the Gospel there, ib.

Samaritans, a disputed point among the Rabbins, whether they were to be regarded as Gentiles, i. 470. Enmity between them and the Jews, 549. Reason assigned by them for their reverence for Mount Gerizim, 551. Import of our Lord's rebuke of them (John iv. 22), 552. Correct ideas of the Messiah's character probably entertained by them, 553. The word Samaritan employed as a term of reproach, 602.

Sanctify, Scriptural import of the term, i. 668. In what sense the unbelieving husband or wife is said (1 Cor. vii. 14) to be sanctified by the believing partner, ii. 177.

Sanhedrim, on the alarm felt by them respecting the miracles wrought by our Lord, i. 624, 626. Their authority with foreign Jews, 754.

Sarah, her example commended, ii. 648.

Satan as lightning falling from heaven, on the import of the words, i. 428.

Saturn, the Phœnician, identical with Moloch, i. 741.

Saul, persecution of the Church by, 745. His conversion, 754.

Scandals in the Church, duty of avoiding, ii. 124.

Schism, nature of the offence, ii. 564.

'Schoolmaster', the Law incorrectly so styled in the authorized Version (Gal. iii. 24), ii. 351.

Scott, Thomas, on the frame of mind in which the Epistle to the Ephesians was written, ii. 372.

Scourging, nature of the punishment amongst the Romans, i. 237, 503, 709, 850, 851. Nature of it amongst the Jews, 730, 731.

Scribes, their office, i. 9, 832.

Scriptures, form of citing, among the Jewish doctors, i. 334. Mode of reading them in the Jewish synagogues, 389.

Scripture, a loose mode of interpreting, censured, ii. 629.

Scythians, barbarians, Col. iii. 11, ii. 454, 455.

Sea, walking on the, a property of the Deity, i. 116.

Sealing, on the ancient custom of, i. 244. Figurative sense of the action, 547.

'Sealed by the Holy Ghost', import of, ii. 376.

'See God', force of this expression, i. 30.

'Seeing, they see not', a proverbial expression, i. 278.

Self-deception, observations on, ii. 547.

Septuagint, discrepancies between it and the Hebrew, and the New Test., i. 24, 88, 105, 121, 147, 162, 221, 389, 752, 798, 799; ii. 621, 622, 624, 629, 633, 635, 640, 641, 660. Used by the Jews of the Western Dispersion, 571.

Sepulchral monuments in the East, remarks on, i. 284.

Serpent, the brazen, whether a type of Christ, i. 542.

'Servant of God', import of the expression, ii. 5.

Seven, the number, observations on, i. 144. Sometimes put for an indefinite number, 97.

'Seventy', the, remarks on, i. 426.

Shechinah, allusion to it in the New Test., i. 136, 377, 744.

Sheep, the fact of their, anciently, preceding the shepherd, implied in the name (προβατων), i. 611, 612.

Sheep's clothing, worn by the false teachers among the Pharisees, i. 53, 54.

Sheep-market, import of the term thus rendered, i. 558.

Shepherds, in the East, precede their flocks, i. 611, 612.

Shewbread, why so denominated, ii. 624.

'Shoes, to bear', anciently implied the most servile office, i. 19.

Sidon, the coasts of, i. 892.

Signs and gifts promised to believers, i. 359.

'Signs and wonders' (Matt. xxiv. 24), whether real or pretended? i. 201.

Siloam, on the tower of, i. 448. On the fountain of, 606.

Simeon's *Nunc Dimittis, remarks on it, i. 379.

Simon, meaning of the name, i. 129. Person so named in Acts viii. 9, i. 747.

Simon Magus, import of the epithet applied to him, i. 747. Heretical notions broached by him, ii. 374, 583.

Sin and disease, the ideas of, connected by the Jews, i. 60. Sin personified as a tyrant, ii. 48. The cause of unbelief, 492. 'Sin unto death,' observations on, 772.

Sinai, Mount, ancient appellation of, ii. 358. Whether the same as Horeb, i. 739.

'Sinneth not', force of this expression, ii. 762.

Sion, contrasted with Sinai, ii. 662.

Sitting, the posture of, more ancient than that of reclining, i. 218.

Sleep, the term figuratively employed to denote death, i. 745.

Socinians, their misinterpretation of John i. 2, i. 518. Strong argument against their views respecting the Trinity, 660. Their misconception of the confession of St. Thomas, 688. Their disingenuous treatment of Acts xvi. 7, 805. Their futile objections to the orthodox interpretation of Rom. ix. 5, 73. Their gloss upon Col. i. 15, 442. Their heretical notions completely overturned by the two first chapters of the Epistle to the Hebrews, 562.

Solomon's porch, what, and why so called, i. 615, 726.

Son, on the application of the term to Timothy by St. Paul, ii. 499.

Son of God, meaning of the expression, i. 22.

117. 'Sons of God,' angels so called, and why, 487, 678
- 'Son of Man,' a title of the Messiah, origin and nature of the appellation, i. 60, 270. Observations on, 564. Emendation of the English Version of the text, John xii. 34, 634
- 'Son of David,' a title of the Messiah, observations on, i. 70
- Sostrhenes (1 Cor. i. 1), conjectures respecting, ii. 129
- Soul, may have perception when out of the body, ii. 322, 323
- Spirit (πνεῦμα), Bishop's Middleton's enumeration of the meanings of the word in the N. T., i. 6. 'In spirit and in truth,' the phrase explained, 553. 'Fruits of the Spirit,' ii. 366
- 'Spiritual gifts,' the nature and use of them, ii. 217, 302
- Sprinkling with blood, ii. 629
- Standing, the usual posture of the Jews in prayer, i. 43, 475
- 'Star in the East, we have seen his,' import of the allusion, i. 9
- 'Stars falling from heaven,' meaning of the expression, i. 202
- Stephen, St., remarks on his address to the Jews, i. 734. His allusion to Jewish traditions, 735. Apparent discrepancies in his address noticed, 734—736, 742, 743
- Stoics, their religious tenets, i. 814; ii. 238, 239
- Stone's-throw, a, observations on the phrase, i. 498
- 'Stones, the, would cry out,' import of the phrase, i. 483
- Stoning, its mode of infliction determined by the Law, as well as the crimes for which it was appointed, i. 484. Ancient mode of inflicting the punishment, 592. Different modes of infliction among the Jews, 171
- Strangled, why the eating of animals so killed was forbidden, i. 801, 802
- 'Strive to enter in,' import of the expression, i. 451
- Subjunctive mood employed for the Future Indicative, i. 151
- Suicide, tenet of the Pharisees respecting the punishment reserved for it, i. 595, 596
- Sun, darkening of the, meaning of this, i. 202
- Swear, in what sense God is said to, i. 709; ii. 610. 'Swear not at all,' ii. 697
- Swine, the feeding of, deemed amongst the vilest employments, i. 458
- Sword, the term used symbolically of war and civil commotion, i. 76. Our Lord's advice to his disciples, to provide a sword, explained, 497
- Sychar, originally called Sychem, why altered by the Jews, i. 548
- Symbolical actions prevalent in the early ages, i. 140, 843
- Synagogue, ruler of, nature of his office, i. 287
- Syria (Gal. i. 21), district so called, where situated, ii. 338
- Syro-Phœnician woman, i. 122, 304
- T.
- Tabernacle of witness, why so called, i. 742
- Tabernacles, feast of, purpose of our Lord in attending it before his death, i. 579. The last great day of, origin of its institution, 587
- Tabor, Mount, i. 29, 134, 135
- 'Take the Cross,' meaning of the expression, i. 77
- Talmud, origin and contents of it, i. 118
- To taste*, used anciently in the sense of to have experience of, ii. 606
- Temple, expulsion of the buyers and sellers from the, on the day after our Lord's public entry into Jerusalem, i. 165. Testimony of Josephus respecting the magnitude of the stones with which it was built, 337. Rebuilding of it by Zorobabel and Herod, 536. Stephen's allusion to it, 742
- Temple service, manner and intent of it, ii. 623
- Temptation and Trial, benefits of, ii. 675. The nature of those which may be ascribed to God, ib.
- Temptation of our Lord, remarks on, i. 21. Parallelism between it and that of Adam and Eve in Paradise, ib. Difference in the order of the temptations, as recorded by Matthew and Luke, 22, 387. On deliverance from temptation, ii. 203
- 'Testament,' the word διαθήκη erroneously so rendered (Matt. xxvi. 28), i. 220; (Heb. ix. 15), ii. 628
- Testimonies, Judicial, Jewish classification of, i. 349
- Thanksgiving, on the duty of, ii. 404
- Thessalonians, First Epistle to*, date and design of it, ii. 459. Origin and character of the Church, 459, 460
- Thessalonians, Second Epistle to*, its date and design, ii. 484
- Theudas, opinions respecting him, i. 730
- Thomas, St., on his words, 'My Lord, and my God,' i. 688
- Thoughts, evil, defiling nature of, held by the heathen moralists, i. 35
- Three, that number anciently emphatical, i. 765, 766. Used as an uncertain number, ii. 325
- 'Three Taverns,' Acts xxviii. 15, i. 887
- Thucydides, similarity of his style to that of St. Paul, ii. 3
- 'Thy sins be forgiven thee,' remarks on these words, i. 65
- Time, mode of reckoning among the Jews and Greeks, ii. 94
- 'Time, fulness of,' meaning of the expression, i. 258, 259
- Timothy, why circumcised by St. Paul, i. 803, 804
- Timothy, First Epistle to*, date and design of, ii. 498
- Timothy, Second Epistle to*, date and design of, ii. 534. Style and phraseology, ib.
- Tithes, remote antiquity of, asserted and demonstrated by Spelman and Selden, ii. 613
- Titus, account of him, ii. 552. Why not circumcised, 538. Plainly invested by St. Paul with Episcopal authority, 554
- Titus, Epistle to*, date and design of, ii. 552
- 'To-day and to-morrow,' import of this phrase, i. 452. 'To-day,' meaning of, ii. 596
- Tombs, uses to which they were occasionally applied both by Jews and Heathens, i. 284
- Tongue, difficulty and importance of governing it, ii. 685
- Tongues, gift of, i. 703. Tongues of fire, ib.
- 'Tongues, interpretation of,' nature of the gift, ii. 221
- Town-clerk (Acts xix. 35), import of the term, i. 832
- Transfiguration of our Lord, observations on the, i. 134
- Tribute-money ('the didrachmæ'), nature and amount of the tax, i. 138

Trinity, doctrine of, arguments in proof of it, i. 249, 660; ii. 219, 353

'Trumpet, thou shalt not sound a,' meaning of this interdiction, i. 41. 'At the last trump,' explained, ii. 254

Truth, observations on, ii. 734

Type and Allegory, difference between them, ii. 357

Tyrannus, school of, conjectures respecting, i. 828

Tyre and Sidon, the coasts of, i. 892

U.

Unbelief originates in enmity of heart to God, i. 544. The cause of sin, ii. 492

'Unction from the Holy One,' meaning of, ii. 759

'Undergirding the ship' (Acts xxvii. 17), meaning of the phrase, i. 878, 879

Unitarians, their groundless objections to the genuineness of the two first chapters of St. Matthew's Gospel, i. 3. Refutation of their perversion of Isa. xxx. 5, 45. Their unfounded inferences from Matt. xxiv. 36, 204. Their wrong notions respecting the Logos, 518. Their erroneous translation of the words Ἰδὲ Ὁψίστου, 367. Their abuse of the words of Christ (John xiv. 28), 650. Their cause not served by Eph. i. 17, ii. 377, 378. Their erroneous interpretation of 1 Tim. i. 17, 504. Their perversion of the sense of 1 Tim. ii. 5, 506. Their erroneous conceptions of the manner in which the mediation of Christ was effected, 506, 507

'Unjust judge,' parable of the, i. 473

'Unjust steward,' parable of the, i. 461

V.

Veil of the Temple rent at the Crucifixion, remarks on, i. 242

Versions, canon respecting their authority for or against a word, i. 298

Vices, observations on the mode in which they are classified by St. Paul, ii. 366

'Vine, I will not henceforth drink of this fruit of the,' sense of this passage, i. 221

Vinegar mingled with gall, administered to our Lord, remarks on, i. 238. Discrepancy between Matthew and Mark respecting this transaction, ib.

Virtues, Christian, enumeration of, ii. 733, 734

Visions, why sometimes thrice repeated, i. 765, 766

'Volume of the book, the phrase explained, ii. 634

Vulgate, the, of little authority when unsupported by the ancient Italic, i. 709

W.

Warburton, Bp., on Luke xlii. 1, i. 447; on 2 Pet. i. 7, ii. 733, 734

Washing the hands, symbolical of what, i. 236.

Washing of the feet, on the custom of, 638, 639

Watchfulness, Christian, observations on, i. 224

'Way, the,' the Christian religion anciently so denominated, i. 754, 861, 862

Wedding-garment, observations on, i. 176

Whale's belly, Jonah in the, i. 95

White, a symbol of purity, i. 176, 246; ii. 814

White Stone (Rev. ii. 17), how to be understood, 800

Whited sepulchres, origin and meaning of the expression, i. 190

Widows, their offices in the primitive Church, ii. 520

Widowhood, virtuous, held in great honour among the Jews, i. 381

Wine, in the Paschal feast, mixed with water, i. 220. Wine in the East, red, 221. Wine and oil employed in Palestine for the cleansing and healing of wounds, 432

'Wisdom of God, the' (Luke xi. 49), by many interpreted of Christ, i. 439

Wisdom of the people of this world 'in their generation,' i. 462

'Witchcraft,' import of the term erroneously so rendered Gal. v. 20, ii. 366

'Woe unto you' (Luke vi. 25), the import of this expression declarative, not imprecativ, i. 401

Women, public duties discharged by them in the Primitive Church, ii. 123. Enjoined to have their heads covered in public worship, ground of the precept, 209. Jerome's observation, that all heresies begin with them, 545

Word of God, the corruption of it alluded to 2 Cor. ii. 17, explained, ii. 272

'Word of truth, rightly dividing the,' meaning of this, ii. 540

'Word of wisdom, the' (1 Cor. xii. 8), nature of the gift, ii. 220

Words, omission of difficult ones, Critical canon respecting, i. 612

'World, the whole,' probable import of the term so rendered in Luke ii. 1, i. 375. Jewish mode of computing its duration, ii. 20

'World to come, the,' meaning of the expression, ii. 583

Y.

'Yea, yea' (2 Cor. i. 17), import of the expression, ii. 267, 268

Z.

Zaccheus, not a Gentile, as supposed by some Commentators, i. 480

Zacharias, son of Barachias, opinions of Commentators respecting the person so called, i. 192

Zacharias, Father of John the Baptist, not the High Priest, i. 362. Supposed nature of his prayer in the Temple, 366. Marked difference between his conduct and that of Abraham, ib. His Hymn expressed in the language which the Prophets have employed in describing the times of the Messiah, 372

APPARATUS CRITICO-PHILOLOGICO-EXEGETICUS:

BEING A

Bibliographical List, Alphabetically arranged, of the principal Critical and Exegetical Works cited from, or referred to, in the present Work.

- Alford's Gr. Test. Vols. 1 and 2.
 Anger. Synops. Evangel. Matth., Marc. et Luc. 8vo. Lips. 1852.
 Aquinatis (Thom.) Catena in Nov. Test., forming vols. iii.—viii: of the Opera Th. Aquin. 28 vols. 4to. Venet. 1775.
 Arethæ Comment. in Apocalypsin ap. Œcumen. Edit. Morell. Vide infra.
 Aretii Annot. in Nov. Test. Fol. — 1645.
 Athanasii Opera. 2 vols. fol. Colon. 1586.
 Augustini Comment. in Nov. Test. 2 vols. 4to. Venet.
 Basilii Opera. 3 vols. fol. Paris, 1638.
 Bengelii (T. A.) Gnomon Nov. Test. Ed. Steudel. 2 vols. 8vo. Tubing. 1835.
 Benson (Dr.) Paraphrase on the Epistles. 2 vols. 4to. London, 1752.
 Beza (Th.) Nov. Test. cum Annot. Fol. Cambr. 1642.
 Billroth (G.), on the 1 & 2 Epist. to Corinth. Engl. Translated by W. L. Alexander. 2 vols. 12mo. Edinb. 1837.
 Bloomfield, Recens. Synop. 8 vols. 8vo. Lond. 1827.
 ———, Lex. N. T. 1 vol. post 8vo. 2nd edit. Lond. 1845.
 Borger (E. A.) in Epist. ad Galat. 4to. Lug. Bat. 1807.
 Bornemann (F. A.) Scholia in Lucæ Evang. et Act. cap. xix. et seq. 8vo. Lips. 1830.
 Bretschneider (C. F.) Lexicon in Nov. Test. 2nd edit. 2 vols. 8vo. Lips. 1829.
 Bruder (C. H.) Concordantie Nov. Test. 4to. Lips. 1842.
 Brugenis (Lucas) in IV. Evangelia. 3 vols. fol. Antverp. 1606.
 Bulli (Episc.) Opera omnia. Ed. Grab. Fol. Lond. 1703.
 Bullinger (H.) Comment. in Pauli Epist. et omnes Epist. Cathol. Fol. Tiguri, 1582.
 Calvin (Joh.) Comment. in Nov. Test. Ed. Tholuck. 7 vols. 8vo. Berol. 1834.
 Campbell (G.) the Four Gospels, with Notes. 2 vols. 8vo. Edinb. 1807.
 Carpzovii (J. B.) Comm. in Epist. ad Hebræos. 8vo. Helms. 1750.—Idem in Epist. ad Romanos. 8vo. Helms. 1758.—Idem in Epist. Cathol. VII. 12mo. Halle, 1790.
 Chrysostom (Joh.) Homil. in Nov. Test. ap. Opera Savilii. 8 vols. fol. Eton. 1612.
 Clemens Alexand. Opera. Ed. Klotz. 4 vols. 12mo. Lips. 1832.
 Constitutiones Apostolicæ. Guil. Ultzen. 8vo. Suerini et Rostachii, 1853.
 Conybeare and Howson on Life and Epistles of St. Paul. 2 vols. 4to. Lond. 1854.
 Crameri (J. P.) Catena in Evang. Acta Apost., et Epist. 5 vols. 8vo. Oxon. 1838—1844.
 Cyrilli Alex. Opera. 7 vols. fol. Paris, 1638.
 Davidson's (Dr.) Introduction to the New Test. 3 vols. 8vo. Lond. 1848—53.
 Dindorf (G. F.) in Epist. ad Hebræos, cum Not. Var. et Ernesti. 8vo. Lips. 1795.
 Elsner (J.) Comment. Exeg. in Matt. et Marc. 3 vols. 8vo. Zwollæ, 1767.—Ejusdem Obs. in Nov. Test. 2 vols. 8vo. Traject. ad Rhen. 1720.
 Emmerling (F. L.) in Epist. II. ad Corinth. 8vo. Lips. 1823.
 Erasmi Annotationes in Nov. Test. ap. Crit. Sacr. Vol. vii.—ix. Fol. Amstel. 1698.
 Estii Comment. ad Epist. omnes Nov. Test. Ed. Sausen. 7 vols. 8vo. Mogunt. 1842.
 Etheridge (J. W.), Engl. Transl. of the Peschito-Syr. Vers. of the New Test. 2 vols. 12mo. London, 1840.
 Euseb. Hist. Eccl. Edit. Alb. Schwegler. 8vo. Tubing. 1852.
 Euthymii Comment. in IV. Evang. 3 vols. 8vo. Lips. 1792.
 French (Dr.) Translation of the Psalms, with Notes. 8vo. Cambr. 1842.
 Fritschii (C. F. A.) in Evangelia Matt. et Marc. 2 vols. 8vo. Lips. 1826—30.
 Fuerstii Concord. Heb. Fol. Lips. 1840.
 Gerdesii (D.) Exegesis ad cap. xv. Epist. I. ad Corinth. 4to. Groning. 1759.
 Greenii Lex. Hebr. 8vo. Lips. 1833.
 Grien (T. S.) on the Gramm. of the New Test. Dialect. 8vo. Lond. 1842.
 Greswell (E.) Harmonia Evangelica. 1 vol. 8vo. Oxon. 1830.—On the Parables. 7 vols. 8vo. Lond. 1834.
 Griesbachii N. T. Ed. Schulz. 8vo. Berol. 1827.
 Grotii Comment. ad Nov. Test. ap. Crit. Sacr. Vols. vii.—ix.
 Hammond (Dr.), Paraphr. and Notes on New Test. Fol. London, 1659.
 Heinrichs (C. G.) in Acta Apost. in Epist. ad Hebræos, et in Apocalypsin ap. Edit. N. T. Koppiamam. 8vo. Gotting. 1806.
 Henderson (Dr. E.), Isaiah, with Notes. 8vo. London, 1840.—The Minor Prophets, with Notes. 8vo. London, 1845.—Jeremiah, with Notes. London, 1851.
 Heydenreich (A. L. C.) Comm. in Ep. I. ad Cor. 2 vols. 8vo. Marb. 1825—28.
 Hieronymi Comment. in Nov. Test. apud Opera omnia ejus edit. 5 vols. fol. Paris, 1693—1706.

- Hodge (Prof. E.), Comment on the Epistle to the Romans. 10th edit. York, 1846.
- Hoffmanni Demonstratio Evangelica (on the Quotations from the Old Test.). 3 vols. 4to. Tubing. 1773.
- Hooker's Works. 2 vols. 8vo. Oxf. 1839.
- Hyperii in Pauli Epist. omnes, neron in Epist. Judæ. 2 vols. fol. Tiguri, 1584.
- Iaspi (G. S.) Versio Latina Epist. Nov. Test., cum Annot. 8vo. Lips. 1821.
- Jackson, of Leicester, MS. Notes and Various Readings in the margins of a copy of Mill's Edit. N. T., of which the use was kindly granted to the Author by the learned Master and Fellows of Jesus Coll., Camb.
- Josephi (Flavii) Opera. Edit. Haverc. 2 vols. fol. Lug. Bat.—Dindorfii. 2 vols. 8vo. Paris, 1847.
- Koecher (J. C.) Analecta Philol. et Exeget. in IV. Evang. 8vo. Altenb. 1766.
- Koppe (G. B.) Editio Nov. Test., cum Notis. 8vo. Gotting. 1778—1826.
- Krause (F. A.) Notæ in Epist. I. ad Corinth. 8vo. 1792.
- Krehlii (J. F.) Observationes in Nov. Test. e Flav. Joseph. 8vo. Lips. 1755.
- Kuinoel (C. F.) Comment. in Libr. Nov. Test. Historicis. 4 vols. 8vo. Lips. 1818.—Ejusdem Comment. in Epist. ad Hebræos. 8vo. Lips. 1831.
- Küttner (C. G.) Hypomnemata in Nov. Test. 8vo. Lips. 1780.
- Kypkii (G. D.) Observationes Sacræ. 2 vols. 8vo. Wratia. 1755.
- Lachmann (C.) Nov. Test. Græc. 2 vols. 8vo. 1832—50.
- Lampe (F. A.) Comment. in Evangel. Joh. 3 vols. 4to. Basil, 1726.
- à Lapide (C.) in omnes Pauli Epist. Fol. Colon. 1635.
- Laurmann (M. T.) in Epist. Judæ. 8vo. Groning. 1820.
- Layard's Discoveries at Nineveh. 2 vols. 8vo. Lond. 1850—53.
- Lightfoot (Dr.) Horæ Heb. et Talm. ap. Opera ejus. Edit. Pitman. 13 vols. 8vo. London, 1823.
- Loesner (G.) Observationes in Nov. Test. e Phil. Jud. 8vo. Lips. 1777.
- Lücke (F.) Comment. on the Epistles of St. John. 12mo. Edinb. 1837.
- Lyra (Nic. de) Comment. in Nov. Test. Strasburg. Fol. H. Eggstein, circa 1480.
- Macknight (Dr.) on the Gospels and on the Epistles. 4 vols. 8vo. London, 1806.
- Maldonati (J.) Comm. in IV. Evang. Fol. Paris, 1617.
- Marlorati (A.) Nov. Test. Expositio Ecclesiastica. Fol. Genev. 1620.
- Matthæi (C. F.) Nov. Test. Græcè. 3 vols. 8vo. Wittenb. 1803.
- Middleton (Bp.) on the Greek Article. Edit. Rose. London, 1841.
- Milii (D.) Nov. Test., cum Not. MS. Jacksoni. Ed. Kust. Fol. Amst. 1710.
- Munthii (C. F.) Observationes Philol. in Nov. Test. e Diod. Sic. 8vo. Lips. 1755.
- Œumenii Commentaria in Acta Apost. et in omnes Pauli Epistolas et Catholicas omnes. 2 vols. fol. Paris, 1631.
- Ogilvy's Bampt. Lectures. 8vo. Oxf. 1825.
- Olshausen on the Gospels and Acts, Romans, and 1 & 2 Cor. 8vo. Edinb. 1851.—Galatians, Ephesians, Colossians, and Thessalonians. 8vo. Edinb. 1851.
- Olshausen and Wiesinger on Philipians, Titus, and 1 Timothy. Engl. Transl. 8vo. Edinb. 1851.
- and Ebrard on the Hebrews. 8vo. Edinb. 1853.
- Owen (Dr. John) on the Epist. to the Hebrews. 4 vols. 8vo. Lond. 1815.
- Palaiet (E.) Observ. Philol. in Nov. Test. 8vo. Lug. Bat. 1752.
- Pearce (Bp.), Comment. on the Four Evangelists. 2 vols. 8vo. 1777.
- Peile (Dr.) on the Epistles. 4 vols. Lond. 1848—52.
- Pelt (L.) Comment. in Epist. ad Thessal. 8vo. Gryphiswald, 1830.
- Philonis Judei Opera. Ed. Richter. 8 vols. 12mo. Lips. 1828—29.
- Pierce (J.), Paraphrase and Notes on the Epist. to the Coloss. and Hebrews. 2 vols. 4to. London, 1773.
- Pott (J.) in Epist. Jac. et Petri. Gotting. 1810—16.
- Raphelii (G.) Annotationes in Nov. Test. 2 vols. 8vo. Lug. Bat. 1747.
- Rinckii (G. F.) Lucubr. Crit. in Acta Apost. et Epist. 8vo. Basil, 1830.
- Rosenmülleri (E. F.) Schol. in Vet. Test. 6 vols. 8vo. Lips. 1828—36.
- (D. I. G.) Scholias in Nov. Test. 5 vols. 8vo. Norimb. 1810.
- Routh (Dr. M. J.) Reliquiæ Sacræ. Ed. 2. 4 vols. 8vo. Oxon. 1846.
- Schaffii Nov. Test. et Lex. Hebr. 2 vols. 4to. Lug. Bat. 1709.
- Schleusneri (J. F.) Lexicon in Nov. Test. 2 vols. 8vo. Lips. 1819.
- Schoettgenii Horæ Heb. et Talmud. Nov. Test. 2 vols. 4to. Lips. 1736.
- Scholz (H. A.) Nov. Test. Græcè. 4to. 1830.
- Schott. (H. A.) Comment. in Epist. ad Galat. et Thessal. 8vo. Lips. 1834.
- Smith (Dr. Pye), Scripture Testimony, &c. 3 vols. 8vo. London.
- James (Esq.), Voyage and Shipwreck of St. Paul. 8vo. Lond. 1848.
- Steiger (F. W.) on the Epistles to the Thessal., Coloss., and 1 Peter. 2 vols. 12mo. Edinb. 1736.
- Stenersen (Prof., Christiana, Norveg.) Annot. ad Epistolas ad Romanos et 1 Cor. 2 vols. 8vo. Christian. 1828.
- Stier, Words of the Lord Jesus. Engl. Transl. by W. B. Pope. Vol. i. Lond. 1855.
- Stuart (Prof.) on the Epistle to the Romans. 8vo. London, 1836.
- on the Epistle to the Hebrews. 8vo. London, 1828.
- Surenhusius de Formulis Allegandi in Vet. et Nov. Test. 4to. Amstel. 1743.
- Tate (Canon), Continuous History of St. Paul. 8vo. Lond. 1840.
- Theile (C. G. G.) Comment. in Epist. Jacobi. 8vo. Lips. 1833.
- Nov. Test. Græcè. 12mo. Lips. 1850.
- Theodoret, Comm. in N. T. ap. Opera ejus. Ed. Schulzii. 5 vols. 8vo. Halæ. 1774.
- Theophylacti Comment. in IV. Evangelia et in Epistolas. 2 vols. fol. Ed. Lindell. Lond. 1636.
- Thucydidi Hist. Ed. Arnold. 3 vols. 8vo. Oxf. 1840.—Bloomfield. 2 vols. 8vo. Lond. 1843.

- Tischendorf. Nov. Test. Græc. Sm. 8vo. Lips. 1849.
- Tittmanni (C. C.) Comma. in Evang. Joan. 8vo. Lips. 1816.
- Synonymes of N. T. 8vo. Lips. 1829.
- Townsend (Canon) Arrangement of the Old and New Testament. 4 vols. 8vo. Lond. 1832.
- Wahl. Clav. Phil. Nov. Test. 2 vols. 8vo. Lips. 1829.
- Warburton (Bp.) Works. By Bp. Hurd. 12 vols. 8vo. Lond. 1811.
- Wetstenii Nov. T. 2 vols. fol. Amst. 1751.
- Whitby (D.) Paraphrase and Commentary on the N. T. 2 vols. fol. Lond. 1703.
- Wilkinson (Sir G.) Account of the Ancient Egyptians. 2 vols. sm. 8vo. Lond. 1854.
- Winer (G. B.) in Epist. ad Galat. 8vo. Lips. 1827.
- Grammar of the Greek Test. 8vo. Lips. 1836.
- Wolfii (J. C.) Curæ Phil. et Crit. in Nov. Test. 5 vols. 4to. Hamb. 1739.
- Wordsworth (Dr. Chr.), the Apocalypse in Greek, with various readings, Engl. Transl., and Notes. 8vo. London, 1849.

THE END.

15

89094599347 b89094599347a

be kept

TEEN DAYS

CENTS will be charged

84094599347

B89094599347A